Gutro Home After Life-Changing Trip

By SCOTT JACKSON

Councillor Doug Gutro is back home in Quincy after a ten-day trip to Pakistan – an experience he warmly recalled as life-changing.

Gutro joined officials from Boston, Brewster, Easton, Grafton, Springfield, and Westwood on the trip to Pakistan, a nation of 180 million people bordering India, Afghanistan, Iran and the Arabian Sea. The trip was the culmination of a four-year program in which 75 Pakistani officials visited Massachusetts. The program was organized by the Amherst-based non-profit Institute for Training and Development (ITD) in partnership with the Massachusetts Municipal Association and funded by the U.S. State Department.

"The food was spicy. The temperature was hot. The people were warm and the hospitality was endless," Gutro recalled in a recent interview soon after he returned to Quincy.

"I can't say enough about the people. It was a well-educated group that was extremely hospitable and respectful. They came away from their visit with a favorable impression of the United States – an impression they didn't necessarily hold before they visited with us."

"It was a life changing trip," he added.

Gutro and the other Massachusetts officials departed the U.S. on June 6, flying to Abu Dhabi in the United Arab Emirates via JFK International Airport in New York. After a layover in Abu Dhabi, they arrived in Pakistan's capital, Islamabad, on the evening of June 8. The hotel they stayed at in Islamabad, the Serena Hotel, was protected by armed guards at six different checkpoints.

During the group's first full day in the capital they visited the U.S. embassy, a non-descript building that could be easily mistaken for a warehouse. Inside, the delegation met with various embassy staff and an overview of the country – including briefings on security concerns and Pakistan's government and culture – was provided.

Soon after Gutro and the others arrived in Pakistan, militants with the Pakistani Taliban on the international airport in Karachi, a city about 900 miles away from Islamabad. Gutro and the other members of the delegation were inundated with messages from concerned family and friends at home worried about their safety.

"The ten of us from the United States were getting phone calls, were getting texts, were getting emails inquiring about our safety," Gutro said. "It was incredibly unsettling. We wondered, 'what will happen here? What does this mean?'"

Forty or so Pakistani officials were present that day, including several who had flown in from the airport in Karachi on later flights. The hosts remained calm and help put the Americans attending at ease.

"When they got into the room there were no side conversations. There was no sense that anyone was distracted or unsettled," Gutro explained. "Their calm and focus showed a resiliency that brought comfort to all of us visiting. We were at ease."

Over the next two days in Islamabad, the Massachusetts officials attended a conference with Pakistani officials on topics related to governance. Gutro, along with Westwood's town manager, gave a presentation on ethics and Massachusetts' new ethics law at the conference. He said the Pakistani officials present had gotten into government for the right reasons; problems, however, remain in the country, which gained independence in 1947.

"They're just getting to a place where they're devolving power to the provinces, which are comparable to our states. There are, depending on where you are, some local governance structures, but few if any politically elected positions at the local level. So accountability is a challenge," Gutro said.

"Corruption seems rampant and accepted, both at the political and bureaucratic level. The wages are extraordinarily low and that might feed some of the aspects of corruption. Nepotism is not only accepted, but in some cases encouraged. If you know friends and family you trust them to serve, so if you're in a position to hire you hire people you know, which goes against everything ethically we are taught about under the Massachusetts ethics law and in my position in the federal government as well."

Aside from the confer-

COUNCILLOR DOUG GUTRO (second from left) and the other members of the Massachusetts delegation visited the Pakistani Supreme Court during their stay in Islamabad. While there, they sat in on two hearings at the court. The group also visited the country's national monument – the Pakistan Monument – and museum while in the capital.

Koch Accepts Highest Bid - $3 Million Submitted By Plainville Developer

Luxury Condos For Old Central School

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city is moving ahead with plans to sell the former Central Middle School and has accepted the highest bid for the Hancock Street site.

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Monday he accepted a $3 million bid from Edgewood Development Company of Plainville, who in their bid said they would convert the former school into luxury condos.

Edgewood was one of five developers to bid on the site. Other bids received ranged from $1.1 to $2.4 million. All five bidders planned residential uses for the school – four of the five would have kept the building in place while one developer planned to construct 15-story towers on site. Koch said he accepted Edgewood's offer on the recommendation of a special review panel that included representatives from his office, the purchasing department, and city attorneys.

"These were all interesting, [creative] proposals," the mayor said in a statement released Monday. "In the end I believe we will not only get the best value for the city, but also a project that would be most appropriate for the neighborhood."

Edgewood's bid calls for creating 39 one- or two-bedroom condos within the former school's structure – the building's façade will be maintained. According to the city, the developer anticipates the units selling for between $350,000 and $400,000. That would generate an estimated $188,000 in annual tax revenue for the city, according to the Mayor's Office.

There is no timetable for when Edgewood plans to file formal plans for Central.

Edgewood has developed numerous residential properties in and around their hometown of Plainville. According to the company's website, the firm has constructed more than 350 single-family homes and 200 multi-family units over the past three decades.

Projects Edgewood has completed include the Walnut Hill Estates subdivision in Plainville; the 120-unit Edgewood Apartments, also in Plainville; Chestnut Park, a 56-apartment development in North Attleboro; and Pilgrim's Landing in Wrentham, a development with 38-single family homes.

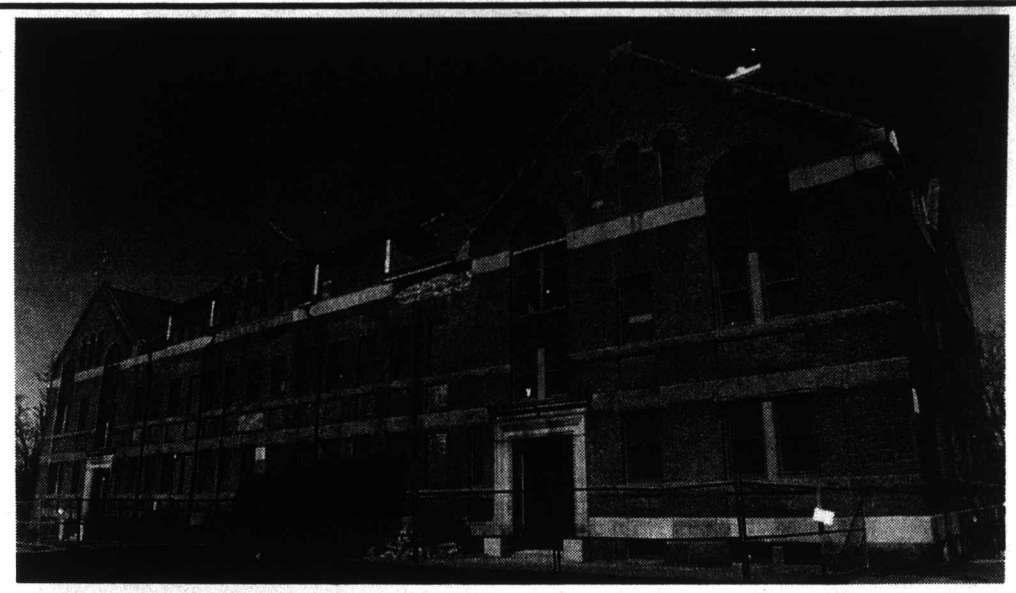
Edgewood also developed Plainville Commons, a 50-acre shopping center featuring more than a quarter-million square feet of retail space. The company is also working on a 52-acre commercial development in Wrentham and a 45-acre one in Plainville.

The site of the former Central Middle School, located at 1022 Hancock St., includes 85,378 square feet of land. The building includes a gross area of 84,617 square feet and a livable area of 59,490 square feet. The school currently sits in a Residential B zoning district.

The building originally opened in 1894 as Quincy High School before being turned into a junior high and then a middle school. It closed last October following the opening of the new, $50 million Central Middle School one block north on Hancock Street.

Koch has previously said the city would use proceeds from the sale of the former school to offset the purchase price for nine homes on Hunt Street and Newbury near North Quincy High School to make way for a 157-vehicle parking lot, retaining ponds, and renovations to Teel Field.

The City Council authorized a $12 million bond to fund that project on June 16 – officials have said the proceeds from the sale of Central would be used to reduce the amount of money the city ultimately borrows.



OLD CENTRAL MIDDLE School will be converted into 39 luxury condominiums after Mayor Thomas Koch accepted a $3 million bid from a Plainville developer to transform the 120-year-old building. The bid was the highest among five bidders. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Charlie And The Fourth Of July

Editor's Note: The following tribute was written and submitted by Maureen McAuley Murray in memory of her uncle, Charles J. Phelan. Mr. Phelan, a lifelong Quincy resident, was a World War II Navy veteran and served 35 years on the Quincy Police Department. He passed away May 28.

By MAUREEN McAULEY MURRAY

On Monday, June 2nd of this year we stood on a quiet hillside at Pine Hills Cemetery witnessing the final ceremony for Charles, "Charlie", Phelan as he was laid to rest. Charlie was a World War II Navy Veteran, and two U.S Navy representatives in full white dress uniform stood at each side of Charlie's grave to pay final respects. Taps played in the background while in solemn and quiet precision the two naval officers fold the American flag that had draped Charlie's coffin. The flag was presented to Anthony Black, husband of Charlie's granddaughter, Roberta. Anthony, U.S. Air Force (Ret.), also in full dress uniform, continued the ceremony by presenting the flag to Charlie's wife, Marie. It was a very moving and proud ritual to witness, both as a family member and as an American.

A few days later, the words Anthony had spoken to Charlie's wife Marie resound in my ears, "On behalf of a grateful nation." That flag, and those words, stood out to me, as they were both so much part of how Charlie lived his life. In our family, Charlie and the 4th of July are synonymous. There wasn't one without the other. So as the 4th of July holiday approaches this year, we will celebrate our country's freedom as well as Charlie's life.

Charlie was part of the "Greatest Generation," a phrase coined by Tom Brokaw to describe the generation of men and women who lived through the Great Depression and then, after listening to the accounts of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, enlisted by the millions to fight in the war overseas. These men and women did not have instant news feeds to read and video to watch on their tablets or devices; the news from the war overseas trickled in as presented by the U.S. government. Those at home could not instantaneously witness the horrors and conditions happening. Instead they marched blindly into the unknown, only knowing that they were fighting to save and protect their families and their country.

Charlie was one of those men, who, at the age of 17, wanted to join the Marines. Since he was under age, his father had to sign for him. Charlie's father, Mike, refused to sign the papers for Charlie to join the Marines. Mike knew there was no way to stop Charlie, so he agreed to his enlistment in the Navy. Mike's theory was that at least Charlie would have a bed to sleep in instead of a foxhole. Charlie joined the Navy, went through boot camp, and was sent to the Mariana Islands in the South Pacific, where the war raged with Japan. Once Charlie turned 18, he was assigned to the Destroyer John W. Weeks. He fought at the Battle of Leyte Gulf, Okinawa, Iwo Jima, and he served on Admiral Halsey's fast attack force – "hit hard, hit fast, hit often." Charlie was also on the crew on one of the first American ships that sailed into Tokyo Bay.

Like many of those who came home from this war, Charlie wouldn't talk about his experiences, or consider himself a hero because of them. Instead, he survived. Charlie returned to his family and home town of Quincy, and he lived life to the fullest in honor of those who did not survive. He, like many others who returned home, took nothing for granted and looked upon the American flag as a symbol of survival and homecoming. That American flag, the one he proudly wore on his shirts and, hats, the one he proudly hung outside his family home on Flag Day and the 4th of July was now a poignant symbol reminding us that because of his courage and sacrifice, freedom had been restored.

This 4th of July we will look at the red, white and blue banners, listen to patriotic songs, and enjoy fireworks with a note of sadness, pride and, for me, a better understanding of why we celebrate. In this country, we enjoy the many blessings and freedoms we have today because of the sacrifices and courage of men and women like Charlie.

So, to Charlie and all the men and women, past, present and future, who give of themselves in service for this country -- on behalf of a grateful nation, we thank you.

A Quincy resident, Cooke is a local actor recognized for his portrayals of such historic New England figures as John Quincy Adams, Calvin Coolidge and Daniel Webster.

THIS 1911 postcard is a view of the old steamboat landing at the end of Bay View Avenue at the end of Hough's Neck. The Quincy Yacht Club is just out of view on the right. Over 50 Parents Attend Interactive Substance Abuse Prevention Program

Over 50 Quincy parents and more than 20 Quincy Public School staff attended the well-received interactive educational program, Hidden in Plain Sight, at Central Middle School June 17.

The event was a collaboration with the Quincy Public Schools, Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services; South Shore Hospital's Youth Health Connection and the Caron Foundation.

The program began with participants exploring a display of a teenager's bedroom in which ordinary items could have indicated high-risk behaviors such as substance abuse, underage drinking, sexual activity, or an eating disorder. After examining the display, Traci Wojciechowski, Regional Director at the Caron Foundation Student Assistance Program, shared a program entitled, "Parenting for Prevention." The program centered on positive parenting with an emphasis on adults knowing the facts so they can have constructive conversations with their children. The topics explored in the presentation were Massachusetts teen youth data, current substance trends, typical drug paraphernalia, and the why and where teens may use drugs.

This was followed by Kim Noble, Youth Health Connection Program Coordinator, who reviewed the mock bedroom display and continued the theme of positive parenting with many useful ideas for attendees.

The event also featured Nancy Holler, a Quincy resident, who shared her family's story of the effects of substance abuse.

The evening concluded with the launch of the newly created booklet, "Open Your Eyes, an informational Guide about Alcohol and Other Drugs." The publication was written by Jane Kisielius, Coordinator of Quincy Public Schools Health Services and Kristen Houlihan, North Quincy High School Nurse in cooperation with Impact Quincy and The Quincy Police Department.

Parents can obtain a free copy of the booklet at upcoming school events.

Over $63,000 Raised For Fight Against Alzheimer's

On Saturday, June 7th, Blondes vs. Brunettes flag football game was held at Veterans' Memorial Stadium to raise money for the fight against Alzheimer's disease.

During the months preceding the event approximately 50 women from the Boston area planned, practiced and fundraised for the big game day. This event was co-hosted by the young champions group, AlzTogether, a sub division of the MA/NH Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association.

The event was a tremendous success and along with several other events preceding the game, the teams were able to raise $63,000 and counting. This would not have been possible without the support of many individuals and businesses such as, the John F. Kennedy Senior Center, QATV, the Quincy Fire Department, the staff and students of the Sterling Middle School, Beacon Sporting Goods, Malachy's Saloon, Walmart and many individual sponsors.

A very special thanks to the Quincy Parks and Recreation Departments. Without their help, the event would not have been as successful as it was.

Thanks to all.

Dukakis Files Shipbuilding Bill

By SCOTT JACKSON

A bill filed by Gov. Michael Dukakis could pave the way for the return of shipbuilding at the former Fore River Shipyard.

Sen. Paul Harold reported Dukakis filed legislation that would allow the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to transfer 75 acres at the site to a group of former General Dynamics employees who want the land for shipbuilding purposes. If approved, it would let a transfer occur whether or not the legislature was in session, Harold explained. The legislature's session was to end July 15 and not resume until November or January.

"Time is of the essence," Harold said. "This is a mechanism for the MWRA to take action while the state legislature is not in session. Losing six months could be fatal to the return of shipbuilding at Fore River."

As a state agency, the MWRA has limited control over its own land. Without Dukakis' legislation, the authority would need to seek approval from the legislature before selling the property.

Negotiations between the MWRA and Massachusetts Shipbuilders, Inc. – the latter comprised of members of the former Local 5 Shipbuilders Union – had been ongoing for the past nine months. Revenue to fund a purchase or lease agreement with an option to buy was to be provided by the Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency and State Street Bank.

McCAULEY BACKS ONE-HOUR METERS, NEW HANCOCK STREET PARKING

Mayor Francis McCauley asked the Traffic Commission to consider one-hour parking meters and allowing parking on the westerly side of Hancock Street in the downtown area.

The recommendations were made by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association following a survey of its membership. Under the proposals, meters would be installed on the westerly side of Hancock Street to allow legal parking there and the meters already in Quincy Center would be increased from 30 to 60 minutes.

"This is for the benefit of the consuming public and the residents of Quincy," QCBPA President Robert Colman said. "It will take the fear out of the $5 parking ticket."

Independence Day Activities At Adams National Historical Park

• "Independence Forever: The Continental Congress - Pledge your Life, Fortune, and Sacred Honor!" will take place Friday, July 4 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. at the 1870 Adams Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

Become a delegate to the Second Continental Congress and reenact the passage of the Declaration of Independence on July 4th in the Adams Carriage House. Join the "band of brothers" who changed the course of history in 1776 and sign the historic document.

This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the momentous occasion that John Adams recalled as the "great anniversary festival" that will be celebrated by "bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward forever more."

• "The Reading of the Declaration of Independence" will be held Friday, July 4 from 3:30 to 4 p.m.

Join the delegates to the Continental Congress, celebrate liberty, and lend your voice to the ceremonial reading of the Declaration of Independence.

• "Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play" is also set for Friday, July 4 from 4 to 6 p.m. under the tent at the Beale House, 181 Adams St., Quincy.

Witness a compelling dramatization of the extraordinary friendship between two American Presidents, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams, and Adams' "dearest friend" Abigail.

Acclaimed Colonial Williamsburg re-enactors Bill Barker and Abigail Schumann and veteran actor Sam Goodyear return to Peace field to bring to life the fifty-year friendship - often contentious, sometimes turbulent, and ultimately enduring - of this dynamic trio who hold forth on life, love, and loss in their now-famous correspondence. This play, written by Howard Ginsberg and performed by veteran actors, illuminates the lives and times of three indomitable characters who clashed over foreign entanglements, domestic politics, and the role of government in the lives of ordinary citizens - debates that continue to this day.

There will be refreshments of lemonade and sugar cookies. Programs are free and open to the public. Reservations are not required. Street parking is available on Adams Street.

For more information about tours, programs, special events, and family activities at Adams National Historical Park, call the Visitor Center at 617-770-1175.

Vanilla Wafer Pineapple Cheese Cake

By MARIE

When a pie doesn't have a regular crust, we usually use a graham cracker crust, or some chocolate cookie crust.

Last week I found an entirely different one – my favorite vanilla wafer crust. It is mixed with pecans and the best flavor ever.

I used it for a pineapple cheese cake that got raves when I made it for the Memorial Day weekend at the Cape.

PINEAPPLE CHEESE CAKE

1 box of vanilla wafers
1/2 cup chopped pecans
1 stick of melted butter

Place wafers in a food processor or blender. Add the melted butter and the pecans and crush until done.

Coat the baking pan with aluminum foil-it makes it easier to remove the cheese cake when it is done.

Place the crust on the bottom and sides of the pan and set aside while you prepare the cake.

CHEESE CAKE

3 packages of cream cheese (room temperature)
1/2 cup sour cream
4 eggs
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
6 slices of pineapple slices

Mix the cream cheese, the sour cream and sugar. Add the vanilla and mix. Add the eggs one at a time and mix until smooth. Pour over the vanilla wafers smoothing it all around.

Bake in a 325 degree oven until done-about 30-35 minutes. When ready to serve, cut in squares, and place pineapple slices on top. Other fruits can be used including blueberries, raspberries.

Green Eggs

By SUZIE

Who remembers the book "Green Eggs and Ham" by Dr. Seuss?

Well, I just read it the other night to my granddaughter and it reminded me of THIS recipe for GREEN EGGS ~ Even if you don't like your veggies.....you will love this and it is a fun way to sneak in some greens for the finicky eater. Of course, you can serve with some ham as well.

4 large kale leaves (do not trim or remove stems) or a cup of baby spinach or so
Sea salt (I like Redmonds Real Salt)
Virgin organic coconut oil, butter, or olive oil

1. Place eggs, kale leaves or spinach and salt in blender
2. Blend on high until smooth
3. Heat oil in pan over medium heat
4. Pour egg mixture in pan
5. Allow eggs to cook a bit, then scramble
6. Cook eggs to your preferred doneness

A great way to get your veggies in the morning! ENJOY!!!!!

John Quincy Adams Birthday Anniversary Ceremony July 11

Wreath Laying At United First Parish Church, Activities Follow At Adams Historical Park

The annual Presidential Wreath Laying Ceremony honoring the life and accomplishments of John Quincy Adams, Sixth President of the United States, will be held at United First Parish Church on Friday, July 11 at noon.

The ceremony marks the the 247th birthday anniversary of John Quincy Adams who was born on July 11, 1767.

The public is invited to attend and admission is free.

Lieutenant Commander David Stock, Navy Operational Support Center Quincy, will present the wreath on behalf of President Barack Obama. The Navy Honor Guard will place it on the tomb of John Quincy Adams located beneath the church.

Speakers commemorating the life and accomplishments of John Quincy Adams will include Mayor Thomas Koch, Peter Boylston Adams, Sara Georgini, assistant editor, Adams Papers, Massachusetts Historical Society and Jim Edwards, president, Quincy Historical Society.

For more information, call 617-773-0062 or visitorsprogram@ufpc.org.

Following the ceremony, guests are invited to proceed to the Adams National Historical Park Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy, where the festivities continue with tours, talks, and entertainment.

At 2 p.m., Alison Mann, Assistant Professor of History at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, will discuss John Quincy Adams' complex views on slavery, the slave trade, and race. Her theme will be "Slavery Exacts an Impossible Price: John Quincy Adams and the Dorcas Allen Case.

Allen, an African American who had been living as a free woman for years was sold, with her four young children, to a slave trader. That evening she killed two of the children. The slave trader immediately put her and the surviving children up for public auction.

For the first time in his life, Adams witnessed the utter misery of a slave auction. John Quincy's emotional involvement with the fate of a slave, Mann argues, influenced his handling of the Amistad case and intensified his staunch opposition to the extension of slavery.

At 3 p.m., Robert Shimp, Adams National Historical Park Ranger and PhD candidate, Boston University, will discuss his research and recent scholarship on John Quincy's life-long and, at times, paradoxical relationship with British society and politics.

John Quincy accompanied his father, John Adams, to Europe in 1778 and, in 1815, was appointed United States Minister to Great Britain where he served with distinction until 1817. Like his father, John Quincy developed strong opinions and attitudes toward the "mother country" and it is Shimp's contention that John Quincy's Anglo experiences influenced his later careers as Secretary of State and sixth United States President.

At 4 p.m., meet and greet "President John Quincy Adams," portrayed by Adams National Historical Park park ranger Richard Shaner and celebrate his 247th birthday with a celebratory song and a slice of birthday cake.

The activities at the Park will conclude with a special "after hours" tour of the Stone Library from 5 to 6 p.m. The library is a 19th century repository of more than 12,000 books, the great majority of which belonged to sixth United States President John Quincy Adams.

MAKING JUDGMENT CALLS

Generally speaking, when shopping for jewelry, consumers should focus more on quality than finding a bargain. One way for the average consumer to judge the quality of a piece of jewelry is to look at the back of the piece. If it is nicely finished on the back and sides, chances are the piece is well constructed. However, if there are signs of roughness, porosity, excess solder, or poorly soldered joints, it is likely that the piece is not worthy of consideration. High-quality pieces have a smooth, polished finish throughout, even the areas behind the gemstones. When evaluating jewelry, consumers shouldn't automatically assume that high price is indicative of quality. Bottom line? Choose a jeweler you can trust.

Jewelry is a business that requires great skill, talent, and knowledge. Go ahead and ask to see your jewelers credentials next time you are shopping for nice jewelry. Your jeweler has worked hard for those credentials and will be proud to show them to you. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to select the perfect gemstone jewelry that is right for you as well as any other special gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Quincy Housing Authority Director's Message To Residents:

'It's My Intention To Get This Operation Running Right'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Housing Authority Executive Director James Lydon reassured residents at a neighborhood meeting held at Tobin Towers on Monday morning that following a report by the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD), which revealed unsafe and unsanitary living conditions in QHA properties, he would do everything in his power to correct the situation which he called an absolute disaster.

"I'm committed to being here," Lydon told the residents. "It's my intention to get this operation running right and that's my commitment to you."

Inspections of 10 percent of Quincy's state-aided public housing units and common areas conducted on March 31, April 1, and April 3 by the DHCD revealed subpar living conditions in need of immediate repair, according to Director of Facilities Management for the DHCD James Marathas who spoke at a prior meeting of the Quincy Housing Authority's Board of Commissioners.

"As a result of those inspections, DHCD issued a report and a request for a direct action plan for the Quincy Housing Authority indicating that many life and safety deficiencies were noted through the inspections conducted at the end of March and April," Marathas said. "The things that I have seen are extremely concerning and the physical conditions are very bad."

DHCD issued a notice for the further inspection of all family units at Snug Harbor for the two weeks of June 16-20 and July 7-11. Lydon had previously estimated that inspections would take place well into December. However, on Monday, he said it is possible the process won't be completed by then.

A report issued on April 30 following a reinspection outlined operational issues as well as physical condition concerns such as exposed electrical wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, mold and mildew, and in one case raw sewage from a unit's bathroom leaking through the floor and onto a tenant's stove in the unit below.

Conditions were deemed so bad in one unit that the tenants had to be relocated.

Recently, a main support beam at Snug Harbor was found to be significantly damaged due to an infestation of termites, according to Lydon who said that after performing two walkthroughs of units and common areas at the property, which provides affordable housing to families, he and his staff were "all surprised at the conditions."

During an additional walkthrough last week, Lydon said he saw that the floor in a unit's bathroom had rotted so badly due to a leak coming from the base of the toilet, that the adjacent bathtub had partially fallen through the floor and was visible through the ceiling of the cellar below.

"These things don't just happen overnight," he said.

Many of the 15 residents who attended Monday's meeting voiced their concerns including resident Siu Dip Mak, who has lived in Tobin Towers for 15 years. She said with the help of translator Charlie Chen who is also the vice-president of the Tobin Towers Association, that she has sent in multiple maintenance request slips because her stove had not been functioning properly for two months. She has resorted to cooking only on the burners which she said are not adjustable, making it difficult to prepare her meals.

Chen, who moved into Tobin Towers in 2009, said that since assuming the role of vice-president one month ago, residents have been flooding him with complaints. "They complain about the stoves, the kitchen, the washroom," he said. "Even my bedroom. I have not had heating for two years."

Despite the high number of Cantonese and Mandarin-speaking residents living in public housing, the authority has not hired an official translator, instead opting to have employees fluent in either language translate when they are available.

When asked for a timeline and overall cost of repairs, Lydon said that "it would be unfair to guess" because what had been discovered was far beyond the scope of what he could have anticipated.

Repairs relative to life and safety concerns will be carried out first and prioritized based on what further inspections reveal within the upcoming months he said. Lesser concerns will be addressed and dealt with on an open-ended deadline.

"I can't get too specific in terms of facts because we're dealing with labor issues, labor unions, and civil service employees," he said. "What I can tell you is that I plan to make some very major changes in the not-too-distant future."

Maintenance director for the Housing Authority David Ferris, who was on vacation during the most recent round of DHCD inspections, will be tasked with scheduling and prioritizing all repairs.

Marathas previously told QHA staff that ineffective communication with maintenance due to a flawed work order system is one of the major issues plaguing the authority and that a more proactive approach to repairs could save millions in future costs.

"We have a system with the maintenance department that is absolutely broken. We have tenants complaining to the maintenance department, our clerks down there documenting the complaints and then we have nobody managing or assigning the work," said Lydon.

The authority receives both operational funding and capital funding with capital funding being allocated to create a capital improvement plan which would address the deficiencies. Lydon said that additional DHCD and supplemental funding would be necessary to complete the overhaul but that he was unsure as to when the money would be made available. He said he has initiated contact with DHCD officials regarding funding but has not received a formal response to his request.

A contract with inspectional services firm McCright & Associates was not extended into next year following a unanimous vote by Housing Authority commissioners due to poor performance, a lack of proper procedural protocol, and a lack of communication with property managers, according to Lydon. Rather than hiring another outside firm, teams of Housing Authority staff and members of the maintenance department will be tasked with performing further inspections.

When asked as to when elevators at Pagnano Towers and O'Brien Towers that have been broken since February would be repaired, Lydon said the authority was still waiting for a part from the manufacturer which opens and closes the doors and requires a long lead time between ordering and manufacturing.

"I've had two elevators at the Quincy Housing Authority; one at O'Brien Towers and one at Pagnano Towers out of order since last February and I have a department that has been incapable of getting them up and running again," he said. Kone, the private company hired to replace the elevators, will be terminated once the work is complete and further elevator repairs will go out to bid.

Lydon, who has been executive director for one year and has signed a three-year contract to continue overseeing the housing authority, said he had "inherited a mess" and that "the major divisions within the Quincy Housing Authority [were] just not working properly." He called the intervention of the DHCD an absolute blessing and said that he would be taking the process one step at a time.

DA Morrissey Sponsors Training For School Nurses

Sixty school nurses from 20 Norfolk County communities, including four from Quincy, received two full days of "Drug Impairment Training for Educational Professionals" provided by Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey through the Curry College's nursing program.

"Massachusetts' opiate epidemic is touching every corner of our communities, including our school buildings," District Attorney Morrissey said.

"School nurses are an essential part of the response when a student appears to be intoxicated," District Attorney Morrissey said. "When a student is in trouble with drugs, whether once or as a pattern, it is important to know the signs and symptoms, and which drug you are dealing with. That is where this kind of additional training helps."

Morrissey funded a similar training in January that drew police officers, administrators and a smaller number of nurses across the county. "This is more comprehensive, more tailored for medical professionals, and includes continuing education credentials through Curry. The college also donated use of their facilities."

North Quincy High nurse Kristin Houlihan, Quincy High school nurses Kathy Torraco and Michael Lorenzano, and Noreen O'Connell from Quincy Teen Mothers attended.

Trainers included Dr. Jack E. Richman, OD, Nahant police Sgt. Don Decker (Ret.), Middleboro Police Sgt. Deborah Battista and Quincy Police Sergeant and Drug Recognition Expert Donald Allison. Different kinds of drugs create varying symptoms and signs of intoxication, be they pupil dilation or telltale eye movements, speech patterns, or coordination.

"This isn't about evidence collection or prosecution. The purpose is to give nurses the tools they need to meet an emerging, growing problem when they encounter it," Morrissey said. "It can only help connect drug-involved students to whatever immediate intervention they may need and hopefully connect them to the services they need to address the larger issue."

Morrissey called the training an important part of both his ongoing school security enhancement work and his efforts to address the regional opiate epidemic. "If we can help schools constructively intervene in this kind of behavior before it becomes a problem for the criminal courts – that is better for student and for the community."

Quincy's Kevin Loftus Promoted To Director Of Admissions

At Xaverian Brothers High School

After spending four years as the Assistant Director of Admissions, Xaverian graduate and Quincy resident Kevin Loftus was recently promoted to Director of Admissions.

"Kevin has been a significant contributor to our admissions, student council, and campus ministry programs," said Xaverian Brothers High School Headmaster Brother Daniel Skala, C.F.X. "He is imbued with the Xaverian mission and spirit. We are confident that Kevin's experience, energy, and commitment to our mission will serve Xaverian well as we embrace our new identity as a boys' school for Grades 7 through 12."

After graduating from Xaverian in 2005, Loftus attended Westfield State University, where he was an active member of the Catholic community, Vice President of the Student Government Association, and volunteer for Habitat for Humanity and the Special Olympics. While still in college, he held internships for the Westfield State alumni relations office and the Springfield Falcons of the American Hockey League.

After graduating from college, Loftus worked in marketing and communications for Myriant Technologies in Quincy.

As a Xaverian student, Loftus participated in Sophomore Faith Experience, SpiritHawk, Xaverian Leadership Institute, ski club, bowling club, and varsity baseball and when he heard of the Assistant Director of Admissions position in 2010, he quickly jumped at the opportunity to return to the school.

"I had such a great experience here as a student," Loftus said. "I've really enjoyed being back here and helping the next generations of Xaverian students as they go through the application process and become Hawks themselves."

Body Found On Quincy Beach

DA's Office: No Obvious Cause Of Death Found At Scene

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy and State Police Departments are asking the public to help determine the identity of a woman found dead on a local beach Sunday morning.

An area resident spotted the woman – identified as a black adult female – around 5 a.m. Sunday in the vicinity of 734 Sea St.

According to the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, the woman was wearing a silver necklace and a yellow 'Livestrong' wristband on her left wrist. The woman also had two tattoos on her right wrist – 'forever' written in cursive and three initials in stylized script. The initials could not be easily discerned. The woman was wearing a black bathing suit with a black, terry cloth cover up over the suit. No other belongings or any identification were found.

David Traub, a spokesman for Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, said investigators were following up on several leads as of Monday afternoon when The Sun went to press.

"Detectives are following up on some information that could lead to an identification but we're not there yet," he said.

The State Police's crime services section responded to the scene. Traub said no obvious indications of foul play or cause of death were found on scene. The state Medical Examiner's Office performed an autopsy Monday afternoon, but the results weren't immediately available.

The investigation into her identity and the circumstances of her death are ongoing. Anyone who believes they may know her identity is asked to contact Massachusetts State Police at 508-820-2121.

Wollaston Beach Water Safety Rated B-Plus

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Wollaston Beach has received an 88.27 percent overall beach safety rating for 2013 according to a report card ranking water quality at public beaches issued by Save the Harbor/ Save the Bay on Monday.

The score is based on in-depth analysis of samples that were taken by the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) and the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) in 2013. The bacteria enterococcus is measured in terms of how many colonies are found in one sample. If more than 104 colony-forming units are found per 100 ml of water, then the beach is deemed unsafe and swimmers are urged to avoid swimming.

Wollaston ranks above King's Beach in Swampscott, and Malibu Beach and Tenean Beach, both in Dorchester. However, Wollaston Beach is outranked by 11 other beaches including Nantasket Beach in Hull and Revere Beach.

According to a press release issued by Director of Strategy, Communications, and Programs for Save the Harbor/ Save the Bay Bruce Berman, the overall decline seen in beach safety in 2013 is due to storm water discharges that come with summer showers and storms. Almost twice as much rain fell during the year, leading to an increase in bacterial pollution said the release.

He said that despite Wollaston's score this year, he feels it will improve next summer. "It's an A minus beach even though it was a B plus this year," he said. Berman stressed that the water is safe. However, he advised against swimming the day after a rain shower as it temporarily elevates enterococcus levels. Infection with the enterococcus bacteria can cause urinary tract and wound infections in humans.

New DVD For Kids Who Stutter Available At Crane

A new DVD created to help kids who stutter is available at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The DVD is entitled "Stuttering: For Kids By Kids."

Many children who stutter have never met anyone else who struggles with the same disability. But in this DVD from the Stuttering Foundation, they meet other kids who recount how they handle challenges such as teasing, speaking out in class, and teaching others about stuttering.

Swish, a lively and engaging animated basketball character designed by students at Purdue University, narrates the DVD. The children, who range in age from first-graders to high school students, offer frank and sometimes differing views of stuttering.

For example, Matthew, age 10, says about his speech difficulties, "It's no big deal;" but Kate, age 9, worries about talking, what is going to happen next and whether or not she'll stutter. Arianne , age 14, says, "The hardest part about stuttering is to get through it and to stay in there when you're stuck." Umang, age 12, agrees, "Sometimes it gets kind of annoying when you want to say something and you can't. I also get worried what other people might think if I do stutter and wonder if I'll be able to get out of my blocks and things."

"All those interested in helping kids learn more about stuttering will want to see this tape," said speech-language pathologist Bill Murphy of Purdue University. "The children featured are a perfect example of how to openly and honestly handle stuttering." "This is an important tool for families and teachers of kids who stutter," added Jane Fraser, president of the nonprofit Stuttering Foundation.

Other professionals and specialists in stuttering taking part in this production include Kristin A. Chmela, Northwestern University, Joe Donaher, Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, Lisa Scott of Florida State University and Lee Caggiano of the support group for children, Friends.

Several books and DVDs produced by the 66-year-old nonprofit Stuttering Foundation are available free to any public library.

The Thomas Crane Library in Quincy is among the area libraries that is shelving the DVD. Fore more information, call at 800-992-9392 or e-mail info@stutteringhelp.org.

Quincy Medical Center Celebrates Men's Health

Former NE Patriot Matt Light Headlines Event

Scores of local residents and employees headed to the parking lot and main lobby at Quincy Medical Center June 22 to take advantage of the opportunity to meet physicians and staff and receive free health screenings and information on a host of important medical topics in honor of Men's Health Month.

"Celebrate Dad - A Day of Health, Fitness, Fun for Men and their Families" was an event primarily designed to provide men's health information and screenings to men and the women who love them, but it also gave families who may not be familiar with the hospital a chance to see the facility and to meet former New England Patriots offensive lineman Matt Light, who was keynote speaker for the event.

Introduced by Mary Richardson, former co-host of WCVB-TV's Chronicle and Steward Health Care's community liaison, Light touched on why men need to overcome their reluctance to pay close attention to their health.

"Many of us men are pretty good at the preventive maintenance when it comes to everything but ourselves," he said. "We can change the oil, rotate the tires, and clean the gutters when it's needed, but going to docs once a year? No way, that's too much. Men have a tendency to think, if it isn't broken, don't fix it.

"But what we really need to do is fix it anyway and be proactive when it comes to our health because it's not really all about you. The best thing you can do for the ones you love is to stay healthy. That's why events like this and places like Quincy Medical Center are so important to the community."

QMC President Donna Rubinate echoed his message, saying: "Men's health is not only a concern for men, but it is also a concern for women who care about the health of their fathers, husbands, brothers, and sons. Empowering them with information is an important first step to improving their overall health and longevity, and we want you to know that Quincy Medical Center is here to provide the services you need."

In addition to health screenings, the event included a 13' by 16' interactive brain exhibit that educated people about things like stroke and concussions, as well as healthful cooking demonstrations and samples provided by the hospital's nutrition services staff, Naked Juice and Star Market. Magic 106 was on site to provide musical entertainment and community partners provided a variety of information and services, such as body composition analysis by the South Shore YMCA, hand massages by the Spa at Boncaldos, and health education Tufts Health Plan and Manet Community Health Center.

ence, the delegation sat in on a session of Pakistan's supreme court in Islamabad and met two judges from other courts – unlike the U.S., where judges are appointed or in some states elected, Pakistani judges take exams to qualify for a position on the bench. The delegation also toured the country's revenue department, the equivalent of the American Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Gutro and the officials also made cultural stops, including visits to markets as well as the country's national museum and the Pakistan Monument. While at the monument, which was conceived by former Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf and opened in 2007, the delegation had a chance encounter with the architect who built it. He stopped and talked about his work with the group.

"He came over to us and gave an impromptu, 15-minute lecture about the evolution of how the president conceptualized the need for the national monument, what it would symbolize, the bidding process, his submission and what it symbolized, and how it was built out," Gutro said.

"It was just remarkable. How many people visit that annually and here we are with the architect."

After their visit to Islamabad the delegation traveled to Lahore, a city of more than 7 million and the capital of Pakistan's Punjab province near the Indian border. The group was supposed to fly from Islamabad to Lahore, but wound up driving because of a sandstorm, arriving in the city on June 13.

In Lahore, where the temperatures reached 115 degrees and higher, the Americans visited Lahore Fort. The 100-acre fort was originally built in the 16th century and is a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

"It was extraordinary. It's like Georges Island or Castle Island, only substantially bigger," Gutro said. "Pretty remarkable history to think that this civilization was thriving and the U.S. hadn't been discovered."

While in Lahore, Gutro and the other Massachusetts officials visited the Punjab's planning department. They also met with the appointed governor of Punjab, going to his residence at 8 p.m. local time for tea. There, they discussed various topics, including U.S.-Pakistani relations and the use of American drones in the country. Around 9:30 p.m. that same night, Gutro visited the home of Sajjad Mubin, the director general of planning and development for Punjab, and met with Mubin's extended family.

After three days in Lahore, the delegation flew back to the United States, travelling via Abu Dhabi and arriving at JFK on the evening of June 16.

When he first told people he would be travelling to Pakistan, Gutro said some questioned why he would go there. After returning home, the councillor said he would do it again if he could.

"The reason, I've come to believe, the U.S. invests in countryies like this is they're the ones who need help. They're the ones that need us to help them improve their governance structures. You're not going to get a trip to Switzerland," Gutro said.

"I felt the conditions were much more safe, hospitable, and welcoming, than I imagined they would be."

This wasn't Gutro's first trip to that part of the world. In 2000, he took part in a Rotary Club exchange program and spent 26 days in India.

"In India there was just a sea of humanity when I went. There was seemingly little personal space. I didn't feel that in Pakistan. It wasn't as crowded. We've got the benefit of 15 years," Gutro said.

"When I landed in Mumbai 15 years ago what I thought was fog, was smog. You could see the rickshaws and all the other motorized vehicles spewing pollution. We had emissions control equipment on vehicles 20, 30, years ago, and there they didn't.

"In Pakistan, I didn't see that. I saw what seemed like a more modern society, although you could see pockets of poverty lining the roads. I saw a road system that was far more westernized than I could imagine. I thought we'd be driving down dirt roads for the most part – no, there were highways and paved roads."

COUNCILLOR DOUG GUTRO and the other Massachusetts officials received certificates and traditional gifts at each place they visited. Here, Gutro received a collapsible wooden basket at a planning and development office in Lahore. At center Sajjad Mubin, a planning official whose house Gutro was able to visit.

Technology has also changed greatly in the time since Gutro traveled to India. He recalled going there and not being able to get online to write emails back home. During Gutro's trip to Pakistan, he was able to communicate with his wife and children instantly, even though he was halfway across the globe.

"I remember being in India – I didn't have a cellphone and they were taking me at the time to what they called the Silicone Valley of India and I remember going to the backroom of what I thought was some abandoned building that had four desktop computers that looked like they were circa 1970 to try to compose an email to send to at the time my future wife. You just couldn't get the Internet connect. You kept losing it," Gutro said.

"Now, texting and FaceTiming my family instantaneously. Several Pakistani officials said to me, and I had to ask the question several times, 'everyone in Pakistan has a smartphone. They may not be able to feed themselves or afford food, but everyone has a smartphone.'

"I was astonished. That just tells you the technological advancements that have happened in the last two de-

Cool School Challenge Club Completes Inaugural Year

The Cool School Challenge Club is on its way to reducing energy use and waste at Quincy High School.

Club members, overseen by science teacher Evaline Hsu, conducted an initial survey of energy use and waste production at the school to establish a benchmark. They created posters to teach peers and school staff small changes they can make that will have a big impact on the environment, such as recycling the materials that can be recycled and unplugging electronic devices before the weekend.

The QHS Cool School Challenge Club was launched this spring as a pilot program for behavior change in the public schools. It was formed with the support of Mayor Thomas Koch, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, QHS Principal Larry Taglieri, Science Department Head Ed Smith, Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington and Quincy Planning and Community Development Department staff.

The club's efforts during the next school year will focus on getting students and others to replace current habits with more sustainable alternatives, such as using a reusable water bottle instead of disposable one. Behavior change is a major element of the City's Energy Use Reduction Plan, a document created to guide the City toward 20% energy use reduction by 2017, a condition of its designation as a Green Community (awarded in 2011 by the Massachusetts Department of Energy and Environmental Affairs).

Next year the club plans to hold a community service event as the third annual QHS participation in Green Apple Day of Service. The event will focus on educating Quincy residents about sustainable behavior.

POSTERS CREATED by club members Parawat Chang and Stephanie Lopez illustrate the message that small changes can have a big impact on the environment.

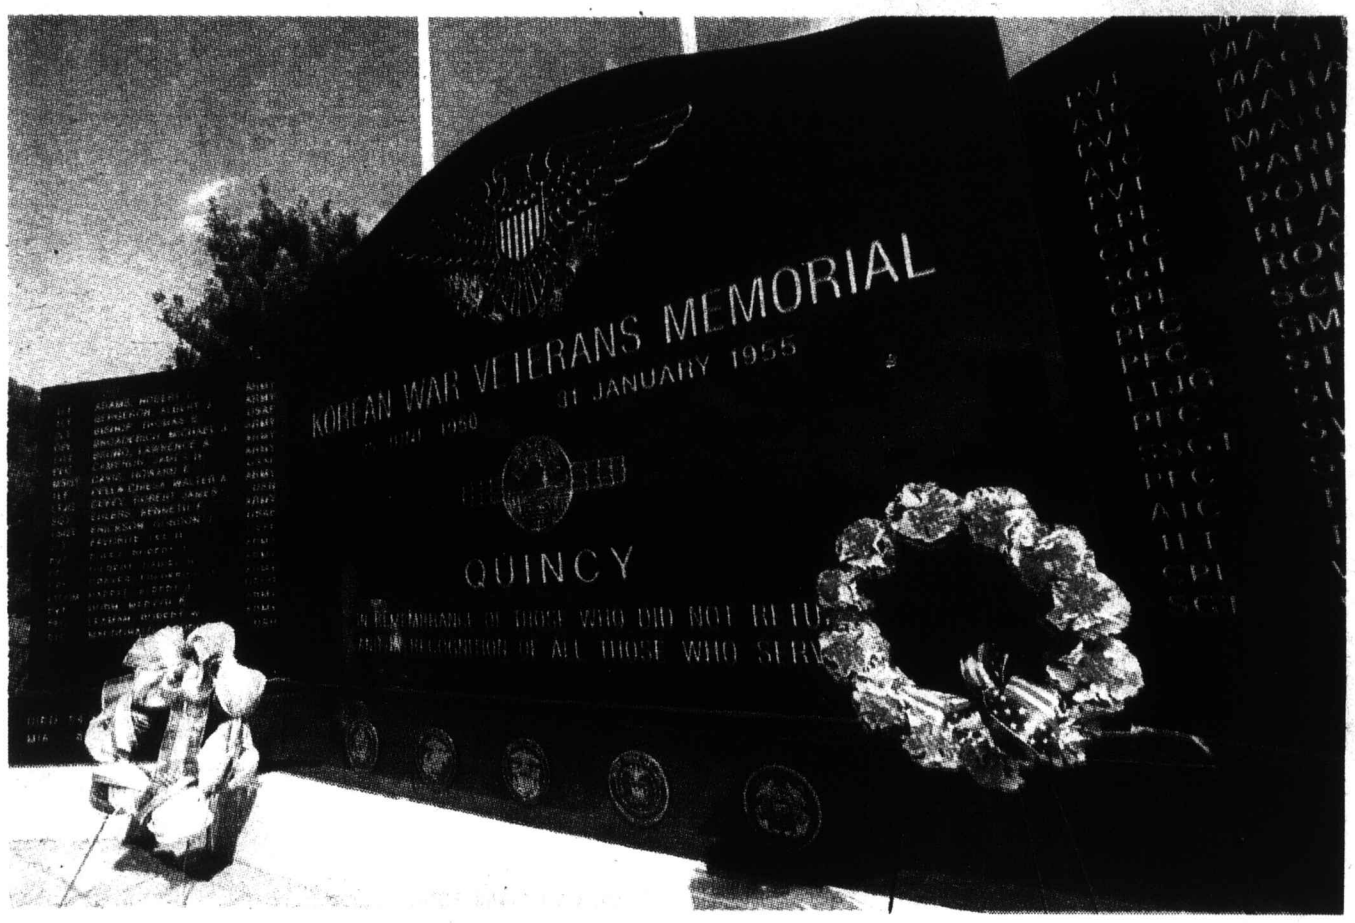
Ceremony, Wreath Laying Commemorate Korean War

On 64th Anniversary Of The Start Of The 'Forgotten War'



by KRIS KALABOKAS

A ceremony and wreath laying to commemorate the 64th anniversary of the start of the Korean War took place on Wednesday at the Korean War Veterans Memorial in front of Veterans' Stadium.

The memorial lists the names of the 38 young men who sacrificed their lives during what has been called "the forgotten war."

"It's something that when you lose a loved one in the war you can not say it is forgotten," said Director of Quincy Veterans' Services Henry Hank Bradley of the war which began June 25, 1950 and ended July 27, 1953.

Keynote speaker John "Butch" Mahoney, a U.S. Army veteran who served in Korea and member of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294, told the story of U.S. Army Major General and Commander of the 24th Infantry Division William Dean. After learning that U.S. troops were unprepared and disorganized in their efforts to ease tensions between a divided North and South Korea, Dean went to Korea himself to assist in keeping back the forces advancing from the north.

"In 1950 when the war broke out in Korea, they were very, very disorganized...we were untrained; understaffed," said Mahoney. "We were really getting beaten quite bad."

Shortly after his arrival, Dean was captured by North Korean troops and imprisoned for three years. Following his release and subsequent arrival to the U.S., he was presented with the Medal of Honor and lauded as a hero by the public, yet maintained his actions were not heroic enough to merit such an award.

Mahoney reflected on Deans' experience and dedication to his country, saying that today's citizens show a similar amount of support for veterans of the conflicts in the Middle East. He said that America must remain vigilant and "keep its guard up at all times," and that we must continue to stand behind our troops.

"God bless America and God bless you," he said.

Mahoney originally approached former Quincy Mayor James Sheets and the two worked together to raise the funds necessary to build the memorial which features a small courtyard with benches.

"We've assembled here today to give our thanks and honor to all of the Korean War veterans," said Commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council Charles Hurd. "The Korean War was the first test of the United Nations' resolve to stand

Morrisette Storms Back To Beat Braintree, 14-9

Scores 14 Straight Runs After Surrending 9 In Four Innings

By JOE REARDON

Braintree Post 86 looked much like a team with 12 members who played on the Super 8 high school squad last Friday night - until they didn't.

Holding what appeared to be a comfortable 9-0 lead heading into the bottom of the fourth, Post 86 saw its huge cushion dwindle then disappear altogether in a nightmarish, error-filled sixth inning where Morrisette rallied for nine runs and an improbable 14-9 win at Adams Field. The victory put Morrisette at 12-2 and in sole possession of first place in District 8 while Braintree fell to 10-4.

The best news out of the Morrisette camp was the pitching performance of Andrew Jaehnig. A catcher for B.C. High, Jaehnig fractured his femur in the last game of the regular season against Silver Lake and hasn't been behind the plate since. He joined the Quincy squad just a week ago and shut down Braintree over the final two innings, retiring the side in the sixth and allowing one hit and no runs the rest of the way.

Jaehnig's transition to the Morrisette squad has been a smooth one and he's looking forward to contributing to what has already been a very solid start for Quincy. Jaehnig felt comfortable on the mound and confident enough to stick with his fastball against Braintree's explosive lineup.

"I'm mostly DHing," said Jaehnig. "This is the first time I've pitched. I felt fine. I pitched a few times for B.C. High. It's not like I'm throwing anything special, just fastballs. They went up 4-0 and we kind of died a little bit. We just went at it one run at a time and got a couple of runs each inning."

Morrisette looked as though it was in for a long night as Braintree stormed out for a 4-0 lead in the first inning. Post 86 clubbed four hits with Matt Bickford and Gino LaRossa picking up RBI - LaRossa knocking in a pair on a long triple.

Braintree starter Colin Sullivan was in a groove early and was nearly unhittable, retiring eight of the first nine batters he faced. The lone baserunner, Nick Valencenti, was gunned down by a perfect throw from LaRossa when he attempted stealing second in the third inning. Braintree picked up five runs over the next two innings for a 9-0 lead, but that's when Post 86 began to come unglued and the game became more and more bizarre with each Morrisette batter.

Morrisette's rally started modestly enough in the fourth where four consecutive hits and a sacrifice fly resulted in three runs to make it 9-3. Hard-hitting Robbie Munroe drilled a double to score Andrew Currie who reached on a base hit. Jason Pekkinen followed with an RBI single and Josh Hayward brought in a run on a sacrifice fly. Morrisette added two more runs in the fifth to cut the lead to 9-5. With two runners on, Tyler Beach singled both in to give Morrisette a big breath of life.

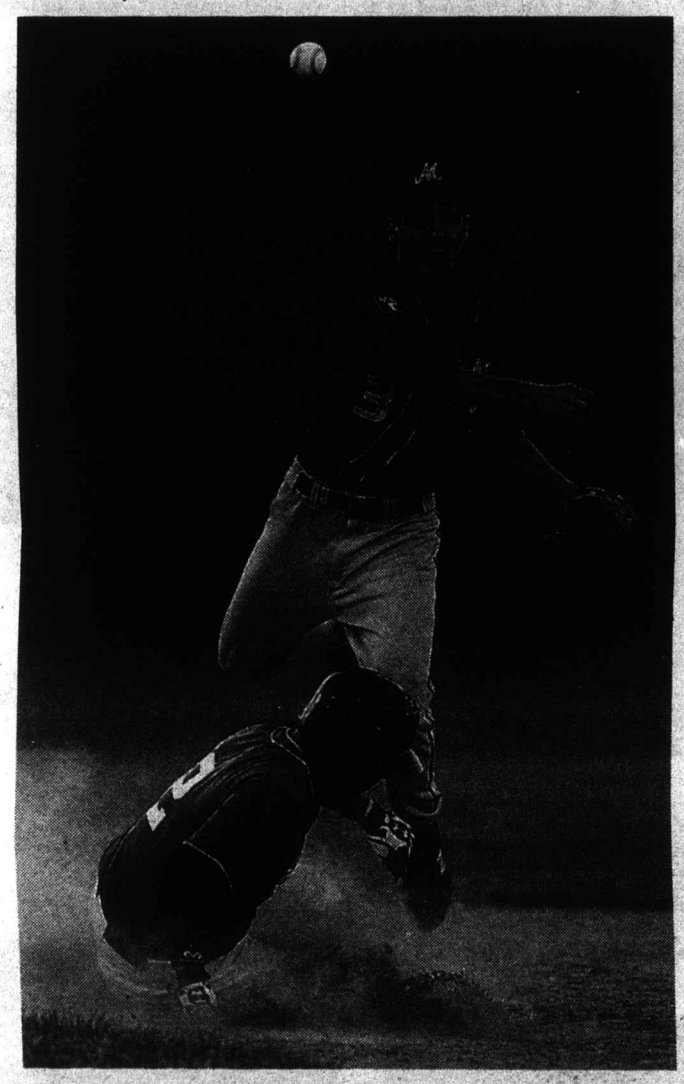
risette changed the complexion of the game for good in the bottom half of the inning. Pekkinen singled and scored on a sharp double by Hayward to cut it to 9-6. Sullivan walked the next batter and was lifted in favor of Braintree lefty Scott Strachan. A throwing error scored Pekkinen to make it 9-7. Two walks and a fielder's choice brought in Ed Riley and Currie to tie it up at 9-9. Beach put Morrisette up to stay when second baseman Anthony Venuti fielded his hard-hit grounder and quickly fired home to LaRossa, but Bob Salvucci scored when the throw got by the Braintree catcher to make it 10-9.

The carnage continued when two throwing errors on a fielder's choice by Pekkinen resulted in three huge runs and a 13-9 Morrisette lead. A walk, single and hit batsman set up another throwing error and another Quincy run for the 14-9 bulge.

Morrisette coach Rick Beach credited the turnaround to the team's ability to get to Sullivan after every batter got one look at the fireballer. "The first half was all them and the second half was all us," said Beach. "It's funny. I was joking around with them and said we had them right where we wanted. The Sullivan kid was throwing hard, but we just started hitting him. He got us the first time, but the second time around we started putting the ball in play.

"We ran on them. They threw the ball around and made mistakes and we were able to take advantage of them. Good things happen when you put the ball in play."

Said Jaehnig: "They went up 4-0 and we kind of died a little bit. We just went at it one run at a time and got a couple of runs each inning. We've been winning a lot."



TYLER BEACH throws to first after the Morrisette shortstop forces out a Braintree baserunner at second in the first inning.

Crew Teams Participate In Spring Regatta

It was cold and rainy but smiles and oars were found in Quincy Bay on a recent spring day.

The Quincy/ North Quincy High School Crew teams participated in a Regatta with Milton and Thayer Crew teams in Novice and Varsity races. They raced a Novice Race which was 1,000 meters and a second race of 1,400 meters in the Bay Pointe Marina.

Due to the cold, wet and windy spring season the rowers had only had a couple of days to practice on the water. There is a great comradely and friendly competition between team members and each of the schools.

Crew members able to race in the Regatta were Isabella Cobble, Elizabeth Bell, Nicole Welliver, Stiven Kodra, Kelly Dooling, Kelly Chow, Katie Deng and Coach Alicia Golden.

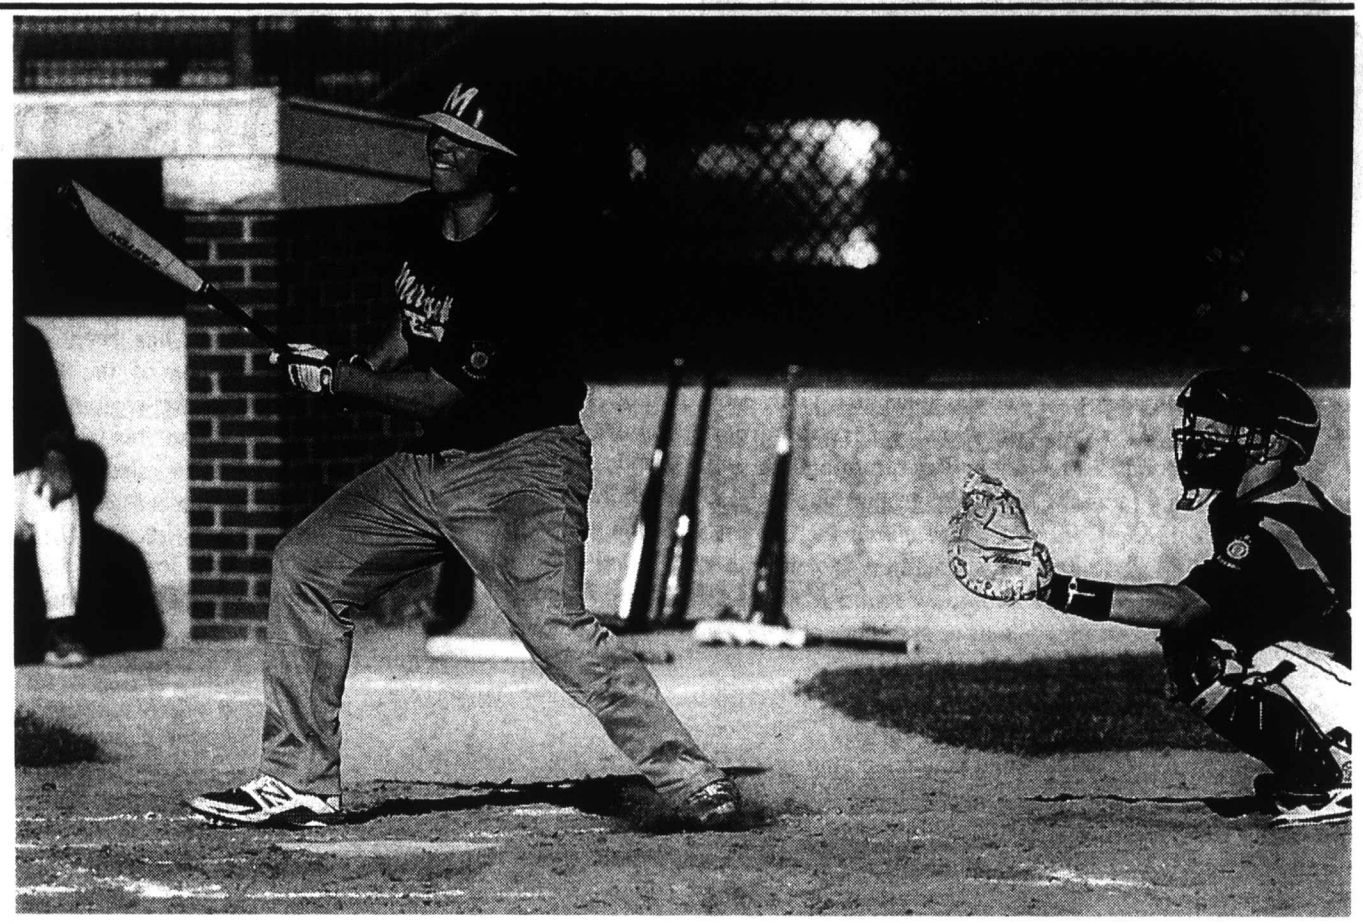
Jr. Morrisette Dominates Franklin, 8-1



CAM WHITE watches as a single lands safely in left field to drive in a run in the Morrisette Junior baseball team's 8-1 win over Franklin last Friday at Adams Field.

By JOE REARDON

Coming off a 6-3 loss to Cohasset for its first defeat of the season, Morrisette junior coach Gerry Sheperd wanted to see how well his squad would respond in Friday night's game against Franklin after the frustrating evening on the diamond

It turns out that the juniors simply shrugged off the loss and went back to work, turning in rock-solid performances at the plate, in the field and on the mound.

The junior team spotted Franklin a 1-0 first inning lead, but that was all the visitors would be able to push across as Gerry Sheperd's squad proceeded to feast on their pitching for 13 hits on the way to an 8-1 win at Adams Field. The dominant victory improved Morrisette's record to 6-1 on the season heading into the weekend.

The win erased the bad taste of an enormously frustrating game against Cohasset where the juniors hammered the ball right at fielders, twice leaving two runners on base in scoring position.

Sheperd chalked the loss up as just one of those games where no hits were falling and the team became more and more frustrated with every inning.

"We didn't play great and the kids were getting frustrated," said Sheperd. "I wanted to see how they bounced back today. We hit well, played defense well and pitched well."

The juniors got solid contributions up and down the lineup against Franklin. Brian Turner drove in three runs and an Owen Lynch double in the sixth inning scored a pair of runs to give Morrisette the 8-1 advantage. Joe Farracane had three hits and an RBI while Cam White added a pair of singles and an RBI as part of Morrisette's explosive offensive attack.

Helfrich, who pitched for North Quincy this spring, went the distance for the junior squad, scattering seven hits and striking out four for the win on a night where he had command of his pitches the entire seven innings. "He's probably our best pitcher," said Sheperd. "They (North Quincy) didn't have a lot of success so he kind of got himself frustrated. The guys played pretty good defense behind him and when they play good defense he settles down. He got his curveball and changeup over for strikes and he had them off balance a bit. They hit the fastball, but it didn't really hurt us."

Sheperd made some changes in the lineup, most notably putting White at first base and he responded with a big evening at the plate. "We were missing a player and he said he could play first," said Sheperd. "He didn't hurt us over there. If he's our back-up catcher. He usually gets in in the sixth inning so we don't have those couple of at-bats early."

Franklin got to Helfrich in the first when Shawn Rebello laced a single to right-center and came around on Jake Lyons' double for a 1-0 lead. Helfrich retired the next two batters on a pop up and groundout and shut down Franklin the rest of the way.

The juniors got hits from Farracone and Kevin Fitzgerald in the second, but were unable to drive them in. It was the third inning where the junior squad began to drive the ball hard. Troy Sheperd led off with a single and Helfrich reached on an error. Turner then jumped on a Ryan Morse fastball and sent it to deep right-center scoring Sheperd and Helfrich to give the juniors a 2-1 lead. Farracane followed with a single up the middle, scoring Turner easily for a 3-1 advantage.

Franklin put its first two batters on in the fourth on a walk and single, but Helfrich retired the next three on a fielder's choice, strikeout and pop out. The juniors chased Morse in the fourth after White singled to left and scored on a throwing error to make it 4-1. Adam McCormack reached on a fielder's choice and came in on Helfrich's single to push the lead to 5-1. Morrisette added a run in the fifth on an RBI single by White. Lynch's double in the sixth drove in a pair of runs and the juniors completed the rout.

Sheperd wasn't surprised by the juniors' offensive output which has been the norm so far this season. "They've been hitting like that all season - right through the lineup," he said.

JOSH HELFRICH scattered seven hits and fanned four in a complete game 8-1 win for the Morrisette Junior Legion baseball team against Franklin last Friday at Adams Field. The victory improved Morrisette's record to 6-1 on the season.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

NARROWING OPTIONS

"Spinal stenosis" refers to the narrowing of open spaces in the spinal canal, which exerts pressure on the nerves traveling through the spine. This problem, which typically affects middle-aged individuals, leads to leg pain. Spinal stenosis can develop due to a congenital tendency, but, in most cases, the cause is osteoarthritis. As discs between vertebrae become worn, the spaces between bones narrow and bony outgrowths called "spurs" may develop. These changes lead bones and soft tissues to fold inward into the spinal canal to compress nerves, potentially causing pain to radiate from the lower back down the buttock to the lower leg. The goal of chiropractic treatment is to create more room in intervertebral joints and relieve pressure on nerves.

Patients suffering from chronic back pain due to spinal stenosis often pursue non-surgical treatments as an alternative to surgery. If you are experiencing mild to chronic lower back pain, contact us to learn about different treatment options available. Lower back pain can be treated effectively with chiropractic therapy, and may be a viable alternative to painkiller medication and other treatments that do not treat the source of the problem. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can help you with back problems. Have you considered chiropractic health care? Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Although surgical correction may be considered when pain is disabling or weakness increases in the legs, conservative treatment of spinal stenosis (such as chiropractic) is recommended initially.

O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tourney Set For July 12-13

The ninth annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament will be held on July 12-13 at the Fenno Street courts.

The event is held in memory of John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson, two standout athletes who graduated from North Quincy High in 2002 and tragically had their lives cut short in the past 10 years.

Their families have set up memorial scholarships in their names to benefit North Quincy graduates and the tournament serves to raise funds for these scholarships.

The weekend will feature a 16-team men's tournament and a four-team women's tournament, featuring a number of local college basketball players, as well as many former and current high school players from Quincy. Games begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday and will run throughout both days.

The event has been a great success in the past thanks to the generous donations of local businesses and Quincy residents. Anyone interested in making a donation can write a check to the John "Okie" O'Connell Fund and send it to Dan Duggan, 61 Bedford St., Quincy 02169. (The donations will be split between the two funds).

QHS's Drew Myers Selected For Shooters' Showcase

Quincy High School's Drew Myers has been selected as one of the best shooters in the region and will showcase his talents in an effort to raise money for Brain Cancer Research through A Shot For Life, Inc.

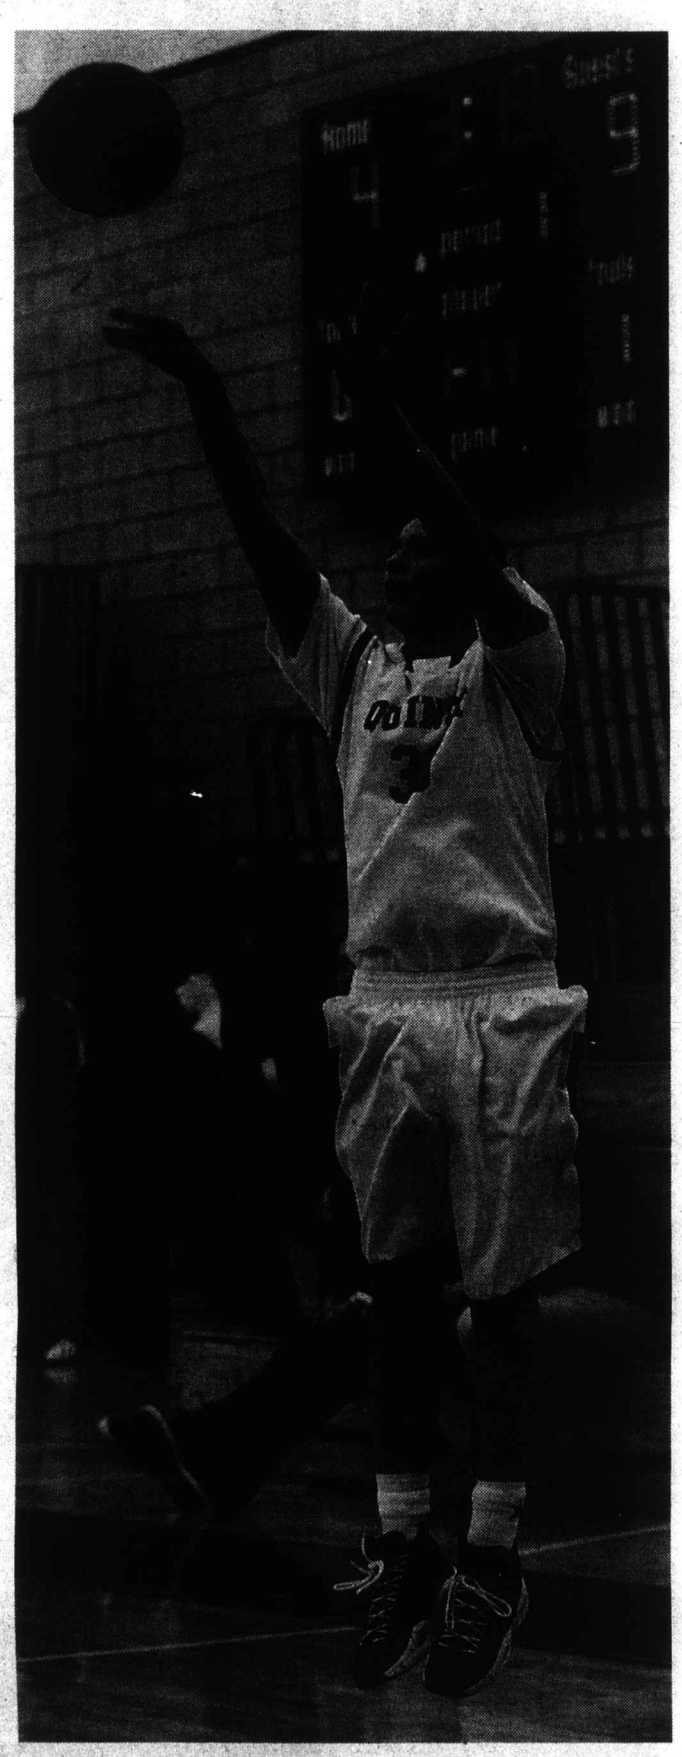
The event will take place at the University Sports Complex in Hanover Aug. 2.

The A Shot For Life Challenge is a one of a kind shooting competition that is open exclusively to the best shooters in the state of Massachusetts as chosen by our selection committee. Myers was an all-league selection last year. He has also been chosen as a captain for the upcoming season.

The money raised by all of the shooters goes to Brain Cancer research at both Children's Hospital in Boston as well as the Dr. Curry Research Laboratory at Massachusetts General Hospital. By accepting to become a part of this event, all of the shooters have committed to spending significant time and energy raising money for our cause.

"We are extremely proud of all of the new members of our A Shot For Life family and we're very happy to welcome all of our still eligible shooters back from last year," said A Shot For Life founder and CEO Mike Slonina. "All of these tremendous young athletes have made the decision to use their extraordinary talent to raise money for Brain Cancer research which speaks volumes about them as people."

The winner of the A Shot For Life Challenge gets placed in the A Shot For Life Hall of Fame and has their jersey number retired for all future ASFL events. To date, the two retired numbers are 24 and 11. Last year's winner, Scott Arsenault, will present the championship trophy to this year's winner.



QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S Drew Myers will showcase his shooting skills for a good cause Aug. 2 when he takes part in the "A Shot For Life, Inc.," a fundraiser for brain cancer research at the University Sports Complex in Hanover.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, June 22, 2014, at approximately 3:00 p.m., numerous officers were dispatched to the area of 1250 Hancock St. for a report of a stabbing.

Upon arrival, Officer William Lanergan learned from witnesses on scene that the suspect ran northbound on Hancock Street and the victim left the area. He then gave out descriptions of both males involved in the incident. The officers found a pool of blood on the sidewalk. As officers fanned out to search for the suspect or victim, Sergeant Sean Duggan located a male matching the description given out behind Citizens Bank (1200 Hancock St.) and held him at gunpoint.

With the assistance of Officers Steve DesRoche and Sean Glennon, Sergeant Duggan handcuffed the suspect and then read him Miranda Rights. The suspect said that the victim "was probably on his way to the hospital since he was stabbed." Officers began checking the various routes to the hospital for the victim. Officer Steve Elmes was flagged down by a citizen and told that a man with a blood soaked shirt was running towards the hospital on Whitwell Street near the Quincy Medical Center. Officer Elmes located the victim, who had blood spurting from his chest area. The victim, suffering from a deep stab wound to the right chest area, was transported to the medical center by Fallon ambulance.

During this time, the suspect told officers that the incident revolved around a drug deal gone bad. The suspect stated that he was selling some weed to the victim when the victim suddenly punched him in the head and stole his "weed." The suspect said he acted in self-defense when he stabbed the victim. When asked where the knife was, the suspect pointed to some shrubs. Officer Glennon located a blue metallic 6-inch folding knife nearby.

The knife and the victim's bloody clothing were photographed by detectives before being seized from the scene as evidence. Officer Glennon also obtained witness statements and Officer DesRoche transported the suspect to the station for booking. During the pat frisk, Officer DesRoche located two small "dime" bags of marijuana in the suspect's pants pocket.

The suspect, a 17-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Armed Assault with Intent to Murder and Possession of Class 'D' with Intent to Distribute." The suspect made voluntary statements to officers on scene that he was in the process of selling drugs to the victim and a botched robbery attempt led to the stabbing. The victim was transferred to Boston Medical Center for surgery but was in stable condition. Nice Work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries leadership qualities can help bring order out of all that confusion, whether it's on the job or in the home. But be careful to guide, not goad, others into following you.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Applying a more personal view to a job-linked issue could help provide better insight into those persistent problems. Use your keen Taurean logic to cut through the double-talk.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Taking some time off could be the best way to get through that seemingly endless round of demands. You'll return refreshed and ready to tackle things from a new perspective.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Restoring a sagging professional relationship takes a lot of effort. By all means, state your position. But also make sure you pay close attention to the other person's point of view.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A hot prospect intrigues the Big Cat, who is always on the prowl for a promising investment. But be careful that this "promise" has a chance of being kept. Check it out more carefully.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend could use some of your compassion and concern. If he or she doesn't ask for help, be sure you step up and make the first move. Also, check out a new career possibility.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might have difficulty getting your opinions heard because of all the noise being made by the other side. But hang in there. Others should line up with you once they learn the facts.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Offering to help a colleague is commendable. But before you commit your time and effort, check to see if that person's situation is all that he or she has led you to believe it is.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You soon should be seeing positive results from your recent efforts on behalf of a family member. On another matter, check that you have all the facts regarding a job assignment.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your aspects favor closer family relationships this week. Take time for visits, whether in person, by phone, by mail or in cyberspace. Let them know how important they are to you.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A missed opportunity isn't always a negative. Maybe your instincts are telling you not to rush into something you "thought" was worthwhile. Make time for family this weekend.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sense of humor helps you get through a tricky situation. But some stick-in-the-muds might not be so willing to make the changes that you and others agree are necessary.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making everyone you know -- or even just met -- feel important and welcome in your life.

OBITUARIES

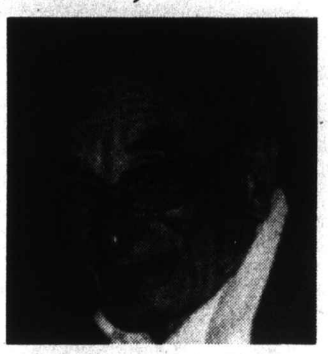
Abraham Cohen, 97, of Quincy died June 22 in Greenfield.

Mr. Cohen had recently moved to Greenfield to live with his son David and daughter-in-law Judy Atkins. He was born in Malden on, Sept. 22, 1916, the eldest son of the late Hyman and Fannie Cohen and later brother to William. Like his parents, he was a lifelong socialist and a fighter for peace, justice and equality for all people. One of his first political actions as a young boy was passing out leaflets in protest of the coming execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Mr. Cohen graduated from Quincy High School and then attended and graduated from the Massachusetts College of Optometry in 1937. He served in the U.S. Army as a medic from 1942 to 1946, reaching the rank of captain. He was wounded once and captured twice, but talked his way out of capture both times.

On returning from the war, he married Madeline Sivachek, whom he met as a teen when they both worked at Camp Nitgedeiget. Mr. Cohen then began a new career as a maker of monuments, starting the United Granite Co., in Quincy, with friends.

During the 1950s, Mr. and Mrs. Cohen suffered constant harassment from the FBI because of their progressive political beliefs. In 1956, he was called before the Massachusetts Commission on Un-American Activity with which he refused to cooperate. Years later, he received a citation from the city of Quincy honoring his commitment to justice and his refusal to bow to political pressure.



ABRAHAM COHEN

In the 1980s, Mr. and Mrs. Cohen and many others worked to overcome racial discrimination in housing in the city of Quincy. Their suit against the city helped pave the way to open public housing in Quincy to minorities. During his life, he was also president of the Jewish Community Center and was active with the Community Action Program in Quincy and was a founder with his wife of the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights.

He is survived by his children: Nancy Cohen and her partner Norman Christophersen of IL, David Cohen and his wife Judy Atkins of Greenfield, as well as his beloved granddaughter, Mandy Cohen of CA. Also survived by many nieces, nephews and cousins as well as dear friends.

Memorial donations may be made to a charity of your choice. Mr. Cohen was particularly interested in the work of Heifer International (heifer.org) and Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library (thomascranelibrary.org/friends).

Father Bill's Senior Management Reorganized

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) announces a reorganization of the senior management team.

The changes, effective immediately, are designed to support ongoing growth in programs and services and the next phase of a five-year strategic plan that will emphasize triage, assessment and rapid rehousing from shelter.

Nicole Fitzgerald has been named Vice President of Asset Management. She will work closely with President and CEO John Yazwinski and the housing development committee of the board of directors to leverage millions of dollars for housing solutions and to assist in the creation, program development and implementation of additional units of housing for individuals and families in the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts.

Fitzgerald graduated from the University of Massachusetts, cum laude, with a double major in psychology and women's studies. She first joined Father Bill's Place in 1994, before working with Boston-based shelters and treatment programs. She returned to Father Bill's Place as the Housing Director in 2000; she has held several positions including Programs Director, Director of Operations and was named Chief Operating Officer in 2008.

In her new role as Chief Operating Officer, April Connolly will oversee day-to-day operations of all FBMS programs including emergency shelter, housing, workforce development and prevention. A Licensed Independent Clinical Social Worker in Massachusetts, she holds both a Bachelor's and Master's degree in Social Work from Bridgewater State University, where she currently works as a part-time faculty member at the School of Social Work.

Along with the growth in programs and services, FBMS has nearly doubled its staff during the last several years to almost 180 full and part-time employees. To meet the growing needs of a diverse and regional workforce, FBMS has named Terri MacNayr Director of Human Resources. She graduated from Eastern Nazarene College with a Bachelor's degree in Business Management. She joined the FBMS team in 2011 as the Human Resources Manager. Prior to working at FBMS, she worked as the Director of HR Operations at New England Sinai Hospital in Stoughton.

against tyranny and all its forms. Over 60 years ago, 21 nations banded together with the United States and South Korea in a remarkable display of solidarity to turn back naked aggression and stem the tide of communism."

"Quincy sacrificed 38 souls in the Korean War; a number that is mirrored in the line drawn along the 38th parallel dividing the free world from those held captive in the north by communist rule still to this day," he said.

The line mentioned by Hurd roughly demarcates North from South Korea.

He continued on to say that the sacrifices made by those who fought in Korea have afforded us the freedoms we enjoy today and that their efforts should never be forgotten.

President of the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Larry Norton lamented the fact that as the fighting raged on in Korea, it was being commonly referred to as a conflict rather than a war. "They called it a conflict; 54,000 killed in action, 103,000 wounded, 7,000 prisoners of war, and 8,000 missing in action," he said. "At one time they wanted to call it a conflict and not a war. Kind of ludicrous if you ask me."

State Sen. John Keenan brought the greetings of the Massachusetts State Senate to veterans and spectators alike. He praised the City of Quincy for the dedication it shows to its veterans. "Quincy has a remarkable history of contribution to this nation and it's fitting that we're here today to remember a small part of it," he said.

Sacrifices were not only made by U.S. troops according to State Rep. Tackey Chan. "Part of my duties these days at the State House is doing a lot of relations with nations including South Korea," he said. "The sacrifices made here are felt not just at home but overseas because the freedoms they enjoy, the prosperity they enjoy, and their ability to have democracy is because of the efforts of the United States."

The names of those who perished during the conflict were read aloud by John Joyce and William Corcoran who both served in Korea as members of the U.S Navy, Naseeb "Moe" Morad who also served in Korea as a member of the U.S. Army, and Richard Keane, adjunct officer for Disabled American Veterans Quincy-Cavanagh Chapter 79. The reading was followed by the playing of Taps.

The memorial serves as an enormous learning resource for Quincy's citizens and school children, teaching them that freedom comes at a price said Mayor Thomas Koch. "There are real people that were involved in these wars and conflicts…to each of these names there's a face and there's a family of a great American."

Online Services Makes Juggling Easy

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

These days, with busy schedules and constant multitasking, it seems the most common kind of juggling for people is managing the multiple chores and obligations of everyday life. That's why Social Security created a suite of online services that makes doing business with us a snap.

The best way to juggle a multitude of Social Security tasks online is by creating a personal my Social Security account. It's easy to register for your personalized online account, and, once you do, you can complete a number of tasks. Check it out at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Your account gives you immediate access to your personal Social Security information. During your working years, you can use my Social Security to view your Social Security Statement to check your earnings record and see estimates of the future retirement, disability, and survivor benefits you and your family may receive. Are you already receiving benefits? You can use your online account to immediately get your proof of benefits letter, change your address or phone number on our records, start or change your direct deposit, and check your benefit and payment information.

In addition to using my Social Security, there are a number of other things you can do online with Social Security. For example, you can use the Retirement Estimator to plug in different numbers, retirement dates, and scenarios to help you decide the best time for you to retire. It's available at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

And when that time comes, you can apply for retirement benefits online at www.socialsecurity.gov/planners/about.htm. It can take as little as 15 minutes from start to finish. In most cases, once you submit your electronic application, that's it, you're done—no papers to sign or documents to submit.

From getting the skinny on how to get a replacement Social Security card to an online application for disability benefits, the place to go for juggling all of the services and information offered by Social Security is our website: www.socialsecurity.gov.

Regardless of how many Social Security tasks you may have, leave the juggling to the jugglers and take care of business the easy way at www.socialsecurity.gov.

A CHRISTMAS IN JULY fundraiser for the Quincy Salvation Army will be held Wednesday, July 16 outside The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center. A red kettle – like those used to collect donations during the Christmas season – will be manned outside the The Sun from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The kettle standout will raise awareness as to the Salvation Army's mission of serving the community throughout the year. Members of the community are encouraged to stop by and help fill the kettle. All proceeds will be used for the Salvation Army's mission of helping the less fortunate in the Quincy community. 'Christmas In July' Fundraiser To Benefit Quincy Salvation Army

Kettle Outside Quincy Sun Office July 16 From 8 A.M. To 5 P.M.

A "Christmas in July" kettle to benefit the Quincy Salvation Army will be set up next Wednesday, July 16 in front of The Quincy Sun office in Quincy Center.

The kettle will be manned by members of the Salvation Army's advisory board from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. July 16 at 1372 Hancock St. in Quincy Center – on the sidewalk outside The Quincy Sun's office.

Although the Salvation Army's traditional "kettle campaign" will not kick off until this fall – still more than four months away – the "Christmas in July" kettle underscores the Army's mission of serving the needy in the community year-round.

Capt. Timothy Ross of the Quincy Salvation Army, said, the "Christmas In July" kettle is a unique opportunity for the Salvation Army to help raise awareness and collect donations for those who are need of assistance at this time of year.

"People are coming to our doors every day – including people who never needed help before. You see, long-term unemployed, lower wage and lower skilled workers are the very last to find work as the economy continues to recover. And the need of poor children and seniors for food doesn't go away when the stock market goes up.

"It is important for us to be able to reach out with our helping hand to them during their hour of need. One of the ways that people can get involved in helping those in our community is by stopping by and dropping some money into the kettle on July 16th or by making a donation online at www.salvationarmyma.org/quincy, or drop off a donation at our office at 6 Baxter St.

"Every dollar adds up and allows us to continue to bring help and hope in situations that often seem hopeless. Eighty-two cents of every dollar stays right here in our community and goes directly to helping those who are in need. Your donation will go a long way in providing hope during these summer months.

"The bell for help truly rings all year long. Thank you for your support," Capt. Ross added.

The public is welcome to stop by and help fill the "Christmas in July" kettle Wednesday, July 16 between 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 1372 Hancock St., (outside The Quincy Sun office).

City Hall Renovations On Pace

Historic Restoration Project Seen Completed In January

By SCOTT JACKSON

The ongoing renovations to old City Hall are well underway and should be completed in January as initially planned.

Renovations to the building, which first opened in 1844 and may be the oldest municipal building in the U.S. in continual use, began in September. Once completed old City Hall, formally known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center, will house the City Council in the 180-seat Great Hall on the building's second floor. A meeting space for other boards and commissions, such as the Board of License Commissioners, will occupy space on the first floor of the renovated building. New space for exhibits highlighting Quincy's history will also be featured on the first floor.

Jim Edwards, president of architectural firm Holmes and Edwards as well as the Quincy Historical Society, is overseeing the project. In a recent interview and visit to the building – which was designed by Solomon Willard, the man who oversaw

City Nearing Accord With 5 NQ Homeowners

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city is nearing agreements to purchase five of the nine North Quincy homes that need to be razed to make way for a new parking lot and renovations to Teel Field.

In two recent phone interviews, Mayor Thomas Koch said the city is closing in on deals with five of the nine homeowners on Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue. The city plans to purchase those homes as part of a $12 million project to renovate Teel Field, build a 157-vehicle parking lot, and construct two retaining ponds.

"We're negotiating with people and we're pretty close," the mayor said in a phone interview July 2. "We think we've made great progress with five of the nine homeowners. We've reached agreements in principal with most of them."

On Tuesday, Koch said the city is still closing in on agreements with those five and the discussions have been ongoing with eight of the nine homeowners.

"We're in discussions with almost all of the homeowners – there is one we've had trouble getting in touch with," he explained. "Things are going smoothly."

The mayor defended the city's handling of the project, including communications with the nine homeowners. He noted the project was first announced at a public meeting last fall and the families living in the

Gravestone Restoration 75% Complete At Hancock Cemetery

Sparks New Interest At Historic Burial Ground

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The restoration of hundreds of gravestones at Hancock Cemetery is 75 percent complete, according to Ta Mara Conde of Historic Gravestone Services.

The work which began in April and was made possible by $113,000 in funds—$80,000 coming from a Community Preservation Fund allocation by the city and $33,000 from a Massachusetts Historical Commission grant—has sparked a newfound interest in the cemetery and the roughly 1,025 gravestones which mark the final resting places of some of New England's earliest European settlers who made what is now Quincy their home in the 1630s.

Conde, who has specialized in restoring and preserving historic gravestones for 15 years, called this part of the project "phase 1" and said by the end of August she anticipates 259 gravestones will have undergone full restoration. Work is likely to continue once the initial batch of gravestones have been repaired, however she is unsure as to when that process will begin or whether the cemetery's tombs will undergo similar treatment.

The restoration has caused local residents to take more notice of the cemetery she said. "A lot of people in town have stopped by because they've read about it in the paper or they've seen something on TV and they know that there's work going on there. People seem more interested because there's more activity going on. In every cemetery, once the town pays attention to it and a government body pays attention to it and says we're going to fix it up or we're going to clean it up or we're going to take care of it all of a sudden the city goes, oh, maybe I should go check it out."

In fact, she's had descendants of those buried in the

Wreath Laying, Activities Mark JQA Birthday Friday

The annual Presidential Wreath Laying Ceremony honoring the life and accomplishments of John Quincy Adams, Sixth President of the United States, will be held at United First Parish Church on Friday, July 11 at noon.

The ceremony marks the the 247th birthday anniversary of John Quincy Adams who was born on July 11, 1767.

The public is invited to attend and admission is free.

Lieutenant Commander David Stock, Navy Operational Support Center Quincy, will present the wreath on behalf of President Barack Obama. The Navy Honor Guard will place it on the tomb of John Quincy Adams located beneath the church.

Speakers commemorating the life and accomplishments of John Quincy Adams will include Mayor Thomas Koch, Peter Boylston Adams, Sara Georgini, assistant editor, Adams Papers, Massachusetts Historical Society and Jim Edwards, president, Quincy Historical Society.

For more information, call 617-773-0062 or visitorsprogram@ufpc.org.

Following the ceremony, guests are invited to proceed to the Adams National Historical Park Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy, where the festivities continue with tours, talks, and entertainment.

At 2 p.m., Alison Mann, Assistant Professor of History at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, will discuss John Quincy Adams' complex views on slavery, the slave trade, and race. Her theme will be "Slavery Exacts an Impossible Price: John Quincy Adams and the Dorcas Allen Case."

Allen, an African American who had been living as a free woman for years was sold, with her four young children, to a slave trader. That evening she killed two of the children. The slave trader immediately put her and the surviving children up for public auction.

For the first time in his life, Adams witnessed the utter misery of a slave auction. John Quincy's emotional involvement with the fate of a slave, Mann argues, influenced his handling of the Amistad case and intensified his staunch opposition to the extension of slavery.

At 3 p.m., Robert Shimp, Adams National Historical Park Ranger and PhD candidate, Boston University, will discuss his research and recent scholarship on John Quincy's life-long and, at times, paradoxical relationship with British society and politics.

John Quincy accompanied his father, John Adams, to Europe in 1778 and, in 1815, was appointed United States Minister to Great Britain where he served with distinction until 1817. Like his father, John Quincy developed strong opinions and attitudes toward the "mother country" and it is Shimp's contention that John Quincy's Anglo experiences influenced his later careers as Secretary of State and sixth United States President.

At 4 p.m., meet and greet "President John Quincy Adams," portrayed by Adams National Historical Park park ranger Richard Shaner and celebrate his 247th birthday with a celebratory song and a slice of birthday cake.

Activities at the Park will conclude with a special tour of the Stone Library from 5 to 6 p.m. The library is a 19th century repository of more than 12,000 books, the great majority of which belonged to President John Quincy Adams.

Group Seeks Electricity, Security For Tide Mill

Cigarette Butt, Mattress Found Inside After Recent Break-In

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The recent break-in at the Souther Tide Mill has members of a local non-profit preservation group asking the city to prioritize the installation of an electrical line for lighting and a security system, according to President of Friends of the Souther Tide Mill Doug Morrill.

The historic building located off of Southern Artery is being "put on the back burner" because the Public Buildings Department and Mayor Thomas Koch are being overwhelmed by renovation projects in Quincy Center he said. "The Koch administration appreciates history but the city has bitten off more than it can chew… you can't do everything all at once."

What disturbed him most about the break-in was finding a cigarette butt that hadn't been snuffed out on the floor which could have easily started a fire. A mattress that had been dragged to the top floor, indicating that homeless individuals may have been using the old tide mill as a temporary shelter, was also found. "What can you do with the homeless?" he asked. "They need somewhere to go but they still need to have respect for public property."

In 2006, the adjacent saw mill was completely destroyed by a fire accidentally set by trespassers.

Morrill, who recalled two more similar break-ins over the past few years, said that if the building were to succumb to fire, those in charge would end up shaking their heads and regretting not doing more to secure the area. "I've been warning and advocating for a while and I'm getting tired of hearing the sound of my own voice," he said. "I know the city will help us out but the question is when will they do it?"

He speculated that if the building were occupied, getting electricity to the tide mill would be a higher priority.

The area is presently surrounded by a fence, something Morrill says is adequate enough to keep most people out but is not enough of a deterrent for those set on getting in. He hopes reinforcing the building's wooden doors with steel will help mitigate some of the problem as he waits for the city to take action.

Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds totaling $170,000 and a $50,000 private donation made by construction mogul Jay Cashman in 2009 allowed for much needed structural repairs to the walls, roof, and shingles. Since then, an additional $65,000 in CPA funds have been granted to fortify the foundation and pilings of the tide mill. According to Morrill, those funds can't be used to install electrical lines as such work is not considered essential to the building's preservation. He is hoping that with the help of the Public Buildings Department, funds can be secured from the city for the improvements.

National Grid has agreed to place a telephone pole close to the tide mill so that a line can be brought out to supply electricity to the building at night he said, but coordinating the entire process has proven to be difficult due to communication delays.

National Grid will install the pole at their own cost. Morrill said he was unsure as to how much the project would cost in total, but he hopes drumming up interest in the building will encourage Quincy's entrepreneurs to donate to his cause.

The area where the mill now stands used to be salt marsh and meadow up until 1800. The 39 acres of land were purchased in 1802 by merchant Ebenezer Thayer who then sold it to David Stetson of Charlestown in

Cause Of Death Of Woman On Beach Unknown

By SCOTT JACKSON

Authorities have identified the woman whose body was found on a Quincy beach late last month, but the cause of her death remains unknown.

The Norfolk County District Attorney's Office identified the woman as Tamra Piazza, 45, of Curlew Road. Ms. Piazza's body was found by a passerby around 5 a.m. on June 29 in the vicinity of 734 Sea St., less than a mile from where she lived.

An autopsy was performed the next day by the state Medical Examiner's Office. The cause and manner of Ms. Piazza's death will not be known until toxicology tests are completed.

"We're awaiting toxicology reports, which usually take a couple months to come back," David Traub, a spokesman for Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, said Tuesday.

Traub added investigators found no signs of foul play, and drowning has not been ruled out as a cause of death.

Authorities initially sought the public's assistance in identifying the body. Ms. Piazza was found wearing a black bathing suit and black terry cloth covering. She also had on a silver necklace and yellow 'Livestrong' bracelet. She was identified by authorities on July 1.

READY FOR YOUR CLOSE-UP?

Primarily made popular by millennials, the "engagement ring selfie" announces to the world that a woman intends to be married. This close-up picture of an engagement ring worn on the hand of a bride-to-be follows in the long tradition of holding out an extended ringed hand for all to admire. The difference is, of course, this celebratory form of selfie is more of a portrait intended for cyberspace. To show a diamond engagement ring in its best light, a woman should display her hand in full-spectral sunlight, which brings out all the fire and brilliance that diamond is known for. Of course, one picture will hardly do if the setting is as unique and as beautiful as the central stone.

Diamonds and other gems shine at their brightest under natural light where they reflect the light. When light gets reflected from them, the effect is almost magical. Their colors shine with utmost clarity and the cut gets even more defined. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique diamond engagement rings, watches and earrings. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and get ready to do some shopping!

Koch Vs. Gutro In 2015?

Just like the weather, political speculation is heating up about next year's mayor's race.

The buzz around town is Councillor Doug Gutro challenging incumbent Thomas Koch in 2015.

KOCH

GUTRO

We approached Gutro about his plans next year and if he intends to run for mayor.

He told us:

"It's a decision for a different day."

Gutro, a former city council president now serving his seventh term on the council (5 as Ward 5 and two at-large), says he's focused on spending time with his family this summer and any decisions about his political future will be made next year.

Koch is also mum about his political future. Although it's believed he will seek a fifth term next fall, he told The Sun a few weeks ago he's undecided and that he'll announce his decision next year.

Koch was unopposed in 2013. And while I don't have a crystal ball (if I did, it'd be at the track betting on horses) my money is on a mayor's race next fall.

For two main reasons:

- A four year-mayoral term
- An annual salary of $150,000.

Whomever is elected mayor next fall, that individual will earn $600,000 guaranteed over four years as the city's chief executive officer.

Not a bad gig if you can get it.

History would also suggest that a mayor earning multiple "free rides" is an exception, not the rule.

Only one other mayor - Jim Sheets - was re-elected more than once without opposition.

Speculation about a Koch-Gutro mayor's race ramped up after a city council meeting in June. Gutro called out the mayor on his handling of the new FEMA flood maps that added 1,400 properties into higher risk flood zones and spiking insurance premiums for homeowners. In March, Gutro also criticized Koch's decision not to appeal the maps outright last summer when the city first received them. He noted FEMA delayed the implementation of maps throughout Plymouth County after Marshfield and Scituate filed appeals last summer.

"In my judgment, the truth is we shouldn't be here tonight. This vote should not have to happen," Gutro told his colleagues before the council's vote to approve the maps. Rejecting those maps would have made the city ineligible for FEMA grants.

Later in his comments, Gutro may have uttered what could turn out to be the opening salvo of the 2015 mayor's race.

"The bottom line: These are Mayor Koch's maps and it's a failure of leadership which prompted the necessity for this body to adopt it."

The next day, Mayoral spokesman Chris Walker shot back at Gutro, calling the councillor's sharp criticism "political grandstanding."

"Councillor Gutro – whose career at the federal EPA really should provide him a better understanding of the confusion FEMA has created with such as mishmash of new laws, new maps, and unfunded mandates – is more interested in pointing fingers than providing leadership. He neglects to mention that no community in Norfolk County and no community even on Cape Cod pursued the preliminary appeal, and very few, if any, communities have dedicated the resources that we have to correct the maps.

"Those communities in Plymouth County may or may not be successful, and we hope they are, but the faux outrage aimed at scoring cheap political points doesn't dismiss the fact that there are different paths to take forward and that a lot of people – the city, its residents, and our engineering team – are working incredibly hard to get it right."

It's not just the flood maps that's Gutro has been outspoken about. He's also asked pointed questions about the stalled downtown project and other issues.

Walker, speaking for the mayor, added in his comments directed to Gutro:

"It's like déjà vu all over again on virtually every issue – whether it's Honeywell, the flood maps, or our downtown work – the councillor sticks his thumb in the air, determines its direction, and then grandstands for a half-hour at council meetings. That's not leadership."

We asked Gutro to expand on his comments on the mayor's handling of the flood maps and here's what he had to say:

"(The maps) was a single issue that was extremely important to 4,200 homeowners, financially expensive. Like I said when I ran for councillor at-large, you're in a position to call balls and strikes. When the mayor does something right, you say it.

"When the mayor does something wrong, you say it.

"As uncomfortable as that might make some feel, I took offense. It has serious financial implications for those homeowners – thousands of dollars over the life of their mortgages. That's a big mess and I felt compelled to call him out."

Sounds like something is brewing besides iced tea at some of the local coffee shops. And there are plenty of issues to help stir up the speculation notably downtown redevelopment and the future of the city's main business district.

Another issue that may be bandied about next fall: the mayor's salary. After a recommendation from his appointed salary commission, Koch proposed raising the mayor's pay to $160,000. After some parliamentary procedure, the city council approved a $27,000 salary hike - to $150,000 beginning Jan. 1.

Gutro was one of three city councillors to vote against the increase. The others were Kevin Coughlin and Brian McNamee.

If Gutro decides to challenge Koch, that would likely trigger a ripple effect on the city's political landscape. His council seat would open - and there could be more.

For starters, an open council at-large seat could attract quite a few candidates, perhaps some of them already in elective office.

One city councillor who would probably take a run at an open at-large seat is Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci. A three-term incumbent, Palmucci flirted with the idea of running at-large last year. Instead, he ran for re-election and defeated challenger Michael Healy by more than 1,000 votes for his third term.

Other potential contenders for an open council at-large seat include two School Committee members: Anne Mahoney and David McCarthy.

MAHONEY

McCARTHY

Mahoney's a little bit of a wild card in next year's election. She could also run again for mayor against Koch. And as a Ward 4 resident, Mahoney would also have the option to run for Palmucci's seat. Whatever her decision, she would not risk losing her school seat since she'd be at the half-way point of a four-year term next fall.

McCarthy will be finishing up his third term on the School Committee next fall. He's also been interested in running for city councillor so an open at-large seat may spark some interest. He would have to decide if he wants to seek a fourth four-year term on the school committee or pursue another elective office or perhaps retire from politics after 12 years on the school board.

In the race for political dollars, it appears Palmucci is probably at the top of that list of the city's 16 elected officials (mayor, councillor and school committee). According to the last campaign finance reports filed at the end of 2013, Palmucci listed a balance of $85,145. He also had $19,523 in liabilities – all loans to his committee.

Koch reported a balance of $57,578 while Gutro reported $1,835 in his campaign finance account. Of course, this was six months ago and those figures are bound to change as the political fundraising season picks up this fall.

Mahoney's final report for 2013 shows a balance of $270.48 and lists $8,126 in outstanding liabilities including $6,135 in loans to her committee.

McCarthy's last report was filed in 2012. He was not on the ballot in 2013. According to the 2012 report, McCarthy has $4,375 in his campaign account.

The most money in any campaign account belongs to DPW Commissioner Daniel Raymondi. The longtime Ward 2 councillor and former school committeeman reported $174,222 in his war chest. That figure has prompted some observers to believe Raymondi is not finished with elective office and may run again – perhaps for mayor some day.

A POLITICAL NEWCOMER may seek the Ward 1 council seat next fall.

McCONE

John McCone, age 57, of 111 Darrow St., says he's considering a run for the seat held by Margaret Laforest. McCone, a telecommunications manager, has been a Quincy resident since 1987 and Houghs Neck since 1992.

McCone says he has been becoming active in several issues, including opiate abuse and housing.

"There are quite a few people that are urging me to run but the key for me is making sure I will be able to provide the time needed to be effective," he says. "I don't want to run to bolster my image but rather as someone who could have a positive impact."

He adds: "There is a lot to consider before finalizing my decision family being among them."

Expect more political speculation regarding the 2015 city election as this year moves on.

Stay tuned.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 POSTCARD showing the tidal dam that was located at the mouth of the Town Brook. It was used as the source of power for what is known today as the Souther Tide Mill. After the Civil War, the Souther family used the old grist mill as the center of their brokerage business that sold among other things "XXX, stock and porter ale by the Barrels. Halves and Quarters." The old mill was located on the corner of Mill Street and Souther Place, which is now part of the Southern Artery. Later, the mill was used for sawing wood by the Johnson Lumber Company who owned it at the time of the picture and then by the Quincy Lumber Company, who was the last occupant of the mill. The remnants of this dam are long gone, but the original historic tide mill building still stands with new roofing and siding and is now owned by the city. Concerned About Pollution At Wollaston Beach

I note the concern about pollution at Wollaston Beach.

As of July 1st, the beach is open due to the lack of rain. That will change with the weather. The reason for the pollution is that storm drains open out onto the beach.

The photo (at right) shows a storm drain outlet near the Squantum Yacht Club. There can be no resolution to the pollution problem until somehow the discharge from this and other storm drains can be rerouted or cleansed.

Simply dumping waste water onto public beaches is akin to the medieval practice of emptying chamber pots into the streets.

Asks Koch To Reinstitute Beach Programs For Kids

(Editor's note: A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Mayor Koch:

I was out with a group of residents and volunteers June 29th on Sailors Beach in Germantown to clean the debris that has accumulated over time. This beach is a real jewel and while I was there I was thinking how nice it would be if we had a beach program for kids as the city used to do before budget cuts and the harbor cleanup forced its closure.

I would like to propose that Parks and Recreation re-institute the programs of before, swimming lessons, volleyball, etc. A good start would be Sailors, Edgewater and Merrymount. The program should not be terribly expensive to operate.

If you saw the enthusiasm these kids showed that were with us I think you would agree. The additional benefit would be the sense of community these types of programs foster.

Thank you for your consideration.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss this further.

Sidewalk Bazaar Days Are Here Again

By SCOTT JACKSON

Stores throughout Quincy Center planned to participate in the city's fifth annual sidewalk bazaar.

The three-day event would feature the crowning of a new Miss Quincy Bay Race Week; fire engine rides; dance performances; karate exhibitions; a 'zoomobile' with a monkey, alligator, boa constrictor, and skunk; Fire and Police Department demonstrations; the Budweiser Clydesdales; magic acts; and concerts in addition to sales at many of the local shops.

To add to the festivities, business owners would all be wearing brimmed and branded straw hats. Indian headbands – more than 5,000 of them – were to be distributed to children attending the event.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon also planned to set up a sidewalk office during the three-day so he and his staff would be able to meet with residents and hear their concerns.

"We are always looking for ideas from the people of Quincy to improve the city," Hannon said. "It's the suggestions from citizens in every area of Quincy I want to know about. Citizen participation is the key to a successful city."

Hannon also planned to bring his 'sidewalk mayor's office' to other parts of the city in the months following the bazaar.

CELTICS HOOPS CLINIC AT ENC

The Boston Celtics planned to hold a free basketball clinic at Eastern Nazarene College in partnership with the Quincy Recreation Department.

The program would include lectures and demonstrations from Celtics players and coaches as well as autograph sessions. Among the participants scheduled to appear were players Don Nelson and Paul Silas, former players Tom "Satch" Sanders and Jim Loscutoff, and coaches Tom Heinsohn and John Killilea – a former Quincy High standout.

"Our aim is to teach good basketball and to, in some measure, aid the summer basketball programs in the 15 cities and towns we will visit," said Celtics General Manager Red Auerbach.

Wollaston Garden Club Celebrates Anne Hutchinson 423rd Birthday Anniversary

For the past five years, in celebration of Anne Hutchinson's summer birthday, a floral arranger from the Wollaston Garden Club has created a hanging wreath design for the memorial sign at Anne Hutchinson Square at the corner of Newport Avenue, Beale Street, and Grandview Avenue in Wollaston.

This year's design is a colonial style wreath, created by club past president, Jo Costello, who is also one of the garden club's civic beautification co-chairs and studies floral design with a Sogetsu School of Ikebana teacher. Costello has designed for the Museum of Fine Art's Art in Bloom.

She explained her wreath design in this way. "My intent was to bring the elements of nature together into a pleasing decoration to commemorate the birthday of Anne Hutchinson." Costello chose a natural grapevine wreath with dried flowers and a bright green bow. The sunny, windy, and dry conditions of Anne Hutchinson Square, along with the summer heat, make this a very challenging project for any designer.

Members of the Wollaston Garden Club have long been interested in the story of Anne Hutchinson and her family's 1600's farm in the Wollaston Hill area of Quincy. This summer would have been the 423nd birthday of Hutchinson. In 2006 the garden club created, and still maintains this garden dedicated to Hutchinson on the hillside, with the Roxbury puddingstone marker that commemorates "the place where she tarried..." in her exile from Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1638.

Two other civic groups from Portsmouth, Rhode Island and White Plains, New York, share with the garden club annually news and programs commemorating Hutchinson's life. Wollaston Garden Club president, Anita Fasano commented "Our garden club members are inspired by this strong, determined colonial woman, who as a gardener midwife had a home and a farm, right here in Wollaston."

Shredded Brussels Sprout Coleslaw

By MARIE

I was over my daughter Nancy and Jed's home one Sunday afternoon. She was having pulled pork sandwiches plus some other sides dishes.

Jed made a delicious cole slaw with brussels sprouts that was so different. I've made them sautéd roasted or boiled, but never knew that they would go so well in a cole slaw. But it was what he used for the dressing that was so good.

You can purchase shredded brussels sprouts in the market these days, saving a lot of time.

BRUSSEL SPROUT COLE SLAW

1 package of shredded brussels sprouts
2 carrots (shredded)
Mayonnaise
Ranch dressing
Greek cucumber dip

When you are putting it together, add the dressings as you prefer – the combination of all three was wonderful.

Chicken And Salad

By SUZIE

Salads are everyone's go to meal on a hot day. A freshly made homemade one is so much better than the ones you can get at a restaurant, or takeout.

Here is a recipe that has everything you need and is a "chopped" style salad which makes it easier to eat as well. With chicken and bacon, a nice creamy Italian style dressing homemade dressing and lots of colorful crunchy vegetables, this is sure to be a favorite.

Great for leftover chicken and just make some extra bacon during the week so you have it on hand in a jiffy.

DRESSING

¼ cup Greek Yogurt (Full fat is best when purchasing Greek yogurt)
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons chopped fresh chopped basil
1 tablespoon chopped fresh Italian parsley
1 tablespoon minced shallot (or red onion is fine)
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon sea salt
1 teaspoon raw honey

CHICKEN AND SALAD

1 lb leftover or freshly cooked chicken chopped (it can be grilled, baked, however you prepare it is fine.)
4 cups chopped romaine lettuce
3/4 cup finely chopped red cabbage
3/4 cup diced red bell pepper
1/2 cup diced red onion
1/2 cup assorted cherry tomatoes, chopped
1/2 fennel bulb, halved again, thinly sliced
1 avocado, diced
2 slices cooked chopped bacon

To prepare dressing: Puree the dressing ingredients in a food processor or blender until smooth. You can also whisk if you are feeling like doing it the old school way.

Combine lettuce, cabbage, bell pepper, onion, tomatoes, fennel, avocado and bacon in a large bowl. Add the chicken and dressing and toss well. Season to taste. ENJOY!!!!

Leaders Tout Red Line Corridor At Bio-Tech Conference

Quincy's efforts to create a regional economic engine driven by the burgeoning biotechnology and life sciences industry took another major step forward with the national debut of the recently announced Life Sciences Corridor at the BIO International Convention in San Diego, local leaders said Tuesday.

The biotechnology push started several years ago as a partnership between Mayor Thomas Koch's economic team and the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. This spring, officials from five cities announced the creation of the Life Sciences Corridor – a collaboration of the Red Line cities of Quincy, Boston, Cambridge, Somerville and Braintree – to help attract investment from the biotechnology sector.

The collaboration was a major component of the Massachusetts pavilion at this year's BIO International convention, which attracts thousands of industry leaders and entrepreneurs every year.

"People were talking about it – and they are definitely starting to get it: It's not about Boston on an island doing its own thing and it's not about Cambridge on an island doing its own thing: With a truly regional approach we can tap on a tremendous amount of economic potential. When taken as a whole, there probably isn't a region in the country or even internationally that can offer what this Red Line corridor provides," said Nicholas Verenis, the Mayor's economic development director.

Dean Rizzo, President of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said the regional approach creates a much broader market for life sciences start-ups in cities that are just minutes apart via public transportation. The market, Rizzo said, is much bigger because of the space and economic challenges in Cambridge and Boston, opening a major door for Quincy to capitalize upon.

"If you take Kendall Square and downtown Boston – and that essentially becomes your boundary for this kind of development – it creates a vacuum that will have firms looking not just outside Greater Boston but outside Massachusetts. When we collaborate as a region, we create a much broader, and in the end, a much more successful market," Rizzo said.

Rizzo, Verenis and Economic Development Coordinator Maureen Geary travelled to San Diego for this year's convention – the fourth consecutive year with a Quincy presence at the international gathering. The networking and development strategies are also starting to bear tangible fruit, officials said, pointing to this week's ribbon cutting of the Ras Labs, LLC laboratory in the Crown Colony Office Park.

The opening makes Ras Labs, an innovative synthetic muscle creator, one of the first life sciences companies to locate in Quincy.

"This is not something that is going to happen overnight, but our team has done a tremendous job putting Quincy on the map and we're making great progress," said Mayor Koch. "We could sit back and wait for companies to come to us, but that's never been our attitude and that's not how we shape our City for the future. We're being aggressively pro-active, we have a great story to tell and people are paying attention to that story."

Quincy House Tours July 19

A special, indepth tour of the Josiah Quincy House will take place Saturday, July 19.

The Quincy House - a National Historic Landmark – is located at 20 Muirhead St. in Wollaston.

Historic New England's staff experts will share the principles of conservation and the important role of the conservator in presenting collections in a historic house museum. Tour the first floor of the house taking a close look at specific objects, and learn about their conservation treatment. Highlights include ceramic Chinese export porcelain urns, wicker seating furniture, an eighteenth-century landscape painting, and a novel nineteenth-century advancement in photography.

The 1770 Quincy House transports visitors to the Revolutionary War era and tells the story of a woman's work to preserve her family's history more than a hundred years later. Revolutionary leader Josiah Quincy built the house in 1770. Quincy and his family played key roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts for generations, producing three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard.

In the early 1880s, Eliza Susan Quincy made it her life's work to document the historic significance of her family's home. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The tour is offered two times on Saturday, July 19 from 11a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 to 3 p.m. Admission is $20 for non-members and $15 for Quincy residents and Historic New England members.

Registration is recommended. Call 617-994-5930 to reserve or visit www.HistoricNewEngland.org.

Local Legislators Support Substance Abuse Recovery Bill

Quincy state representatives House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano, Bruce J. Ayers and Tackey Chan recently voted to pass legislation that will increase opportunities for long-term substance abuse recovery in the Commonwealth.

The current bill, which builds upon legislation originally sponsored by state Sen. John F. Keenan, introduces new initiatives that are intended to bolster methods of prevention and expand the availability and scope of substance use disorder treatment.

The bill takes a comprehensive approach to the Commonwealth's substance abuse problems by addressing both prevention and care. It empowers the Commissioner of the Department of Public Health to place a substance in Emergency Schedule I for up to a year if it is determined to pose an imminent hazard to public health and safety.

According to the legislators, one of the most important provisions in this legislation requires all insurance plans in the Commonwealth to cover medical detox and detox step-down services for 10 days, which will prevent mental health and substance abuse patients from occupying much-needed beds in hospital emergency rooms for extended periods of time.

Other highlights of the bill include

• Increases membership of the Drug Formulary Commission (DFC) to include the Massachusetts Division of Insurance (DOI), Department of Public Health (DPH), Medicaid, and specialists in chronic pain and addiction medicine.

• Mandates that the DFC prepare a formulary of chemically equivalent substitutions for opiates that are deemed by the DFC to have high potential for abuse or misuse given their chemistry.

• Adds Licensed Drug and Alcohol Counselors to the list of licensed mental health professionals, which allows them to bill all insurers in the Commonwealth for their services. This measure will significantly increase access to care.

The bill reached the House floor last week, where it was passed unanimously. Lawmakers are hopeful that this bill will help to combat the Commonwealth's substance abuse problems by putting preventative mechanisms in place and ensuring that individuals struggling with substance abuse will have access to the long-term care they need to enter recovery.

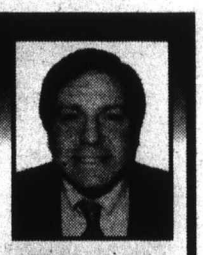
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.



OVERCOMING REFLEXIVE RESPONSE

If dental appointments make you anxious, you should make your feelings known to the dentist and dental hygienist, who can help you overcome your anxiety. A fuller explanation of the procedure at hand often helps patients know what to expect and prepare for any mild discomfort that they may feel. Topical and injected anesthetics make pain a non-issue; however, simply the thought of experiencing pain arouses such anxiety that patients feel a bit overwhelmed. Recent research published in The Journal of the American Dental Association shows that the urge to gag that many patients experience is often founded in fear. Once patient worries are properly addressed with reassurance, soothing music, and/or medication in some cases, dental appointments become worry-free.

Part of our commitment to serving our patients includes providing information that helps them to make more informed decisions about their oral health needs and plans to eliminate anxiety. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We encourage you to talk to us about your dental health. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting the problem. We will show you how to care for your teeth. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we provide quality, personal dental care in a comfortable, immaculate, professional environment. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Let us help you bring out that natural smile. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. It is the pain that occurs before treatment that makes root-canal therapy so uncomfortable. Most patients report that the root-canal procedure itself is no more painful than having a filling placed.

City Nearing Accord With 5 North Quincy Homeowners

nine homes were later invited to an additional meeting. Negotiations, however, had to wait until after the council approved the project, which didn't happen until June 16.

"I'm sensitive to the fact people don't want to sell their homes, but there are times in government when we have to make tough decisions for the greater good," Koch said July 2.

The mayor's plan calls for adding grandstands with seating for 600 at Teel Field, along with a new sound system, lighting, concessions, and artificial turf. The renovations would allow North Quincy High's teams to use the field for practices and games; youth leagues could also play there. The 157-vehicle parking lot would be used to alleviate parking problems at the high school, providing a net gain of 127 spaces.

Koch is optimistic the city would be able to reach agreements with all nine homeowners and not have to use the eminent domain process to seize the properties.

"It's a tool I have, but eminent domain is not my first preference," Koch said. "I would like to get there with friendly takings."

The City Council has given the city authority to purchase the nine homes, but a new vote would be needed before eminent domain proceedings could move ahead.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee – who represents the Hunt Street neighborhood – said on Monday he was optimistic the issue of eminent domain could be avoided. But he did not say whether or not he would vote in favor of eminent domain takings if the issue found its way to the council.

"I'm going to keep an open mind – it's a sensitive situation. I hope it doesn't come to that, but I'm not going to take a stand at this point in time," McNamee explained in a phone interview.

"Hopefully the city can have a mutually agreeable settlement with the residents. Hopefully they can do it in a cooperative way. I hope they can find a mutually agreeable price. The negotiations are ongoing and I'm optimistic they can be friendly takings."

Councillor Doug Gutro, who was returning home from Pakistan on June 16 and missed that night's council meeting, said recently he would vote against using eminent domain to take the nine homes. Gutro noted Koch had promised not to use eminent domain to take land for the Quincy Center project while campaigning for mayor for the first time in 2007.

"I hearken back to 2007 when eminent domain was a topic in the mayor's race. Mayor Koch said he would not use it for the downtown," Gutro said.

"You have to put that on a higher level when it comes to people's homes. If discussions are going well, that's one thing. If they elect to use eminent domain, I would vote no."

Koch said Tuesday he had promised at the time not use eminent domain to seize privately-owned land and hand it over to a developer; that did not apply to public projects, such as the Hannon Parkway.

Gutro also said he did not know which way he would voted on June 16 had he been present at the meeting because he had several questions he would have wanted answered.

"I had a whole host of questions about the breakdown of the money – how much of the $12 million would go towards the homes?" Gutro said. "I wasn't walking in with my mind made up."

In Tuesday's phone interview, the mayor declined to say how much the city estimates paying for the nine homes, though he said the total figure was within the amount the city budgeted for that aspect of the project.

"At this point, based on the estimates and appraisals, we're certainly within our budget," Koch said.

The nine homes – eight on Hunt Street and one on Newbury Avenue – have a total assessed value of $3.1 million, according to the city assessor's online database.

1814. It was then sold to John Souther the following year. He used it as a shipyard, a wharf, a grist mill which ground grain into flour, a saw mill, and a canal lock.

In 1873, the Souther family sold the land to Wilber Larkin who turned it into a lumber yard. It was then again sold to Benjamin Johnson in 1888 and ultimately ended up owned by the Quincy Lumber Co. in 1912. The business closed its doors in 1983 and the building was left abandoned and empty of any machinery.

It is one of only five tide mills left in the United States and was declared in 1991 by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to be an endangered historic building. It was subsequently placed on the Historic Properties list.

The original mill burned down in 1847 but was reconstructed in 1854 in part by using some timber from the old building.

The group's goal is to ultimately see the mill restored to a working state attractive to tourists but that can't happen without further attention and funding for electricity and more extensive security measures said Morrill. "It was really quite a site in its day...it's our duty to preserve it for future generations."

On Tuesday, Mayor Thomas Koch said the city has been working with the group trying to preserve the tide mill. Among other things, he noted police patrols in the vicinity of the mill have increased in recent years. Bringing electrical service on site and installation of a security system are issues that will be addressed, although the mayor said there is no timetable.

"Those types of things will be dealt with over time," Koch said.

Hancock Cemetery was the area's primary burial ground until 1854. The poorest of the poor were put to rest alongside the city's elite such as Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives Abigail and Louisa prior to their move to the crypt located in the basement of the United First Parish Church, Henry Adams who was the first Adams to live in Quincy and was a relative of the presidential family, and the man who Quincy is named after; Colonel Josiah Quincy.

The cemetery itself is named after Rev. John Hancock, the father of prominent Patriot and signer of the Declaration of Independence John Hancock. It is also one of America's oldest burial grounds.

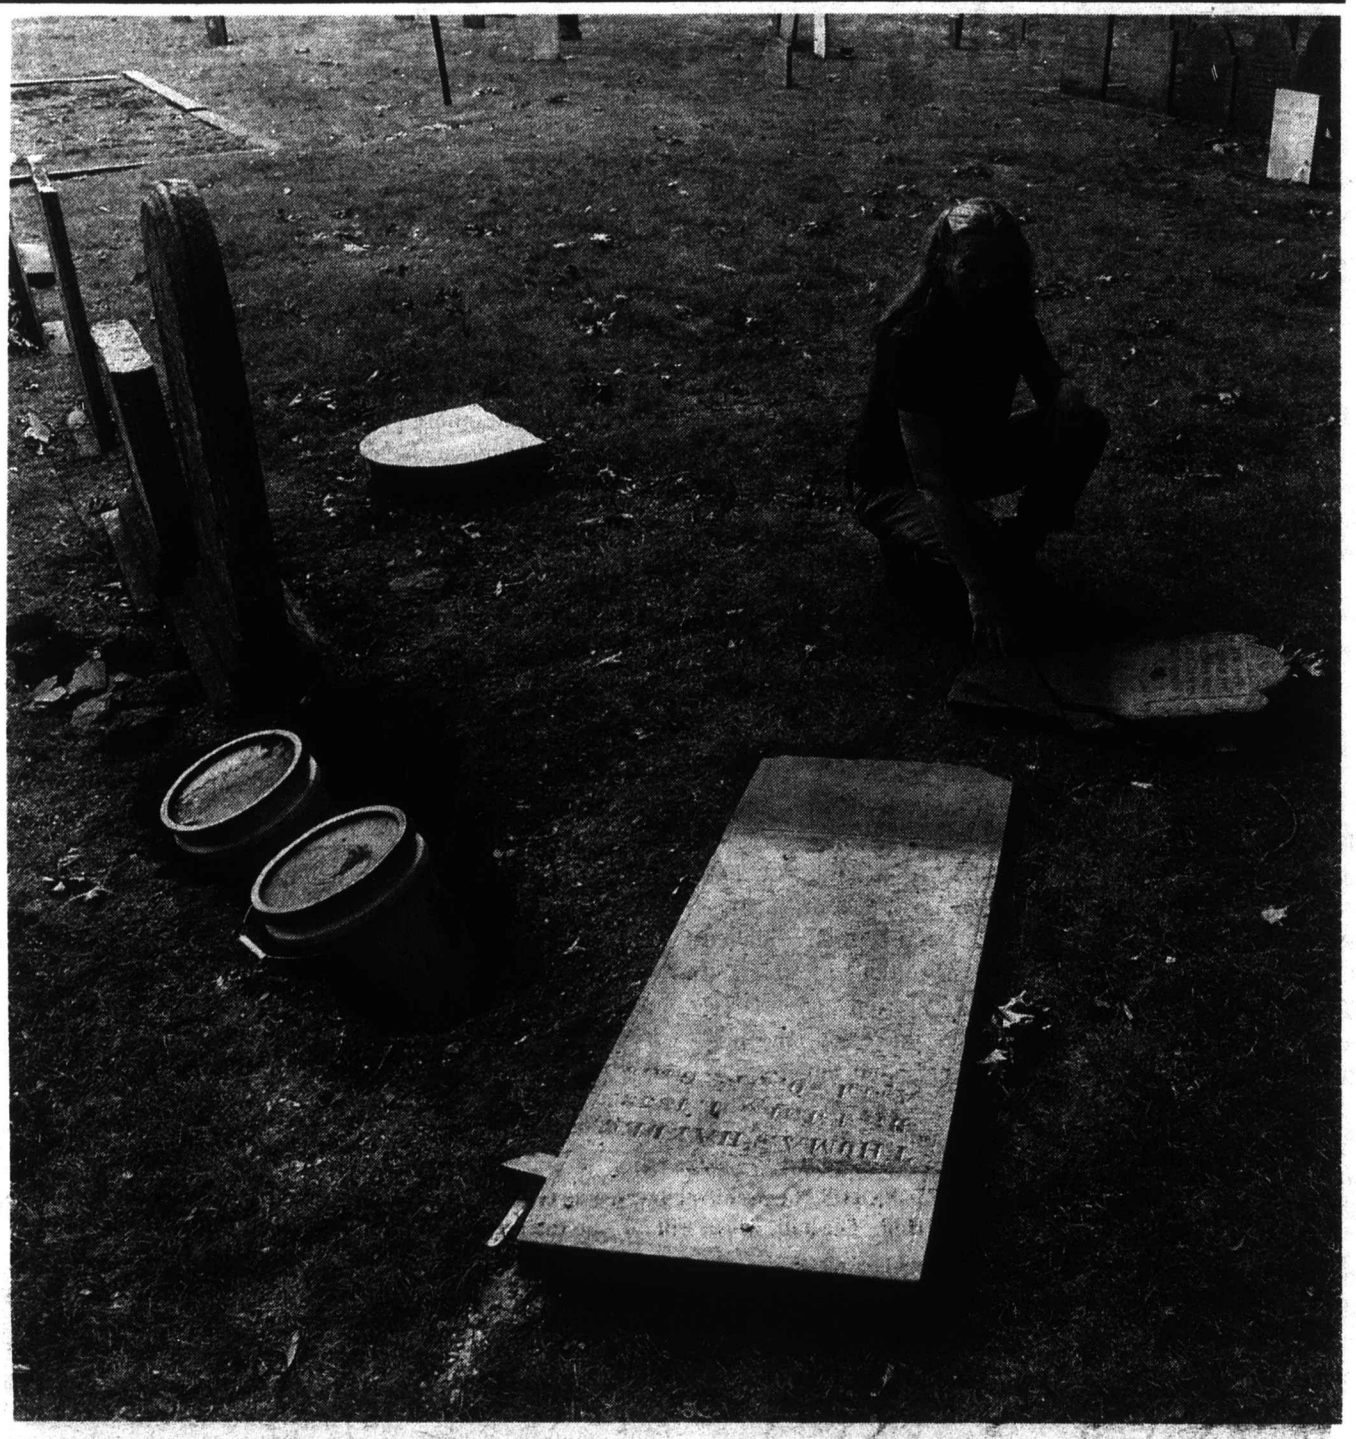
According to Conde, since Hancock Cemetery was used as an active burial ground for so many years, a variety of gravestones representing several eras can be found there. Most recognizable are the stones carved in the winged death's head style which feature a skull with wings jutting out of its sides. Such gravestones were popular from 1600 to1800 and were commonly found in New England cemeteries. That style eventually evolved into the soul effigy style which usually featured portraits of the deceased or more human-like, cherubic faces—still with wings attached to the sides of the head—carved into the stone, representing the hope of resurrection. The predominant images on gravestones in the 1800s were those of urns and willows, visually depicting the mourning of those survived by the deceased. Later, Victorian era imagery would reign, which focused less on the anguish of death and instead depicted what Conde described as "flowers and angels," or what is considered more common gravestone imagery today.

The messages carved into the gravestones inevitably shifted from grim reminders of human mortality to inscriptions welcoming the deceased to heaven, reflecting evolving attitudes regarding death.

The people of the Victorian era not only influenced the style of the gravestones in Hancock Cemetery, but also changed the general layout of the cemetery itself, making restoration a bit more difficult. "When the Victorians came in they didn't really like the death stuff and they thought it was very scattered and cluttered looking so a lot of times they would change where the stones were so we're not really sure how many of these stones line up with the actual bodies," she said. "There's pieces of stone that we've found that are not associated with another piece of stone and we don't know what it's marking." Pinpointing how many people were actually buried between 1630 and 1854 has proven challenging because of this Victorian meddling. "You have headstones and footstones so that's not saying there's a thousand burials although there are many burials that aren't marked."

Conde described the restoration process as "'delicate."

"If you clean them too much you're going to damage the stone," she said, noting that visitors are discouraged from producing rubbings of the grave markers as to not disturb the already eroded carvings.



TWO GRAVESTONES that were in jeopardy of falling over were removed from the ground and will be reset and realigned with neighboring stones as part of the cemetery conservation project which began in April. The stone which Ta Mara Conde is pointing to was reinscribed in 1821 by a descendant of the deceased, causing the surface to peel away, or "delaminate" from the bulk of the grave marker. The larger stone will be reset directly into the ground while the smaller of the two will need to be set on a base for support. Additional repairs entail sealing cracks to prevent water from seeping into the stone.

A large portion of the job so far has involved straightening the stones and realigning them with their bases, preventing them from toppling over and cracking. Existing cracks are filled in with restoration mortar which is comprised of crushed stone with a bit of lime added to the mix that can mimic the look of stone or marble. The lime, she said, helps the mortar adhere to neighboring surfaces.

"There's a huge number of them that I'm doing treatments on; either they've broken and I need to put them back together or they need a base so they can stand up straight because they're broken at ground level, or they're what we called delaminated; when the face of the slate starts to come off so we'll reattach that," she said.

The gravestones have most likely undergone prior restoration efforts in the 1800s, the 1920s, the 1940s, and the 1970s according to Conde; something which has negatively impacted her efforts today. A gravestone she recently found had been reinscribed by the deceased's great-grandson in 1821 according to an additional inscription left at its base. This cutting initiated the delamination process, causing the surface to peel away from the bulk of the marker. "It broke my heart," she said. "With the carving in he's caused the front to start peeling off and I need to do more repairs. The inscription is now actually going to be gone because he did this wonderful thing."

Conde feels New England's cemeteries are what draw tourists to the area. "It's one of our main attractions. People come to see our gravestones," she said. "New England Cemeteries have that particular charm that you can't find anywhere else."

construction on the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown – Edwards said the project remains on pace for completion in January.

"We're going at an even pace. We're not ahead of the schedule and we're not behind the schedule," Edwards said.

"It's a complicated historic restoration project," he later added. "Considering all the pitfalls that could await on a job like this, it's been relatively straight ahead."

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed renovating both old City Hall and Coddington Hall at an estimated combined cost of $18 million in 2012.

"It's getting pretty exciting there," the mayor said in a recent phone interview. "It's certainly full of activity right now."

Over the last several months, crews began underpinning the foundation to provide additional support. As part of the project, the foundation was also supposed to be waterproofed. But Edwards said that became problematic after excavation revealed the foundation wasn't even – different sized pieces of granite were used, causing the foundation to jut out in places. The issue was addressed on the north side of the building, the side adjoining McIntyre Mall, by pouring concrete to even everything out.

"Once we uncovered it and pulled the dirt back from it, it was very, very, very uneven. The irregularity of the stones as they were laid up creates for the waterproofing company a very formidable, complex situation for him to waterproof it," Edwards explained.

"On the northerly side we poured an extra form on the outside of the irregular stone so it would be a one-sided concrete form. It removed all the irregularities so someone could come along and put the waterproofing on it."

The foundation on the south side of the building, adjoining the Hancock Cemetery, remains exposed presently. On that side of the building, a 22,000-gallon water vault, which will provide water for fountains in the planned Adams Green, is being installed in the ground. That water vault will eventually be landscaped over.

Edwards and the project's structural engineer also had to devise a system to keep the granite blocks in the corners of the building together.

"Corners were coming apart so we had to formulate some metal angles, in concert with our structural engineer, that pinned those corners back together and prevented them from moving in the future," Edwards said.

Workers also completely gutted the building. New framing systems, which comply with modern building codes, are now in place.

"The new steel framing is pretty much all in," Edwards said. "The old framing was just in horrible condition and it didn't conform to any of today's current codes. So there's new steel framing with wood infill.

"The new steel framing is not only to support the various floors, it also braces the building. There are all kinds of seismic conditions we have to attend to and the steel frame does that."

Flooring has also been added and framing for walls is being put in place. Electrical, plumbing, and HVAC work is underway in the interior as well, Edwards noted.

In recent weeks scaffolding has popped up along the building's north and east sides. That will allow roofers to begin the process of removing the slate roof from the building. Edwards said much of the slate on the roof is likely original to the building, but it has begun to peel apart, as slate does when it weathers. The roof has also been patched numerous times over the last 170 years. Skylights, for example, were installed when the building was renovated in the 1920s and later removed and patched over at some point.

"The roof has been patched heavily through the 170 years of the building, but we think a lot of the slate is original," Edwards said. "It's all coming off. It's not in good condition. One-hundred-seventy years are enough so we're going to replace it all with new black slate.

"Hopefully it lasts another 200 years."

The roof work should be completed over the next few weeks, according to Edwards.

Additional exterior work is taking place on the building's walls. The mortar between each granite piece will be removed and replaced, a process known as pointing. But before that work commences, crews will clean the granite façade. That work will start as early as this week.

"We're going to start cleaning. The scaffolding is up now. We've got the mason on board. We're going to start cleaning the stonework and finding out the least caustic materials we can use to remove 170 years worth of grime, soot, carbon deposits – those kinds of things," Edwards said. "We'll try to be as gentle with the cleaning of the stones as we possibly can."

Ivan Myjer, the owner of Arlington-based Building & Monument Conservation, is assisting the contractor with the masonry work. Myjer has worked on other historic buildings across the country, including the Alamo in San Antonio.

"He's a very, very well-respected individual and he's helping us review the work that's going on with the masonry," Edwards explained.

"We're going to try and treat this building with great care. The mortar joints are very, very thin so we want to be extremely careful about how we rake the old mortar out of those joints."

Edwards estimated the masonry work being completed within four to six weeks.

Work has also begun in the space between old City

Wollaston's Matt Kerin Dominates South Boston, 6-0

Senior Babe Ruth Team Improves To 11-2

By JOE REARDON

Matt Kerin is heading to UMass-Lowell in the fall and contemplating trying out for the baseball team as a walk on freshman. River Hawks head coach Ken Harring may want to take a look at the hard-throwing righty if he's interested in adding a young, strong arm to the roster.

Kerin overpowered another South Shore Senior Babe Ruth lineup on Wednesday night, allowing just two singles and striking out 10, to pick up the win in a 6-0 decision over struggling South Boston (2-9) at Adams Field. South Boston was never able to figure Kerin out over the seven innings as he relied mainly on his fastball and struck out at least one batter in every inning for Wollaston.

The victory upped Wollaston's record to 11-2 and gave them a lift after losing a tough, 5-1 contest against first-place Milton the night before. Milton is the only team to beat Wollaston this season - and they've done it twice - to put themselves atop the league standings.

The team's losses to Milton have only fired the flames for Wollaston and Kerin, who would like nothing more than to meet for a third time when the playoffs roll around.

Milton had all they could handle with Kerin earlier in the season as he held them to just one hit, but came away with the win when a costly error gave Milton its only run.

"We'll probably see them in the playoffs," said the personable Kerin. "I definitely want to show them that we're a better team."

If Wollaston does reach the playoffs, head coach Steve Reardon is more than a little confident he has the arms to pace his squad to a solid post-season run. Led by Kerin, Jonathan Leveillee, Dillon Darcy and Ben Martin, Wollaston has the best starting pitching on the South Shore and one of the best in the state.

"These starters can pitch against any team," said Reardon. "Matty's been exactly the same in every game - he goes out and challenges the hitters. He got a little tired at the end, but he wanted to finish. Matt gets out of (jams) all the time. He knows how to pitch."

Kerin showed plenty of poise when South Boston threatened in the fifth inning, trailing 4-0. He retired Matt Vadala on strikes before Liam Attridge reached on an error. Attridge was off the basepaths quickly, though, when Wollaston catcher Johnny Marsinelli gunned him down with a pinpoint throw trying to steal second for the second out. Dominic Baldassari then singled. A walk and error put runners on second and third, but Kerin shut down the threat by striking out Steve Powers to end the inning.

Kerin may have been jammed up, but he never felt as though he lost control and felt comfortable for all seven innings.

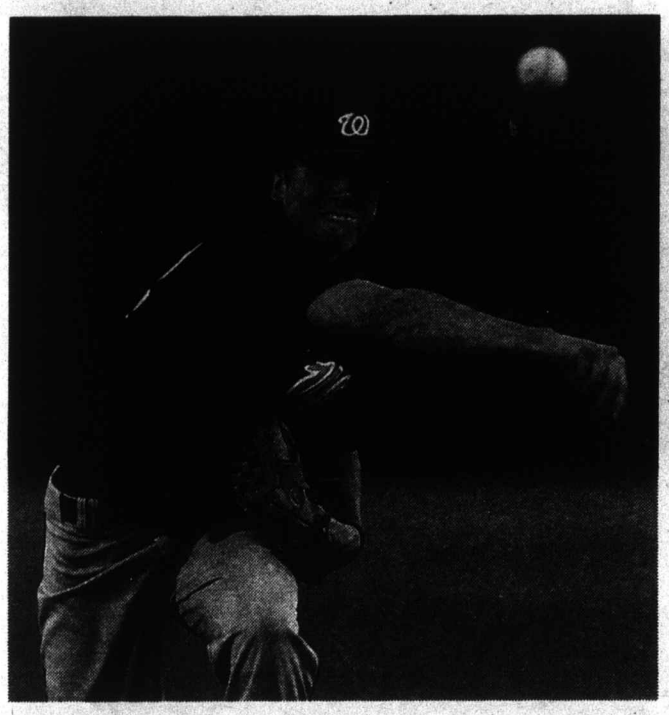
"I just tried to stay in the rhythm I had going," said Kerin. "I was comfortable with it. It's going good. We've hit a couple of bumps here and there and struggled at some points. But overall we do what we do best- hit and field"

Wollaston got more than enough hitting to come away with the win. Marsinelli, who is among the fastest baserunners in the league, bunted for a hit to lead off the second, stole second and advanced to third on a wild pitch. Mike Pugsley drew a walk and Marsinelli raced home on an Evan Feinberg groundout to give Wollaston a 1-0 lead. Kerin allowed a leadoff single by Baldassari in the third, but sat down the next three batters on a pair of strikeouts and a groundout.

Wollaston missed a great opportunity to extend the lead in the third when they loaded the bases, but were unable to score as a groundout, fielder's choice and a line out to left field squashed the momentum, at least temporarily.

Kerin sat down South Boston in order in the fourth and Wollaston finally put together a big inning to put the game out of reach. Wollaston sent eight batters to the plate and got RBI from David Cooper and Leveillee. Mark Munroe had a single and scored on a throwing error and Wollaston picked up four hits in the three-run inning to go up 4-0.

Wollaston wasn't done offensively as they added two more runs in the fifth for the 6-0 lead. Marsinelli continued his agressive running on the bases, stealing second and third and then scoring on a throwing error after reaching on an error to start the inning. Nick Kelly added an RBI four batters later on a fielder's choice to put the advantage to 6-0. Kerin retired five of the final six batters he faced to pick up his fourth victory of the season.



WOLLASTON'S MATT KERIN pitched a complete game two-hitter striking out 10 South Boston batters in a 6-0 win last Wednesday night. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

BEN REGAN slides home ahead of the throw on a sacrifice fly by David Cooper to give Wollaston a 3-0 lead against South Boston. Wollaston scored three more times to shut out Southie, 6-0 last Wednesday at Adams Field.

REACHING THE TIPPING POINT

Bicyclists often must share the road with cars and trucks, and they are also often exposed to poor road conditions. Consequently, bicycle accidents are becoming ever more frequent and potentially serious. When a fall or crash occurs, bicycle riders should not be too quick to assess their injuries. While they may profess to feel fine at first, they may start to feel pain later as injured tissue swells. After that, damaged tissue is likely to be replaced by scar tissue. Without treatment, the tissue may heal, but it may be prone to hypersensitivity and pain. With chiropractic treatment, long-term tissue remodeling can be guided along a path that reduces the likelihood of accident-induced chronic pain.

Chronic pain is ongoing pain that persists beyond the expected time frame, and doesn't respond to the typical pain management techniques. Chiropractors can treat chronic pain by using a variety of non-surgical treatments, such as spinal manipulation, to address chronic pain symptoms. The conditions we address are as varied and as vast as the nervous system itself. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our goal is not merely to bring relief to your pain, but to identify and correct the source of it as well. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Bicycle accidents can have a jarring effect that radiates from the initial injury point.

Quincycles Bike Rides July 12, July 20

Quincycles invites bicyclists to join two rides offered in July.

On Saturday, July 12 intermediate level bicyclists are invited on a "Beaches of Quincy Ride" beginning at 7:30 a.m. at Anderson Bike Shop, 380 Washington St. The ride will visit beaches at the Quincy Point, Germantown, Houghs Neck, Adams Shore and Squantum neighborhoods of Quincy. The approximately 30-mile ride will conclude back at Anderson Bike Shop with cold refreshments.

On Sunday, July 20 bicyclists of all skill levels are invited to a "Blessing of the Bicycles Easy Rider Ride" held at 1 p.m. at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston. The leisurely 5-mile ride through Wollaston will begin with a short blessing over the bicycles and will conclude back at the church with a barbeque hosted by Pastor Jack Swanson and members of Union Congregational Church.

Both rides are free and are open to the public. While ride leaders take care to plan routes and lead rides that are safe, all riders assume responsibility for their own safety by wearing helmets and appropriate clothing, obeying the rules of the road, and regular maintenance of their bicycles.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise, and advocating for bicycle infrastructure on Quincy's city streets. For more information visit www.Quincycles.org or by email info@quincycles.org.

Morrisette-Milton In 0-0 Tie

By JOE REARDON

With the pitching spot on and showing no signs of faltering, Morrisette Post 294 and Milton Post 114 were desperately looking to drop a hit in anywhere they could to get some sort of offensive momentum going.

But that never happened in Monday night's American Legion showdown at Milton's Cunningham Park as the two teams played to a 0-0 tie that was called after nine innings because of darkness.

Morrisette's pitching was nothing short of brilliant with T.J. Hobin working six innings, allowing just three hits while striking out nine. Closer Dave Suslowicz was even better with three innings of no-hit ball and five strikeouts. Post 114's Sean Regan went the distance giving up three hits and striking out four on an evening where the pitching for both teams was magnificent.

Designated hitter Josh Hayward had three of Morrisette's hit - all singles - while Bob Salvucci added a single of his own in what represented Post 294's offense. The tie came on the heels of Sunday's 9-0 win over Weymouth where Morrisette had little trouble scoring runs and Ken Sorenson pitched a gem to earn victory.

Both teams picked up a point for the tie, putting Morrisette at 16-2-1 and in sole position of first place in the District 6 standings. Milton, which is hanging on to the fifth and final playoff spot, improved to 9-8-2.

Morrisette head coach Steve Maze said his team has been getting solid pitching all season and Monday evening was just more of the same. "That's the fourth or fifth time that he (T.J. Hobin) has showed up and pitched great," said Maze. "Dave Suslowicz has been our closer all year and he came in and did his job."

Morrisette was unable to rattle Regan over the nine innings and the tall righty was especially tough when he needed to be. The second inning was the defining inning for Regan and there was a sense that Morrisette was going to struggle getting timely hits from that point forward as Regan got stronger with every pitch.

Jason Pekkinen walked to lead off the inning and Hayward punched a first-pitch single to left field to put runners at first and second for Morrisette. Cody Desmond reached on a throwing error to load the bases with no outs.

Regan, though, didn't give up an inch. Nick Valencenti popped up and Regan fanned Salvucci with a third strike that grazed the low, outside corner. He finished out the inning striking out Ed Riley in what was Morrisette's best chance to put runs on the board.

"It's just a matter of finding that hit we needed," said Maze. "We hit the ball hard and they made some plays. Milton is a very good team. Pat Collins is a very good coach. They do a great job over there. When you come to play Milton - especially here - they're a well-schooled team. You've got to be ready to play."

Milton threatened in the fourth against Hobin as two batters reached, but he struck out two and retired another on a fly out to strand the baserunners.

The game was delayed 30 minutes because of a lightning flash and when play resumed the pitching was just as impressive. Regan got Morrissete in order in the fifth and Hobin shrugged off a bunt single and walk in the bottom of the inning to strikeout the side and leave a pair of runners on base.

Defensively, Morrisette centerfielder Andrew Currie made the play of the game in the sixth that squashed what could have been a big inning at the plate for Milton. Cody Carr jumped all over a Hobin fastball and drilled it to right-center. Currie got a great jump on the sinking hit and made the out with a diving catch.

Suslowicz came on for Hobin in the seventh and was spectacular. The righty struck out the Milton side on the way to retiring all nine batters he faced. Neither team had success on the knee-high pitches on the corner the umpire was calling a strike the entire game.

"That's a really tough pitch," said Maze. "When your pitcher is on and hitting that spot, it's a tough pitch to go and get."

Morrisette hit the ball hard several times against Regan, but was unable to find the gaps in the outfield. "We hit some real good line drives," said Maze. "Their outfield played great tonight. They got to some balls I didn't think they'd be able to get to. Quite frankly, they got to some balls that other teams haven't gotten to and they've fallen for us. Hats off to them. They played well."

Morrisette has the chance to put the hammer down and put first place out of reach for the rest of the league with its remaining games this week. Post 294 is scheduled to play Hyde Park and two games against Holbrook before Sunday's much-anticipated rematch against Braintree. Morrisette has defeated Braintree twice this season: 4-0 on June 15 and rallied from 9 runs down against Post 86 for a 14-9 victory June 27.

Sunday's Morrisette-Braintree match-up is at 5:15 p.m. at French's Common in Braintree adjacent to Town Hall.

"Right now we're in a good spot," said Maze. "If we can get two or three out of the next four we should be in a really good position. The kids have been really responsive. Winning cures everything. If we were losing and I'm trying to get the kids to do things, they're not going to believe in what I do. But if you do the right things and they're winning, they're going to buy into what you're doing. It just makes things a lot easier."

QYHA, Local Businesses Team Up For 1st Veteran's Hockey Benefit

With temperatures soaring in the upper 80's, Quincy Youth Hockey Arena (QYHA) was a good place to cool off and enjoy two great hockey games and a bite to eat, courtesy of Gennaro's Eatery and Tony's Pizza in Wollaston.

On June 29th, several South Shore youth hockey associations (Weymouth, Braintree, Duxbury and QYH) and businesses joined hands for a hockey extravaganza in support of the forthcoming 58th Disabled American Veterans (DAV) Fishing Trip on July 15th, which is sponsored by Harvey's Saltwater Fishing Club and organized by club President Joe Brill.

Most of the veterans, who have served in Vietnam, Korea, Afghanistan and Iraq theaters of war, are bussed in for the annual DAV fishing trip from the local Veterans Administrations hospitals.

Archbishop Williams graduate and Quincy resident Emma McDonnell, whom is enrolled in the Curry College nursing program this fall, kicked off the inaugural hockey benefit with a moving rendition of the national anthem.

"This was an awesome day," said Brill, who graciously greeted every player and spectator. When it comes to bringing the community together, Brill has been an enduring lynchpin for the DAV cause along with Mike Cheney.

Led by Army-National Guard and recently promoted Otis AFB Commander Colonel Bill O'Brien, the first game featured a team of first responders whom came up short against a much younger Pro Edge Club led by former professionals Doug Nolan and Brian O'Hanley. Coaching the QYH U-14 National Bound team in the fall, Nolan is also running summer youth hockey camps at QHA and mentoring several college bound players.

The first game also offered a return home for several NCAA Frozen Four stars, as 2014 Minn. St.-Mankato's Captain Johnny McGinnis returned to his hockey roots at QYHA, where his father Jack still operates the pro shop and Zamboni.

Through the collective efforts of QYHA Michelle Stenberg and McGinnis, who embraced the "unique opportunity to honor our servicemen and women and help our DAV's, the event was a big success."

Proceeds from the $5 admission were donated towards the DAV fishing trip, of which crews from the thirty or more lobster boats will accommodate the 300 DAV's for a day of fishing from the Quincy Maritime Center.

Recently retired Quincy Police Sergeant John Ryan kept the First Responders in the game with a couple of scoring dangles. And UML goalie Doug Carr was spectacular in net for the combined Pro Edge college team.

At the end of the day, "today was about our veterans and an opportunity to recognize them," said Nolan. The event also drew some of the rink's original plankowners (QYHA) like legendary blue liner Ken Halloran and skills director Joe McConville, whose son James played QYH, graduated from Archbishop Williams in 1977, and was just nominated for the appointment to the rank of lieutenant general with the U.S. Army.

With many veterans in her district and the fishing trip a big part of her Hough's Neck heritage, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret LaForest also enjoyed the hockey festivities.

Employing many of the U-18 Quincy hockey players as apprentice salesmen, Quirk Ford was also instrumental in bringing the final game of the Vet's hockey benefit together, of which Quincy hosted the Weymouth Wildcats, coached by Kevin Morrissey. Although Bryan O'Callaghan and Ryan Harty each had a pair of goals for Quincy, the stellar net-minding of QHS senior Ryan Higgins, who filled in for Weymouth's missing goalie, was the difference as the Wildcats edged Quincy 5-4 in the nightcap.

"QYH and this arena have a proud heritage, and it's a humbling experience to be part of that and to support our DAV community", said U-18 Quincy Coach Mike Hussey, who served two post 9/11 recalls with the Navy during Operation Noble Eagle.

The Quincy Police Department, Eire Pub, Wollaston Golf Club, Local 103 IBEW, Quincy Elks, Stop & Shop Southern Artery and U-18 Quincy hockey team parents were all generous sponsors.

For any fishing trip donations, contact Joe at 617-733-8026.

O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tourney Saturday, Sunday

The ninth annual O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament will be held on July 12-13 at the Fenno Street courts.

The event is held in memory of John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson, two standout athletes who graduated from North Quincy High in 2002 and tragically had their lives cut short in the past 10 years.

Their families have set up memorial scholarships in their names to benefit North Quincy graduates and the tournament serves to raise funds for these scholarships.

The weekend will feature a 16-team men's tournament and a four-team women's tournament, featuring a number of local college basketball players, as well as many former and current high school players from Quincy. Games begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday and will run throughout both days.

The event has been a great success in the past thanks to the generous donations of local businesses and Quincy residents. Anyone interested in making a donation can write a check to the John "Okie" O'Connell Fund and send it to Dan Duggan, 61 Bedford St., Quincy 02169. (The donations will be split between the two funds).

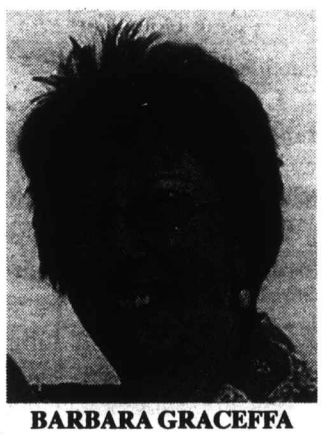
Interior Decorating Tips With Barbara Graceffa

Summer is here and I just love this season. How can I get that summer feeling all-year round in my home? And where do I find inspiration?

Who doesn't like summer? Whether you think of a short vacation at a beach cottage, an extended weekend in a cabin in the woods, or a summer-long retreat to a cozy place on the lake, there's nothing like summer to rest and reinvigorate yourself. I have lots of ideas to share with you to get that laid-back, kick-off-your-shoes style that allows you the flexibility and freedom to express yourself.

First choose a restful palette of colors like whites, neutrals, blues, yellows, or even the patriotic combo of red, white, and blue. These colors work especially well for a welcoming, bright and breezy nautical or cottage look. For more of a cabin or lake feel, incorporate some red and winter green



BARBARA GRACEFFA

(I know- winter green? Red and green together? it seems like the antithesis of what you strive to achieve; but trust me, it works).

Next, simple fabrics like linen, seersucker, blue and white stripes, white or faded blue denim, as well as ginghams and plaids fit the bill on furniture, curtains, and accessories. Even needlework and rag rugs fit in this category. Mismatched fabrics, including combining several plaids or florals, play well together for a summer décor.

When I think of summer style, I think of unpretentious, casual, and eclectic. Both your hard and soft items can be informal, even a little distressed, or rough around the edges. Think simplicity and relaxed charm. Don't dismiss slipcovers; a summer style calls for them. Also try a mix of old and new. Pair vintage pieces like metal trunks, paint-by-number framed art, old quilts, rocking chairs, and antiques with existing or new pieces. You'd be surprised what you can do with thrift store finds and/or family hand-me downs.

Stay tuned for Part II in my next column on wall treatments, furniture, collections, natural elements, and more to build a summer interior design.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, July 1, 2014, at approximately 1:30 a.m., Officers Andrew Keenan, Sean McCormack and Christian Donovan were dispatched to a Willard Street apartment building for a report of a domestic assault in progress. Communications stated that the female victim/reporting party would meet Officers in the front of the building. Officers were also updated that the boyfriend may have a knife.

Upon arrival, the Officers met with the victim, who was crying and bleeding from her mouth. Her face was red and the dress she was wearing was ripped at the bottom. She immediately stated that her boyfriend was inside her apartment and she wanted him to leave. She also confirmed that he may have a knife.

An ambulance was called to the location to evaluate the extent of her injuries. Officers Donovan and McCormack attempted to make contact with the boyfriend but he did not answer the door. At this time, Sergeant Allison arrived on scene. The victim said that her "boyfriend has many work knives" in the house. She said that he held one to his own neck earlier in the evening and threatened to harm himself if she left him. When asked to describe the knife, the victim said it was a "folding knife, like a work knife."

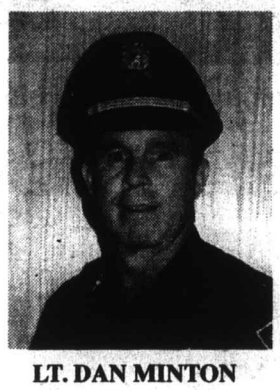
After knocking several more times, the Quincy Fire Department was called to make entry. The Officers were concerned that the suspect may have or was about to harm himself and secondly, that there was probable cause to place him under arrest. As Quincy Firefighters started to work on the apartment door, the suspect turned the knobs and unlocked the door. Sergeant Allison, Officers Donovan and Keenan quickly rushed the door and entered the apartment and placed the suspect in handcuffs. He was pat frisked by Officer Donovan. The suspect then said, "I know why you are here." He also stated multiple times that "I know it looks bad" referencing his girlfriend's bloody mouth and multiple bumps and bruises.

The suspect said that he came home from work about 4:00 p.m. and his girlfriend arrived home an hour later. He said that an argument ensued, which led to him telling her to leave. When she refused to leave, he said he tried to "remove her" from the apartment by putting his hands on her to "remove her from the apartment." He defended his actions by adding that his girlfriend "threw herself on the ground." The suspect did not appear to have any marks on him except for a small cut on his finger.



LT. DAN MINTON

Due to the nature of the injuries observed to the victim, the suspect, a 37 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for Domestic Assault and Battery. While the suspect was transported to the station for booking, the victim was transported to Quincy Medical Center to be treated for her injuries. Officer Keenan interviewed the victim in depth at the hospital and took photographs of injuries for court purposes. The victim said she had a headache and a large bump on her head from being thrown by her suspect into a bedside dresser. She added, "I slammed my head off of it and almost got knocked out." She said she "saw stars" immediately after. The Nurse said that the victim may have sustained a concussion.

The victim was unsure how many times her boyfriend hit her but did say that it was "multiple times." She also stated that he kicked her in the face/mouth.

She attempted to flee the apartment and he grabbed her, which caused her dress to fall off. She was unaware that the dress was in fact torn at the bottom until she got to the hospital. As a result of the interview with the victim, the boyfriend was additionally charged with "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon (to wit dresser)."

After being advised of her protection rights under the domestic violence laws, the victim declined the offer of an emergency restraining order. She said that she did not want a restraining order at this time but may get one "tomorrow." Nice Work!

HOTEL TIPS: When staying at a hotel, remember these simple tips to avoid becoming a victim:

The late night call from the front desk: It is late at night and you receive a call from the front desk telling you there's a problem with your credit card and they need to verify the number, so you read it to them over the phone. It could be a scammer on the line. If a hotel had an issue with your card, they would ask you to come to the front desk.

The pizza delivery deal: In another scam, you find a pizza delivery flyer slipped under your hotel door. You place an order and they take your credit card number over the phone. The flyer could be a fake and a scammer now has your info. Before you order, make sure you check out the business or get recommendations from the front desk.

The fake Wi-Fi network: You search for Wi-Fi networks and find one with the hotel's name. It is a sound-alike and has nothing to do with the hotel. By using it, you could give a scammer access to your information. Check with the hotel to make sure you're using the authorized network before you connect.

MORE TELEPHONE CALLS: from scammers who are threatening victims by stating that they owe money and they will be either arrested or a warrant will be issued against them if they don't pay up. The scammers often say they are from a law enforcement agency or a court. Remember, the initial correspondence from these agencies is in a letter form. As always, if you have concerns, contact me, Lieutenant Dan Minton at 617 745 5719.

City Hall Renovations On Pace

Hall and the all-glass annex behind it. There, a glass and granite addition will help link the two buildings together. The new addition will house bathrooms, an elevator, a stairway, and a production room for QATV. Crews are in the process of installing a retaining system before excavating the site to make way for a new foundation.

"The pilings are going in in the back of the building to retain the earth so we can excavate to put a full basement underneath the addition," Edwards said. "That excavation is ongoing. I think foundation work should start there within a few weeks. The steel is all fabricated and ready to go. Once we've got the retaining system in we can start out and put the foundation in. Then we're going to really be flying."

After the renovations to the 170-year old building are completed in January various departments in the annex will be shuffled around. The Municipal Finance Department, for example, will move from the second floor of the annex to the third floor. The City Clerk's Office would then move from rented space in the neighboring Munroe Building to the second floor off annex in space used currently as a temporary council chamber.

The Planning and IT Departments are leaving the annex altogether, and will be relocated to Coddington Hall. Also in Coddington Hall will be the School Department, which currently rents office space on Burgin Parkway.

Three Residents On Mount Ida Dean's List

Three students from Quincy are on the Dean's List for the spring semester at Mount Ida College in Newton.

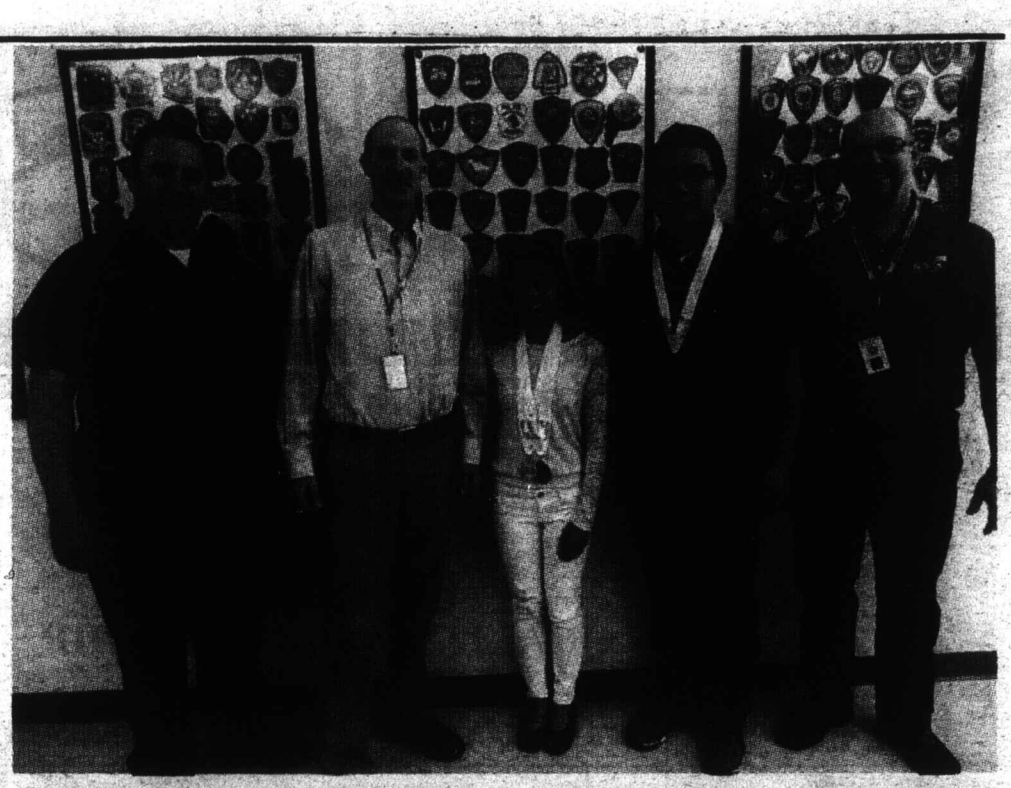
Ashley Catizone, Victoria Perkins and Jewely Wong.



QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL seniors Elizabeth Le and Jonathan Ng, students in the QHS Protective Services program, recently won the Silver and Bronze Medals respectively at this year's "Skills U.S.A Competition" in Criminal Justice. As part of the Quincy Student Police Academy, Liz and Jon were trained by Quincy Police Officer Ryan Donnelly during class time to prepare for the competition, which included a mock car stop, fingerprinting, report writing, and a domestic violence scenario. The judges were former and current Massachusetts State Police Officials who totaled the score for each competitor. In 2013, Liz won the bronze and this was Jonathan's first time in the competition. They are both attending Suffolk University in the fall. From left to right are: Officer Ryan Donnelly, Brendan Welch, Elizabeth Le, Jonathan Ng, and Ed Holmes, Skills USA Chapter Advisor. Grades 5-8 For New Sterling

School Committee Vote July 30

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) has approved a grade 5 to 8 configuration for a new Sterling Middle School – a building that will accommodate a capacity of 430 students - 50 more than the current middle school.

The MSBA – in selecting the current 5-8 grade configuration – rejected a plan pitched by some city leaders for a new Sterling with a 4-8 grade configuration. The authority based its decision on future enrollment projections which indicate Quincy's middle schools will be at or over capacity by the 2023-24 school year, according to a letter sent by the MSBA to Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"The MSBA believes that this design enrollment recommendation will position the district to efficiently meet space capacity needs throughout future enrollment variations," stated the letter sent on July 14. "Based on historical enrollment trends of the district…the MSBA recommends a design enrollment of 430 students in grades 5-8 for the Reay E. Sterling Middle School."

State-Of-The-Art Offices At Coddington School

Renovation work at Coddington School – which will convert the 106-year-old building into state-of-the-art municipal offices – is rapidly closing in on completion and could be finished by the end of the month.

"The project is 98-99 percent complete. It's in the last couple weeks of completion. Punch lists are being completed. Final coordination on making sure everything is needed for the city departments is being completed for them to be able to fit out the space," Robert Cala, an architect for Quincy-based

'Christmas In July' Kettle Today To Benefit Quincy Salvation Army

Outside Quincy Sun Office - 1372 Hancock St.

The "Christmas in July" red kettle fundraiser outside the Quincy Sun office will take place today (Thursday) from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The kettle standout at 1372 Hancock St. had been set for yesterday (Wednesday) but was rescheduled due to the forecast of rain.

Members of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board will man the kettle outside The Sun's office, 1372 Hancock St., beginning at 8 a.m. today (Thursday) and continue until 4 p.m.

Capt. Timothy Ross of the Quincy Salvation Army, said the "Christmas In July" kettle is a unique opportunity for the Salvation Army to help raise awareness and collect donations for those who are need of assistance at this time of year.

"People are coming to our doors every day – including people who never needed help before. You see, long-term unemployed, lower wage and lower skilled workers are the very last to find work as the economy continues to recover. And the need of poor children and seniors for food doesn't go away when the stock market goes up.

"It is important for us to be able to reach out with our helping hand to them during their hour of need. One of the ways that people can get involved in helping those in our community is by stopping by and dropping some money into the kettle on July 17th or by making a donation online at www.salvationarmyma.org/quincy, or drop off a donation at our office at 6 Baxter St.

"Every dollar adds up and allows us to contunue to bring help and hope in situations that often seem hopeless," Capt. Ross added.

New State-Of-The-Art Offices At Coddington School

Wessling Architects who is the project manager for the renovation work, explained in a recent interview.

"The building is in very, very good shape. As it stands construction-wise, the finished floor materials – which are usually installed last – they're in the process of being installed. All the painting is substantially complete. All the millwork is substantially complete. Lighting is going in – it's been going in for a long time, many weeks, and the final lighting installation is occurring."

The Coddington School, also known as Coddington Hall, first opened in 1908 as an elementary school. The building, which is on both the Massachusetts and National Registers of Historic Places, was designed by Charles Brigham, the architect who designed the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston and co-designed Boston's Museum of Fine Arts. When it was built, the Coddington School replaced another school of the same name that stood nearby. Its namesake is William Coddington, who was the treasurer of Massachusetts Bay Colony before leaving for what is now Rhode Island and becoming the first governor of that colony. When he departed for Rhode Island, he donated all his land to what is now Quincy, Braintree, and Randolph.

After serving as an elementary school, the Coddington School was used as part of Quincy College's campus. The college eventually moved out, and the building housed high school students during the construction of the new Quincy High School next door.

When the renovations are completed the building will house the School Department, which currently rents space in the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) Building on Burgin Parkway. The city's Planning and IT Departments will also move into the new building from the City Hall annex.

Work on the project – undertaken by Nauset Construction, the same contractor renovating the 170-year-old City Hall – began last June.

"The goal was to get the building weather tight so the interior could be worked on. It started in June so by the time winter was on us the goal was to get the exterior envelope – meaning the roof complete, the cornices, and the flashing – so we had a weather-tight enclosure," Cala said.

"Preparations were made for the windows to be installed and the exterior masonry was being worked on. Those are the big exterior items that were worked on right away."

Concurrent with the exterior work, demolition crews completely gutted the interior of the building. Some of the more important historic elements of the building were preserved.

"All of the existing walls, doors, ceilings, flooring, lighting – the entire interior with the exception of the structure – was demolished," Cala continued.

CODDINGTON SCHOOL RENOVATIONS, which began last June, are winding down and should be completed by the end of July. The 106-year-old building will be home to the School, Planning, and IT Departments; those departments will be moved in by late August. The building was given a new slate roof and new windows as part of the project. The brickwork was also cleaned and repointed.

"What we preserved was what we felt were the historic interior design items that were important: the entrance foyers, the common corridors, the corridor doors…all the doors and the things we were saving were protected and stored for later in the project."

From there, drywall and sheathing for floors was installed and space was converted for mechanical systems in the attic and along portions of the third floor.

"The floors were resheathed and rebuilt to establish a very good base for our flooring materials. New drywall was installed. Obviously new mechanical, electrical, fire protection – all that infrastructure was then started once the demolition was completed," Cala said.

"The attic of the building was renovated because we needed space for mechanical systems. The third floor spaces in the end of the buildings were converted to mechanical spaces because we had to have places for the equipment. Those are the things that were phased from the top, down.

"The original chimneys were re-used to run piping and ductwork for the new systems to minimize the amount of vertical chases we would have through the building. Those were the big moves that were happening as the new construction started."

After those were in place, electrical, plumbing, HVAC, and fire protection systems were installed. Walls were then completed and painted. Over the past several weeks, new carpets, tiles, millwork, and other finishing pieces have been installed. The exterior of the building will also be landscaped in the coming weeks.

Once the project is completed, the School Department will move into Coddington Hall's first and second floors.

Included on the first floor is a new home for the School Committee, which currently holds meetings in a variety of locations such as the NAGE Building, City Hall, and schools throughout the city. The new School Committee room will accommodate up to 40 people, depending on how the room is ultimately furnished. The new chamber will include a table with seating for nine people – the seven committee members plus the superintendent and the committee's clerk – as well as a podium and desk for guest speakers.

Also located on the first floor will be a conference room for the School Department, which will also seat up to 40 people. That room will also be equipped with monitors allowing it to be used for overflow seating at School Committee meetings.

In between those two rooms will be a QATV production room.

The rest of the first floor will accommodate office space for School Department employees – including the heads of transportation/security, business, personnel, and custodial/maintenance.

Offices for the superintendent, assistant superintendent, the curriculum and English language learning (ELL) coordinators, student support and health, special education, assessment, and extended education will all occupy the second floor of the building.

The Planning Department will move into Coddington Hall's third floor. While the School Department's space will reflect some of the building historic details, the Planning Department opted for a more modern look.

"The Planning Department wanted to have the space renovated in a more contemporary fashion.

At Central & Broad Meadows Middle Schools

Two Assistant Principal Positions Posted By QPS

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools are currently looking to fill two assistant principal positions, one at Central Middle School after former Assistant Principal Richard DeCristofaro, Jr. was hired as the school's principal, and one at Broad Meadows Middle School following the retirement of Assistant Principal Peter Chella.

The job listings were posted July 14 and the deadline for both internal and external applicants is Aug. 1.

A hiring committee made up of the Superintendent's leadership team, parents, and Deputy Superintendent Kevin Mulvey will oversee the process according to Laura Owens, Assistant to the Superintendent of Quincy Public Schools.

Salaries for the positions will be negotiated and are determined based on a scale created by the Quincy Education Association teachers' union. Applicants must be licensed by the Massachusetts Department of Education as a middle school principal and a minimum of five years of experience as well as a master's degree is preferred for consideration.

Richard DeCristofaro, Jr.—the former assistant principal of Central Middle School and son of Superintendent of Quincy Public Schools Richard DeCristofaro—was appointed as the new principal of Central on June 27. As assistant principal, DeCristofaro, Jr. earned $97,620 during the 2013-2014 school season. As principal his salary will increase to $108,769.

The superintendent recused himself from the hiring process once he became aware that his son had applied as to avoid a conflict of interest. The process was instead overseen by a committee assembled by Mulvey and former Superintendent of Braintree Public Schools Dr. Peter Kurzberg, who worked for the Braintree school system for 22 years and has recently retired.

DeCristofaro, Jr. received his bachelor's degree from Salve Regina University and his master's degree from Cambridge College. He began working for Quincy schools in April 2004 as a grade 4-5 teacher at The Montclair School; a position he held until 2006. He then was a guidance counselor at North Quincy and Quincy High School for five years. He was made vice-principal of Central Middle School in December 2011 and is also currently a guidance counselor for the Quincy Evening High School and has held that position for five years. He has completed an administrative licensure program at Eastern Nazarene College which earned him a certificate of completion.

Peter Chella received his bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Massachusetts in 1977 and his master's degree from Bridgewater State University in 1991.

He began his career with Quincy Public Schools in September of 1975 as a social studies teacher at Sterling Middle School. He then taught at Point Webster Middle School from 1984 to 1987. After teaching for 12 years at Quincy High School, he became the assistant principal at Point Webster, a position he held until 2005 when he became the assistant principal of Central Middle School. After three years there, he moved on to become the assistant principal of Broad Meadows. His salary as assistant principal of Broad Meadows was $100,198 in 2013 according to Mulvey.

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT recently held a two-night self defense program for senior citizens at the Kennedy Center. Approximately 40 male and female seniors attended the training, which focused on defending yourself and getting away from the threat. Seniors had the option of participating in role plays in which they had to break free from a bad situation. The program ended with a pizza party while the class watched themselves on video. The department thanks Director Linda Bowes and the Kennedy Center for hosting this event.

Trespassing Reported Again At Tide Mill

Police are investigating another apparent trespasser at the Souther Tide Mill.

Officers were called to the historic tide mill, located at 610 Southern Artery, around 10:30 a.m. Monday after receiving a call from a member of the Friends of Souther Tide Mill. Bottles of alcohol and cigarettes were found, but there was sign of any forced entry.

Monday's incident came a week after Friends of the Souther Tide Mill President Douglas Morrill called on the city to bring electricity to the building in order to provide lighting and a security system after other similar incidents. In response to Morrill's request, Mayor Thomas Koch told The Sun the city has stepped up police patrols in the area.

MULTI-TASKING

With an appreciation of the notion that fine jewelry should not solely be worn on special occasions, women are choosing to wear their favorite pieces at every opportunity. Following this mindset, there has been a decided shift toward selecting fine jewelry that can be worn in multiple ways. In particular, brooches have become very popular for their versatility. Aside from the traditional placement on the shoulder, a brooch can be worn front and center on a top or to hold a scarf in place around the neck. Brooches can also be worn on dresses at the hip or at the hemline. Of course, brooches also make good stand-ins for pendants when worn on necklaces.

The earliest known brooches originated during the Bronze Age. The fashions in brooches evolved rather quickly and they have become important chronological indicators. Many styles of European brooches are found in archaeology. Select the perfect silver and gold jewelry to fit your taste for necklaces, bracelets, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Movie Roles Made For Sal

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

For former Quincy resident Sal Giarratani, appearing as an extra in the filming of two separate scenes in the movie "Black Mass" was a big thrill.

Two roles, you might say, that he was born to play.

But one in particular brought back memories of a very turbulent time in Boston's history.

Giarratani, a retired police officer for the state Department of Mental Health, was filmed as an FBI agent in one scene.

Sal was also cast as a demonstrator during the Boston busing crisis, an era that he not only lived through - he participated. He marched and protested against Judge W. Arthur Garrity's landmark ruling to desegregate Massachusetts' public schools. Those protests took him to Charlestown, Government Center and South Boston in 1974 when the busing crisis began.

Some 40 years later, he relived that period in his life as an extra in "Black Mass." The film, starring Johnny Depp, is a non-fiction account of the notorious mobster James "Whitey" Bulger. Some scenes have been filmed in Quincy.

This film, however, is not Sal's first. He was an extra playing a low-level hoodlum at a wake in a scene in the movie "Stiffs" starring Danny Aiello.

So, bitten by the acting bug, Sal naturally responded to an open casting call for "Black Mass" held at the Boston Teachers Union Hall in Dorchester. He arrived three hours before the posted time and landed 15th in line with several thousand silver screen wannabes behind him.

Once inside, the casting company took his photo and asked him to fill out some paper work. They then asked him what type of character he could play.

"I said an Italian guy, an Irish guy, a cop. I could play anybody between the age of 50 and 70. That was it."

Filming began. No one called. Sal thought he had been forgotten. But, two weeks later, his phone rang. The production company asked him to portray an FBI agent in the 1990s.

He was fitted for a vintage gray suit to look the part. The scene involved Sal and some other FBI agents in the lobby of the Harvard Club on Commonwealth Avenue. It's the retirement party for FBI agent John Connolly played by Joel Edgerton.

"We're inside the Harvard Club and we are waiting for the dinner to start in the ballroom. We are in the lobby and we're getting ready to head into the dinner. At one point I moved myself up to the front of the lobby. We're in pantomime. We're moving our lips but no words are coming out."

The scene is filmed over and over again from different angles until it was right. It's about 15 hours of work and he earned about $100 for the day. "They also fed us very, very well," he says.

"I had the look of an FBI agent – an older guy with gray hair," Sal says of his casting. "There's no such thing as bald FBI agents. We all had gray hair. We just kidded ourselves about it."

Sal is outgoing, engaging and personable. So it comes to no surprise that the casting company would want him back for a different role.

One he has sort of "played" before.

He and about 200 others were cast as protestors at a school busing demonstration outside South Boston High School. The scene takes place in 1974 when Sal was about 26 years old.

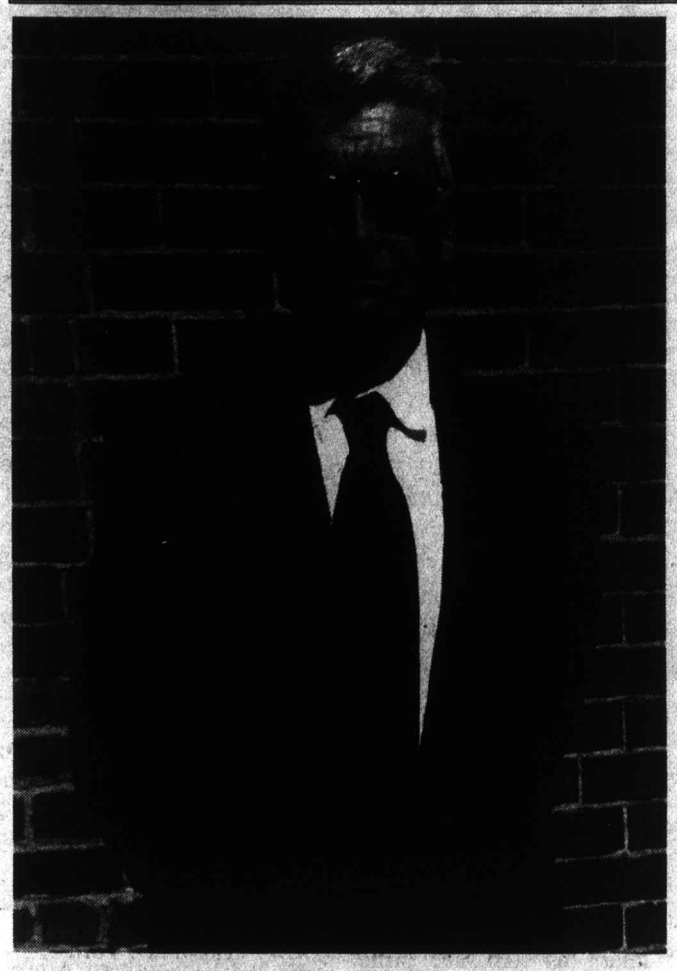
"This was a role that was a part of my life when I was 26 or 27 years old. It was weird to be doing it and now it's not real," he said looking back at the experience.

When the filming began, Sal was among the protestors in the back of the group. But he then moved closer to the front where police officers kept space for the school buses to roll in. Stunt extras were up front, too – they're supposed to do the physical stuff.

"I moved right up and I was pushing with all the people who were pushing. It was funny because at first I couldn't push until I thought back to the 1970s and the emotion from those days.

"I was feeling anger at the government in 1974 for trying to disrupt family life for the sake of doing something that that they thought would be good for society, which I never bought."

After a few film takes, Sal tried to stir up that emotion with his fellow demonstrators who he thought were a little too passive for the scene. "I turned around and said 'you people are pathetic. This is your life on the line, your neighborhood, your children.' I said we have to act it.



SAL GIARRATANI, a former Quincy resident, dressed as a 1990's FBI agent in a scene for "Black Mass."

"By the time we did it 15 times, I had everybody pushing these people away because we wanted to make it real. We pushed and we pushed. The other people started to push back to make it more real.

"At one point, Joel Edgerton who plays John Connolly was supposed to walk through the demonstrators to get into the high school. We were supposed to clear a path. At some point, I pushed this guy so hard he pushed me back so hard he pushed me into the actor." Edgerton, in turn, pushed Sal back into the cop.

He was dressed in a Madras shirt and a sleeveless sweater with buttons – "two things I never would have worn back then," he mused. "Then they gave me something everyone wore back then in the day – a tan polyester light jacket.

"It was 92 degrees out and I'm wearing four layers of clothes. I'm 66 years old and got into it so I didn't even feel how warm it was," he said.

There's no telling if Sal's scenes will appear on the big screen or fall to the cutting room floor.

But the demonstration scene was like art imitating reality.

"I finally put myself back into my feelings from that period," Sal said. "Most of the protestors in the scenes were in their 20s and 30s – everything they knew about 1974 they read somewhere. There were a few extras who were actually there during the original demonstrations. We were hanging out and just talking that this was much easier than the real thing that happened."

Sal also found some of Hollywood's dramatic license too offensive.

"Some things were made up for the movie – like protestors carrying signs with the "N" word. That offended me. That never happened but in the movie they brought the "N" signs in and I didn't like that. That just created an image that didn't exist."

Signs from the Klu Klux Klan also were visible during filming. "In 1974, when the KKK came up here from wherever they came from, they were told to get out of town. We didn't want the Klan here. I didn't like those signs.

"Those demonstrations from the 1970s were just parents and grandparents with kids and their lives being turned around."

Another difference – Sal said the film was shot with the demonstrators too close to the police. "In the 1970s, the cops would have pushed the demonstrators back more. For dramatic effect, they wanted a scene showing demonstrators almost touching the buses.

"I understand this was not the same but the feeling was the same. We only wished we could have got that close."

Does Sal feel differently about the school busing issue now that he's relived it as a movie extra?

"Back then I had no idea how people my age felt because I was 26 years old. Now having lived this long I can see why parents and grandparents were so upset and fiery because their whole life is being disrupted by a judge from Wellesley telling them that they were bad? It also made people feel helpless so that hasn't changed at all. Now I understand that more.

"I wasn't married then, I didn't have kids. I escaped it because I graduated from high school in Boston in 1966. But there was an entire generation of kids who should have graduated in 1975, 1976, of 1977 but they dropped out of high school and they never went back. And their lives were changed forever.

"Garrity said the only way to improve city schools was to mix up the kids. If we mix up the kids, then the school system should automatically get better. I don't think that was the problem.

"I think it was a much greater thing than that. Throwing people at each other is never a good idea because it brings out a lot of discomfort in people from both sides. What people wanted was a good education."

The busing issue was not about racism, Sal says emphatically. It was about "ordinary people who felt they were being pushed against a wall and the only thing you can do when you're pushed against a wall is to fight back.

"For me, this was about parents having the right to send their kids to schools they wanted to send them. If there's a neighborhood school, why should they have to be put on a bus and travel miles to another school that is probably worse than the school they just came from in their neighborhood?

"I'm glad what I did back then because I knew what I was doing was right. I'm not a racist and I never was a racist. I just thought politicians sometimes think they know better than people and they think they can fix this just be pushing people around."

"Black Mass" could score box office gold. Featuring an all-star cast, the film is based on the popular book written by Boston Globe reporters Dick Lehr and Gerald O'Neill. The plot centers on Bulger, the notorious mobster who became an FBI informant. That deal between Bulger and Connolly reportedly went down during a meeting inside an FBI car at Wollaston Beach in 1974.

For Sal, he found being an extra thrilling.

"The experience was reliving part of my past and the other thing is to see the acting community. This movie is a big time production and I think it will be a very good film."

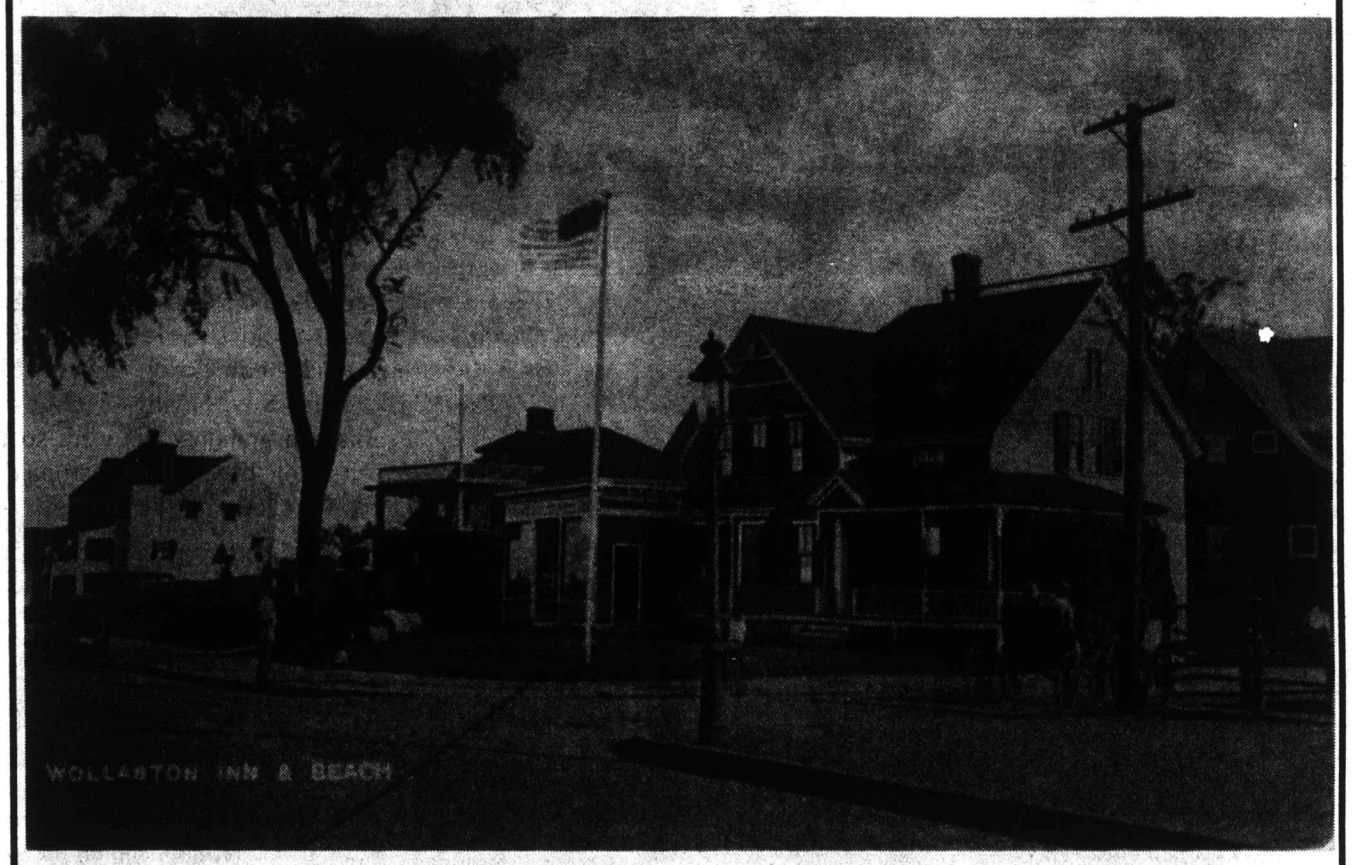
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1910 POSTCARD view of what was the Wollaston Beach Inn located at the corner of Beach Street and Wollaston Boulevard. Other than the small building behind the flagpole, all these buildings are pretty much unchanged after 100 years. Over that time, an MDC lifeguard station was built and demolished on the lot to the right of the building on the left. That is now the Richard Reilly Overlook. The little building behind the flagpole was used over the years by a variety of seasonal take-out refreshment and food businesses. Notice the policeman at the corner on the left and the horse-drawn carriage heading up to Billings Road on the right. The fence on the right overlooked the Sachem Brook which was open at the time up to Billings Road and beyond. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Thank You Quincy For Supporting Relay For Life

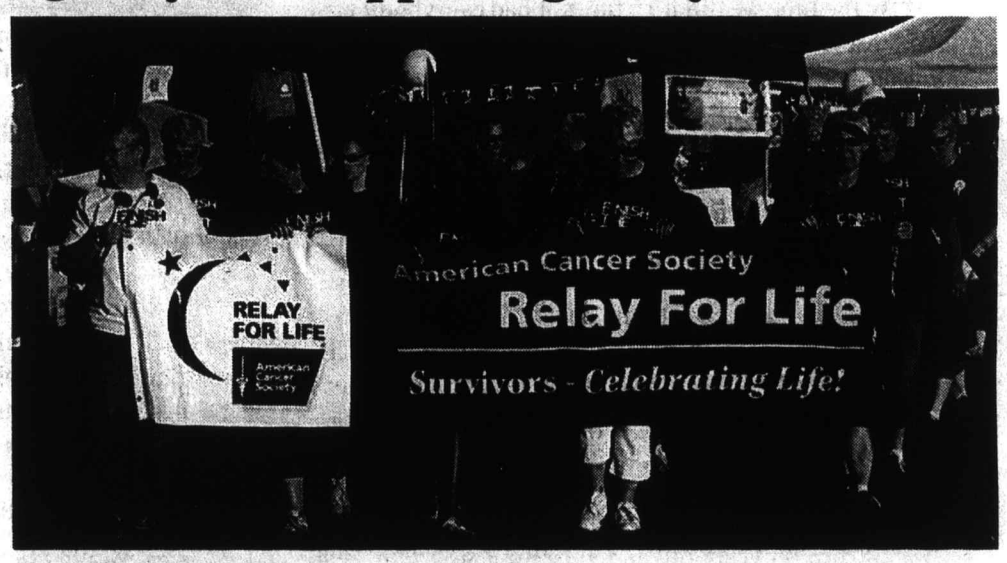
On behalf of the 2014 Relay For Life of Quincy Planning Committee, and myself, I would like to thank the entire Quincy Community for the incredible support we have received as a part of our third annual event at Pageant Field.

By bringing together businesses, departments, students, families and groups of friends, over 320 people on 35 teams raised over $104,000 this year, with additional donations still being calculated.

These funds will be used to provide education programs to those in the community, advocacy for cancer research, services to cancer patients within Quincy currently battling this disease, and allow researchers to progress towards the end of cancer as we know it.

We are beyond grateful for the many cancer survivors that allowed us to celebrate them by attending this year's Relay. You are the reason we continue to push to finish the fight and end the battle against cancer.

Thank you to the many Quincy departments for their continued support of our event. From Parks and Recreation for providing us with Pageant Field to The City of Quincy officials that were in attendance and showed support. Thank you to the many businesses for providing food for our event's participants, we appreciate all that have assisted us in putting on a great event year after year.



RELAY FOR LIFE raised more than $104,000 this year with the help of 320 people who formed 35 teams in support of the American Cancer Society.

A special thanks to Mayor Koch, Leadership from Stop & Shop Headquarters, Walgreens, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department, and City Councillor Margaret LaForest for their attendance at our event.

We'd also like to thank this year's Relay planning committee: eight dedicated community volunteers that donated their time to make Relay the fun all-night fundraising event that it is! Relay For Life is the largest nonprofit fundraiser in the world, we wouldn't be able to do it without each and every one of you.

Finally, we'd like to thank the Team Captains and particpants. Your enthusiasm leading up to the event and energy last night at Pageant Field has impressed us beyond words. It makes us all proud to be Quincy residents and excited to see what this community can do with Relay next year!

Shipyard Proposals Deadline Extended

By SCOTT JACKSON

Efforts by the employee buyout committee to purchase the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard received a shot in the arm when the deadline for proposals was extended from Aug. 15 to Sept. 30.

The extra time would give the committee an opportunity to complete a feasibility study, due Sept. 15, and to decide whether or not to submit a proposal.

The committee requested the extension in a letter to General Dynamics Vice President and General Manager Gary S. Grimes. After Grimes announced the extension, the head of Shipbuilding Workers Union Local 5 praised the company for giving the employees group more time.

"The steering committee is very, very pleased," Local 5 President George O'Kane said. "It would have been a very bad move if they sold the yard before we could have submitted a proposal."

Mayor Francis McCauley, Sen. Paul Harold, and Rep. Thomas Brownell also lobbied for the extension. McCauley and Harold both praised General Dynamics' decision.

"All of us, especially in the political area, have worked very hard to exhaust every possibility to continue shipbuilding at the yard," the mayor said. "An employee buyout would do that."

"This is an important step in protecting the employee's option of purchasing the yard," Harold added.

Seventy-six brokers, 41 developers, 30 industrial users, and eight consulting firms with interested clients had shown an interest in the yard, according to General Dynamics spokeswoman Evelyn Murphy.

$57 MILLION HOSPITAL PROJECT BEGINS

A groundbreaking ceremony was held to mark the start of $57 million project at Quincy City Hospital.

The project called for replacing approximately two-thirds of the buildings and patient beds at the hospital. The new facility would include 234 new beds – 180 medical/surgical, 14 intensive care, 20 pediatric, and 20 mental health. A majority of the new beds would be in single rooms with private bathrooms.

In addition, 25 hospital departments would be housed in the new facility. Construction was scheduled to start in mid-August and continue on for 36 months.

GILDEA RIGHT ON RED SOX

One year after the Red Sox finished fifth in the seven-team AL East, the team was atop the division at the halfway mark of the season.

That came as no surprise to North Quincy's Joe Gildea, who predicted the team would have strong season – finishing third or higher in the standings – after spending a month watching them in Spring Training.

"There just seemed to be something different about this Red Sox team when I saw them in Florida," he said at the time. "Their pitching was obviously better, but there was something else. It was their attitude. They acted and played like a team."

New Book Spotlights U.S. Government

By Local Author Will Butts

By SCOTT JACKSON

Will Butts, the author of a recently released book on American government, always liked history growing up in Dorchester.

"I've always been interested in it since I could remember," Butts explained in a recent interview. "I can't remember not being interested in it. Maybe being born in Boston helped out. I was always interested in looking at the plaques and the statues and things like that."

Butts, now a Quincy resident, attended Eastern Nazarene College and works as an accountant. He recently published his first book, This Republic: Illuminating Republican Government, through his own publishing company, Liberty's Lamp Books.

This Republic provides an overview of the American republic. It does so using the words of several of the Founding Fathers, including James Madison, Roger Sherman, and Alexander Hamilton. But most prominently featured are the writings of John Adams, whose portrait graces the cover, and who Butts wrote, "was at the time, and may still be, the most pre-eminent expert of the science of government, both ancient and modern."

Butts was inspired to write to write This Republic on Independence Day in 2009. He was in Boston that day, visiting historic sites and other monuments, when he saw a Tea Party rally.

"There was a huge rally and I happened to go see what was going on there. There were all kinds of people talking about the rights of man and liberty. I happened to be reading a couple books at that time – I always was – and then I thought I could probably write a book. That was the spark of the idea," Butts explained.

"Then I started to read offhand some of Adams' writings. I was like 'oh, I can probably break down the American government writing using his writings and his quotes.' I just took off from there and I was working on it on the side for probably four years."

This Republic was released in January and can be purchased through thisrepublic.net or any major bookseller. It is available both in paperback and as an eBook. Butts is happy with the feedback he's received so far.

"The people I've sent it to and the people who've read it have really liked it," Butts said. "My friends, of course, say it's a great book. But people outside of that... say its very well written and interesting.

"You never know when you write a book how it's going to come across, so I was happy about that."

This Republic is 110-pages long, including two appendices, John Adams' "Thoughts on Government" from the spring of 1776 and the U.S. Constitution. Butts said he wanted to keep the book short so it would be easily read.

"It's a pretty good primer for people who really don't know anything about the government or how it works and functions. It's not a super scholarly work I wanted to keep it base level. Some of the quotes are really deep but that's why I worked on explaining them," he explained.

"I wanted to keep it cheap and short so it's easily distributable...it's basic stuff most people should know."

With his first book published, Butts is already planning his next one.

"It's already bubbling up in my mind," Buts said. "Pretty much it's going to be comparing the causes of the American Revolution – like all the causes put in the Declaration of Independence – to how we fixed those and made sure they never happened again in the text of the Constitution.

"That's sort of where my mind is going right now."

In addition, he also hopes to republish some more of John Adams' works as well as essays John Quincy Adams wrote under the pseudonym 'Publicola' in the 1790s when his father was vice president and the French Revolution raged on.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Chicken Soup, Chicken Salad Rolls

By MARIE

It doesn't matter whether it's winter or summer, I still like a cup of homemade soup. And so does my family so last week I made a hearty chicken soup plus chicken salad sandwiches.

Since we enjoy the dark meat in the chicken salad, I used drum sticks, but any kind of chicken will due.

CHICKEN SOUP - CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICHES

6 drum sticks
1 medium onion
2 stalks celery (cut up)
2-3 carrots (cut up)
Enough water (or chicken stock) to cover meat and veggies
Salt and pepper to taste
Better than bouillon if needed
2 cups spinach (optional)
1/3 cup ditalini or a favorite small pasta

I took the skin off the chicken and in a large pot of water, place the chicken and then add the rest of the ingredients. I used a tablespoon of the bouillon for extra flavor.

When the soup is done, add the spinach and the pasta and heat until done. I cut up the meat from two of the drum sticks and used the rest for the chicken salad.

CHICKEN SALAD

Chicken (cut in small pieces)
1 stalk celery (cut in small pieces)
mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sweet relish
Smidgen of ranch dressing or blue cheese dressing (optional)

Mix together until it's the flavor you prefer. Refrigerate until it's time to serve.

Chia Pudding, Jam

By SUZIE

Want a quick and easy breakfast that you can make the night before that requires no cooking, will fill you up, taste amazing, give you heart healthy omega 3's (more than a serving of salmon) loads of calcium, fiber, and protein?

Well, Chia Pudding is your answer! If you enjoy tapioca pudding or rice pudding, then I am pretty sure you will love this.

CHIA PUDDING

2 cups organic milk of choice in container (I use almond milk or coconut milk but you can use regular milk if you prefer)
1/2 cup chia seeds (You can purchase just about anywhere now)
A couple of tablespoons of maple syrup or honey
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg (optional but adds a nice touch)
Fresh fruit of choice

Simply place 2 cups organic milk of choice in container (I use almond milk or coconut milk but you can use what you prefer) with 1/2 cup of chia seeds, a couple of tablespoons or so of maple syrup (or sweetener of choice) 2 teaspoons vanilla, 1/2 tsp nutmeg (optional).

Just stir or cover and shake up. Place in fridge the night before. (It must be refrigerated a couple of hours before it gets thick) The chia expands and "gels" and makes for a tapioca/rice like pudding. All you have to do is re stir and top with your favorite fruits, like berries, bananas, mangoes..... This will make a few servings so you will have enough for 2-3 days.

You can also make easy Jam with chia seeds.

STRAWBERRY/BLUEBERRY JAM

1 1/3 cups of fresh strawberries
2/3 cup fresh blueberries
2 tablespoons raw honey
2 tablespoons chia seeds

Simply process all ingredients in a blender and refrigerator over night. The chia seeds will gel and thicken mixture into a fruit puree. You can make this your own by incorporating other berries or fruits as well!

Governor Signs Pharmacy Oversight Reform Bill

Legislation that creates new regulations and limitations on the practice of pharmacy compounding in Massachusetts was signed into law July 10 by Gov. Deval Patrick.

State Sen. John Keenan, who represents Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, Quincy and Rockland, was the lead Senate negotiator on the bill. Keenan said the new law will "bring to light an industry that previously operated in the shadows."

Work on new oversight measures began in late 2012, after egregious errors and violations by the New England Compounding Center (NECC) in Framingham left 64 people dead and over 700 severely ill across the country by a meningitis infection. Subsequent unannounced inspections by the state's public health department led to over a dozen other compounding pharmacies being shut down across the state.

Keenan, who co-chairs the Joint Committee on Public Health, states that the compounding industry was originally intended to fill a legitimate medical need, for instance modifying approved drugs by adjusting dosage, by removing an allergen, or changing a drug's method of administration, to meet a medical need that is unique to each patient. Unlike manufacturers that produce drugs in large batches, compounding pharmacies typically produce a single prescription at a time. The compounding pharmacies were exempted from federal regulation and oversight.

"We found that the combination of federal exemption and the lack of state oversight, allowed the industry to grow well beyond its intended scope," says Keenan. "As a result, fraudulent and unsafe practices destroyed lives."

The bill signed on Thursday creates three new specialty license categories – for sterile compounding, non-sterile compounding, and compounding within a hospital or institutional setting – for pharmacies in Massachusetts, and also requires that out of state pharmacies register and comply with state regulations.

It also reconstitutes the Board of Registration in Pharmacy, adding members with expertise in compounding, and gives the Board the resources, capacity and authority to inspect compounding pharmacies. State inspectors would be specially trained in compounding, use a standardized inspection checklist and standards, and conduct unannounced inspections at least annually.

Other provisions in the bill would require additional training for pharmacists employed by a compounding pharmacy; reform the way errors and drug recalls are reported to regulators and to the public; create new penalties for violations of pharmacy regulations; and extend whistleblower protections for pharmacy employees.

The six-member conference committee that negotiated the bill was chaired by Keenan for the Senate, and by Representative Jeffrey Sanchez for the House, and also included Senator Stephen Brewer, Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr, Representative Brian Dempsey and Representative David Vieira.

"This process has been long in the making. We wanted to ensure our consideration of this complex topic was thorough, and that our outcome would be a comprehensive policy that can be emulated across the country," Keenan said after the bill was passed.

"With this legislation, we will go from the state where an unregulated pharmacy compounded a substance that killed dozens of people and caused more than 700 to deal with serious illness, to the state which provides patients with the best safety standards in the country," said Keenan.

A GRANITE BENCH in memory of "Puppy Doe" will be dedicated by the city and bench organizers Sept. 13 at the Whitwell Street Playground. The name "puppy doe" was given to a brutally abused dog found in Quincy last summer. The dog had to be euthanized because the injuries were so severe. Standing at the site selected for the bench are (from left): Christine Iacone-Bandieri, Mike Albanese Jr., Mayor Thomas Koch and Diane Holler O'Meara.

'Puppy Doe' Memorial Bench Dedication Sept. 13

A black granite bench in memory of "Puppy Doe" will be dedicated in September at the Whitwell Street Playground.

The name "puppy doe" was given to a brutally abused dog found in Quincy last summer. The dog had to be euthanized because the injuries were so severe. The animal cruelty sparked outrage throughout the city and beyond and prompted legislators to file legislation imposing harsher penalties for convicted animal abusers.

"Puppy Doe" Memorial Bench fundraising members Diane Holler O'Meara, Mike Albanese J. and Christine Iacone-Bandieri have raised about a third of the $5,000 needed to pay for the black granite bench. It is being made by Custom Monument of Rockland, with engraving approved by Quincy Park Director Chris Cassani. The inscription will read: "See something/say something," a message selected by the organizers because it encourages everyone to get involved and help prevent the abuse of animals.

"The Memorial Bench is more than just a memorial to Kiya, known to many as 'Puppy Doe,'" O'Meara said. "It is a memorial to all animals that have been abused. It is our hope that this bench will stand as a symbol, a reminder that is it not okay to abuse animals."

The memorial bench will be unvieled by Mayor Thomas Koch Sept. 13.

The Puppy Doe Memorial Bench board members thanked the mayor and all city departments that assisted in making the memorial bench a reality.

Organizers are appealing to the community to help raise the remaining funds for the bench.

"We have not completed our fundraising for the bench yet," O'Meara said. "We would appreciate any donation to this worthwhile cause."

Donation checks may be mailed to the Quincy Animal Shelter, P.O. 690088, Quincy, MA 02269. On the memo line of the check write "Puppy Doe Bench."

Some of the detailing on the third floor is a bit more contemporary in that it's more like today's office space as opposed to some historic detailing," Cala said. "We designed it around their goals and desires."

During a tour of the building Monday Walter MacDonald, the city's director of building maintenance, noted the Planning Department's office space uses more of an open-concept floor plan. The Planning Department's new offices also include an exposed brick wall, on the side of the building facing Coddington Street. Doors and wainscoting original to the building are used in the first and second floors of the building. The original stairwells will also be preserved, though they have been updated to meet modern building codes.

The lower level of the building will be home to the city and school IT Departments, including a server room. Chuck Phelan, the city's IT director, said the bandwidth provided over the city's network will increase from 50 megabits per second to 200 when the move to the new building is made.

"We'll be expanding bandwidth dramatically in the city," he said.

The IT Department currently has offices on both the basement and the second floor of the City Hall annex. Phelan said his department is looking forward to moving because they will have much more space to work in in the renovated building.

"It's going to be a beautiful area – much bigger than what we have now," he said. "We've outgrown the space we're in."

The lower level will also hold a printing facility, allowing the city to do all the in-house printing it does on site.

Cala said the renovations have gone well so far, and credited MacDonald, the city's department heads, and Nauset Construction for their cooperation.

"It's been a great project. You have to give credit where credit is due and Walter MacDonald has been our day-to-day contact with the city," Cala said. "We've had a lot of contact with the department heads – Dennis Harrington with Planning, Chuck Phelan with IT, Kevin Segalla with School IT, and of course the superintendent, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, and his team.

"I think Nauset Construction has done a good job. We've had a good working relationship with the team – the owner, the contractor, and our office. We've been very pleased with the way the project has gone along."

WORKERS WERE BUSY Monday installing carpet in the room that will house the School Committee once renovations are complete at the Coddington School. Seating for approximately 40 people will be provided, with overflow seating available in a conference room across the hall. Seen at right is the table for the seven committee members as well as the superintendent and committee clerk; in the center of the photo is where a podium for speakers will be permanently installed.

LOWER LEVEL of the Coddington School will house the city and school Information Technology (IT) Departments. It includes a new server room (shown above), which will be connected to all municipal and school buildings. The city will also be able to increase the bandwidth available from 50 megabits per second to 200 as a result of the upgraded equipment.

THE CODDINGTON SCHOOL has a new generator (seen at right), capable of providing power to the building even if electricity is out nearby. Bushes will be planted near the generator to help it blend in with the surroundings. At left is a new brick enclosure for the building's dumpster.

Grades 5-8 For New Sterling Middle School

pected to vote on the enrollment agreement at an open meeting Wednesday, July 30 at 7 p.m. in the temporary Council Chamber, second floor, City Hall annex.

The MSBA made their decision based on enrollment projections – not on the proposed grade configurations – according to DeCristofaro who, along with Mayor Thomas Koch, must sign an enrollment certification agreement to confirm the figures within 21 calendar days of receiving the document.

"This is good news," said DeCristofaro. "It's always good news when you can build a school."

He maintained that the 4-8 model would have been viable as long as younger students and older students were kept in separate parts of the building over the course of the school day and that keeping children together for a longer period of time as they advance through the grades would have helped maintain a neighborhood school feeling.

"I believed that four to eight would be the best for that community so I'm not disappointed that way because I know we're going to build a great school and it's going to be wonderful. Either way, it's a win-win for that neighborhood."

Following an analysis of all Quincy middle schools, the MSBA predicted that in the near term, no major issues would arise from overcrowding, however they anticipated that by 2023-2024 most—if not all—of the city's middle schools would be at or over capacity. For that reason, the new Sterling was approved to include 50 additional students in its design enrollment as a way to "relieve existing and anticipated overcrowding in other middle schools in the district," rather than to cater to the addition of 4th grade students.

The enrollment forecast for grades 5-8 in Quincy will increase from 2,637 to 3,209 during the 2023-2024 school year. As of today, 12.8 percent of Quincy's 6-8 students and 11.1 percent of Quincy's grade 5 students are enrolled at Sterling.

The next step for the QPS administration is to submit its open enrollment and middle school districting policies and a "description of how overcrowding in the district's other middle schools will be relieved through implementation of those policies" as part of the MSBA's Feasibility Study.

Despite the decision, DeCristofaro said he feels the MSBA is a partner to Quincy Public Schools and that he trusts their decision. "I think we rely a lot on their expertise," he said. "In the long run, it was far more about what was best for the city and the whole school system versus what I felt would be better for that neighborhood school."

Mayor Koch, in a statement Tuesday, said the MSBA's decision was a major step forward in building a new Sterling School.

"We are well on our way to a much-needed new Sterling Middle School, continuing what really is an unprecedented commitment to our future. A commitment that is not only necessary but affordable thanks to the vast majority of the cost being absorbed by state funding.

"It's a testament to the work of Superintendent DeCristofaro, our building team, my colleagues on the School Committee, the City Council and our partners at the state level including Treasurer Grossman, his team at the School Building Authority and our entire state Legislative delegation that we have made such great progress on this and so many other vital school projects in Quincy."

Those projects including a new Quincy High School, a new Central Middle School, and the approval of major window and door projects at a number of schools and other building improvements citywide. All of the projects, the mayor pointed out, have been financed by maximum possible state reimbursements, including 80 percent for Central and 70 percent for the window and door projects.

According to Koch, the final reimbursement figure for Sterling is anticipated to be in the same range.

Faxon Park Loop Still In The Running

City Pushing Ahead Despite Governor's Veto Of $240,000 In State Funding

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy will push ahead with plans to construct a running loop at Faxon Park even after Gov. Deval Patrick vetoed money earmarked for the project.

A $240,000 earmark that would've funded construction of the loop was among the $16.1 million Patrick cut from the Bay State's $36.5 billion fiscal year 2015 before signing it into effect July 11. The city has funding in place for part of the loop already – the Quincy Park Conservancy, a private non-profit organization, and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall raised funds for the project – but the state money would've funded the completion of the 1.5-mile loop.

On Tuesday, Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the city would fund completion of the running loop if the legislature doesn't override the governor's veto.

"It has not been determined what source of money will be used at this point, but [the veto] isn't something that's going to halt the plan," Walker said.

House Majority Leader Ron Mariano, a Quincy Democrat whose district includes the park, said in a phone interview he was disappointed by Patrick's veto. The legislature, he explained, will vote to override a number of vetoes made by Patrick to the budget. Mariano plans to press his colleagues to include money for Faxon Park in those overrides.

"It's something that's near and dear to my heart," Mariano said Tuesday. "I'm disappointed and will continue to make my case that the money is well spent."

Mariano added he was hopeful an override vote would be taken before the legislature begins its recess on July 31. If a vote doesn't happen before then, one could still be taken in September or October.

The running loop is one of many planned improvements to the 57-acre Faxon Park outlined in a master plan crafted by the city. In April, the City Council authorized spending $250,000 from the city's Community Preservation Act funds to construct a renovate playground there; the state provided a $200,000 grant for that project through its "Our Common Backyard" program.

"This is one piece of a much broader master plan for Faxon Park that the city has been working with Majority Leader Mariano and Councillor Croall on," Walker said. "We have been chipping away at it."

Croall, who ran this year's Boston Marathon to raise funds for the loop trail, said he was hopeful progress made in recent years at Faxon Park could continue.

"Faxon Park has made some notable progress," he said. "My hope is that we can continue to build on it."

City Awarded $250,000 In 'Green' Funds

The City of Quincy has been awarded $250,000 in additional Green Communities Funding, under a Competitive Funding Round. The state Department of Energy Resources (DOER) and Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs made the announcement of $7.9 million in funding for 43 communities.

"This is another great step in our efforts to reduce consumption and increase efficiency, and the result of a lot of hard work by our Energy Director Shelly Dein and the team at Public Buildings," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Quincy received the maximum size award allowed in this round. The state funds will be combined with $80,447 in utility incentives from National Grid, and $50,000 in City funding. Together, this work will fund building energy management system upgrades and retrocommissioning in five municipal buildings, so that the buildings mechanical systems operate more efficiently. It will also fund replacing exterior lighting with LEDs at nine buildings. LEDs use significantly less electricity than the current lighting, and the bulbs last longer. Together, this work is expected to save 427,040 kWh in electricity and 10,400 therms of natural gas, annually. Once completed, this will not only save the City in utility costs, but the buildings will be more comfortable for occupants by eliminating under and over-heating and cooling, as well as optimizing ventilation.

Quincy was first designated as a Green Community in December 2011, by committing to reduce the City's energy use by 20% in 5 years. Using the first award of DOER funding, the City converted 300 City-owned streetlights to LEDs, upgraded the energy management system at Quincy High School, and replaced exterior lighting with LEDs at four schools.

Over the next year, the following buildings will receive building energy management upgrades and retrocommissioning: Thomas Crane Main Library, Lincoln Hancock Community School, Point Webster Middle School, Clifford Marshall Elementary School, and the Police Headquarters. Buildings that will have their exterior lighting replaced with energy-efficient LEDs are: Snug Harbor Elementary School, Engine 2 Firehouse, Quincy High School, Kennedy Senior Center, Atherton Hough Elementary School, DPW Garage, Broad Meadows Middle School, North Quincy High School, and Engine 6 Firehouse.

Velocity Dance Company Goes Hollywood

Velocity Dance Company recently put on a show that appeared straight out of Hollywood.

Guests had the opportunity to walk the red carpet along with the red velvet ropes before entering the show. There were backdrops and photographers taking photos of the guests while they were walking the familiar red carpet.

Once inside the auditorium, there were Hollywood lights everywhere, a golden film reel, and a six-foot Oscar award on display.

The show opened with Alex MacPherson, a student of Velocity, welcoming the guests and announcing the nominees just like the Oscars. When the winner was announced, Velocity Dance opened with a spectacular performance with their Junior Team, senior dancers, along with the owners Vincent and Erica Famador. The opening dance was a full mix focusing on the glamourous life of Hollywood from "Vogue" by Madonna, "Glam" by Christina Aguilera, and Martin Garrix, one of the hottest artists of 2014. From the moment the show started everyone in the audience knew they were in for a real show.

The students performed routines from ballet, jazz, tap, modern, contemporary, hip hop, and musical theatre. The performers ranged from pre-school to adults all engaging in the Hollywood show theme. The Creative Movement, Kinder Kids, and combo classes, ages 3-8, are always a big hit dancing to Gene Kelly, Beach Boys, Marilyn Monroe and more.

In the finale, the Senior Jazz Class performed "Applause" by Lady Gaga which had the crowd on their feet. "Each year I come to the show and the shows just keep getting bettter and better. I dont know how they always top previous shows because they are all amazing," said one guest.

"Finding a theme for our fifth year anniversary show was quite easy," said Velocity Dance Company owner Vincent Famador. "We wanted something spectacular, glamourous, and a black tie event. The first thing that came up was a Hollywood theme.

"In order to truly bring Hollywood we knew we had to work extra hard and be creative. Creating the red carpet, red velvet ropes, backdrops and creating video clips added to our extra work load but was truly worth it.

"The dads and moms that participated really made the show memorable. It's the families and our support that make our shows always a success" Famador added.

Kevin McCusker, MD, of Quincy, and Robert Dart, MD, of Canton, were recently honored as Quincy Medical Center's Physicians of the Year. The award recognizes a physical who best exemplifies the spirit, skill, and dedication of Quincy Medical Center's medical staff.

Dr. McCusker, a board-certified pulmonologist, also serves the hospital's vice president of medical affairs. He is "an above and beyond type of person who oversees much of this hospital with passion and a commitment to excellence…He is a wonderful leader who leads by example and is always willing to help – the type of man who serves out of principle and commitment, rather than his own need," said QMC medical staff president Bruno West, MD, when presenting the award at the medical staff's annual award ceremony.

Dr. Dart, a board certified emergency physician and chief of the QMC Emergency Department, has been on staff at QMC for 14 years. Dr. West cited many of the qualities people used to describe Dr. Dart when nominating him for the award, such as "tireless work on a number of committees," " a great advocate for QMC and for patients," "a pleasure to work with," and "always willing to help out in the ER when there is a surge of patients."

Nominations for the QMC Physician of the Year are made by members of the medical staff, hospital staff, patients and patients' family members.

Real Estate Activity Shows 'Modest Growth'

Real estate activity in Norfolk County for quarter ending June 30, 2014 showed modest growth while the mortgage refinance market continues to experience significant challenges when compared to same 2013 quarter, according to a recent report released by Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell

"Norfolk County is an attractive market for both consumers buying homes and condominiums and commercial real estate investors," said O'Donnell. "I am hopeful the positive trend lines we are seeing in real estate activity will continue through the 2014 calendar year."

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from April to June, 2014 settled at just under $1.9 billion, a 5% increase from the same 2013 quarter. A total number of 2,966 deeds were recorded during the April to June, 2014 quarter also resulting in a 1% increase from 2,943 deeds recorded during the same timeframe in 2013. The average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) increased countywide by 4% from the previous year's comparable quarter to $638,811.

Mortgage recording activity decreased in the April to June, 2014 quarter with 6,555 mortgages recorded; a 37% reduction from 2013 total of 10,375. Total mortgage value also fell during the quarter. Mortgage value for the quarter was approximately $2.68 billion, a significant 48% reduction from April to June, 2013 timeframe.

"Root cause of deductions in mortgage volume and value point to a slowdown in the mortgage refinance market," said O'Donnell. "A combination of homeowners taking advantage of historically low interest rates in recent years coupled with a slight uptick in current interest rates has had an adverse effect on the mortgage refinance market."

The report also shows a reduced number of foreclosure deed filings. Thirty-nine foreclosure deeds were recorded during April to June, 2014 quarter compared to 57 during the same quarter in 2013.

"While pleased with the foreclosure numbers, my office continues to closely monitor foreclosure activity," said O'Donnell. "The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds continues to work with its partners South Shore Home Consortium and Neighbor Works Southern Mass to help those Norfolk County homeowners who have just recently received a Notice of Foreclosure from a lender."

Homestead filings also decreased during the April to June, 2013 quarter to 3,101 filings compared to 3,149 filings during same timeframe in 2013. Legislation signed into law in 2011 clarified that there is no need to refile a Homestead after refinancing mortgage.

Council Should Protect The People

Who does the mayor think he is? A man born with a silver spoon in his mouth, never worked a day in his life.

Eminent domain is used only by a person who could care less about how much pain he causes the people he is throwing out of their homes for a parking lot. This is the time for the City Council to show they are no longer under the mayor's thumb and protect the people who put them in office.

Thank God this is the mayor's last term in office. The people of Quincy can no longer afford him in office. All he knows is how to spend our money, raise taxes, and demolish way too many taxpaying properties from the books.

The ball is in the hands of Joe Finn. He and he alone can stop this disaster. If he can't I think he should stop pretending he is working for we the people.

Shaw Street

Editor's Note: Mayor Koch is undecided on seeking a fifth term in 2015.

Consider Alternative Proposals In NQ

With Quincy Mayor Koch's plans to take nine homes in North Quincy to build additional parking for North Quincy High School suffering well-warranted criticism and now likely to face considerable cost increases if pursued, it is time to consider alternative proposals.

For starters, the mayor's concurrent plan to jam a comprehensive sports stadium facility into a tight site butt up against the backyards of homes is variously problematic. Granted, while converting Teel Field from grass to artificial turf has merit, building a stadium at Teel when the two local high schools have long shared the neutral field that is Veterans Stadium does not.

And as for developing parking and flood control, there are several acres of open space – including a city road right of way through the middle of it – just across Newbury Street. While this land is a low point in the neighborhood, within the new FEMA flood zones and has some wetlands, surely both flood control enhancements and parking could be designed, permitted and then built at this site.

For example, instead of using asphalt, the parking area could be covered with water permeable and compacted gravel as was required for the Quincy High parking lot opposite the YMCA.

Additional positives for this alternative plan include that over several dozen abutting homes, condos and apartment buildings would have an attractively redeveloped parcel next to them instead of currently vacant, blighted, overgrown and variously unsafe land that cannot otherwise be substantially developed.

Harbinger Of Another Harsh Winter?

It is with a heavy heart I have learned the forecast for unusually cold weather in the Midwest with a temperature as low as 45 degrees. With even colder temperatures further north in Canada.

This area of Canada is the source of the continental ice sheets in the Ice Ages. One wouldn't expect glaciers to appear this season. However, this could be a harbinger of another harsh winter.

In the geologic past, earth temperatures have correlated with the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. With the manmade generation of carbon dioxide, one would expect global warming to continue. It has not for a number of years.

The advent of the Ice Age has been attributed to the perturbations of the earth's position in space. Despite the apparent reversal of climate change, I have not seen any reference to an astronomical reason in the popular media.

While Quincy has taken appropriate measures to prepare for harsher, snowier winters by cleaning out its water courses and drainage systems and building a salt shed, city government should cut through the noise of regular business to more fully address the possibility of many more hard winters to come.

Commends Adams National Park Staff

I want to commend the staff at the National Park for their re-enactment of the signing of the Declaration of Independence at the Adams Mansion on July 4th.

It was great to see wide-eyed youngsters taking in the procedure. It showed all of us that people are active and participate in government decisions.

It made me proud to be an American. May these re-enactments continue to show all of us how fortunate we are to live in the United States.

Bumper Stickers And Angry People

I had to give a little chuckle as I read a recent letter to the editor castigating "Angry White Men." The letter writer tells these men to get a grip and mind your matters.

Last time I looked it was a free country where people are allowed to disagree with one another. Folks like this driver have a right to splash on an "Obama" bumper-sticker and in return, sometimes bumper-stickers can get reactions out of other drivers too.

Personally, I kicked the habit of plastering bumpers-tickers on my vehicle long ago. Had I eyed her bumper-sticker concerning the greatness of Obama, I would have just said a silent prayer for the driver behind the wheel. Venting strong feelings about someone else's bumper-sticker doesn't do one any good and nor will it get somebody to remove said faded bumper-sticker.

I do resent however, the assumption made about angry white men as if we are deserving of scorn. Just because you get a negative reaction from a bumper-sticker you like doesn't mean you should fear being driven off the road or being shot.

I am a man, I am white but most of the time I pretty happy about life and life in general in America. However, since I don't know the race of the letter writer, all I can call her is an angry woman who needs to get her grip on life and stop insulting male drivers out there who simply think President Obama has been far less than spectacular to date for all Americans, male and female.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, July 5, 2014, at approximately 3:50 p.m., Officer Scott Doherty was dispatched to the parking lot of 151 Sea Street for a report of a motor vehicle accident.

On arrival, the Officer saw a group of people near the building pointing to a man lying on the ground outside of a Lincoln town car. Officer Doherty approached the man and saw that he had some lacerations on his arm. Witnesses said that the driver suffered these injuries when he fell out of his car. The Officer approached the driver and detected the odor of alcohol on his breath, his eyes were red and glassy and he was unable to stand up. The driver was told to remain on the ground until the ambulance arrived.

At this point several witnesses approached the Officer to tell of the series of events. One witness said that the driver crashed into a telephone pole, a metal and concrete pillar and several cars. He said that he "saw the whole thing." The witness said that he was driving behind the vehicle on Quincy Shore Drive southbound approaching the Sea Street "T" type intersection. The witness said that the vehicle had to turn either left or right, but opted to go straight and slowly coasted into a telephone pole directly across from Quincy Shore Drive.

This crash punctured the front right tire and dislodged it from the metal rim. The car was stopped and blocking traffic. The driver then reversed direction and backed out of the telephone pole, then drove forward a few feet to take a right into the parking lot of 151 Sea Street. When the driver did this, he drove over a small curb and island in the parking lot and crashed through a concrete filled metal pillar that protected electrical equipment. He then continued forward through the parking lot and swerved left barely avoiding a swimming pool – but he then struck the rear end of two parked vehicles.

The vehicle became stuck on the second vehicle so he placed the vehicle in reverse to free himself. The driver freed his vehicle, then pulled forward again, crashing into the rear of a third vehicle. He continued on, narrowly missing three vehicles until he crashed into a fourth parked vehicle. The driver then continued on and drifted right through two empty parking spots until he crashed into a fifth vehicle. The driver became stuck on this vehicle so he floored the gas peddle, revving the engine but could not get free.

Witnesses saw smoke coming from the tires. He then went into reverse and back to drive to free himself and then pulled into a parking space. When he attempted to exit the vehicle, the driver fell to the ground.

Another witness was the pool's lifeguard, who verified the account and added that the driver "looked passed out – his head was tilted back and to the side. I thought he was dead and coming right for the pool." Several witnesses told Officer Doherty that this was not the first time that this has happened. They said that they have seen the driver around the property walking and driving drunk often. They said they are in fear for the pedestrians and children in the area and one even told the Officer that he "knew this was coming and that it was only a matter of time before he hurt someone." (yet no one ever called to let the Police know!)

Officer Doherty noted the significant damage to the driver's car and 3 empty 16 oz Miller beer cans in the front seat. He then interviewed the driver and determined that his speech was slurred, so he read him Miranda rights.

The driver said that he had been drinking and said he had 2 beers and stopped drinking an hour ago. When told that he had hit several objects on his way through the parking lot, the driver adamantly said that he didn't, looking very puzzled. He did not remember or comprehend that he hit anything.

The driver, now standing, appeared very unsteady on his feet. Due to the driver's inability to stand by himself, the Officer elected not to offer any field sobriety tests. The driver, a 70 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Leaving the scene of a motor vehicle accident resulting in property damage and Operating Under the Influence of Alcoholic Beverage." Nice Work!

RECENT SCAM: Officer Bruce Tait reports that a 29 year old female fell victim to a scam that cost her $1,350.00. The victim said that she received a telephone call from "Sergeant Alan Blake of the Department of Homeland Security." He said that there were discrepancies on her I-94 Immigration form and he knew her name, DOB and social security number. He told her that she was being fined $2,500.00 for filing an incomplete form. He then instructed her to purchase Pay Pal cards and read the numbers over the phone. When the victim told him she only had $1,400.00 in the bank, he told her to buy two cards at $500.00 and one for $350.00. She did this and gave him the numbers on the card. The victim told a friend what occurred and she was advised to call the Police, but it was too late to stop her losses. Interestingly, the number on caller ID was a valid Homeland Security number, so the scammer knew how to fraudulently put this number on the caller's phone.

Always remember, federal and state agencies do not contact you by telephone to collect fines or monies owed to them. The first contact is by a letter, instructing you to call them to start proceedings. When in doubt, call your local Police Department.

Bench Dedicated Memory Of Fallen Firefighter

Firefighter John Austin Remembered By Comrades

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The memory of fallen Quincy firefighter John T. Austin was honored on July 8 at the unveiling of a memorial bench placed in front of the Engine 5 Station in West Quincy where he worked, exactly one year after he died on duty.

Austin will also be honored nationally by having his name etched onto the International Association of Fire Fighters Wall of Honor at the 2014 IAFF Fallen Fire Fighter Memorial Observance on Sept. 20 in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

The 37-year-old, 11-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department suffered a fatal heart attack while at Engine 5 as he prepared to respond to a call July 8, 2013.

A total of 80 local firefighters and members of Austin's family including his mother Lillian, his father John, his sister Jane, fiancé Kari Brown, and his 2-year-old son John "John-John" W. Austin were in attendance.

Lillian raised her children to support their community through public service. Her son, she said, chose his profession for that reason, following in the footsteps of his grandfather and uncle who both also became firefighters.

She recalled a time when her son responded to a call of someone apparently having a stroke. "He held their hand and told them that everything was going to be OK, and it was." She said the person still contacts her occasionally to thank her, telling her that Austin, by simply holding his hand, comforted him in his time of need.

The bench, made by A Monti Granite of Quincy, was engraved with images of the U.S. Marine Corps logo—Austin served between 1995 and 1999—and the logo of the Quincy Firefighters Local 792. Etched between are the words "Remembering Firefighter John T. Austin." On the back of the bench is an engraving of his beloved car, a Dodge Challenger. "[His colleagues] used to make fun of him because it was orange," said Austin's mother.

Funds were gathered from Local 792 union dues and paving work was donated by Back Yard Living of Abington.

John-John, who was 18-months-old at the time of his father's passing, was the first person to sit on the bench.

"He died doing what he loved," said President of Quincy's Firefighters Local 792 Paul Moody. "He'll be remembered as a father, brother, fiancé, and proud Marine."

"He always had your back and was a fun-loving kid."

The idea for the memorial came about last year. "Everyone in the department wanted to do something in his memory," said Moody, who wants the bench to be a place where people can sit and reflect on the good Austin did during his life. "It's going to be there a long time. Once we're gone a hundred years from now it will still be there."

Austin's mother said that the outpouring of support for her family has been overwhelming. At the recent John T. Austin Memorial golf tournament which took place at Presidents Golf Course,136 golfers showed up to participate, exceeding the course's limits. The dinner which followed the tournament was attended by 300 people who donated funds which in part will go to a scholarship to be awarded to a local high school student who has chosen to study for a career in public service. People have already begun registering for next year's event she said.

Austin's family will be in attendance at the Fallen Fire Fighter Memorial Observance as will 24 Quincy firefighters and the Quincy Fire Department honor guard.

Lillian will always remember her son as someone who was naturally a people person and said that without him around she feels an emptiness in her heart. Still, she said, it's impossible to put into words how his smile could light up a room or cheer up his colleagues when they were feeling down.

"When we lost him, we all lost something special," she said. "He was magnetic when it came to people and he had a great smile…he was outstanding."

The Adams National Historic Park celebrated the 247th anniversary of the birth of John Quincy Adams on Friday, July 11 at the United First Parish Church with a wreath-laying ceremony and speakers who reflected on the life of the United States' sixth president.

The President of the United States annually authorizes the laying of the red, white, and blue floral wreath which was, this year, put on Quincy Adams' tomb by Lieutenant Commander David Stock of the Navy Operational Support Center of Quincy.

Remarks were made by Assistant Editor of the Adams Papers for the Massachusetts Historical Society Sara Georgini who is also a doctoral candidate of American history at Boston University. She is a Humanities, Arts, Science, and Technology Alliance and Collaboratory (HASTAC) Scholar, an active member of the Boston-Area Digital Humanities Consortium, and she has authored a dissertation titled "Creating Adams Family Values," which details the role religion played for the family between 1583 and 1927.

The Adams Papers project began in 1954 and is a compilation of manuscripts written and received by the Adams family. As of today, over 50 volumes have been published by Harvard University Press.

slavery crusader and an ardent proponent of national arts, science, and literature. Today I'd like to add another accolade: John Quincy Adams; peacemaker," she said.

She called his negotiation of the Treaty of Ghent on Dec. 24, 1814 while acting as the U.S. Ambassador to Russia an under-recognized aspect of his career. His acts, she said, effectively ended the War of 1812 between the United States and England.

"Arriving in Ghent in late June 1814, John Quincy Adams quickly learned he would need extra patience, fortitude, and perseverance to chair this fractious diplomatic team. A great deal of his time was spent repairing internal strife among the American negotiators and sometimes it seemed to Adams that much less time was actually needed to resolve the conflict with England."

His leadership ultimately strengthened and organized his team, facilitating the agreement which led to peace between the Americans and the English.

"Today, we recognize his exceptional patience, perseverance, and fortitude and we honor the useful life that President John Quincy Adams led on our behalf," she said.

Peter Boylston Adams, who is the great-great-great grandson of Quincy Adams noted that "the one thing that distinguished Adams was that he was probably one of our greatest statesman."

He reflected on the cost Quincy Adams paid to remain active in U.S. politics and the sacrifices he made as a result of his dedication to his country. Excluding his one son, Charles Francis, who grew into adulthood, "all of his children died young," he said. Daughter Louisa died before she turned two, their first son George committed suicide at 28 and their second son John died at 31. "The cost to his entire family...was extremely serious."

Jim Edwards, president of the Quincy Historical Society and president of architectural firm Holmes & Edwards Architecture, tied the life of Adams to the restoration of Old City Hall built in 1844 while Quincy Adams was serving as a congressman for the district. Edwards' firm is restoring the Greek Revival style building as part of the overall improvement project in Quincy Center.

Solomon Willard, who designed the Bunker Hill Monument which was constructed of Quincy granite, also designed Old City Hall. Edwards said that as an old man, Quincy Adams wrote in his diary of his experience on Penn's Hill with his mother Abigail at the age of seven in which both watched as Charlestown burned during the Battle of Bunker Hill. This experience remained so ingrained in his memory that he refused to attend the dedication of the Bunker Hill Monument, designed by Willard. His refusal was also in part due to the presence of pro-slavery President John Tyler.

Furthermore, Quincy Adams specified that the Adams Academy be constructed of granite and he also placed granite slabs atop the graves of his ancestors buried at Hancock Cemetery. "Their love of this stone is apparent in their writings and in their lives," said Edwards of both Quincy Adams and Willard. "The simplicity of Solomon Willard's work was the result of, at least in part, of the material—granite—which he loved so much and used so freely. It is this common sense of love and awe of our native stone that I like to imagine ties John Quincy Adams and Solomon Willard, if not perhaps in some close, personal manner, at least in some spiritual sense."

Quincy Adams died just four years after the completion of Old City Hall.

"There's no debate as far as his dedication and incredible leadership as a statesman in the formation of our nation," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "He was a man of conviction over convenience and principle over politics."

He recalled at a lecture he had attended given by author David McCullough—winner of a "Best Biography or Autobiography" Pulitzer Prize for his book on John Adams—in which he said that of all the U.S. presidents, he considered Quincy Adams to have the highest IQ while his son had the second highest.

"He was so far ahead of his time," said Koch. "People couldn't capture his vision for this nation whether it was for educational institutes, observatories, canals, roads."

Following the church ceremony, guests were invited to the Adams National Historic Park Carriage House for lectures detailing the life of Quincy Adams.

Guests were then invited to a tour of the Stone Library which contains over 14,000 volumes and was built in 1870 on the Adams' estate at Peace Field. Quincy Adams had requested the library be constructed of stone as to reduce the risk of fire.

The Rosewood Ensemble then played for the audience a compilation of music entitled "The Musical World of John Quincy Adams."

QUINCY NATIVE Billy Allen races in the World Hydroplane championships.

Quincy Native Leads U.S. Team To Strong Finish At World Hydroplane Championships

The U.S. A-Team landed in Europe engulfed in the usual quagmire of international shipping problems which have plagued them so much in the past.

Team Captain and Quincy native Billy Allen once again had to jump through hoops when his well thought out plan to get the team's boats and equipment to the World Championships in Chodziez, Poland fell to pieces. Their container, which was originally designated to land at the Polish port of Gdansk had to instead be offloaded in Bremerhaven Germany because the unusually rough ocean conditions prevented it from making the transfer to Gdansk.

After leaving Boston at 8 p.m. and landing in Gdansk at 2 p.m. the following day, the team boarded a bus for the four-hour ride to the race venue, the picturesque Polish town of Chodziez. Arriving at 7 p.m., Allen quickly hired a van equipped with a trailer hitch. He then turned right around and left at midnight for the eight hour trip to Bremerhaven. After spending Wednesday morning handling paperwork, Allen and his Polish speaking driver Tomec finally found the trailer in a holding warehouse. The eight hour return trip to Chodziez ended at 8pm on Wednesday and, after being awake for nearly seventy hours, the worn out team Captain was finally able to lay in a bed at the Hotel Nestor and get some sleep. On Thursday morning the team got to work assembling engines, placing decals on boats and attending to their final preparations.

On Friday the team set up their pit area and went through the registration and scruteneering process. When registration closed it was announced that twenty eight OSY-400 Hydroplanes from twelve different countries were registered to compete for the World Championship. As in the past, the American team had travelled the farthest to race. Eighteen boats would qualify to run in the four heat feature final.

At Saturday morning's drivers meeting the elimination heats were announced with American drivers Mike Akersrtom in #86 and Todd Anderson in #11 slated for heat one and Billy Allen from Quincy Massachusetts in heat two. Each heat would have 14 boats.

When the checkered flag flew ending elimination heat number one defending Gold Medalist Rasmus Haugasmagi from Estonia took first place with countryman Algo Kuus in second. The two Americans, Anderson and Akerstrom finished third and fourth respectively guaranteeing the American twosome a place in the final. In heat two local racing hero Cezary Srumnik and America's Billy Allen ran deck to deck for lap one before Strumnik stretched out a lead for the win and the fastest qualifying time of the weekend. This secured Strumnik the coveted pole position for heat one of the final. Allen finishing in the second spot placing all three Americans into the four heat feature final. When the times were posted, Allen was to line up in the fourth spot on the jetty with Anderson in seventh and Akerstrom ninth, three Americans in the top 10.

Team Captain Allen was quick to credit Crew Chief Jeff Main and Jetty Captain Jimmy Cummings for getting the American boats off the jetty and down to turn one right up there with the leaders. "They were flawless" stated the delighted Allen, "we practiced at home but this was the first time they had to operate against the best jetty teams in the world under the pressure of world championship competition. They were both outstanding." Although placing three boats in the final was a fantastic event for the Americans, it did impose a problem, The Americans simply didn't have enough help on the jetty! As it was two years earlier in Kriebstein, it was once again Germany's Team 33 to the rescue. With Jeff Main pulling for Allen and Jimmy Cummings pulling for Akerstrom, Todd Anderson was placed into the capable hands of Christian and Jonas for the all-important launching duties.

At four o'clock it was time for heat one of the finals. The red light expired, the ropers pulled with all their might and eighteen OSY-400s sprang to life as one! Polish pilot Cezary Strumnik, driving from the pole position, brought the grandstands to their feet when he rocketed to the front of the pack and lead the field around the circuit for the first two laps. Estonia's Haugasmagi hung on his hip till he gained enough to give Srumnik the squeeze coming out of the corner on lap three and take the lead. Strumnik fought back on the next straightaway but it was not to be Strumnik's day as his engine went down on lap four. At the end of the five lap heat Hagusmagi nailed down the win with the crazed Slovakian Miroslav Bazinski taking second and Algo Kuss with a the third. Professional stage comic Luke Hugman from The United Kingdom finished fourth and America's Billy Allen rounded out the top five. Americans Todd Anderson and Mike Akerstrom finished tenth and fourteenth respectively.

In heat two of the final it was once again the speedy Estonian Rasmus Haugasmagi leading wire to wire for the heat win followed by countryman Algo Kuus in second and Bazinski in a close third, fourth went to Strumnik who showcased his obvious speed as he battled from the eighteenth spot on the jetty to claim fourth with Allen again fifth.

A bad accident in heat three unfortunately sent Estonian pilot Raivo Peetsman to the hospital with serious injuries. Out of respect for the driver and his team, the International Jury decided to score the race as run after two heats. The winner was declared to be Estonian Rasmus Haugasmagi followed by perpetual frontrunner Miroslav Bazinski claiming the silver and Algo Kuus taking home the Bronze. America's Billy Allen ended up in the fourth place spot followed by England's Luke Hugman in fifth and local driver Cezary Strumnik taking home sixth.

Quincy 10-Year Olds State Baseball Champions

Team Begins Play Saturday In New England Tournament In Exeter, N.H

The Quincy 10-year-old baseball team won the 2014 Eastern Massachusetts State Tournament with a 4-0 win over Methuen July 10. The team advanced to the New England Regional Tournament which is set to begin on Saturday, July 19th in Exeter, NH.

Quincy will open up with Rhode Island and face either Maine or New Hampshire in the next round.

After going undefeated in the District Tournament, Quincy struggled out of the gates in the State Tournament. After dropping decisions to Raynham and Methuen in their first two games, they proceeded to catch fire and win five straight games.

Their first win of the tournament was a 13-2 defeat of Arlington. Liam Hines led the squad with two monster home runs, and Jack Nelson pitched a complete game 3-hitter for the win.

The team then defeated Marblehead 5-3 behind the strong pitching of Kevin Salmanowich and Asher Wines to advance to the single elimination round of the tournament where #2 seeded Wrentham was waiting. Nelson, Salmanowich, and Wines joined forces on the mound to shut down the powerful Wrentham squad. Andrew Kabilian had a big late inning hit, and Aiden White and Scottie Ritz played huge roles at the plate in the win, which secured the victory for Quincy. The win led to a tilt with defending State Champion and undefeated Plymouth.

Coming into the meeting against Quincy, Plymouth had won all of their games by at least 10 runs, and all of those games ending in the fourth inning due to the slaughter rule. In a David vs. Goliath showdown, Quincy did the unthinkable and turned the tables on the powerful Plymouth squad by defeating them 16-5 in a four inning slaughter rule game.

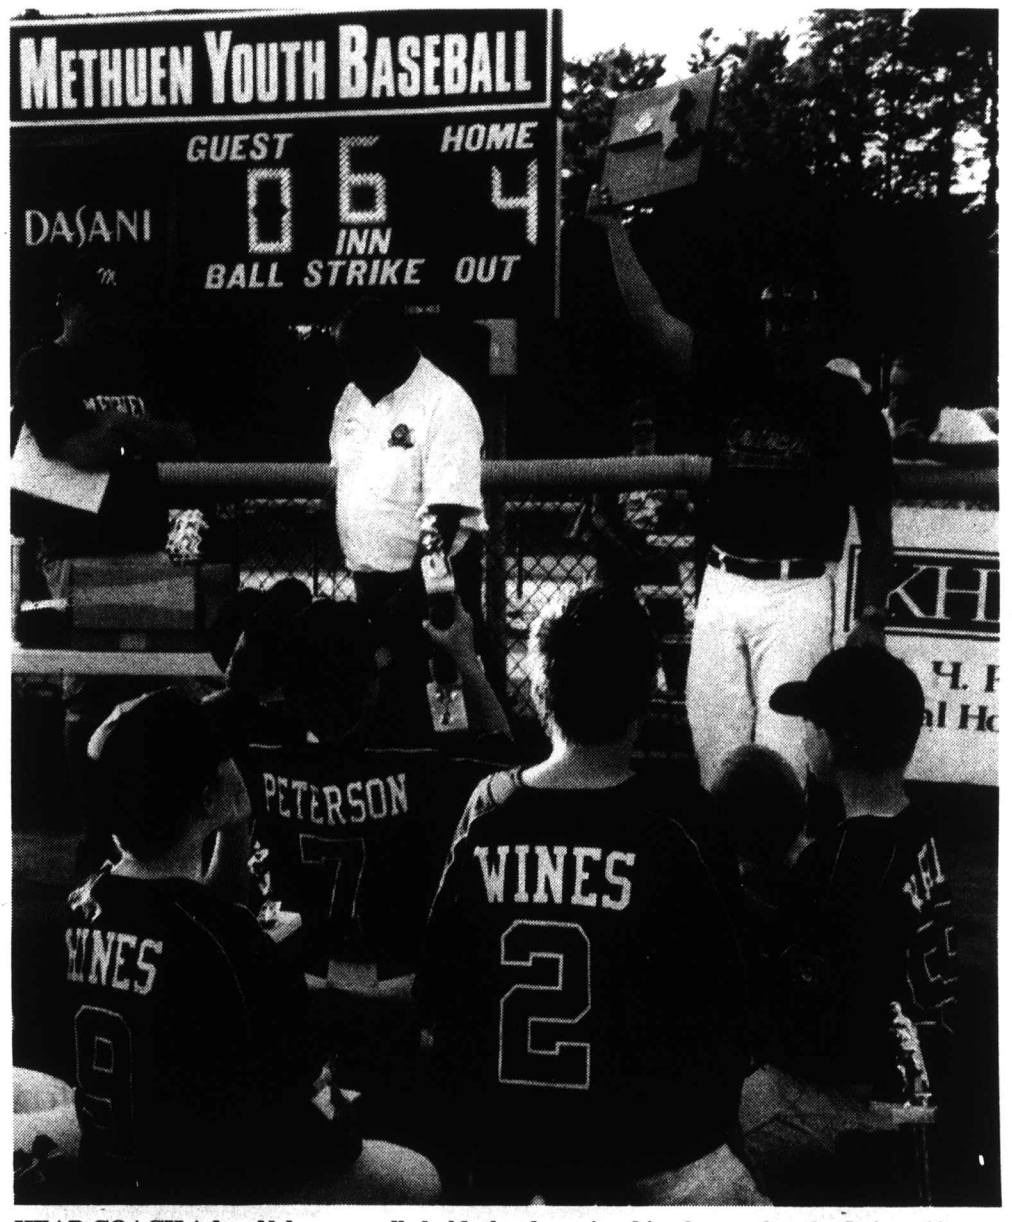
The defining moment of the game was a two-out Grand Slam in the top of the fourth inning by Jackson Murphy. After fouling off a bunch of pitches, and working a full count, Murphy hit a bomb to centerfield which easily cleared the fence and put the game away.

Quincy rode the wave of momentum into the championship game where they were able to avenge an earlier loss to Methuen. Wines pitched a very efficient shut out and had some great defense behind him. Coleman Ross was a standout at first base, and Ben Wines caught a magnificent game.

The seven games in the State Tournament were a true team effort. All fourteen players on the squad played and contributed. Colm O'Malley was a key member of the squad with his aggressiveness on the bases. Zach Galligan and Drew Peterson were stellar defensively in the outfield throughout the course of the tournament, while Quinn Murphy continually flashed the leather at second.

"I am very proud of this group," said Head Coach Adam Nelson. "We have gotten contributions from all 14 players on the roster throughout the District and State Tournaments. They play hard, and come focused every game, but most importantly, they are having fun!

"Winning a State Championship is a very special thing, and I think they all understand that. It has also been an honor to work with the great coaches that we have – AJ Kabilian, Joe Murphy, and Randy Salmanowich. I know that the kids feed off of their energy, enthusiasm, and commitment. I also appreciate the support of all of our parents. Playing seven games in twelve days in Methuen was not an easy task. All of their work to get their kids there, and support us is a huge reason for our success as well."



HEAD COACH Adam Nelson proudly holds the championship plaque after the Quincy 10-year-old baseball team defeated Methuen 4-0 July 10 to win the Eastern Mass. State Championship. Quincy advances to the New England regional tournament that begins Saturday in Exeter, N.H.

QUINCY'S JACKSON MURPHY rounds third and heads for a home plate that's surrounded by elated teammates after hitting a grand slam to defeat Plymouth, 16-5. The victory propelled the Quincy 10-year-olds to the championship game in the Eastern Mass. State Tournament. The locals won their fifth straight game and the state tournament defeating Methuen, 4-0.

Quincy Rotary Club Wins U-12 Softball Crown

Although they didn't have the best record during the regular season, the Quincy Rotary Club U-12 softball team played their best when the playoffs started. The championship game pitted the Quincy Rotary Club versus Nice Kid, the regular season champs.

The two teams had already played in the first round of the double elimination playoffs, in what was probably the best played game of the entire season, a 3-1 extra inning victory for the Rotary Club.

In the championship game Nice Kid coach, Steve Bonica, sent Julianna Tracy to the mound, while the Rotary Club coached by Brendan Smith and Billy Farrell, countered with Fiona Smith. The Rotary Club jumped out to an early three-run lead when Fiona Smith, Lindsey Keenan, and Madeleine Farrell all scored. Melissa Ainsley and Alexa Radzik drove in the runs.

Supported by a strong defense lead by Madeleine Farrell at shortstop, and Ashlyn Munoz at first base, and catcher Maggie Martin, the Rotary Club added to their lead with runs scored by Cassie Mayo, Martin, Abby Hanley, and Alexa Radzik. Celia White and twin sisters Bella and Olivia Delprete all chipped in with RBI's.

Alexa Radzik relieved Fiona Smith in the fifth inning and the two pitchers combined to give up just 2 runs in the 10-2 win.

NINTH ANNUAL John O'Connell - Dennis Thomson Memorial Basketball Tournament held over the weekend at the Fenno Street basketball courts also featured plenty of strong defense from both the men's and women's teams. But the real winners were the scholarship funds that have been established in memory of the two North Quincy High School standout athletes who graduated in 2002 and tragically had their lives cut short in the past 10 years. This year's event raised $4,700 for the scholarships that benefit North Quincy High School graduates.

Hoops Keep Spirit Of 'Dynamite Guys' Alive

Players, Community Remembers John O'Connell & Dennis Thomson At Basketball Tornament

By JOE REARDON

Dennis Thomson stood near the side of the Fenno Street basketball courts on Saturday morning and took in the two games being played simultaneously in the perfect conditions under a sunsplashed sky.

On the court, the players had one of two numbers - 8 and 33 - on their backs. They were the numbers worn by Dennis Thomson and John O'Connell on the North Quincy High basketball team.

Thomson Sr., whose son Dennis died tragically after graduating from North in 2002, remembers well how engaging his son and O'Connell were and how popular they were with all who knew them. O'Connell also passed away in the years since graduating from North in 2002, but the spirits of the two friends have been kept very much alive thanks to the O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament, now in its ninth year.

"Dennis and Okie were tough kids not to keep alive," said Thomson. "They were dynamite guys. If you knew them and you were across the street and they knew you, they'd cross the street to say 'hi, how ya doing.' It's just a crying shame, but we don't have control over it and there's nothing we can do. There's not a day that goes by that I don't talk to him.

"This is always a nice event. Everybody's here to play ball and enjoy themselves. It's just a great time."

Sixteen men's teams and four women's squads were on hand for the two-day tournament, whose proceeds go towards scholarships in both O'Connell's and Thomson's names. More than two dozen local businesses and several of the city's politicians have made donations to the tournament and its scholarships for several years.

This year's event raised $4,700 - or $2,350 each for the O'Connell and Thomson scholarship funds.

The tournament is the brainchild of Dan Duggan, who graduated with both Thomson and O'Connell and was on several athletic teams with them going back to when they were kids playing Quincy youth sports. Forty scholarships worth $40,000 have been raised since Duggan came up with the idea of putting together a basketball tournament in honor of his two friends. A golf tournament was held Friday at Presidents Golf Course for O'Connell and another friend, Charlie Vidoli, who passed away in 2011. The golf outing will be part of tournament weekend in the coming years.

Duggan said the hard work that goes into putting the tournament together is well worth keeping the memory of his friends alive. The tournament has also raised money for a new batting cage at Adams Field and special needs students at North Quincy High.

"We were a very tight group of friends," said Duggan. "It's a lot of work, but it's one of those labor of love type things. The best part is to see the families and friends, but the underlying best part is the basketball is great. A lot of these young kids, when we started the tournament were 10-years-old. It's crazy to see how much it's grown. We have a bunch of guys who are 18-, 19-years-old who didn't know any of the guys involved in this, but want to be a part of it. That's really gratifying.

"It's not a basketball tournament that's just thrown together. It keeps Dennis and Okie alive. It's just another thing to keep them in the forefront of the weekend. It's almost like a little bit of a reunion for people who are sprinkled all over the place."

Duggan said the community support for the annual event has been tremendous. "It all ends up in the same place and it's just great," said Duggan. "I've been blown away by the support. It's like two or three dozen businesses every year and politicians I can just count on. Everything helps. It's another way to get money for the scholarship fund."

son passed away three years ago, was on hand at the basketball tournament the day after the enormously successful golf tourney that drew 130 participants to play in honor of his son. A scholarship for Charlie Jr., who was a National Honor Society student, is given out to a student at North who gets good grades and participates in sports.

"He was just a real nice person," Vidoli said of his son. "He loved basketball and was a phenomenal skier. "We want someone who's a good student, participates in sports - doesn't have to be an all-star - and a good person."

Vidoli said the kindness Duggan and all the people who work to put together the golf and basketball tournaments, and those who participate, has been overwhelming.

"That's one of the reasons I got involved in it," said Vidoli. "It's such a unique group of kids. They were good students, good athletes, but better people. When my son passed away they took it upon themselves to have a memorial dinner for him. They're really unique people. I wanted to try to keep it alive. As your life gets more complex - you get married, you get moved for a job, whatever - we're kind of moving toward turning it into a homecoming type weekend."

Matt O'Connell, John's father, looks forward to the event every year and praised the work of everyone involved, especially Duggan.

"Dan does a really nice job and it's nice seeing everybody," said O'Connell. "This is my best weekend of the year. It's great basketball too. The teams play hard and in nine years I've never seen a fight. The referees are great and the kids are very respectful of them."

"This is my best weekend of the year. It's just nice seeing everybody and Dan does a really nice job."

For Duggan, the weekend is all about his friends who passed far too young. "I've always embraced doing things like this," he said. "They were all young when they died so you only have positive memories of fun times together. If those guys were alive, they'd be down here playing. I enjoy it so much and it's such a great weekend for everybody. I guess deep down it is a little bittersweet."

STAND UP TO BACK PAIN!

We all experience back pain due to age-related changes in our spines; however, that doesn't mean we should give in to it. It is important to respond to back pain constructively. Instead of pampering ourselves and staying in bed when acute back pain flares up, it is best to slowly transition back to regular activity and maintain normalcy to the best of one's ability. Otherwise, avoiding movement can lead to deconditioning that, in turn, can lead to worse pain and disability. If nothing else, it helps to walk around and attempt light tasks. It can also help to schedule a visit to the chiropractor, who can relieve muscle imbalances and joint dislocations that may stand in the way of recovery.

Today's informative column has been brought to you as a public service. Maybe it's time you give chiropractic a try. Top-Seed Morrisette Opens Playoffs Friday

By JOE REARDON

With the top seed in District 6 locked up and the playoffs set to start on Friday, head coach Steve Maze's only goal in Sunday evening's game against Braintree was for Morrisette to put the explosive Post 86 squad in its rearview mirror and get out of Dodge (aka, Braintree) as fast as possible.

Morrisette relied on some solid pitching from starting centerfielder Andrew Currie to close out the regular season with a well-played 2-0 loss at Braintree's French's Common. Post 294 wrapped up the regular season at 18-4-1 with a well-rested pitching staff set for the playoffs.

Maze made no bones about the fact that he wanted to go into Braintree, play seven innings, and get out unscathed and begin focusing on the postseason. Morrisette opens the postseason Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Braintree High against an opponent that had yet to be determined. Whether Morrisette won or lost against Braintree wasn't a concern for Maze.

"We just wanted to get it over with," said Maze with a smile. "We have some kids with sore arms and we've been playing every day. We need the rest. We wanted to get this game over with with no injuries, which was good. I didn't use any pitching which is good. We're going to rest tomorrow and practice Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and then go for it on Friday."

Morrisette could present major problems in the playoffs with a strong, talented and pitching staff that includes T.J. Hobin, Ken Sorenson, Greg Paulo, Cody Desmond, Josh Hayward, Andrew Jaehnig and Dave Suslowicz.

"Everything's lined up and the pitchers are going to be rested," said Maze. "It's double elimination. We just have to see how it all breaks down and go from there."

The showdown against Braintree in no way resembled Morrisette's enormously entertaining 14-9 win over Post 86 when the two teams last met back in June. Post 294 rallied from a 9-0 defecit to stun Braintree with 14 runs for the 14-9 victory.

"That's once-in-a-lifetime," said Maze of the previous meeting between the two top District 6 powers. "9-0, 14-9. That's once-in-a-lifetime."

Braintree ace Bobby McNiff was sharp allowing just four hits and struck out six for the complete game win.

Currie, who started his first game for Morrisette this season, was impressive as well as he yielded just six hits against Post 86.

Currie's strong outing provided the rest the pitching staff needed moving forward. "He pitched for the high school," said Maze. "He doesn't pitch for me. Today he did a great job. Today was more of a day of let's not waste any arms, let's not get anyone hurt. Let's start resting. Let's start doing what we've got to do and go from there. I didn't want to use any of my pitchers.

"He's got great off speed stuff and he keeps guys off balance. We hit the ball, but we just didn't hit it when we had to. They won and that's the name of the game."

Braintree flexed its muscles in the fourth inning to go up 1-0. With one out, Connor Columbus got every bit of a fastball from Currie, slamming it well over the playground in deep left field for a triple. Two batters later, Gino LaRossa drilled an opposite-field triple to right to score Columbus with what proved to be the game-winning run.

Morrisette got the leadoff batter on base just once and wasn't able to jam up McNiff, who did a great job mixing in his sharp curveball over his seven innings on the mound.

Braintree made it a two-run contest in a somewhat bizarre sixth inning. Matt Bickford started things with a double to right field and Joe Zanca reached when a swinging third strike got past Valencenti. A wild pitch during an intentional walk to Gino LaRossa scored Bickford from third for the 2-0 lead.

Post 294 was victimized from some sharp fielding by Braintree. Hayward led off the seventh with a line drive to right field that looked like it was going to drop for a base hit. Billy Keane, however, got a great bead on the sinking liner and dove to make a major league catch to rob Hayward. Nick Valencenti then reached on an infield hit, but Braintree first baseman Cal Berman snuffed out Morrisette's potential rally when he snared a Cody Desmond line drive and doubled off Valencenti to end the game.

Braintree second baseman Anthony Venuti kept the leadoff batter off the basepaths in the fourth with the defensive play of the game. Robbie Munroe lifted a pop up in short right field that looked as though it was going to drop between Berman and Keane for a base hit. Venuti went a long way racing to his left and making the diving catch for the out.

Morrisette had a nice defensive play of its own in the second when Valencenti took Columbus off the basepaths, throwing him out when he tried to steal second.

Junior Morrisette Baseball In Playoff Hunt

By BILL GRIFFIN

The rain took away a near-certain, complete-game victory, but Morrisette's Junior Legion team did post an important win in their chase towards a Zone 6 playoff berth.

Post 294 jumped to a 6-0 lead against Westwood before heavy rain washed out their contest in the bottom of the second inning at Colletta Field Monday night.

After the game, Westwood (3-14) announced that it would not be available for a makeup game and Morrisette picked up the victory.

It was welcome news for Morrisette. Post 294 has six games scheduled in six nights this week and, as of Monday night, needed one more victory to earn one of the four playoff spots in the zone. Morrisette will host Norwood Thursday and travel to Canton Friday to end the regular season. The playoffs start Monday.

Morrisette is 12-4 on the season and tied for third place in the zone despite dropping a heart-breaker to Braintree, 10-9, Sunday night. Morrisette held a 5-0 lead at one point.

"We're right in the mix with Braintree, Norwood and Foxboro," said coach Gerry Shepherd. "The only difference is the other teams are pretty much finished while we have games every night this week. We have a chance to put ourselves in good position."

Morrisette scored five runs in the first inning. The offense was ignited by 1-2 leadoff punch of shortstop Troy Shepherd and second baseman Timmy Keohane. Keohane, who is batting .435, had a walk, a single, a run scored, a stolen base and an RBI in two plate appearances. Shepherd, who is hitting .425, walked, stole a base and scored a run.

"They've been great at the top of the lineup all season. They've also done an excellent job in the middle of our infield at second and short," said Gerry Shepherd.

Josh Helfrich had a single, double, two RBI and a run scored. Brendan Collins had a single, two RBI and a run scored while Adam MacCormack added a single and two RBI.

"Helfrich and Collins have delivered RBI for us all season," said Shepherd. "Helfrich has 25 RBI and Collins had 10 RBI in the last week. We moved Collins and Cam White (walk, run scored vs. Westwood) up in the order and it's helped our offense. White had three hits in each of his last four games before tonight."

Lefty Joe Cochrane threw two scoreless innings before the rains came. He struck out two in the first and worked clear of a bases-loaded jam in the second.

"It could work out for us. The postponement could give us a chance to use him again this week if we need him," said Shepherd.

Morrisette started the season well, winning eighf of its first nine games. At this point, Shepherd gave his team three days off from baseball. No games. No practice. No baseball. He wanted his team to rest, relax and heal. It has worked well.

"It's a long season especially after the high-school season," said Shepherd. "We had sore arms and a lot players nicked up. I told them to just relax and it paid off. We hit the ball better after we had the three-day break."

One of the most pleasant surprises of the season has been the work of catcher Joe Ferracane who singled and scored a run against Westwood. Shepherd wasn't sure if Ferracane would try out for the team, but he has developed into a mainstay behind the plate.

"Joe plays a lot of AAU ball, so I wasn't sure if he'd try out," said Shepherd. "He turned out to be one of the three players (along with Troy Shepherd and Helfrich) who float between the junior and senior teams. I think playing with the senior team helped his confidence. He's been rock solid behind the plate, and he has hit the ball hard for us."

Wollaston Babe Ruth In Playoffs, State Tourney

By BILL GRIFFIN

Wollaston Babe Ruth clinched a berth in the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League playoffs and the State Tournament in its final three games of the regular season last week.

Dillon Darcy fired a two-hitter to improve his record to 7-0 and lift Wollaston past Tri Town, 10-0.

Sunday, Hingham rallied for three runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to nip Wollaston, 3-2 in the regular-season finale.

Wollaston finished the season at 12-4, good for second place in the league behind Milton. Wollaston met Braintree Wednesday night in the opener of the best-of-three first round of the league playoffs. The second game will be played at Braintree Friday night. Wollaston will host a third game, if necessary, Sunday at a field and time yet to be determined.

The championship round for the league title will be played July 21, July 23 and July 24 (if necessary). Last year, Milton squeaked by Wollaston on an unearned run in nine innings for the league crown.

Wollaston and Milton will play in the State Tournament at Adams Field on July 26 and July 27. Last season, Wollaston advanced to the Eastern Massachusetts final before losing to Cape Cod.

Jonathan Leveillee and Michael Saccoach combined for six shutout innings as Wollaston carried a 2-0 lead into the final inning before Hingham rallied for the victory.

Leveillee also played a role in both of Wollaston runs. He doubled, advanced on a ground ball by Johnny Marsinelli and scored on a single by Ben Regan for a 12-0 lead.

Wollaston upped it to 2-0 when Alex Linskey started a rally with a single. Mike Pugsley sacrificed him to second. Leveillee moved Linskey to third with a single, and Marsinelli drove home the run with an infield grounder.

Snug Harbor Defends George Dunn Basketball Title

First Back-To-Back Champion Since In 14 Years

The 2014 Quincy Recreation George Dunn Basketball Tournament Championship belongs to Snug Harbor, as they successfully defended their title by defeating Atlantic 44-39.

By winning, Snug Harbor becomes the first team to win back-to-back championships since 1999-2000.

The championship game, a rematch of the 2013 final, was one of the most entertaining match-ups in recent history, and was close from tip-off until the final whistle blew.

For Snug Harbor, Dyreke Johnson put on an impressive offensive display finishing with 22 points, half of his team's total score. Rafael Santana also played very well for the champions, scoring multiple tough baskets in the paint and finishing with 10 points.

Dan Fooks and Ronnie Watts scored 4 apiece to go along with some flashy passing, while Callum Russell and Frankie Nunziato rounded out the scoring, each contributing 2 points. Jordan Creech and Matt Adams both did a great job pushing the ball up the court and finding players for open shots.

Chris Bock, Mohamed Hassan, and Anthony Marcello all contributed greatly on the defensive side of the court, while John Mei, Matt Adams and Edward Dalas contributed with strong rebounding performances.

Coach Tom Dow proudly hoisted the George Dunn Championship trophy and credited the win to his team's balanced attack and their ability to work together.

The Atlantic team was paced by guard Mike Soricelli, who finished with 12 points, mainly on tough drives to the hoop around taller defenders. Dan Mei showed his outside shooting ability, and barely missed a falling-out-of-bounds corner three that would have tied the game in the final minute of play. He finished with 8. William Zhang scored 7, while Declan Murphy and Shiggy Zhang netted 4 points each.

Jackie Liang hit a three early in the first half to finish with 3 points, and Phu Tang hit an important free throw late in the game to finish with a single point. Michael Nguyen displayed his passing abilities, finding open Atlantic players whenever he was on the court.

Kevin Wu and Mark Podgurski played the role of defensive specialists and were on the court for important situations toward the end of both halves.

Veteran Coach Joe MacRitchie applauded the players on both teams for their sportsmanship, and looks forward to hopefully playing again in next year's tournament.

In earlier tournament action, Atlantic defeated the Atherton Hough Combined team, 68-42, thanks in large part to their hot shooting from long range.

Angelo DePaulo led the way for the Atherton Combined team, leading all scorers with 18 points, including a three-quarters court shot as time expired.

Joe Bode finished with 8 points to go along with a nice rebounding performance, and David Leuchte hit two long range shots to finish with 6 points. Ryan Ahola and Conner Goulart played tough defense down low, while adding 5 and 2 points, respectively.

Nick Lai scored twice to finish with 4 and Matt Joyce's impressive circus shot rounded out the scoring for his team.

Atherton Coach Eddie Grennon said after the game that he was proud of his team's effort and wished Atlantic well in the championship game.

In the other first-round match-up, Snug Harbor defeated Point Webster in a defensive battle, winning with a score of 26 to 19.

Point Webster played the eventual champions tough, but met the same level of defensive resistance on the other side of the court. Leading the scoring for Point was Edon Lazaj, who finished with 10 points. Ryan Turpin, younger brother of Point coach Richie Turpin, finished with 5 points to go along with a handful of blocks and steals. Jose Garcia and Tyrian Leonard also scored for Point, adding 2 points each.

Edward Paulino and Jalen Chase were especially disruptive to the Snug guards, finishing with a few steals each. Cole Bishop, James Askins, and Kevin Phu all showed great strength on the block, doing a great job boxing out the taller Snug team. Players who also played well for Point were Jose Garcia, Christian Fuller, Darius Setalsingh, and Joe Moesly.

The George Dunn Tournament is played each year to mark the conclusion of the winter open-gym program that is supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department from November to April. The tournament is over 50 years old, and in 1997 was named for long time Recreation Supervisor and Youth Coach, George Dunn, who passed away at an early age from cancer.

Participants represent the neighborhood gyms that they attend, and come from public, private and parochial schools. Athletes cannot participate in the tournament if they played on a high school varsity team during the winter season.

In a post-game ceremony, Recreation Director Barry Welch presents trophies and certificates to the members of both finalist teams. He presented the George Dunn Trophy to coach Tom Dow. The Dunn Trophy is engraved with the championship team and coach, and remains on display year-round in the main office of the Quincy Recreation Department. The game was video taped for rebroadcast by the Recreation Department and can be seen on Q.A.T.V. The department extends its congratulations to all who participated and its gratitude to all staff members who coached, officiated, or otherwise contributed to another successful tournament.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty is, as always, admirable. But you might want to be more tactful in discussing a sensitive issue with a family member. Remember: You can give advice without giving offense.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unexpected workplace snag should be handled quickly and efficiently so that it leaves you time for family get-togethers. Also, you might soon get that long-sought apology.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor family matters, especially where children might be involved. Spending time with loved ones helps restore some much-needed balance to your typically busy schedule.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That seemingly clear-cut agreement might not be quite so straightforward after all. Recheck for language that could make you liable for hidden costs and other unpleasant surprises.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Careful, Kitty. Better to deal with someone with proven reliability than with a big talker who promises much but can't confirm that he or she will deliver. Your social life really zings this weekend.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your matchmaking skills are at peak performance levels both in helping to staff workplace teams for upcoming projects and for bringing people together on a more personal basis.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You're finally seeing some progress with your new venture. But be prepared for it to continue at a slower pace than you're used to. Meanwhile, a loved one could be preparing a surprise.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A family member's success pulls you into the spotlight as well. Enjoy it, but don't let it overshadow or otherwise obstruct what you're doing with your own creative projects.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Using what you already know might not be quite enough to get a proposed project off the ground. Look for any new information that might help tilt the scales in your favor.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: While a changing workplace environment can be daunting for some, it could be the challenge you've been hoping for. If so, confront it with confidence and move on.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to recheck travel arrangements for any changes that could work to your advantage. Aspects also favor strengthening and restoring old, fraying relationships.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Using your intuitive reasoning helps you cut right through the double-talk and go straight to what's really going on around you. Stay the course until all your questions are answered.
BORN THIS WEEK: You radiate light and warmth, and others love being close to you.

SUPER MOON photographed last Saturday from Edgewater Drive in Houghs Neck by local photographer Karen Walker. This Super moon, according to Native American Indian heritage is the "Full Buck Moon." The name means, a full moon which is rising and setting at the time of year when male deer (bucks) usually begin growing new antlers. Photographers and other moon gazers take note: the next full moons will occur Aug. 10 (Full Sturgeon Moon), Sept. 8 (Full Harvest Moon), Oct. 8 (Full Hunters' Moon), Nov. 6 (Full Beaver Moon) and Dec. 6 (Full Cold Moon). Photo Courtesy Karen Walker

Coddington School Work Nearly Complete

The Coddington School was in fairly good shape for a building of its age, Cala noted.

"When you're restoring a 100-year-old building there are things called latent conditions – that's a polite way to say 'I found something.' There were not an abundance of them, but there was deterioration over the years of various types that an old building will realize," Cala said.

"But in scale of the project they were fairly modest and wherever we came upon them they were corrected, updated, and brought to code."

He said areas that were addressed included the concrete slab in the building's basement, interior masonry, window lintels, and parts of the building's frame.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, the Coddington School work would likely cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $10.5 million – roughly $500,000 more than anticipated. He said the extra money would be paid for out of the Public Building Department's budget and other existing sources.

The Coddington School work is being done in conjunction with renovations at old City Hall. The City Council approved an $18 million bond order to finance both projects in 2012. About half the bond will be paid for from the city's Community Preservation Act account, with the rest from the general fund. The city currently pays nearly $300,000 to rent space for the School Department in the NAGE Building.

Walker said departments should be moved into the newly renovated Coddington Hall by late August.

ON THE THIRD floor of the renovated Coddington School will be the Planning Department's new office space featuring an exposed brick wall. The bricks are original to the 106-year-old Coddington School, but had been covered over until the renovation project began. The windows provide views of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Bethany Congregational, and even the Town River. •

You have a right to know how much HB 3996 will cost at the grocery store.

HB 3996 is costly and unnecessary.

Don't be confused by MA Right to Know GMO's advertising and lobbying campaign. They're working hard to convince MA consumers that the complicated and confusing labeling laws they advocate in HB 3996 are good for consumers.

The truth is they will increase the cost of food...with no benefits.

We're all for good, informative labels on the foods we buy. That's why we support a common sense national standard, managed and overseen by our nation's foremost food safety agency, the Food and Drug Administration, or FDA.

Some in our state want MA to set our own rules. But adding new labels to food produced using genetically modified (GM) ingredients will force farmers and food producers to implement costly new labeling, packaging, warehousing, distribution, and record keeping operations.

Those costs add up: A Cornell University study found that labeling laws like HB 3996 would add $500 per year to the average family's grocery bill. And that's just an average.

GM technology adds desirable traits from nature, without introducing anything unnatural or using chemicals, so that food is more plentiful. GM technology helps reduce the cost of crops such as corn and soybeans by as much as 15 to 30%, while reducing the use of weed killers and pesticides and the impact they have on our environment.

Today, between 70 and 80% of grocery products we buy include GM ingredients, deemed safe by the USDA, the FDA, the American Medical Association, and other major scientific organizations.

Consumers already have a choice in the marketplace. If they choose, consumers can buy products labeled "certified organic" or "non-GMO".

Nobody's Arguing Against Good Food Labeling in Massachusetts,
BUT HB 3996 GOES TOO FAR, AND COSTS TOO MUCH.

Employee Ordinance Ruling Upheld

Mayor Disappointed, Unsure If City Will Appeal

By SCOTT JACKSON

A federal appeals court upheld a lower court's ruling saying Quincy cannot require contractors bidding on public construction projects to have an apprentice training program in place. But the city notched a partial victory, with the appeals court reversing the award of attorneys' fees to the plaintiffs, remanding that decision back to a lower court.

At issue is Quincy's Responsible Employer Ordinance. Approved by the City Council in 2010, it required contractors to have an apprenticeship program in place, required at least a third of workers hired to be Quincy residents, and contained other provisions related to employee benefits.

In 2012, Quincy solicited bids for the now-built Central Middle School, requiring bidders to comply with the Responsible Employer Ordinance. The Merit Construction Alliance, an association of builders, sued the city to block enforcement of the ordinance, citing an

New Porous Paving Material For Tree Wells

Water Permeable Material Protects Roots, Lowers Maintenance Costs

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A water permeable material called Flexible Porous Paving recently placed around tree planting beds on Adams Street will not only protect tree roots but will also result in maintenance savings according to Senior Civil Engineer for the City of Quincy Joseph Guarino.

The state funded work, which began July 1 and ended July 7, cost $30,000 and may extend to other parts of Quincy in the future. "We will be monitoring this new process on Adams Street for now," said Guarino."It is our hope that most of our main streets will see this same application."

Of the 48 trees planted beginning at the intersection of Adams and Common Street and ending at the Milton town line, 42 were fitted with Flexible Porous Paving.

Encouraged by Commissioner of Public Works Daniel Raymondi who saw a similar material being used around tree planting beds in a park in Florida, Guarino contacted the park's maintenance manager. He learned the material was called Flexi-Pave and that it was made from shredded car tires and a urethane bonding agent.

With this knowledge, Guarino concluded that Flexi-Pave was similar to the rubberized material used to construct running tracks and began contacting companies specializing in track installation. Only AASG Sport Surfacing of Canton

DeCristofaro, Jr. Ready For New Assignment

'My Family Is All Educators So I Felt A Calling,' Says Central School Principal

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Richard DeCristofaro, Jr., who has worked for Quincy Public Schools since 2004 and was until recently the assistant principal of Central Middle School, says he's ready to continue his family's legacy by tackling his newest responsibility this fall: being the principal of Central Middle School.

"My family is all educators so I felt a calling," said DeCrisofaro, Jr. Despite attending Weymouth and Hanover public schools as a child, he says he feels a strong connection with Quincy and its schools because of his family's presence in the city. His father is Supt. of Quincy Public Schools Richard DeCristofaro and his mother, Deborah DeCristofaro, was a guidance counselor and then head of the guidance department at Quincy High School. His grandfather, Theodore DeCristofaro, served as Ward 2 councillor for 14 years from 1982 to 1995.

DeCristofaro, Jr. was inspired to work with children during his senior year at Hanover High School after he entered a program that was similar to a daycare which catered to the city's teachers.

"That's kind of where I started getting the feeling of what I wanted to do and I ended up getting the childcare award [at graduation]...it was awesome and it was probably the highlight of my day," he said.

He attended Salve Regina University, earning his bachelor's degree in elementary education. He then went on to receive his master's degree in school counseling from Cambridge College. He became a licensed school administrator through a program offered by the South Shore Educational Collaborative in partnership with Eastern Nazarene College.

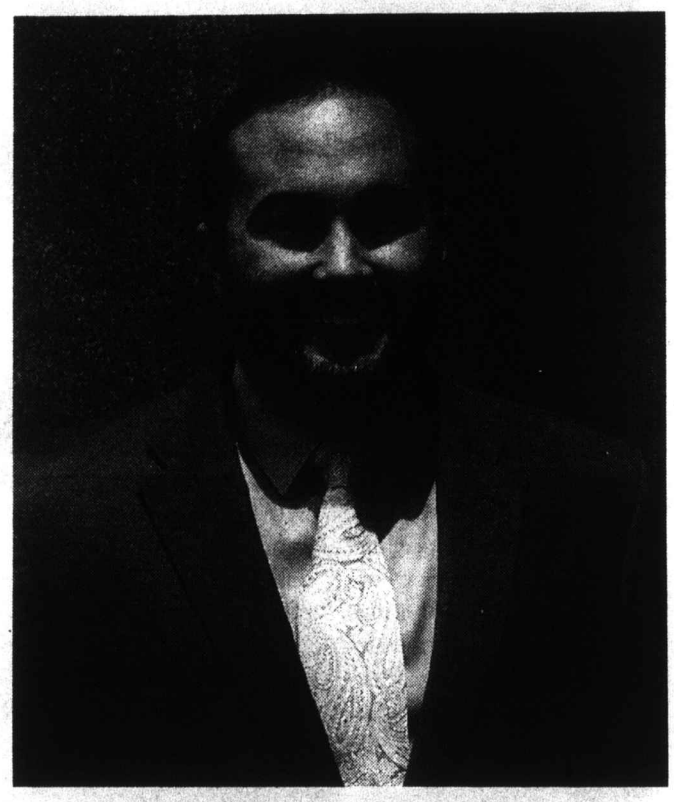
He began working in Quincy in April 2004 as a grade 4-5 teacher at the Montclair School; a position he held until 2006. He then was a guidance counselor at North Quincy and Quincy High School for five years. He said his experience working in the schools' guidance departments helped him develop the skills necessary to take on the role of assistant principal at Central.

"I took my training as a teacher and my training as a guidance counselor and did a lot of that with the assistant principal role," he said. Collaborating with school deans on proper discipline techniques eased him into the more administrative side of things.

"You utilize what you've learned into the job."

As assistant principal, he felt his most notable accomplishment was his decision to change how staff attendance was recorded and shared. When he took on the position in December 2011, staff attendance records were kept in a logbook. If someone were to call in sick, an entry would be made which included who would substitute teach for the day. The secretary would photograph the page and share the image with the principal and assistant principal via text. DeCristofaro, Jr. created an electronic calendar to more accurately keep track of the information which could be easily accessed over the school's computer network.

He also instituted a rotating schedule at Central in which blocks of classes would take place at different times depending on the day of the week so that students could be exposed to learning materials in both the morning and afternoon. This, said DeCristofaro, Jr., removed some of the monotony of attending the same class at the start of each school day, enhancing performance and renewing excitement for learning.



RICK DeCRISTOFARO, JR.

He lowered class sizes for music and art teachers who typically see more students per class period than academic teachers, creating a more intimate teaching and learning environment.

He was in charge of disciplining students and created the class schedule. He organized the administration of the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS), scheduled and held parent-teacher meetings, performed lunch duty, and executed fire drills.

"I was lucky enough to work with Jen Fay-Beers as the principal and she allowed me to take on a lot of things but every middle school assistant principal has different duties," he said. "We shared everything. She let me in to do things that other assistants wouldn't get to do."

As the soon-to-be-principal, he hopes to improve communication with parents and students, fostering an environment of sharing information and ideas. "This year, a computer club started just by asking the media specialist teacher and we had five kids in it within a week," he said. "By reaching out, it's just showing parents that you're being more welcoming."

Recent advances in technology will make exchanging thoughts and initiatives with the school community easier and more efficient he said. "I think there's more avenues to show what's

House Passes Housing Authority Reform Bill

By SCOTT JACKSON

Massachusetts' House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly in favor of a bill that would mandate reforms at local housing authorities statewide.

The bill, which the House approved in a 144-4 vote on July 16, creates and mandates participation in a benchmark program that would allow the state's Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) to set new standards for maintenance and repair. Under the program, local housing authorities would need to meet statewide standards for maintenance and repair of units, budget management, and resident services. The provision requires the housing authorities to provide timely responses to maintenance requests and tenant services, such as job training initiatives and family self-sufficiency programs.

The bill also gives tenants the ability to hold housing authorities accountable for meeting the performance standards. Local housing authorities would be require to draft an annual plan describing its goals to meet performance standards; each annual plan would be available for public review and tenants would be able to raise concerns at an annual public meeting. The legislation establishes a seat for a tenant on each local housing authority's board of directors. Additionally, DHCD will be allowed to conduct anonymous surveys of residents regarding maintenance efficiency and safety.

The bill also mandates an annual, independent audit take place at each local housing authority. The audit must be submitted to DHCD and made available online. The bill further provides extensive training for board members to educate them on contract and conflict of interest law.

In addition, the bill gives DHCD greater authority to determine when housing directors need to be removed from their positions and requires the state agency to develop and administer a centralized application and waitlist for state-aided public housing.

The House bill comes on the heels of an April 30 DHCD report that found numerous problems in state-aided public housing in Quincy. At subsequent public meetings, Quincy Housing Authority tenants cited problems related to long overdue repairs, drug use in housing facilities, and violations of fire safety codes. The Housing Authority's maintenance was placed on leave as a result of those complaints.

House Majority Leader Ron Mariano (D-Quincy) said the legislation would provide much needed reform to the city's Housing Authority and others throughout the Bay State.

"The people of Quincy deserve transparency and better leadership from their

Wollaston Walking Tour Aug. 2

Historic New England invites the public to take part in a Wollaston Walking Tour Saturday, Aug. 2 from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

In 1770, Edward Pierce, a Dorchester carpenter, built a mansion for Col. Josiah Quincy. Originally surrounded by fields and pasture, the estate's boundaries once encompassed several hundred acres and reached from what is now Hancock Street to Quincy Bay. When the house was built, the area around it, now a densely populated neighborhood known as Wollaston, was very rural.

The walking tour illustrates how the area evolved over a 300-year period. Explore Moswetuset Hummock, the seat of the ruling chief Chickatawbut; see Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor through the eyes of Col. Josiah Quincy and General George Washington; and witness the development of an early 20th-century middle class neighborhood that reflects a range of architectural styles. Tour Historic New England's 1770 Josiah Quincy House following the walking tour.

The tour departs from the Moswetuset Hummock parking area, East Squantum Street, near junction with Quincy Shore Drive.

The tour is $5 for Quincy residents and Historic New England members, $10 for nonmembers. Registration is recommended. For more information or to register, call 617-994-5930 or visit HistoricNewEngland.org.

THE VERDANT GEMSTONE

The earliest record we have of the mining and gem production of peridot, August's birthstone, comes from St. John's Island in the Red Sea, in approximately 70 A.D. Because this area is so close to Egypt, many now believe that these yellow-green gemstones were at least among some of the "emeralds" worn by Cleopatra. Later, beautiful, fine-quality deposits of this gem variety of olivine were mined in Myanmar (formerly Burma). At this time, Arizona is the biggest world supplier of peridot, producing bright green, yellow-green, to olive-green faceted peridot that is highly prized. Vivid green peridot, with just a slight hint of gold, is the ideal gemstone to go with a light summer wardrobe.

It is thought that peridot has magical powers and healing properties thought to protect the wearer against nightmares and to bring power, influence, and a wonderful year. Because peridot is a gemstone that forms deep inside the Earth and brought to the surface by volcanoes, in Hawaii, the peridot symbolizes the tears of Pele, goddess of fire and volcanoes. 'Christmas In July' Sparks Holiday Spirit

You've heard the expression "thinking outside the box."

How about "thinking outside the calendar."

That's exactly what happened last Thursday as a "Christmas in July" fundraiser was held for the Quincy Salvation Army.

For eight hours July 17 outside The Quincy Sun office in Quincy Center, members of the Salvation Army's Advisory Board rang the bell for a traditional red kettle. The kettles are a mainstay during the weeks leading up to Christmas but quite rare the rest of the year.

This summer-time kettle underscored the importance of helping those less fortunate during the summer months and throughout the year.

"Need has no season," said Capt. Timothy Ross, Quincy Corps Officer for the Salvation Army. "We will continue to find ways to support those who are looking for a helping hand throughout the year."

You might think a Salvation Army red kettle on a sidewalk under a bright summer sun would not generate much reaction - let alone donations - from the public.

Think again.

Last week's kettle raised nearly $1,100 for The Salvation Army. And sparked a spirit of giving that is traditionally seen during the fall and winter.

Only this day was clearly summer.

The bell ringers wore sun dresses, shorts and short sleeve shirts, a stark contrast to winter standouts when volunteers are wrapped up in so much clothing on very frigid days that they're barely recognizable.

Two very young girls - one wearing shorts and the other a summer dress - grabbed a bell and rung it making a very cute "Christmas In July" Christmas card.

One person who contributed to the kettle pulled up in a car at the curb, rolled down the passenger side window and motioned that she had a donation to make while remaining in the vehicle. A volunteer was more than happy to oblige. Try that with a snowbank in the way.

Later in the day, a friendly worker from a local restaurant brought out a couple of cold cups of ice water to help cool down the ringers as the shaded sidewalk waned in the afternoon sunshine.

And of course there was an appearance by Santa Claus. But this was a summer Santa dressed in a red t-shirt and red lounging pants. He swapped out a bag of toys for a ukulele and strummed along to some Christmas music playing on a portable iPod speaker set on the sidewalk. The song "Mele Kalikimaka" was particularly appropriate.

It may sound a little corny but I think there were folks who clearly got into the Christmas spirit - even though we just celebrated Independence Day.

Many passersby smiled as they dropped dollar bills and loose change into the red kettle.

More than one commented that they loved the idea of Christmas in July. And quite a few thanked the Salvation Army for all the good they do in the community.

That feeling is mutual.

"The Salvation Army wishes to thank everyone who contributed to the 'Christmas in July' kettle outside the Quincy Sun's office July 17. It was a beautiful day to help raise funds for The Salvation Army and we are grateful for all those who stopped by and dropped some money into the kettle," Capt. Ross said.

"The 'Christmas in July' kettle is a unique opportunity to remind people that the bell for help rings all year long. The Red Kettle is a signature item during Christmastime and 'Christmas in July' was a great opportunity to be able to bring out the red kettle for the day to help raise funds for others."

Capt. Ross said this new venture raised important funds that will go a long way in helping those in the local community who find themselves in need during the summer season.

"These funds are necessary to be able to provide emergency assistance throughout the summer months," Capt. Ross said. "This includes camperships to The Salvation Army's Camp Wonderland, providing food through the food pantry, rental assistance, utility assistance and more."

There's hope this new "Christmas in July" kettle will create a new tradition for the Quincy Salvation Army. A few props may be added to next year's the stand out, including a sign and a Christmas tree (inflatable Christmas palm tree anyone?)

One snapshot from the kettle standout really summed up the day and its significance.

A man walked slowly up to the kettle, stopped and dug deep into his pockets to find some loose change. He pulled out a few coins and dropped them in and said "sorry, that's all I have."

Those who stood by the kettle - almost in unison - responded, "Thank you so much. Every little bit helps."

The man smiled and before walking away, said in a low voice, "The Salvation Army was there I needed them. I wanted to do something for them."

That's what the kettle is all about.

Who says Christmas comes just once a year?

Want to help the Salvation Army this holiday season?

The Quincy Corps is looking for people who are willing to ring the bell during the upcoming season. Feel free to lend a helping hand by contacting Timothy Ross to arrange a time that is convenience for you. He can be reached by calling 617-472-2345.

IT MAY HAVE been the middle of summer but there was plenty of holiday spirit outside The Quincy Sun office July 17 as a Red Kettle "Christmas in July" fundraiser was held to benefit the Quincy Salvation Army. From left are Don Uvanitte, chairman of the Salvation Army Advisory Board; Capt. Nicole Ross, Quincy Corps, Santa and his ukulele and Capt. Timothy Ross, Quincy Corp. The one-day event raised nearly $1,100 to help the Salvation Army serve the less fortunate in the local community.

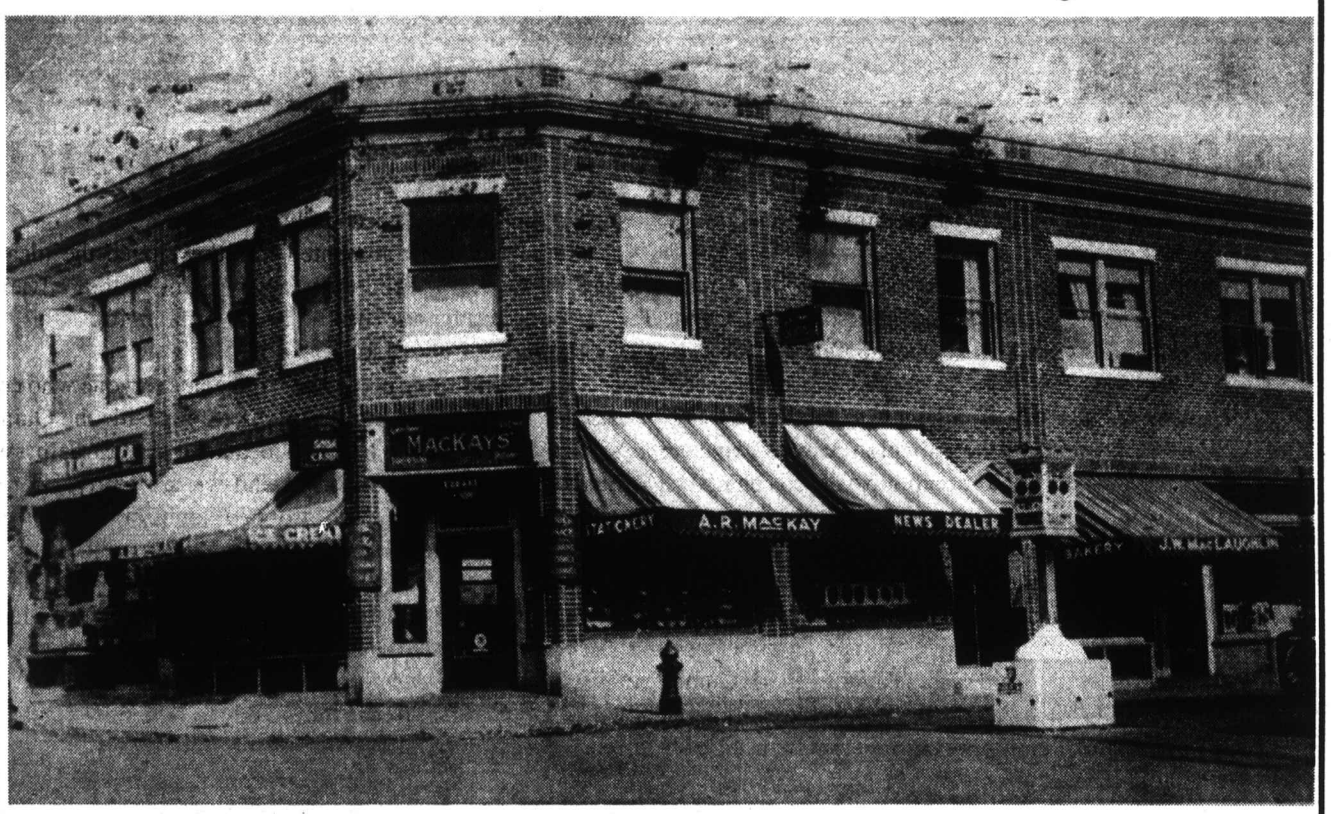
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1928 postcard showing what was known then as the Fratus Building on the corner of Billings Road and Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs. The Fratus family, who had an automobile business next door on Hancock Street where they sold Paiges and later Pontiacs, owned it. Built originally as a one-story building this picture was taken shortly after the second floor was added. On the upper corner was the office of the well-known dentist Dr. Walter Phipps. On the ground level Albion R. MacKay, who had been a clerk at the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company, opened this store in 1916 selling newspapers and stationery. He also published and sold many of the postcards that have appeared in this column over the years. In 1937, he converted the store into the Norfolk Pharmacy, but, after becoming ill, he sold out in 1940 and it then became known as the Naborhood Pharmacy. Today, this corner street-level store has been completely remodeled inside and out and is home to the YoCha frozen yogurt and smoothie shop. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

8-Ward Plan On Election Ballot

Sept. 6, Nov. 6, and Dec. 4 should be dates for Quincy voters to remember this year.

The City Council was expected to unanimously approve a plan to hold a referendum vote on the 8 Ward Redistricting plan Sept. 6. The primary election would then be held Nov. 6 and the final election Dec. 4.

The proposed action was being taken in an effort with the "one man, one vote" recent court decision.

As presently constituted, the original boundaries were set in 1889 when Quincy became a city. Under the present configuration Wards 1, 5 and 6 are larger than Wards 2, 3 and 4.

The eight-ward plan was devised to comply with the court decision. (Editor's note: The eight-ward plan was defeated and the ward lines for the six wards were redrawn to comply with the court's decision.)

Reconsider 5th Grade Students At City Middle Schools

Now is the time to discuss if keeping the grade 5-8 configuration for the new Sterling Middle School is truly in the best interest for the children of Quincy.

The Massachusetts School Building Authority is awaiting the city's approval or to resubmit a new configuration.

In 2001 Grade 5 moved to Point Webster Middle School. That means seven graduating 8th grade classes have experienced this configuration. In 2009 Grade 5 was moved to Sterling Middle School. Has the City attempted to collect any quantitative unbiased data from these families?

Superintendent DeCristofaro, Mayor Koch and the School Committee members have failed to perform due diligence to assess whether or not this has been working for families and students. Before we make the decision to continue placing ten year olds into a middle school setting we should look at the whole picture.

Of note, is the State standing these two Middle schools have trended toward since the inclusion of fifth grade in middle school. Per the MA Dept of Education, Point Webster went from 29.8% in 2003 to 19.2% in 2013. Sterling went from 45% in 2003 to 15.9% in 2013.

While the other standard 6-8 Middle Schools in the City have remained stable or improved their standings. The numbers clearly show a possible correlation proves causation impact.

Please go back to the table Dr DeCristofaro, Mayor Koch and school committee members.

Let's look at other possibilities to keep our City's fifth graders in an elementary model. Could citywide Special Education programs move to less crowded schools? Or have a citywide grade K-1 at the now vacant St. Mary's school? Point Webster could house grade 4-5 on an elementary level and the new Sterling can be a 6-8 Middle for both districts.

Please let's work together and find another solution.

WHAT'S COOKING

Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Tomato Sauce With Beef, Hamburg

By MARIE

If you are tired of making meatballs when you are cooking tomato sauce, you won't miss them with today's recipe.

It's made with beef and ground meats and it has such a wonderful flavor – and the meat is so tender. It's a recipe that my brother Phil uses frequently.

The amount of ingredients depends on how much sauce you need.

TOMATO SAUCE WITH BEEF

1-2 pounds stew beef (or cut up pieces of beef)

1-2 pounds ground beef (or any other preferred meat)

2 cloves garlic (chopped)

1 small onion (cut)

Basil, parsley, oregano (as much as desired)

salt and pepper to taste

3 tablespoons olive oil

2-3 cans large crushed tomatoes

In the hot oil sauté the garlic onion, then add the beef and the ground beef and cook for a few minutes. Add the tomatoes and cook for 1 1/2 to 2 hours and by that time, the meat is so tender and the sauce has a wonderful texture.

Any pasta tastes great with this sauce – a family favorite is large shells where the ground beef blends in so well-or large rigatoni.

Pad Thai

By SUZIE

Who needs take-out when you can make some fresh healthy Pad Thai at home?

8 oz pad thai rice noodles, cooked according to package directions, immediately rinsed with cold water and cooled

2 tablespoons virgin coconut oil

1 1/2 cups COOKED chicken, shrimp or any other COOKED protein of choice

4 cups broccoli florettes and thinly sliced stems

4 cloves garlic, minced

2 cups scallion, chopped into 1 inch pieces

1 cup lightly packed cilantro, chopped

4 oz mung bean sprouts (optional)

For the sauce:

2 tablespoons tomato paste

5 tablespoons tamari (wheat free soy sauce)

6 tablespoons coconut sap crystals (healthy sweetener) or brown sugar

1/4 cup fresh lime juice

2 tablespoons Sriracha

2 tablespoons mellow white miso

1/4 cup water

To serve:

3/4 cup chopped roasted cashews

Extra lime wedges

In the meantime, mix together all of the ingredients for the sauce and set aside.

Cook the broccoli in oil with a little salt. Cover the pan in between stirring, to get it to cook faster. It should take about 5 minutes, and be lightly charred in some places. Transfer to the same plate as the chicken

Now we'll cook the sauce. Lower heat to medium. Cook the garlic in the remaining oil very briefly, about 15 seconds. Add the scallion and cilantro and toss just to get it wilted. Now pour in about half the sauce and get it heated through.

Add the noodles and toss to coat. Then add back the chicken and broccoli, the mung beans and the remaining sauce, and toss to coat.

Serve immediately, topped with cashews and lime wedges, plus extra cilantro if desired.

Interfaith Social Services Seeks Backpack Donations

Interfaith Social Services in Quincy is trying to make sure that the children who come to their food pantry are prepared for the start of school this September.

They hope to distribute hundreds of backpacks full of school supplies to school age children throughout the month of August.

"Imagine going to school and trying to learn while wondering where your next meal will come from;" said Rick Doane executive director of Interfaith Social Services. "Now imagine that stress compounded by a lack of supplies to do your school work. This is a reality faced by far too many children in our state."

Interfaith Social Services is a multiservice center for South Shore families in need. In addition to a counseling center, homelessness prevention program and other emergency assistance programs they operate one of the largest food pantries in Greater Boston.

"Our goal is to collect 500 backpacks full of school supplies," said Doane. "When a family is struggling to put food on their table school supplies can start to seem like a luxury. This initiative is a way that we can make sure that doesn't happen. We are about 250 backpacks short of our goal. We hope that the community will rally to help these local families in need of help."

Interfaith is asking for pre-packed backpacks to be dropped off at their office, rather than donations of individual supplies. Two types of backpacks are needed, one for grades K-5 and another for grades 6-12. All backpacks should include: loose leaf paper, spiral notebooks, 2 pocket folders, #2 pencils and an eraser. For the K-5 backpacks they suggest including: washable markers and or crayons, glue sticks and safety scissors. For the grade 6-12 backpacks they recommend: a calculator, binder, index cards, pens, etc. Each bag should be labeled by grade level to expedite the distribution process.

Donations can be dropped off at Interfaith' office - 105 Adams St. in Quincy: Monday – Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and until 7 p.m. on Tuesdays.

For more information go to the website www.InterfaithSocialServices.org.

DeCristofaro, Jr. Ready For New Principal Assignment

going on. Now you have the website, you have [information portal] ASPEN, you have channel 22, you have the instant alert. I think there are more ways of getting parents the information and that's why they're getting more involved. More information is more welcoming and inviting them in to be involved."

In creating an open dialogue, he hopes parents will feel comfortable expressing any concerns they have regarding their children's experiences at school. "What do you think is going on or what do you want to know or what are you seeing out there because in the school we see it how we see it," he said. "Let's hear what they have to say."

When he started working for Quincy's schools, communication took place over e-mail or by simply picking up the telephone, however mass texting has made getting information to parents more timely and less intrusive.

Not only will DeCristofaro, Jr. be taking on new responsibilities as a school principal, he'll also be adjusting to life with his newborn fraternal twin boys Richard and Theodore, named after his father and grandfather, respectively. "The excitement that I have for my kids and the excitement that I have for the job makes it so that I'll balance it," he said, adding that he frequently works Saturdays and Sundays so that he isn't overwhelmed by his workload during the week.

His time at the Quincy Evening School as a counselor will have to come to an end following five years of providing one-on-one support to students who attend classes at night due to hardships at home. "In the end, it's a balance and for anybody, not just me as the principal, but for anyone who has a job they have to find a balance," he said. "Cutting back is going to help me there."

He'll always remember how rewarding working for the evening school was. "That type of kid, I love," he said. "You have the kids that school is just so easy for them and then you have the kids that struggle. The kids that struggle are the kids that need that help and they need you there."

Throughout his career people have always made comments about his father being the superintendent said DeCristofaro, Jr., going so far recently as to imply that he was chosen to be Central's new principal due to nepotism. "We have the same name and it's kind of hard to hide but it's not sneaking in," he said. "You have to be licensed and there was no hiding anything."

DeCristofaro, Jr. was chosen to head Central Middle School on June 27 despite concerns raised by School Committee Member Anne Mahoney at a school committee meeting held in June that the hiring would create the image of impropriety. His father, who typically oversees the hiring of school principals, recused himself from the process and instead left the decision to a committee led by Deputy Supt. Kevin Mulvey and former Supt. of Braintree Public Schools Dr. Peter Kurzberg.

As assistant principal, DeCristofaro, Jr. earned $97,620 during the 2013-14 school season. As principal his salary will increase to $108,769.

"I just think people are going to have their opinions and if you look back as to why I'm in Quincy, my grandfather was a ward 2 city councillor who dedicated so much time, so much energy, so much of his life to helping the city," he said. "My father grew up in Quincy and he had every job all the way up through the system and now he's superintendent for the City of Quincy. My mother started as a teacher—that's where they ended up meeting—and she gave her career to the city so why wouldn't someone like myself want to be a part of the City of Quincy?"

In the end, he said he always does his job "110 percent" and he began working for Quincy Public Schools for one reason.

"It's because you care about the kids and the students."

QUINCY BICYCLISTS gathered on Sunday at Union Congregational Church, Rawson Road, Wollaston for a blessing of their bicycles by Pastor Jack Swanson and Pastor Nathan Pipho (Good Shepherd Lutheran Church). 'Bonnie And Clyde' Lecture Monday At Crane Library

Local educator, historian, and author Christopher Daley will lecture on Bonnie and Clyde Monday, July 28 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The lecture, which is part travelogue and part history, will chronicle the story of Bonnie and Clyde separating the reality from the myth. For years the public has been fascinated with the story of this Dustbowl Romeo and Juliet. However, much of what we know is mainly from the 1967 movie "Bonnie and Clyde" and more recently a highly fictionalized made for T.V. movie shown on A&E & the History Channel.

Much myth, conjecture and outright lies have grown up about the two Texas bandits but when one delves into the true story of the two lovers a much more interesting and human story emerges.

The one hour lecture will tell that story through the use of period photographs and movies plus modern photographs and video Daley personally shot. He has recently traveled through the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri on the "Trail of Bonnie and Clyde" photographing and making video of the sites of their homes, murders, robberies, shootouts and hideouts.

'BONNIE & CLYDE' will be the subject of a lecture by educator, historian and author Christopher Daley Monday, July 28 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

In the course of his research, Daley met characters like L.J. "Boots" Hinton, the son of lawman Ted Hinton - a member of the posse that took down Bonnie & Clyde in 1934 and the mayor of dusty Kemp Texas who related a fascinating story of Bonnie's incarceration at the Kemp Calaboose. He drove over 4,000 miles in search of the real Bonnie and Clyde and is bringing the fascinating story to Quincy for this special engagement.

The lecture is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Theodore Walter Walsh graduated magna cum laude with a Bachelor of Arts degree in mass communication. Walsh was also named to the Dean's List for the spring semester.

Nolan OBrien Second Term UMass Boston Student Trustee

Quincy resident Nolan O'Brien, a junior at the University of Massachusetts Boston, was recently sworn in for his second term as the university's student trustee.

O'Brien, 20, a North Quincy High School graduate, won re-election in April in a five-way race to represent UMass Boston students on the UMass Board of Trustees, which issues the policies that govern the university system.

"Going into my second term, I hope to increase student access and awareness to avenues of opportunity and success and allow all students to have a greater say in their college experience," O'Brien said. "It is important for students at public institutions, like UMass Boston, to realize they have a voice, especially when it comes to access and affordability."

The political science major has accomplished a lot in his first year as a student trustee. O'Brien worked closely with UMass Trustee Richard Campbell and student trustees from each campus to promote the Krystle Campbell Scholarship Fund and the Run For Krystle Marathon Team, helping to raise more than $100,000 for the scholarship and inspire a sense of unity at UMass after last year's tragic Boston Marathon bombings.

O'Brien also helped establish the Board of Trustees' Forum on Student Life, increasing student access to the board, as well as the board's awareness about important student life issues.

Along with his fellow trustees, he lobbied and voted for increased state funding for the UMass system, resulting in a tuition and fee freeze for the second consecutive year, which will save students hundreds of dollars. O'Brien also serves as a Beacon Ambassador tour guide at UMass Boston. He received a 2014 Beacon Undergraduate Student Leadership Award in May.

Each UMass campus elects a student trustee to sit on the Board of Trustees. O'Brien will serve as UMass Boston's trustee for the 2014-2015 academic year.

House Passes Housing Authority Reform Bill

housing officials and the Quincy Housing Authority must be held responsible for the actions and services it provides," Mariano said in a statement.

"This bill will enact important changes to improve the structure and efficiency of the Quincy Housing Authority and other local housing authorities across the states. Most importantly, it will give Quincy housing residents greater opportunities to voice their concerns through public forums, board representation an anonymous surveys – and really empower them to keep housing leadership accountable.

"I believe these reforms will help to ensure the well-being and safety of our citizens in the future."

Rep. Tackey Chan (D-Quincy) sponsored an amendment that will allow the anonymous surveys to be sent in different languages to accommodate tenants whose native language isn't English. He said the bill would help improve communications between the Quincy Housing Authority and its tenants.

"This legislation is very important to ensure better communication between the tenants and the Housing Authority and provide greater transparency and accountability," Chan said in a statement.

October 2011 U.S. District Court ruling that found a similar ordinance in Fall River was preempted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA).

Before the lawsuit was filed, the city agreed to suspend enforcement of the ordinance on the Central project.

During litigation between Quincy and the Merit Alliance, the city dropped its defense of several portions of the ordinance, conceding they were preempted by ERISA. The city, however, fought for the residency requirements and apprenticeship program before later conceding the residency requirement was unconstitutional.

In 2013 U.S. District Court Judge Rya Zobel, who presided over the Fall River case, issued a summary judgment ruling against the city. Later the same year, she ordered Quincy to pay the plaintiffs $81,000 in legal fees.

Quincy appealed both those rulings to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First District. In a July 16 ruling, a three-judge panel upheld Zobel's summary judgment.

During the appeal, the city argued the Merit Alliance lacked standing to sue the city to block enforcement of the Responsible Employer Ordinance. The court, however, ruled the group did have standing because it represents members who do not have apprenticeship programs and would be barred from bidding on public projects in Quincy.

The city's appeal identified several errors in Zobel's ruling. But the appeals court, in affirming Zobel's decision ruled Quincy's Responsible Employer Ordinance was preempted by ERISA.

"ERISA specifically includes apprentice training programs in its definition of employee welfare benefit plans. A state-law mandate regarding the structure or administration of such plans falls within the ambit of ERISA's preemption provision," Judge Bruce Marshall Selya wrote in the court's 23-page ruling.

"The Ordinance comprises such a mandate because it dictates the establishment of an employee benefit structure and sets the standards governing that structure. Even though a non-ERISA option might be available for compliance with the Ordinance, the availability of such an option does not save the Ordinance: its mandate still has the effect of destroying the benefit of uniform administration that is among ERISA's principal goals.

"That ends this aspect of the matter. We conclude that ERISA preempts the Ordinance and affirm the district court's grant of summary judgment."

On the issue of attorney's fees, Zobel had ordered the city to pay $81,000 to the Merit Alliance. That amount covers the amount the group spent to argue against both the apprenticeship program and the residency requirments.

The city, in its appeal, conceded $20,725 of that amount corresponded to the amount spent in striking down the residency requirement and was properly awarded to the plaintiffs, but disputed the remaining $60,000 awarded.

The city argued in the appeal that it does not need to reimburse the plaintiff for legal fees associated with challenging the apprenticeship program, arguing in part that no plaintiff qualified as a participant, beneficiary, or fiduciary of an ERISA plan under the law's fee-shifting scheduling. The appeals court sided with Quincy on that point.

The plaintiffs, however, argued they are due the full $81,000, citing the Fees Act. The appeals court did not rule on that, however, and remanded it back to the district court because Zobel based her award on ERISA's fee-shifting schedule and not the Fees Act.

On Tuesday, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said the city has yet to determine if it will appeal the case further. Mayor Thomas Koch, Walker noted, was disappointed with the ruling but felt the ordinance was worth defending in court.

"The mayor takes very seriously the ability to have qualified workers on city projects. He's felt from day one the Responsible Employer Ordinance allowed the city to do that," Walker said. "He is certainly disappointed in the ruling but it was without question worth the effort.

"And keep in mind we did get a partial victory because of the ruling on the lawyers' fees."

IN SYNC CENTER of the Arts dancers perform at one of seven recitals held recently at Milton High School. The year's theme was "Dancing Through the Decades."

In Sync 'Dances Through The Decades'

Arts Center Holds 19th Annual Recitals At Milton High School

The red carpet was literally rolled out for the In Sync Dancers during their recital weekend. Milton High School was a frenzy of glitter, bobby pins, and tights as In Sync Center of the Arts held its 19th annual recitals.

A total of seven recitals were held over the weekend, with five "mini" recitals and two "full" recitals. The "mini" shows featured dancers in preschool through 2nd grade. The "full" recitals showcased dancers in grades 3-12. This year's theme was "Dancing Through the Decades!" and dancers showcased the dances and music of each decade from the 1920's to the millennium.

On Sunday the "full" recitals featured dancers grade 3 and older in styles including ballet, tap, jazz, hip hop and contemporary. As the show began, In Sync owner, Teri Mangiaratti, welcomed the sold out crowd as usual...and then she let them in on a secret...she had planned a flash mob! And the biggest surprise of all was that the audience themselves would be dancing. The children in the show had no idea at all that this would happen.

IN SYNC CENTER of the Arts staff.

The house lights went up and Teri instructed the crowd to put aside their belongings and get up out of their seats. With the help of the In Sync Dance Company, the audience learned a few phrases of choreography and she explained exactly what would happen. The excitement grew and everyone was on board with being a part of a memorable performance!

The In Sync Dance Staff kicked off the annual finale routine, the Boys Hip Hop classes joined in, the Dance Company added their skills, the grades 9 and up dancers added to the routine, then the grades 7&8 dancers danced on to the stage, the grades 5&6 dancers took their place in the pack and the grades 3&4 dancers finished off the group! Just as the tune of "Happy" filled the auditorium and every last dancer was performing with joy...it happened...the house lights came up, the audience rose to their feet and joined in the finale routine! The dancers had NO idea what was happening, they were stunned.

"The song ended, the crowd erupted with cheers and screams and we all knew something special happened. Over 900 people danced together for that short moment in time and it was amazing! I saw grandparents smiling from ear to ear and sharing in the joy! The kids were totally shocked and amazed. There was such a feeling of complete happiness. It was different – we weren't dancing for the audience – we were dancing with the audience! This year's recital experience was most definitely the very best we have ever had, Teri said.

While this year's recital may be over, aspiring dancers, artists, Jedis, and musicians can all still hone their craft over the summer at In Sync with week-long summer programs or drop in evening classes. In Sync Center of the Arts is kicking off season this fall and continuing to offer amazing programs in dance, music and art.

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE NATURAL LOOK OF PORCELAIN

Whether it is used to create veneers, crowns, or fixed bridges, porcelain is the material of choice because it so closely matches the appearance, durability, and longevity of tooth enamel. Porcelain mimics the light-reflecting qualities of natural teeth better than opaque resins. All-porcelain dental crowns also generally provide a better natural color match than any other material, making them a good choice for veneers and replacing front teeth. On the other hand, when it comes to crowns and fixed bridges, porcelain-fused-to-metal dental crowns provide the needed added strength that an underlying metal structure can provide. Porcelain crowns not only look and feel like natural teeth, they also require the same degree of care.

Talk with us about the latest developments and technologies available to enhance your smile. Explain the result that you are trying to achieve. We will examine your teeth to make sure veneers are appropriate for you and discuss what the procedure will involve and some of its limitations. Our recommendations are always in the best interest of our patients. We feel a deep responsibility and commitment to provide you the very best care with state-of-the-art technology. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment for high quality dental care. Let us help you keep your teeth for a lifetime. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Porcelain matches natural enamel's translucency, enabling light to pass through it and bounce off the inner (more opaque) layer.

Medical Marijuana Dispensary On Track To Open Early 2015

By SCOTT JACKSON

The organization planning to open a medical marijuana dispensary in West Quincy anticipates opening during the first three months of 2015.

Provincetown-based Ermont, Inc., was one of 11 applicants the state's Department of Public Health cleared on June 27 to move into the next round of permitting. Donna Rheaume, a spokeswoman for Ermont, said the company was happy to advance into the next stage of permitting.

"We were delighted to be selected by the department to move forward," she told The Sun recently.

Ermont has proposed opening a dispensary at 216 Ricciuti Drive in a building previously rented to Clifford's Flowers, Smith & Nephew, and KPR, Inc. Rheaume said Ermont is in the process of planning the engineering to convert the building into a dispensary. Systems inside the building – such as electrical, plumbing, and HVAC – are also being inspected.

Before Ermont can open in Quincy, it needs permission from the city's Zoning Board of Appeals and Planning Board. An application to the ZBA could be submitted within a month's time, according to Rheaume.

"We hope to apply within a month or sooner to the ZBA and open in the first quarter of 2015," she said. "Once we get out permit we can plan our schedule for construction."

In addition to the required permits from the city, Ermont must also reach a host agreement before it can open its doors. Rheaume expects an agreement to be signed this fall.

A non-profit organization, Ermont is solely owned by John "Jack" Hudson, the president and owner of OP3, Inc., a company that provides fundraising consulting and events planning to non-profits. He is also a former vice president of Avon Products, Inc.

According to its application to the state, Ermont expects to have 2,056 customers in its first 12 months of operation, a number that grows to 3,065 in its second year of operation, and 3,725 customers in year three, according to its application to the DPH. The company anticipates revenues of $3.5 million in its first year, a figure that will double to $7 million in year two and increase to $8.4 million in year three.

Ermont plans to both cultivate and sell marijuana on site, keeping up to a 30-day inventory on hand.

In 2012, voters statewide approved a law authorizing the DPH to grant licenses for up 35 dispensaries throughout Massachusetts. The referendum mandates that each county have at least one dispensary and no more than five. Two dispensaries in Norfolk County – Ermont and a dispensary in Brookline – advanced to the inspectional phase.

The City Council passed zoning restrictions last year requiring dispensaries to operate at least 1,500 square feet from a residential zone, school, childcare center, any facility with a liquor license, or another dispensary. The regulations essentially limited possible locations to the Fore River Shipyard and the area where Ermont plans to set up shop.

was willing to step up to the plate and help with mixing what would ultimately be called Flexible Porous Paving. Owner Michael DiNatale met with Guarino and the two created several batches until the perfect mix was found.

The flexible paving is a porous material that easily allows water to penetrate through to a tree's roots yet is durable enough to protect them from damage and erosion. "Tree pits usually need constant attention including weeding and mulching so yes, it will result in savings," said Guarino.

The steel grates used to cover the soil at a tree's base can collect garbage and debris, attracting rodents. Concrete can crack as temperatures drop or as tree roots grow. Unprotected soil surrounding a tree's trunk is subjected to the pressure of constant pedestrian traffic, ultimately compacting the dirt and possibly preventing water from reaching the roots. Using a flexible agent eliminates those risks, preventing problems in the long run and saving on maintenance costs. It is also designed to blend in with the surrounding cement, making it aesthetically pleasing he added.

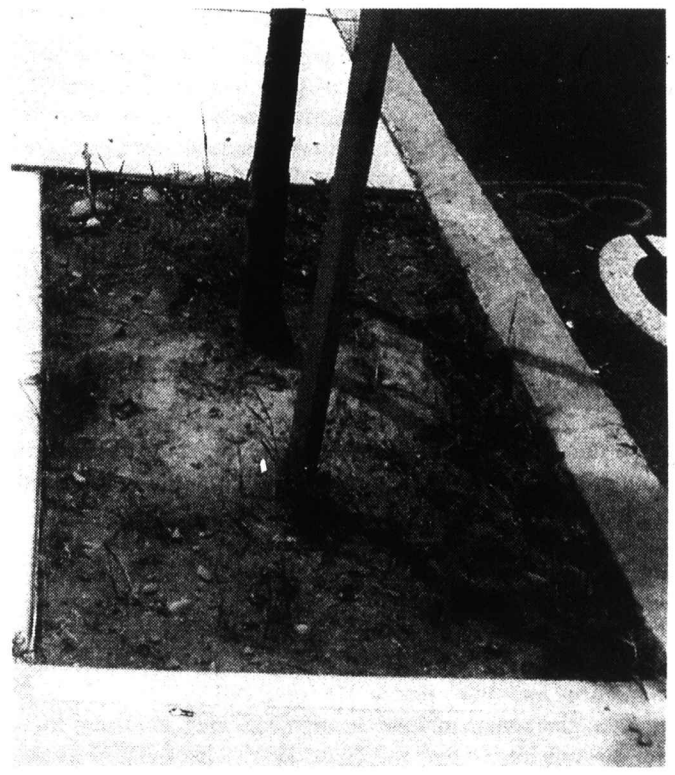

PHOTO SHOWS a tree well on Adams Street - with weeds growing out of it - before the city installed a new water permeable material called Flexible Porous Paving. The new material is designed to protect tree roots and also eliminate weeds and mulching, reducing maintenance costs.

Flexible Porous Paving meets the standards of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and is approved for wheelchair traffic. "Because it's installed level with the sidewalks it allows us additional walking area in terms of sidewalk width to comply with ADA requirements, especially in areas that are narrow," he said.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

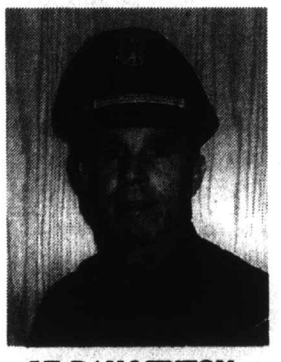
On Wednesday, July 16, 2014, at approximately midnight, Officers Andrew Keenan and Jay Grazioso were dispatched to a West Quincy apartment complex for a domestic violence incident that just occurred.

While en route, Dispatch notified responding Officers that a father and his 21 year old son were involved and the son fled the scene. Upon arrival, the father told the Officers, "My son just beat me up and ran away."

Officer Keenan gave out the description of the son and then listened to the father's account as he scanned the apartment, observing several chairs knocked over as well as many pills spilled onto the floor. After declining medical assistance, the father said that his son told him earlier in the day that he was going to have friends over. The father didn't approve of this on such short notice, but allowed it because his son does not have many friends. Soon after, the friends, a male and a female, arrived and the three started drinking vodka and cranberry juice. The father said that an argument broke out between the three friends which led to his son and the other male fighting each other in the bathroom.

At this point, the male gathered his belongings to leave, so the father apologized on behalf of his son and said that he shouldn't have to leave, which angered his son. He said his son began yelling at him and "He got up in my face as he cornered me in the kitchen." The father said that his son then punched him in the face twice, then picked up a glass milk bottle and threw it, striking him in the face. He said he may have put his arms up to block it from hitting him but was unsure.

Officer Keenan noted that the glass milk bottle shattered on the floor into many pieces. He continued by saying that his son then grabbed an antique ceramic beer mug and threw it at him, striking him in the jaw. He added that his son also threw a beer tap at him but he does not think it struck him. After the assault, according to the father, his son "grabbed a bunch of my pill bottles and began throwing them around, then stepped on the bottles and crushed them as he said - I hope you die." The father said that the medications were for "a bad heart" and were blood thinners and other heart medications. Officer Keenan located two pill bottles shattered on the carpet with about 30 pills scattered around the kitchen/living room area.



LT. DAN MINTON

Before leaving, the son threw a Poland Springs type water jug at the wall, causing a deep dent in the plaster wall. There was redness in the jaw area. While speaking with the father, the son came walking into their second floor apartment from the glass sliding balcony door. When the father saw his son, he said, "That's him, that's my son." When asked how he got into the apartment, the son said he climbed the drain pipe as he always does.

According to the son, he was drinking with two of his friends and "my father was using coke and then began yelling at me for no reason." He said that his father threw a glass milk bottle at him, but he was able to duck and dodge it. While speaking with the son, he yelled over to his male friend and told him to tell the Officer what happened, that "my father is crazy." The male friend said, "Yeah" and then walked away.

Officer Grazioso arrived and spoke with the friends separately. They confirmed that they were on the balcony drinking when the father and son got into a verbal argument inside. They said they did not see any physical contact, adding that they wished to remain uninvolved in "the whole thing."

Based upon the statements of all involved and the nature and degree of the injuries to the father, the son was placed under arrest. He was searched which produced one capped syringe. The father then picked up a fire safe lock box from a dresser in the living room and said, "This is my son's and this is where he usually keeps his shi%." He then opened it and pulled out a spoon with a white residue on it along with a single reddish pill. The pill and spoon were collected and logged into evidence for destruction.

The father was advised of his domestic violence rights and option to get a restraining order, but he declined. The son, a 21 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Assault and Battery w/ Dangerous Weapon to wit glass milk bottle, Assault and Battery w/ Dangerous Weapon to wit ceramic beer mug, Assault and Battery (Domestic) and Malicious Destruction of Personal Property over $250." Nice Work!

CAR BREAKS AND THE REMOTE AS A PERSONAL ALARM: The clear majority of car breaks occur because the doors are unlocked. Make it a habit to hit the lock remote each night before you go to bed to ensure that the doors are locked. Then, take the remote with you and keep it bed-side. If an intruder was to attempt to enter your home, simply hit the car alarm panic button and this would set off the horn on your car, alerting neighbors. The intruder would most likely leave the area too.

Quincy Citizens: Sink Or Swim?

I was recently driving through a section of Wollaston, Princess Eve Drive, when I noticed that, attached to every lamppost were notices with a hand pointing down to a blue line towards the bottom of each pole, which was supposed to be indicating possible flood water levels.

Upon further investigation, I learned they were put out by a group called "Quincy Making Waves." There are a number of concerned citizens throughout the city who do not intend to let this flood insurance die.

With all that's happening in this state and country, I'm sure most politicians, especially Cong. Lynch, are praying that all of you possibly 47,000, who are going to be affected by this, will forget about it until it's too late, and they'll be able to think up the excuse why it's not their fault.

Quincy residents, wake up! The value of your home, if you live in a flood zone or near one, is on the brink of being worth half of what it was a year or so ago. However, your property tax valuation will not go down.

I hear some politicians and others blaming Mayor Koch and his administration for the decisions they made to take on this flood insurance bill; but as one resident, who is smack dab in the middle of a flood zone, I would personally like to thank the Mayor for taking on the problem instead of giving the citizens only lip service, as many other politicians have done.

I'd also like to thank Councillor Margaret Laforest for all her hard work on this flood issue, too. Although I disagree with Margaret on 99 percent of issues, I have to give credit where credit is due.

Councillor Laforest and Mayor Koch came here to Houghs Neck and repaired the flood gates in the marshes. We have had no major problems with the tide gates since. The new sea wall on Edgewater Drive and the new outflow pipe have made a fantastic difference in getting the water out during heavy high tides.

I would also like to thank very much this organization, Quincy Making Waves, for their hard work and dedication, and the many hours they are putting in on behalf of the residents of Quincy.

Please don't forget: we, the citizens of Quincy, cannot let this flood issue die. We must stand and fight.

Contact Quincy Making Waves.

Get involved.

Let's Live The Golden Rule

(A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Dear Mr. Giarratani,

Thank you for taking the time to respond to my letter about angry drivers and what Lynne Truss, the British writer, calls "The utter, bloody rudeness of modern life."

I recall your affectionate letter to The Sun when you departed Quincy to live in East Boston. You and I both chose to make our homes in Quincy. I like to believe that we both share the same hopes that Quincy can be a safe, healthy and civil city in which to live, work, play and raise a family.

My original letter was prompted because I was genuinely frightened one morning when I was suddenly verbally attacked in close proximity by another driver. If you had witnessed the incident, I don't think you would have "chuckled." I believe that as a retired police officer (of the State Mental Health Dept. no less) you would have recognized that the man's explosive rage was disproportionate and unhealthy. Sir, you are a gentleman. If your wife, sister, daughter or granddaughter were to be accosted in like fashion, I do not believe that you would tolerate it for one second.

The irony for me is this. If any of the men who angrily denounced our President had ever approached me politely and calmly in public to comment upon my bumper sticker that so offended them, I would have listened to them. I might have surprised them, too, because I confess that I have my own frustrations and disappointment with the Obama Administration.

What then must we do? The solution is as simple and as difficult as the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as ye would have done unto you."

You have my best wishes for continued good health and fun in your film career. Both my son and daughter were extras in films shot in Quincy. They had a blast too.

Impressions Of Austin

I am down in Austin, Texas the bluest city in the Red Texas but even blue is relative down here. Up in Quincy, I am called a real conservative but folks in Austin make me a moderate. If you go to the supermarket, you have to buy your plastic bags or bring your own. They call this Texas Green.

Austin is the 11th largest city in America. Forty years ago, it was a cow town. Today it is a thriving metropolitan area and growing all the time. Folks live well down here without the crowdedness of Boston or other larger cities to the northeast.

Folks drive better and are and without much stress. Austin has jobs, a great cost of living and house prices are out of this world cheap compared to us up here in Greater Boston.

And did I tell about their snow? At worse about an inch a season.

On my vacation every day is above 90 degrees and with plenty of sun. Dunkin' Donuts are far and few between but Austin has lots and lots of Starbucks.

The big paper down here is the Austin American-Statesman and it is cheaper than either the Globe or Herald. The local weekly here is the Four Points News. Last year they ran my letter and this year they did it again.

When I was young after seeing Texas for the first time at Lackland AFB outside of San Antonio I thought of re-locating but never did. However, I get back to Texas as often as I can. I love the weather and the politics and the people too.

I'll be back soon to a place that knows all four seasons and a place I will always call home.

Community Support Makes 9th Annual O'Connell-Thomson Tourney A Success

I would like to thank everyone in the community who supported the O'Connell-Thomson Basketball Tournament on July 12-13.

This was the ninth annual tournament, which is held in memory of 2002 North Quincy High graduates John O'Connell and Dennis Thomson. The event is still going strong thanks to a combination of help from volunteers; generosity from local businesses, politicians and Quincy residents; and great basketball.

The tournament raised over $4,700 this year to fund scholarships for NQHS seniors. I'd like to extend a thank you to the many sponsors who made this year's tournament a success:

West Elm Variety, Mayor Tom Koch, Mike McFarland, George Burke, P.J. While the scholarships are important, the best part of this event is keeping the memory of these great young men alive. We're already looking forward to the 10th annual tournament next summer.

A Helping Hand Returns 'The Helping Hand'

Oil Painting Restored And Back At Wollaston Branch Library Thanks To Generous Donation

A well-loved painting that depicts a weather-worn fisherman with a young girl in a rowboat has been beautifully restored and returned to its home at the Wollaston Branch Library thanks to a generous donation by longtime Wollaston resident Harold S. Crowley.

Generations of library visitors have enjoyed this oil reproduction of the famous painting by French artist Emile Renouf called "Un Coup de Main" or "The Helping Hand". The original painting dates from 1881 and hung for over one hundred years in Washington, D.C.'s Corcoran gallery, captivating visitors with its charming subject and large size (5 by 7 feet). The painting was widely reproduced in the U.S. and is one of Renouf's most popular works.

In 1935, the heirs of recently deceased Wollaston resident Frank P. Waterhouse donated an exceptionally fine reproduction of the painting, done by A. Connolly in 1903, to the Board of Library Trustees in memory of Waterhouse. After almost 80 years hanging on the eastern wall of the Wollaston library, the painting was dulled and the beautifully ornate frame in disrepair. On the occasion of his retirement as a Library Trustee earlier this year, Crowley said that funding the restoration was "my parting gift to the library that has meant so much to me". As a boy growing up in the neighborhood, Crowley spent countless hours at the Wollaston library, reading and exploring the world through books.

The painting was cleaned and re-varnished, and the gold leaf frame repaired and meticulously cleaned, by craftsmen at the firm of Trefler & Sons in Newton.

The Wollaston Branch Library, located at 41 Beale St., is open Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 5 p.m. and Wednesday from 1 to 9 p.m.

The Art Spot Holds Grand Opening

A ribbon cutting ceremony was recently held to mark the grand opening of The Art Spot at 111 Franklin St., Quincy.

Owner Sharon Pierce of Quincy, an artist and busy mother of beautiful twins, is a certified K-12 art teacher with both a BFA and a Master in Art Education with 15 years' experience teaching art in the Boston Public Schools.

Pierce said she opened The Art Spot because she wants to establish a community art studio in Quincy, one that encourages families to get more involved in the arts.

At The Art Spot, basic art skills and a variety of media are used and taught in an open-ended session that allows for individuals to explore their own creativity in a safe, healthy and encouraging environment. The Art Spot can host birthday parties for children and be a positive art experience. Art courses include oil painting, jewelry making, pottery, paper mache, crafts and more! Disabled Veterans Fishing Trip A Patriotic Tradition

200 Enjoy 58th Annual Harvey's Salt Water Club Outing

Hard-working Quincy fishermen, buoyed by more than 100 volunteers, took to the sea last week with nearly 200 disabled veterans in one of the great patriotic traditions here in the City of Presidents.

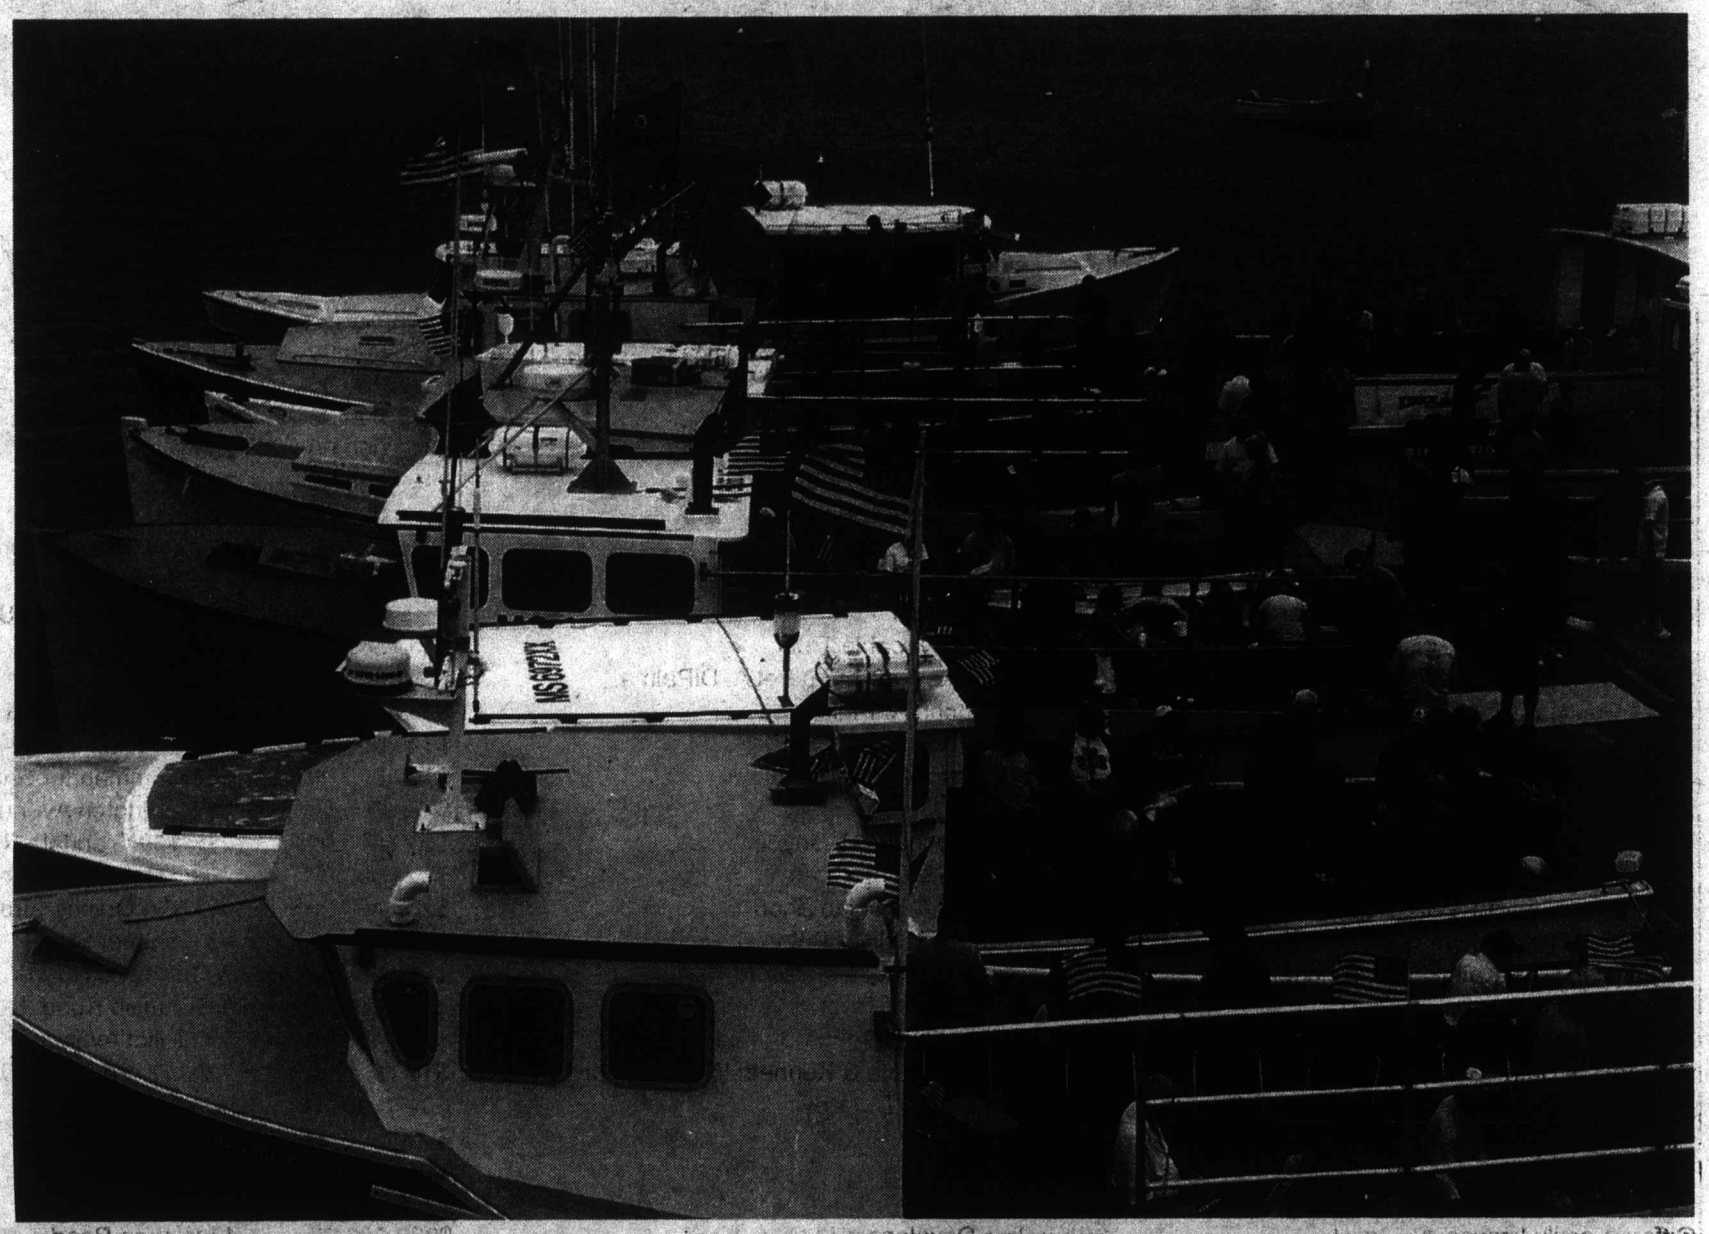
The 58th annual Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club's disabled veterans fishing trip departed from Quincy Yacht Club in Hough's Neck with a crew of local lobstermen and veterans, many in wheelchairs, who were bused in from hospitals throughout Greater Boston.

"For some of these veterans, it's the only time all year they get to leave the hospital," said Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club spokesman and former Quincy city councillor Mike Cheney.

The veterans represented several generations of American heroes, serving in every American conflict from World War II through Iraq and Afghanistan. They boarded nearly 20 boats captained largely by Hough's Neck lobstermen, as well as others from surrounding communities.

American, POW-MIA and U.S. Marine Corps flags flew high and proud above the boats and "Anchor's Aweigh" blared from loudspeakers as the flotilla departed the dock for a day of flounder fishing around the Boston Harbor Islands.

"There's nothing you can do or say that's going to repay what they've done for us, what they sacrificed for us," said long-time volunteer Peggy O. Simone, as she hung American flags from the deck of Hough's Neck lobster boat Phoenix. The craft each year takes out of World War II veterans from the 8th Air Force.



A BUSY SCENE on the docks at the Quincy Yacht Club as some of the 200 disabled vets load up for a day of flounder fishing.

The fish were biting on this day, despite high humidity and threat of storms. Almost every boat returned with flounder.

"It was a great day, it was really nice," said veteran Michael Tango, a resident at the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea. "I've been doing this for five years. It's a wonderful treat for all of us."

Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club is celebrating its 60th anniversary this year. The disabled veterans fishing trip began two years later and is the largest tribute of its kind anywhere in America.

"Every day is Veterans' Day in this community," boasted Hough's Neck lobsterman Scott Berry, an annual volunteer.

A FISHERMAN hauls in a flounder as World War II veteran and longtime Quincy Sun photographer Bob Noble (in red), takes a shot of the catch.

Site Plan Review Approved For Townhouses On Merrymount Road

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A site plan review was approved for the conversion of an industrial building and parking lot at 10-18 Merrymount Rd. into 23 townhouse residential units with a 20-vehicle parking lot and additional off-site parking by the Planning Board at their meeting last Wednesday.

A prior public neighborhood meeting held on June 11 at Quincy High School raised concerns about available parking, the building's architectural style, and rainwater management. Many of those issues have been resolved by Boston Property Developer Principal and Founder Peter McLoughlin.

"We've most importantly addressed the concerns raised about parking," said representing attorney Edward Fleming of Fleming & Fleming, P.C. "McLoughlin actually reached out to many of the property owners—not only the abutting property owners but within the vicinity of the building—and interestingly enough an aerial photo of the building revealed that there's a significant amount of off-street parking available on many of these parcels."

According to Fleming, school officials at the Woodward School for Girls, which is in close proximity to the property, were open to discussion regarding sharing their parking spaces,

Regional Tournament A Great Experience For Quincy 10-Year-Olds

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a chance to play against the best from New England, and the experience was one which will last for a lifetime for the state champion 10-year-old baseball team from Quincy.

In the first game of the New England Championships in Exeter, New Hampshire last weekend, Cranston, Rhode Island edged Quincy, 7-5 despite a big offensive game at the plate from Liam Hines and an excellent defense by the entire team.

Andyville, Maine eliminated Quincy, 2-1 in a fine pitchers' duel. Jack Nelson pitched a terrific game for Quincy, giving just four hits and striking out seven.

It was Quincy's first trip to the New England Championships and the 10-year-olds played good baseball against two quality teams.

"It was our first time in the New Englands, and we played against teams that had experience in the tournament," said coach Adam Nelson. "We lost two games by a total of three runs. I thought we played very well, and the experience we gained will help us in the future."

It was a weekend which is measured best by more than wins and losses. It was a chance to grow closer as a team, have fun together, and make new friends from different states.

"The whole experience was awesome. It was great to see how the team interacted and had fun off the field," said Nelson.

Cranston made the New England finals last year and was one of the favorites entering this year's tourney. Hines led the offense and was named game MVP for Quincy. Kevin Salmanowich threw four strong innings of relief out of the bullpen. The infield defense turned two double plays to halt threats and end innings.

"We played excellent defense against a strong team," said Nelson. "We used 14 kids and all of them did a good job in the field for us."

Against Maine, Nelson earned game MVP honors for his work on the mound. Colm O'Malley hit a sacrifice fly to drive in Quincy's run in the third inning. Coleman Ross chipped in with a key hit for Quincy while Ben Wines had a solid game behind the plate.

"Ben was phenomenal the whole game," said Nelson. "Jack pitched very well. He gave us a complete game in what was a beauty of a pitcher's duel."

A big part of the weekend was the atmosphere which surrounded the tournament. It began with skills competition Friday night.

"All of our 14 kids participated and they had a blast. It gave them a chance to test their skills against the best players of their age from New England and they enjoyed it," said Nelson.

The players also had a chance to spend a weekend with their friends in a hotel. There was bonding, and there was fun.

"You could see how the experience brought them closer together as a team," said Nelson. "They had fun, played in the pool and ran around the hotel together. It was interesting to watch them grow closer off the baseball field.".

One of the best parts of regional tournaments is they give players the opportunity to meet and talk to kids from different states.

"We were in the same hotel with Cranston and the Vermont team," said Nelson. "The kids made new friends. We have nice kids on our team, the other teams had nice kids as well, and it was a good experience for them to hang around together."

Quincy ran five straight wins and beat Methuen in the finals to earn the state title. The season will continue for the team in the Suburban League. Quincy is 3-0 in the league and will play eight league games over the next two weeks.

PILLOW TALK

When selecting a pillow, choose one that will support the neck and back as one unit. A good pillow will keep your neck aligned with your chest and the lower portions of your spine. Otherwise, if you use one or more pillows to position your neck at an angle that is higher than your back (or, conversely, your head lower than your neck), you are in for a bad night's sleep, or worse. The North American Spine Society also points out that it is not good to sleep on either your back or your stomach if you have back pain. In fact, sleeping on your back increases spinal pressure by about 55 pounds, which worsens back pain. Sleep on your side instead.

Almost one third of our life is spent sleeping. Sleep is an essential biological need. In addition to rest and relaxation, proper sleep is necessary in order to maintain good physical and mental health. Doctors of chiropractic have always recognized, developed, and provided a wide variety of treatment options specifically suited to your health needs. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we urge you to try safe chiropractic care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we will only accept you as a patient if we feel we can help you. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. If you are unable to sleep on your side, try placing a pillow under your knees, which prevents your back from overarching and helps reduce spinal pressure by about 50 percent.

Remarkable Season Ends Early For Morrisette

Top Seed In Zone 6 Bows To Foxboro, Braintree

By BILL GRIFFIN

After a splendid regular season, Morrisette faced the hard, cold truths of the playoffs. The pitching will be good, the scores will be low, the offensive chances will be few.

When a team has an opportunity, it needs to cash it in and score runs. For two tournament contests, Post 294 searched and searched, but couldn't find the big hit which would have given them control of the baseball game.

In the Zone 6 playoff opener Friday night, Foxboro pushed across an unearned run in the ninth inning to spoil a remarkable pitching performance from righty T. J. Hobin and hand Morrisette a heart-breaking 1-0 defeat.

Less than 24 hours later, Braintree put an impressive all-around performance behind a complete-game four-hitter from hard-throwing Colin Sullivan to eliminate Morrisette, 8-0 Saturday afternoon at the Braintree High School field.

Morrisette finished the regular season at 18-4, good for first place in Zone 6 East and the top seed in the tournament. It was a season of good feelings, a fine blend of pitching, hitting and defense which was a treat to watch. And then in less than a day, it was over. Life in the playoffs is seldom easy.

"The playoffs are the best of the best, and we saw two great pitching performances," said coach Steve Maze. "Still, we did have plenty of opportunities, but we couldn't capitalize. All season we made good on our chances, but we didn't do that in these two games."

The loss to Foxboro was especially difficult. Hobin gave a hit on the first pitch to the first batter of the first inning and then fired seven innings of no-hit, shutout baseball. He finished with an eight-inning, three-hit, no-run performance. He struck out five and walked two. He mixed his stuff well, threw all his pitches for strikes and, by any measure, deserved the win.

"Hobin was unbelievable, His fastball was good and he controlled all three pitches: fastball, curve, and chane. You can't ask for more," said Maze.

And Morrisette had its chances. Post 294 left the bases loaded in the eighth and ninth innings. In the ninth, they failed to score because Cody Desmond hit a ball too hard on a single to right with runners on first and second.

Jason Pekkinen led off the ninth with walk and Andrew Jaehnig singled. Desmond followed with a rocket which bounced directly to the right fielder. It was hit so hard, the fielder did not have to move, and Maze had no choice but to hold Pekkinen at third. A foot either way and Morrisette scores. Foxboro escaped the jam by turning a double play.

"How hard was it hit? The throw from the outfield back in was to the cutoff man before Jason reached third," said Maze.

In the eighth, Josh Hayward and Nick Valencenti singled. Bobby Salvucci sacrificed them along to second and third. Eddie Riley, who had two hits, was walked intentionally to load the bases with one out, but a ground ball and a strikeout ended the threat.

"It was matter of that one hit," said Maze. "We had the chances and the right guys at the plate. We just didn't get the hit when we needed it."

In the regular season, Morrisette beat second-place Braintree in two of three meetings. However, Sullivan was tough with his hard, low fastball. Braintree scored one in the second, three in the fifth, three in the sixth and one in the seventh on the back of a 14-hit attack to earn the win.

Still, Morrisette had two great chances to score and match the Braintree offense. In the bottom of the second with Braintree up, 1-0, Hayward and Valencenti singled with two out to put runners on first and third. However, Sullivan ended the inning with a strikeout.

Post 294 had its best chance in the fourth with the score still 1-0. Robbie Munroe singled. Pekkinen, Valencenti and Jaehnig worked walks. However, one run was cut down at home on a failed squeeze attempt and, once again, Sullivan ended the threat with a strikeout on a smoking fast ball with the bases loaded.

"Their pitcher was having trouble finding the strike zone, and one hit in the fourth completely changes the complexion of the game," said maze.

Morrisette played good defense in the loss. Pekkinen handled a hot smash at third to save a run to end the second. Shortstop Tyler Beach dove in the hole to snare a grounder and save two runs in the fifth. Hayward, Beach and Valencenti turned a perfect 7-6-2 relay to cut down a runner at the plate in the fifth.

"Our defense has made the plays all year and we played well in the field again today," said Maze.

Valencenti was especially impressive behind the plate. He slid and blocked a breaking ball in the dirt to keep a runner at third in the second. He blocked the plate well twice to get outs at the plate. He made two hard throws right on the bag at second which narrowly missed nailing a pair of base-stealers.

He had two singles and a walk in three trips to the plate and finished the two tourney games with a team-high three hits.

"Val was great all year. He did the job behind the plate and he hit then ball consistently," said Maze.

Despite the ending in the playoffs, it was a terrific year. Little was expected from this team, but Maze blended his veterans and young players into a good mix. Hobin and Kenny Sorensen provided experience and front-of-the-rotation pitching. Greg Paulo and Desmond threw hard hard and showed great promise. Dave Suslowicz was excellent in relief. The middle of the order – Munroe, Pekkinen, Jaehnig, and Hayward – produced all season. The defense, especially up the middle with Valencenti, Beach, Riley (second base) and Andrew Currie (centerfield), was solid.

"Underclassmen like Cody and Joe Ferracane did an excellent job, but I don't want to leave out a single player. They were all great. I was proud to be their coach," said Maze.

Ousts Braintree; Darcy Fires No-Hitter

Wollaston Sr. Babe Ruth Takes 1-0 Lead Over Dedham

By JOE REARDON

The beat goes on for the Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth team.

Coming off an impressive sweep of Braintree last week, Wollaston defeated Dedham 6-1 Monday in the League playoffs to take a 1-0 lead in a best of three series. The two teams were scheduled to play again Wednesday at 5:45 p.m. in Dedham at Memorial Field.

Wollaston was paced by Matt Kerin who pitched a three-hitter and struck out 10 batters. He also knocked in the team's first run with a sacrifice fly.

Shortstop Michael Pugsley had two hits, an RBI and played outstanding defense including fielding a ball deep in the hole and gunning out the runner by two steps.

Right fielder Alex Linskey contributed two RBI. Padraig Geaney and Dillon Darcy each had an RBI.

Wollaston was so spot on in its first round series of the Senior Babe Ruth playoffs that they didn't even allow Braintree that proverbial cup of coffee all teams drink when they make a short visit in the postseason. Yes, the series - all 12 innings of it - was over that quickly.

Wollaston pounded Braintree with 22 runs in the two-game sweep, including a Game 1 gem from Dillon Darcy on the mound. Darcy fired a five-inning, slaughter rule no-hitter in Wollaston's 10-0 win over Braintree on Thursday with Ben Martin leading the offensive attack with a pair of hits and three RBI.

Darcy was confident early that he was going to have a strong outing and was equally confident that Wollaston had the bats to put a lot of runs up.

"I hadn't pitched for a few days and my arm was feeling really good," said Darcy, who did his schoolboy pitching at Quincy High before graduating in 2013. "I was throwing a lot more fastballs than I usually do and my curveball was falling over the plate and catching the outside corner. This is one of the best teams I've played on. When we get one hit we just keep going. It's like a chain reaction."

Darcy did the job mixing up his pitches in the series opener and Martin and the rest of the lineup took care of putting runs on the board.

Catcher Johnny Marsinelli has been behind the plate for Darcy since his Quincy High days and knows the Wollaston ace's strengths very well.

"He likes to change it up with his fastball and curveball," said Marsinelli. "When you can throw the curveball for strikes two pitches in a row it really keeps the batters off balance. I caught him a couple of years ago at Quincy High so we know what we want in certain situations. I think they got one good hit, but Alex Linsky made a great diving catch in center field to keep the no-hitter going.

"Dillon was a great pitcher for us last year and he's going to continue to be big for us."

Unlike Thursday, when Darcy befuddled the Braintree bats, Gill Mannion's club did manage to get on the board in Friday night's game at Watson Park. Wollaston, though, had more than enough firepower to put an end to Braintree's season. Steve Reardon's squad feasted on Braintree pitching with 16 hits in the 12-5 victory. Martin continue his torrid hitting at the plate, pounding out four hits and driving in five runs in the win. Mike Pugsley added a pair of hits while Alex Linskey drilled two hits and had an RBI. Padraig Geaney homered and singled for Wollaston in the rout.

Wollaston has been spending a lot of time in the batting cages at Adams Field and it paid dividends in the best-of-three series against Braintree.

"We've been hitting very well," said Wollaston assistant coach Bob Griffin. "(Head coach) Steve Reardon has been doing a lot of batting practice with the kids and they've been very compliant. It really showed."

After a scoreless first inning, Wollaston got on the board in the second with a pair of runs for the 2-0 lead with David Cooper and Linskey putting up RBI.

Braintree threatened in the second, but some strong defense from Wollaston snuffed out the scoring bids. Brendan Hennessy reached second on a throwing error and after Joe Ierardi lined out back to Martin, who got the start, Joe Newcomb was out at first on a bunt attempt. The throw home to Marsinelli got there in plenty of time for him to tag out Hennessy to end the inning.

Wollaston did make some mistakes that they'll have to iron out as the tourney continues. The good guys had a sluggish inning in the field in the third and Braintree took advantage with three runs to go up 3-2.

Ben Novo started the inning taking first after being hit by a Martin pitch and Tommy Pitts followed with double to deep left field. David Botsolis reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Novo to make it 2-1. Jack Cusack singled and Justin Doherty followed with a base hit to bring Cusack in to tie it 2-2. A throwing error gave Braintree the 3-2 advantage.

That would be the last time Braintree led. Geaney led off the Wollaston fourth with a massive home run to right field to tie it, 3-3. Mike Saccoach relieved Martin in the bottom of the fourth and breezed through the half inning, striking out two batters and getting a fly-ball out.

Braintree's miscues broke the tie in the fifth. Jonathan Leveillee put down a perfect bunt along the third-base line for an infield hit and Martin continued his torrid hitting with a triple that scored Leveillee. Martin crossed the plate on a throwing error for the 5-3 advantage. Another Braintree error put the score at 6-3.

Wollaston's biggest inning came in the fifth as they sent nine batters to the plate. Marsinelli laced a two-run double down the left-field line for an 8-3 lead and the bleeding continued when Martin singled to right to score Marsinelli for a 9-3 advantage. Mannion decided it was time to lift Doherty in favor of Hennessy. A botched pickoff attempt at first scored Martin as the lead grew to 10-3.

Braintree did manage to put up two more runs in the sixth to cut Wollaston's lead to 10-5, but Martin put the game further out of reach in the seventh when he drilled a two-run single to score Bill Campbell and Evan Feinberg for a 12-5 bulge. Sammy Keane came in in the bottom of the seventh and was only on the mound for three batters as he retired the side in order.

Marsinelli praised Wollaston's pitchers who gave spot duty to make sure the starting rotation got an extra day of rest.

"The pitchers were good," said Marsinelli. "The three pitchers we had going tonight were our relief pitchers and we tried to get them a couple innings each. You could see after three innings they started to get tired. We wanted to give them some work to keep them ready for the playoffs."

Added Griffin: "We've been using three pitchers. They go three or four innings for us. That's by design."

Jr. Morrisette Team Falls To Franklin In Playoffs

By JOE REARDON

Gerry Shepherd had his pitching staff groomed for a deep run in the District 6 playoffs and further and did get the sterling pitching performance he hoped in Sunday's game against Franklin.

Josh Helfrich was brilliant for the Morrisette Junior squad in scattering three hits over eight innings and striking out seven. Helfrich left with the score tied 1-1, but it was Franklin who pushed ahead a run in the ninth inning to end Morrisette's banner season, 2-1. Post 294 finished with a solid 15-6 record and all indications are that the team should be just as strong, if not stronger, next summer.

Quincy's lone run came in the fifth inning when Cam White drove in Brendan Collins with a base hit after he reached on a double.

Morrisette got the type of pitching performance from Helfrich that usually results in a win. "I thought we would go a little further because our pitching was set up to go deeper," said Shepherd. "We had the right guy on the mound."

Shepherd said he is giving the team a week off before meeting with them and laying the groundwork for preparing for next year. There will be new faces, but the team will be returning a strong core of players.

"Overall things went well," Shepherd said of the season. "Almost everyone is coming back and some of the guys will be going up to the senior team."

Post 294 finished the regular season on a high note, defeating Canton on Friday, to wind up tied for second with 28 points and a 15-5 record alongside the Norwood Junior team.

Quincy wound up on the losing end of a tight pitching duel last Thursday evening at Coletta Field.

The day after taking a 7-4 win against Hudson where Post 294 did the job offensively, Quincy was unable to find its groove at the plate on its home field. Post 294's bats were anemic against Norwood Post 70 ace Jesse Flemming, who allowed baserunners, but was in complete control, giving up three hits and striking out seven as he went the distance.

Post 294 wasted a strong outing from Kevin Fitzgerald, who also fired a complete game and matched Flemming pitch for pitch. Fitzgerald spun a one-hitter with three strikeouts, but a throwing error by Quincy led to Norwood's lone run in the sixth inning.

Quincy head coach Shepherd said the combination of an inability to strike for clutch hits and Flemming's gem led to Post 294's sixth loss of the season.

"We weren't able to get that hit when we needed it," said Shepherd. "He (Flemming) pitched great. He's their top pitcher. It was good to get a look at him because we may face him again."

Norwood didn't hit the ball hard on the way to its lone run of the game, but did just enough to put a number on the scoreboard.

Mike Flaherty hit an infield grounder, but the throw to first sailed wide and he advanced to second. Flaherty moved to third and then scored the lone run of the game on consecutive sacrifice flies to center field by Chris Quinn and Kevin Hines to make it 1-0.

Post 294 had a great opportunity in the second as Collins reached on sharp, one-out single to right and Matt MacDonald singled to left. Quincy was unable to score, though, as Collins, who reached on a fielder's choice was tagged out in a run down and Owen Lynch grounded out. Quincy had two runners on the following inning, but a fly ball out and strikeout left them with nothing to show for the inning.

Post 294 threatened again in the fifth inning against Flemming. Lynch was hit by a pitch and advanced to second when a pick off attempt got past first base. Troy Shepherd followed with a single and stole second with one out. Quincy's frustration at the plate continued as Flemming got the next two batters on ground outs to end the inning.

Norwood put two runners on base with a single and walk in the top of the seventh, but a nifty double play by Post 294 kept it a one-run game.

On a beautiful night under the lights at Mitchell-McCoy Field, the Quincy Credit Union girls 13-15 year old softball team defeated Mansfield Nolan 16-6 to win the Mary Pratt Girls Softball league championship.

For the first time ever in the girls softball house league, the game was played under the lights with an official scorer, public address announcer and player introductions.

The game was played in memory of recently deceased Duane "Dewey" Holmes, a long-time Quincy Youth Baseball and Hockey coach. A moment of silence in his memory was part of the pre-game ceremony. Girls from both teams wore ribbons in honor of Coach Holmes.

Kathy Petrilli, the vice president of Quincy Youth Softball, served as the Master of Ceremonies, while her daughter Shannon Foley was official photographer for the game. Two Mary Pratt softball players, Johanna Douglas and Olivia McDonnell sang a rousing rendition of the National Anthem before the game, and Miss Quincy Woman's Softball herself, Ginny Trainor, threw out the first pitch.

The game pitted regular season champion Quincy Credit Union (QCU) against Mansfield Nolan who came in third place. Two of the top pitchers in the league Mia Sapienza for QCU and Cam Burgio for Mansfield Nolan were the starting pitchers.

Quincy Credit Union jumped out to the lead in the first inning with hits by Hannah Bell, Mia Sapienza and Jesse Caldwell. All three scored on a combination of wild pitches and passed balls, to take an early 3-0 lead and never trailed in the game.

Sophia Baldino led off the bottom of the first for Mansfield with a triple and scored on a Cam Burgio single to make it 3-1 QCU. Burgio had a quick 2nd inning getting the side in order. Mia Sapienza was immense all night on the mound for QCU as she struck out 10 batters and only gave up 2 more runs through the next 5 innings. She kept Mansfield off balance with a great mixture of fastballs and change-ups. As she has done all season she also chipped in offensively with 3 hits and a walk and 3 runs scored.

In the top of the third QCU's Shauna Grehan led off with a single followed by a Meghan Greene single, Bell walk, Sapienza single, Jesse Caldwell single, producing 4 runs and a 7-2 lead after 3. Mansfield Nolan played some excellent defense as Sophie Baldino made a tremendous catch and doubled off a runner at second base and Lauren Saccoach snared a Brielle O'Malley liner up the middle doubling off a runner at first to keep the game within reach over the next few innings.

Sapienza continued to roll on the mound and was aided by the fine defensive play of her infield of Carly McMorrow, Brielle O'Malley, Hannah Bell, and Meghan Greene who play errorless ball all night resulting in the key to the win.

Cassandra Davis had a big night at the plate for Mansfield Nolan with three hits, while Cam Burgio, Claire Doherty, Alana Sullivan, and Maeve Keane all chipped in with hits and fine defense.

The game was decided in a big 5 run fifth inning uprising by QCU when Grehan again started out the inning with a single and QCU's Greene, Bell, Sapienza and Caldwell all reached base and were driven in by Carly McMorrow, Brielle O'Malley, and Caroline Hannon resulting in a 12-2 lead. Additionally Caroline Schaff, Kathleen Saverse, and Maria Theodore had key hits to continue the offensive production for QCU.

After the game, QCU head coach Chris Bell said, "Our hats go off to Mansfield Nolan and their whole coaching staff and team. They are a tremendous bunch of girls and softball players. Tonight our team and the girls I feel played their best game of the year. Assistant Coach Sean O'Malley and I could not have been prouder of all them and thankful for the year long support by all of their parents and families.

"We had two first year players of softball on our team, Journey Strouble and Carolyn Schaff who improved from day one until tonight and they along with the rest of our team made key contributions in winning tonight. I thought the key was our defense especially in the infield. They made the outs they needed to make. O'Malley at short and McMorrow at third were lock down defensively and Bell and Greene at first and second made all the plays. With Jesse Caldwell catching our defense there was immense and with Mia Sapienza on the mound you are in good shape every time she pitches.

"Grehan, Strouble, Hannon, Theodore, Schaff, and Saverse played well in the outfield so defense was in my mind the difference."

For Mansfield Nolan Kayleigh Susinetti, Rachel Beck, Katie Whalen, Erin O'Meara and Stephanie Melnick all contributed defensively, while Christina Buckley had a big hit in the 7th inning when Mansfield rallied for 3 runs. Mansfield Nolan had won 3 games to get to the final and was playing their best ball of the season going into the game.

"The most important thing coming out of the game was the fact the girls from both teams and representing all of the middle schools in Quincy are friends first, showed great respect to each other before, during, and after the game," said Mansfield Nolan Head Coach Kathy Daulton.

"This was a proud moment in the continued improvement of the Girls Softball Program in Quincy. Because of the hard work and dedication of all of the Quincy Youth Softball board members, coaches, parents, and most importantly the players, the girls league is thriving. League Vice President Kathy Petrilli stated at the end of the game "Congratulations to all the players for a well played championship game. We look forward to continue to grow the girl's softball program in Quincy going forward and we thank all of the players and their parents for their participation and support, which has made it a great success this year!"

From Big Screen To Computer Screen

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

It's summertime, and that means it's time for popcorn, snacks, and blockbuster movies on the silver screen. Have you noticed that many of the heroes in theaters this year seem to be of a certain age? In fact, some of them are old enough they could easily be getting Social Security retirement benefits even as they continue to work—saving the world or otherwise.

Social Security Online Services
www.socialsecurity.gov

These days, retirement isn't what it used to be. Modern day retirees are more likely to be traveling, volunteering, and being active—even continuing to work—while collecting retirement benefits. That's likely the case with many of the actors we'll see in this year's movies.

Take The Expendables 3. Expendables Sylvester Stallone, Harrison Ford, and Arnold Schwarzenegger are all old enough to be eligible for retirement benefits.

Captain America returned to the big screen this year. Even though he's still out saving the world, he first appeared on the job in a comic book in 1941, making him a likely candidate for collecting Social Security retirement payments.

Spiderman, also back on the big screen this summer, is a little younger, first appearing in 1962. But he is old enough to plan for his retirement by using our Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator. And although he's not old enough for retirement yet, it's likely he could get disability benefits, along with Rhino, Electro, and Green Goblin. Their conditions are all expected to last more than a year.

Another group with unusual conditions: the X-Men, returning to the big screen for the summer. Professor X and Magneto are surely old enough to receive full retirement. In addition to X-Men like Wolverine and Beast, there are a number of X-Women, such as Mystique, Storm, Rogue, and Kitty Pryde, who could possibly qualify for Social Security benefits. While none of them appear old enough to apply for retirement, they should consider applying for disability benefits given their severe conditions.

If any of these on-screen heroes and villains need advice on the best way to apply for benefits, perhaps Johnny Depp could lead the way. In his new film Transcendence, he finds himself online—literally.

How long does it take to apply for benefits online? This year's Fast and Furious 7 seems slow by comparison. You can complete and submit the online application for benefits in as little as 15 minutes from start to finish.

Whether you've been bitten by a radioactive spider or find yourself reaching the latter years in life, the place to go for all of your Social Security information and business is our website at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Technology snafus tax your patience. But before you throw that computer or other bulky hardware into the trash, take a deep breath and call someone knowledgeable for help.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Don't be too upset if your generosity goes unappreciated. These things happen, and rather than brood over it, move on. A new friend could open up some exciting new possibilities.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A loved one helps you get through an especially difficult emotional situation. Spend the weekend immersed in the body and soul restorative powers of music and the other arts.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You are pretty much in charge of what you want to do this week. However, it might be a good idea to keep an open mind regarding suggestions from people you know you can trust.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Another chance to shine (something always dear to the Lion's heart) might be resented by others. But you earned it, so enjoy it. The weekend brings news about a family member.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A suggestion that never took off could become viable again. Dust it off, update it if necessary, and resubmit it. In your personal life, a new relationship takes an "interesting" turn.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Confronting a new challenge to your stated position could work to your advantage by settling all doubts once you're able to present a solid defense backed up by equally solid facts.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You enjoy doing nice things for others. But this is a good time to do something nice for yourself as well. You might want to start by planning a super-special getaway weekend.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some changes you feel you need to make might be reasonable and appropriate. But others might lead to new problems. Think things through carefully before you act.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good instincts usually keep the sure-footed Goat on the right path. So, what others might see as stubbornness on your part, in fact reflects your good sense of what is worth supporting.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A period of introspection could lead to some surprising conclusions -- and also equally surprising changes -- involving a number of your long-held positions on several issues.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The financially practical Pisces might want to take a sensible approach to spending as well as investing. Being prudent now pays off later. A romantic situation moves into another phase.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of curiosity keeps you continually alert for what's new about people, places and things.

however they have not finalized their decision. He has reached out to Verizon Wireless, which has an office and parking lot across he street, with a similar request however they have yet to respond.

Four spaces obtained via a lease agreement with a neighboring property on Hancock Street will be made available to residents of the new building. "There's been an indication from other property owners in the area that they would be willing to lease spaces if those spaces would be necessary," said Fleming.

Planning Board Chairman William Geary said he felt the aesthetics of the proposed renovation, which calls for the addition of a corrugated metal exterior surrounding the stair tower which juts out from the side of the building and into the parking lot, were not in keeping with the overall appearance of the neighborhood.

"The fact of the matter is is that that's an industrial building in a residential neighborhood," he said. "From there on you've got [Butler's Pond] and you've got beautiful homes on both sides of that street that run the entire length of the street to the Southern Artery and so the concern, at least for this particular board member, would be that you're not doing anything that intrudes on the character of that predominantly residential, single, and multifamily residential area."

"It's ugly. I'd like to be more artful in describing it but that's the truth," he said, noting that the corrugated metal looked less like the exterior of a residential building and more like a silo.

Boston Property Developer Architect Jon Hanson said the decision to use the metal had not been finalized but that in his opinion it would modernize the look of the building. "With it being a more traditional looking building in nature, I'm trying to freshen it up and give a residential feel and a younger, more contemporary feel and in introducing a material like this we thought it helped in giving the building a fresh look," he said.

Alternatives offered by Hanson included constructing the stair tower out of brick or using a composite metal material which would mimic the shape of bricks but in a more abstract way.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, who attended the meeting, is not only an abutter but is also a member of The Friends of Butler's Pond, an organization made up of local residents who promote the use of the pond and advocate for its preservation. He also sits on the board of Quincy's Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee which ensures that a percentage of housing available in the city falls within the guidelines of what is considered affordable for low-income residents according to the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance. The ordinance states that for every ten units in an apartment or condominium complex, two must be categorized as affordable housing. The site owner can choose to include the units in the building, provide the units at an off-site location, or make a payment determined by the cost of construction which would benefit affordable housing in the future.

Overall, Bennett said the concerns raised at last month's meeting such as limited parking, were addressed by the revised site plan, however he is waiting for finalized plans on how excess rainwater and runoff will be handled.

"The water quality [of Butler's Pond] is poor. It suffers from runoff from the neighborhood," he said. "A lot of phosphates come from bird droppings or fertilizer on people's lawns and rainwater off the buildings and one of the major sources of pollution for the pond is the old Central Middle School building. The parking lot and the roof water is coming down the street and getting in the pond."

"I know the developer is aware of that and is making provisions for handling the rainwater runoff to protect the pond."

The Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee will vote on whether affordable housing will be made available off site, or whether payment in lieu of affordable units will suffice at a future meeting.

While the board unanimously voted in favor of the site plan review, a final submission of plans must take place by the applicant before the project itself is OK'd to move forward.

The continued public hearing on the application of Michael Grehan for a site plan review of the construction of five, three-story townhouses at 96 West St. also took place at Wednesday's meeting.

Each unit will have a private two-car garage on the first floor with living space on the second and third floors.

Senior Project Engineer at Ross Engineering Gregory Tansey addressed concerns regarding storm water management by saying that the draining system designed will take advantage of the existing soils present underground which he described as "very sandy, gravely soils [with] high percolation rates." A spillway system will also help with excess water if catch basins become inundated with rainwater or runoff, or become clogged by debris. Any excess will be directed toward a rainwater garden where it will recharge the groundwater table and prevent overflow onto West Street.

A rainwater garden allows for excess water to absorb into the ground while adding to the aesthetic appeal of an area. A chain link fence around the perimeter of the property will most likely be removed and replaced with new fencing and ornamental trees and shrubbery will be added.

According to Tansey, building the townhouses would improve water drainage in the area and the amount of runoff that would occur on West Street would be reduced from .26 cubic feet of storm water per second (CFFs) to .02 CFFs during a moderate storm. He called it "a drastic reduction." A snow removal plan has been created and snow storage is available on site. In case of a major snow event in which two or more feet of snow fall, snow will be transported elsewhere.

Attorney Christopher Harrington who is representing Grehan said the house currently at 96 West St. was in bad shape overall. "The heart of this matter is that this is a redevelopment project. This house was built in 1880 and it's in very poor condition," he said. "It's been through foreclosure and sits on a partial rubble stone foundation."

A request for financial hardship to the Zoning Board of Appeals was made according to Harrington because the property is surrounded on three sides by Quincy Housing Authority buildings which could lower resale value in the future.

In more news, the Planing Board welcomed new member Sean Callaghan, who sat in on Wednesday's meeting as an observer. Callaghan, who works for electrical workers union IBEW Local 103 as a business agent, was appointed by Mayor Thomas Koch to replace former member James Fay.

Boston Firm Downtown Advisor

Koch Taps Redgate Real Estate To Refine Development Strategy

An experienced Boston-based real estate firm specializing in urban mixed-use development has been selected by Mayor Thomas Koch as a key strategic advisor to the city's Quincy Center redevelopment team.

Redgate Real Estate Advisors was tapped by Koch from among six nationally-known firms that had competed to assist the City as it moves forward with plans to redevelop Quincy Center. Redgate has developed over 25 million square feet of urban mixed-use development and has advised projects in South Boston, Cambridge and Puerto Rico.

According to Koch, Redgate's role will focus on refining a development strategy that has evolved from a single master developer for nearly 50 acres to one that includes multiple developers targeting different land parcels.

Those parcels include two major city-owned properties – the Hancock Parking Lot and the Ross Parking Garage. Redgate's work will include developing a strategy on how public and private parcels might best fit together and how development can be phased. Ultimately, the work will lead to a formal request for proposals from developers.

"We're moving forward, and I'm excited to have a firm with Redgate's experience, talent and passion to work together with us," Koch said in a statement Tuesday.

Adams Family Draws Visitors From U.S., World

By SCOTT JACKSON

Interest in all things Adams continues to drive visitors from the United States and the world to Quincy.

Between the start of the tourist season on April 19 and July 24, 3,436 visitors took tours of the United First Parish Church at 1306 Hancock Street, according to Gary Haynes, who oversees the visitation program for the church. Also known as the Church of the Presidents, it houses the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine.

So far this year, visitors from 20 foreign nations have come to see the United First Parish Church, from places such as the United Kingdom, France, Australia, Singapore, Thailand, Brazil, and Saudi Arabia, to name a few. At this point last year, tourists from 18 foreign countries had visited the church. Visitors from 48 states and the District of Columbia have visited the site as well; no residents of Hawaii or West Virginia have visited so far.

The main draw at the United First Parish Church continues to be John and Abigail Adams. Interest in the second president and his wife has piqued in recent years in large part due to the Pulitzer Prize winning biography of John Adams by David McCullough and the Emmy Award-winning miniseries adapted from the book.

"They're very much John and Abigail fans," Haynes said. "They've either read the McCullough book or seen the HBO series."

Despite the amount of national and international interest in the church, visitation is down 15 percent compared to last year. Haynes

New State Law Offers Flood Insurance Relief

A new state law to help homeowners burdened by rising flood insurance premiums has been signed into law by Gov. Deval Patrick.

The new law bans banks and mortgage companies from requiring homeowners to purchase flood insurance at a coverage amount greater than their mortgage balance. It also prohibits creditors from requiring coverage for contents of the home, or including a deductible of less than $5,000.

The new law also stipulates that banks and mortgage companies must provide notice to homeowners that the coverage they are required to purchase will only protect the creditor/lender's interest in the property, and may not be sufficient to pay for repairs in the event homeowners do experience flood damage. While there may be risk involved, homeowners still have the option to purchase additional flood insurance if they feel it is necessary.

The legislation was backed by Quincy's legislative delegation: state Sen. John Keenan, House of Representatives Majority Leader Ronald Mariano, and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan and Dan Hunt. It also had overwhelming support in both branches of the legislature.

The legislation was originally filed by House Speaker Robert DeLeo and Atty. Gen. Martha Coakley, in response to overwhelming increases in flood insurance rates

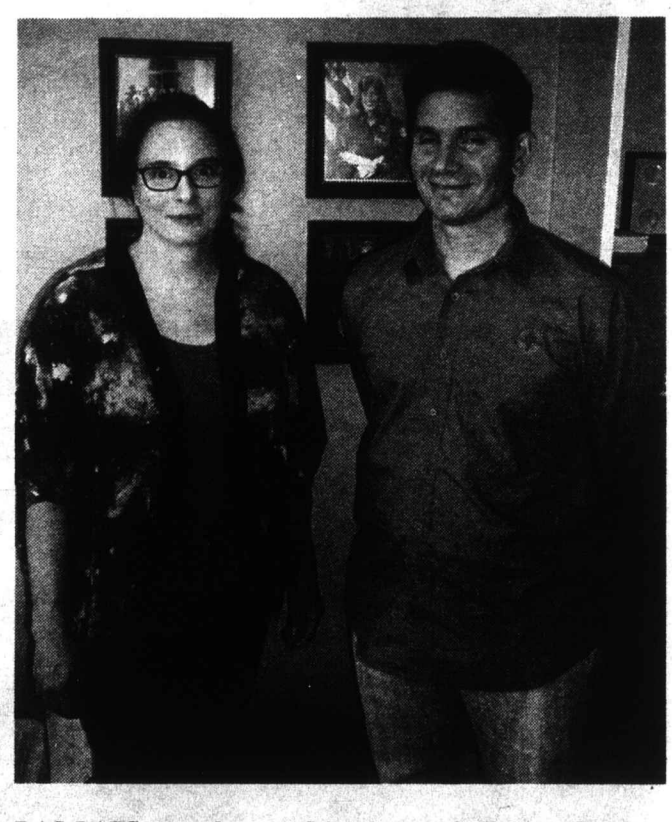
BioTech Firm Moves To Quincy

Ras Labs Develops Synthetic Muscle

LENORE RASMUSSEN, PhD, the founder of Ras Labs, manipulates Synthetic Muscle samples inside the company's new Crown Colony facility. When exposed to electrical charges, Synthetic Muscle can contract or expand. The material will be tested aboard the International Space Station later this year.



RAS LABS recently moved into a new facility on Congress Street in Crown Colony. Pictured are Lenore Rasmussen, PhD, the company's founder and Eric Sandberg, the company's CEO. Ras Labs, a 2013 MassChallenge global finalist, chose to move to Quincy based in part on its proximity to both the South Shore and Boston.

RAS LABS is responsible for developing Synthetic Muscle (seen above) an electroactive polymer material that could one day be used in prosthetics or robotics. Depending on the exact formulation used, the material can be made more rigid, which would better resemble tendons and could be used to anchor additional Synthetic Muscle.

Quincy Sun Photos/Scott Jackson

By SCOTT JACKSON

One of the newest companies to call Quincy home hopes to one day revolutionize how prosthetics work and feel.

The company, Ras Labs, recently held a ribbon-cutting ceremony for its new laboratory space located on Congress Street in Crown Colony. Ras Labs has developed a special electroactive polymer material known as Synthetic Muscle, which contracts and expands when exposed to low voltages of energy – the company hopes Synthetic Muscle can be used to mimic muscle in prosthetics and robots.

In 2013, Ras Labs was a global finalist in the MassChallenge, a program aimed at providing support to new startups. As a finalist, Ras Labs was able to use MassChallenge office space but needed room for a new laboratory for research. Lenore Rasmussen, PhD – the company's founder, chief technology officer, and board chairman, brought the company to Quincy because the city was more affordable than Boston or Cambridge. Location was also a factor – Rasmussen and Eric Sandberg, the company's chief executive officer, both reside on the South Shore, meaning the Crown Colony location provided them a shorter commute while still being near MBTA service,

Feds To Inspect Housing Authority Units

By SCOTT JACKSON and KRIS KALABOKAS

Federal officials will inspect Quincy Housing Authority units this August in the wake of a state report that identified widespread maintenance issues.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will likely begin the inspections in early August. Six-hundred fifty public housing units within the city receive federal funding, though its unknown exactly how many will be inspected.

HUD's decision to inspect the units came nearly three months after the state's Department of Housing and Community Development released a report detailing numerous issues in QHA's 930 state-aided units. The April 30 report identified major issues including a leaking sprinkler system at Tobin Towers, mold/mildew growth in certain inspected units, units with inoperable or removed smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, and numerous trip hazards and inoperable lights.

Following the state report, QHA tenants complained of long overdue maintenance problems in their residences at public meetings. Rhonda Siciliano, the public affairs officer at HUD's New England office in Boston, said the department opted to inspect the units in light of the report and subsequent meetings.

"Based on that information we decided to go out and do an assessment of the properties," she explained.

On Monday, Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director James Lydon said he had a meeting scheduled with Marilyn O'Sullivan, HUD's director of public housing for

Shipyard Parcel Sold, USS Salem To Relocate

By SCOTT JACKSON

Construction magnate Jay Cashman has finalized the purchase of property at the Fore River Shipyard from the MBTA.

Cashman paid the transit agency $1.1 million for the property last week, according to MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo. The site, which encompasses nearly 12 acres combined of land and water rights, includes the pier previously used for commuter ferry service and the USS Salem.

Last fall, the MBTA terminated ferry service and closed down the Salem, citing the need to fix to the pier. The transit agency previously said it would cost $15 million to ensure the pier would remain open for up to five years and $50 million to ensure it could remain open for up to 50 years.

As a result of pier's closure, the group that operates the Salem opted to move it to an East Boston marina. The ship is expected to move there in 2015. Pesaturo previously said the MBTA had no immediate plans to bring back commuter ferry service to Fore River or elsewhere in the city. The agency, he noted, would be willing to consider other opportunities in the future.

Cashman previously purchased 26 acres of property inside the shipyard in 2003. His three companies – Jay Cashman, Inc., Sterling Equipment, and Patriot Renewables – are all headquartered on site. He also leases space in the shipyard to Bluefin Robotics and the New England Aquarium.

In October of last year, Cashman launched the 1,500-ton Dale Pyatt from the shipyard. The dredging barge was the first vessel manufactured in the Fore River Shipyard since General Dynamics shut down its Quincy operations in the mid-1980s.

Messages left for Cashman and Michael Condon, the director of the non-profit group that owns the Salem, were not returned.

The Salem (CA-139), a Des Moines-class heavy cruiser, was launched from the Fore River Shipyard in 1947 and commissioned two years later. It served as the flagship of the U.S.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST
BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

AMONG THE MOST RARE AND VALUABLE

Red beryl is also known as "scarlet emerald" because it is red and is a member of the same (beryl) family. Discovered by Maynard Bixby in the early 1900s in a Utah mine, this beautiful red gemstone was first named Bixbite after its discoverer. When it was found that the unknown gemstone was actually a form of beryl, the name red beryl came into widespread use. Whatever its name, the Jewelers Association named Bixbite the rarest gemstone on earth, which, of course, caused prices to soar. While new sources of red beryl have been claimed to have been found in Madagascar and Afghanistan, the gems mined there are, in fact, Pezzottaite, which is very similar to Bixbite in appearance only.

Red beryl remains one of the most expensive of all colored gems. Red beryl is so rare that you should insist on certification from a recognized gemological lab when buying this gemstone. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to select the perfect gemstone jewelry that is right for you as well as any other special gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 16, 1920, Cleveland Indians shortstop Ray Chapman is struck in the temple by a ball pitched by Carl Mays of the New York Yankees. He died 12 hours later. After Chapman's injury, it was mandated that scuffed or discolored balls be replaced with new white ones, making them easier to see.

• On Aug. 17, 1933, New York Yankees first baseman Lou Gehrig plays in his 1,308th consecutive game, breaking former Yankee Everett Scott's record for consecutive games played. Gehrig would go on to play in 2,130 games in a row, setting a record that would stand for over half a century.

• On Aug. 13, 1948, U.S. and British planes airlift a record amount of supplies into sections of Berlin under American and British control. Despite terrible weather, crowded airspace and exhaustion of the pilots and crews, more than 700 British and American planes brought in nearly 5,000 tons of supplies.

• On Aug. 12, 1953, less than a year after the United States tested its first hydrogen bomb, the Soviets detonate a 400-kiloton device in Kazakhstan. Known as the "Layer Cake," the bomb was fueled by layers of uranium and lithium deuteride, a hydrogen isotope.

• On Aug. 15, 1969, the Woodstock Music Festival opens on a patch of farmland in White Lake, New York. By the time the gates opened, more than 400,000 people were clamoring to get in. Those without tickets simply walked through gaps in the fences, and the organizers were eventually forced to make the event free of charge.

• On Aug. 11, 1973, "American Graffiti," a nostalgic coming-of-age tale steeped in the car-centric culture of suburban California, is released in theaters. The film went on to become a sleeper hit.

• On Aug. 14, 1985, Michael Jackson purchases the publishing rights to the vast majority of the Beatles' catalog for $47 million, outbidding even Paul McCartney. In later years, the catalog -- now estimated to be worth in excess of $1 billion -- allowed Jackson to remain solvent by serving as collateral for several enormous personal loans.

Quincy Cyclist Riding Solo To NYC

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Elizabeth Rice is hoping that her solo bicycle ride from Quincy to New York City will encourage supporters to donate roughly $15,000 to cover part of the cost of tuition for her first year as a student in the North Bennet Street School's Preservation Carpentry Program (NBSS) located in Boston's North End.

Rice is one of 13 students who was recently accepted into the NBSS program which will begin Sept. 2 and takes two years to complete. The program covers the skills needed to renovate residential and commercial buildings through the use of tools and machines, knowledge of procedures, and the understanding of construction principles based on standard industry practices.

Following 16 years as a social worker, 40-year-old Rice decided to focus more attention on carpentry as she has always felt it to be a great stress reduction tool, particularly over the past three years in which she has undergone 13 failed fertility treatments. "Ironically, I received my acceptance letter to NBSS the day before receiving devastating news that my last pregnancy attempt had failed," she said.

After receiving a loan and a small grant totaling $11,300 to help in covering some of the costs of her first year in the program, she's still left with $15,000 to pay for school; not an easy amount to come by for her. "This is largely because my bank account has been depleted by the extraordinary cost of infertility treatments," she said. "It is not feasible for me to produce that amount of money on my own."

To raise the necessary funds while still honoring her "social work roots," she'll complete a solo "Bike to Build" ride, in which she'll pedal her way from her Quincy apartment all the way to New York City. Her trip will begin Aug. 15. She hopes to be in New York City by Aug. 17.

"I will be riding my bicycle," she said "to demonstrate my commitment to attending NBSS and to express my appreciation for the sacrifice made by my donors."

Not all of the money raised will go to her tuition. While 80 percent will go directly to school costs, the other 20 percent will be donated to the South Shore Habitat for Humanity in Weymouth. "I chose Habitat for Humanity because I plan to bridge my love of carpentry with my calling to help people through volunteering for this organization when I complete school, if not sooner," she said.

While Rice has completed several bicycle rides between Boston and New York for HIV and AIDS fundraising and awareness, she has never done so alone. Her fellow bike riders provided the emotional and physical support she needed to finish the roughly 225 mile journey in the past. "To compensate for this difference, I plan to tap into the spiritual support from my deceased brother who was a carpenter and my deceased grandmother who raised numerous carpenters herself," she said.

So far, she has raised $3,800 from friends, family, and local organizations. Of that amount, about $600 will go to Habitat for Humanity.

Her blog, at biketobuildatnbss.com, will track her progress "in a quirky and humorous way" as she prepares for her ride.

Rice is grateful not just for the monetary help but the attention her ride will bring to Habitat for Humanity. "[The] support will not only help me actualize my dream of attending NBSS, but it will provide much needed tools and building materials for Habitat for Humanity," she said.

Why I Am Willing To Risk Arrest In Washington, D.C.

OP ED

(Editor's Note: The author of this op-ed will commit an act of civil disobedience in Washington, D.C. today (Thursday) with other Unitarian Universalists and people of other faith denominations. This op-ed explains why.)

By JOHN REED

My great-grandfather, Thomas John Abruzzese, arrived on Ellis Island from Grotto Menarde, Italy in the late 1900s to make a better life for himself and his family. He arrived without an invitation or a visa, a situation known today as undocumented. He had little money, did not speak English and had only the name of his "sponsor" in his pocket. He was the epitome of the derogatory term for Italians, "WOP" or "without papers." Five generations later, my son and granddaughters take pride in their heritage, knowing the courage it took to make their lives better than his.

With few exceptions, most notably the indigenous people, each of us have an immigration story such as mine. However, those of us who cannot trace our ancestry to the Pilgrims have sometimes felt judged by those who came before us. Irish immigrants were often labeled as "lazy drunks" (help wanted, Irish need not apply), the Mexicans were "drug addicts" and Italians, especially those from southern Italy, were "gangsters." Newcomers were demonized if they did not look like those already here. In spite of the difficulties our ancestors had, we wanted to roll up the red carpet after we arrived so as to not let any more immigrants follow. We sometimes took this to an extreme and punished immigrants for the actions of their country of origin. For example, when we created the Japanese internment camps during WWII.

Late in President George W. Bush's term, the 2008 anti-trafficking law was passed. The new law required that unaccompanied minors from any country, except Mexico and Canada, be held by the department of Health and Human Services for a hearing to determine the minor's refuge status. If the minor's life or well being would be compromised by turning them away because of things like gang violence, human trafficking or child conscription in their country of origin, refugee status would be conferred and the minor would be allowed to enter the US. Speed forward to 2014 and this is being turned in its head. Although children from Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala are crossing the border and seeking out the border patrol agents to surrender, they are being vilified and labeled as "illegal aliens." My great grandfather would be labeled an illegal alien if he arrived today. To me he is neither illegal nor alien, he's family.

Our immigration policies need revision. We imprison those who are attempting to make better lives for themselves and their families, instead of addressing the underlying problem. Our administration and congress refuse to debate and update our immigration laws to accommodate today's realities. This has to stop. Both political parties must stop the rhetoric and do what is right for our future. NOW!

On June 29th, delegates at the annual Unitarian Universalist conference called upon church members to join national faith leaders and immigrant rights advocates from across the nation on July 31st to call on the White House to stop the wholesale deportations of immigrants and end the unjust laws tearing apart families, communities and congregations.

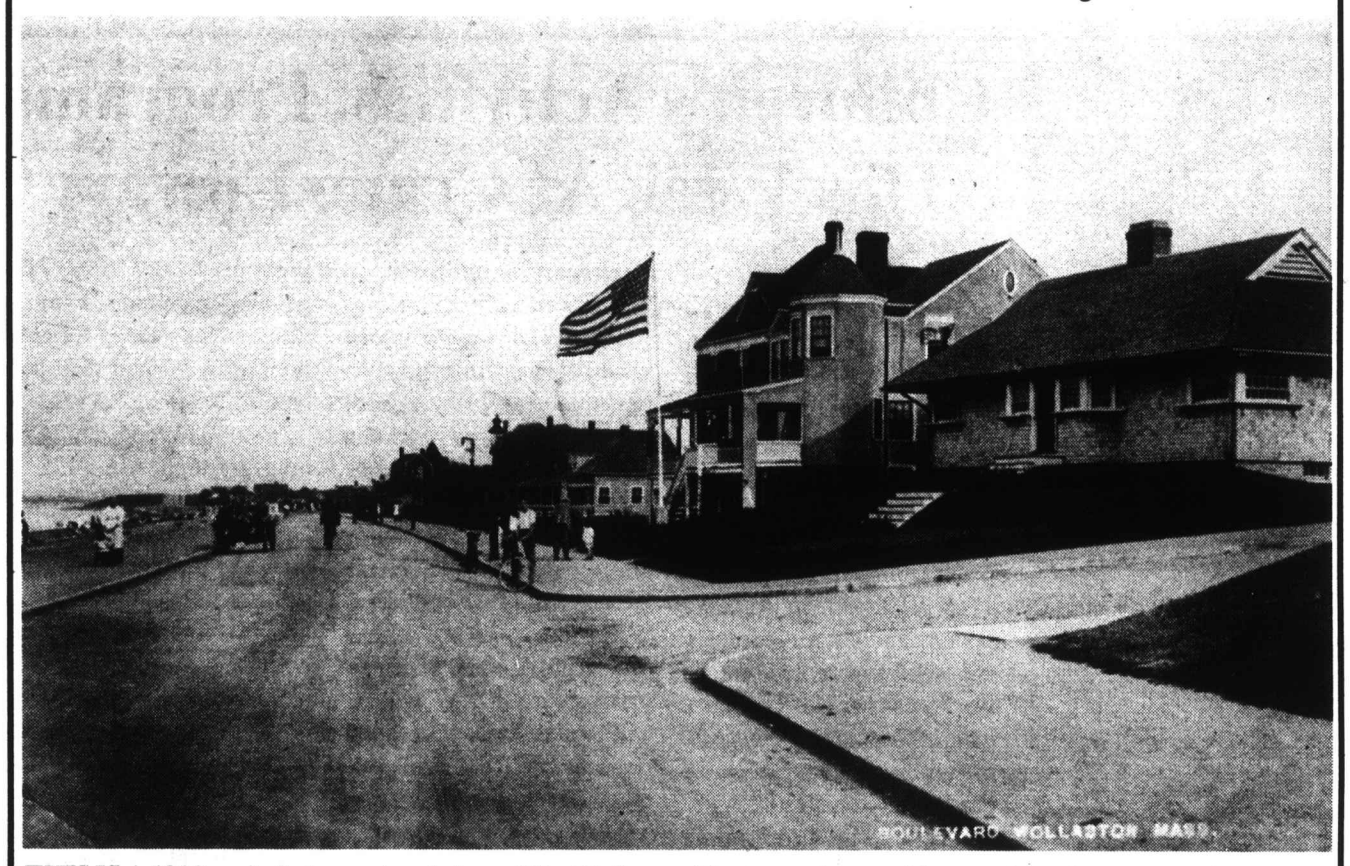
I choose to go to Washington, DC on July 31st to demonstrate against our immigration policy for all the reasons I have written here. I choose to risk arrest by committing an act of civil disobedience to bring attention to the plight of tens of thousands of adults and minors who are in detention due to the lack of funding of current immigration laws and the lack of any coherent and equitable immigration policy.

Throughout our history, civil disobedience has been used to bring attention to the wrongs of our society: notably, the colonists' rebellion against England, the suffragette movement, the civil rights movement, opposition to the Vietnam war and the marriage equality movement.

My hope is that when I stand at the White House fence with like-minded individuals, my actions will be recognized as the acts of a citizen who expects Congress and the President to act responsibly and humanely to pass immigration reform legislation that addresses today's issues. My actions in Washington, DC will continue the long legacy of United First Parish Church, a Unitarian Universalist congregation, in Quincy center, of taking action to address social injustices. In recent history we were a founding member of Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO) and our flying the banner across the front of our historic church that read "People of Faith for Marriage Equality."

I am proud to stand with fellow members of my denomination and those of other faith traditions in protest. I am proud to stand with Rev. Rebecca Froom, the newly called minister of my church. That I will be standing in support of immigrants on what would have been my mother's 90th birthday, makes my actions that much more poignant and significant. I know she would approve.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1912 real photo postcard view of the Wollaston Boulevard looking south from the end of Bromfield Street. The Metropolitan Commission had just built the Police Station and Bathhouse on the right. They also had just connected Bromfield Street to the Boulevard which had been built five years before. At the time cars were not allowed to park over the curb along the beach and had to be left on the roadway as seen on the left. That wasn't a problem at first since, according to the registration records of 1910, there were fewer than 300 automobiles registered in Quincy. The first seawall along here wasn't built until 1926. This bathhouse was demolished several years ago and the site is now known as The Richard Reilly Overlook. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

House Passes Reauthorization Of Adams Memorial Foundation

The House of Representatives has passed H.R. 3802, which extends the legislative authority of the Adams Memorial Foundation to establish a commemorative work in honor of former President John Adams and his legacy.

The bill extends the authorization for seven years through Dec. 2, 2020. It allows the Adams Memorial Foundation, the National Park Service, the National Capital Memorial Advisory Commission and all stakeholders to continue working toward the goal of siting and building a commemorative memorial honoring former President John Adams and his family and their role in shaping the nation.

Cong. Stephen Lynch said, "I am proud to represent the City of Quincy, nicknamed the 'City of Presidents,' in the House of Representatives. Quincy is home to the Adams National Historic Park, which honors the legacy of John Adams and the five generations of the Adams family who lived there until 1927.

"John Adams was a champion of independence, defender of due process, diplomat, Vice President, and President of the United States. John Adams has a lasting legacy as one of our most influential founding fathers. He is the author of the Massachusetts Constitution, the oldest continuously functioning written Constitution in the world and the document after which the United States Constitution was modeled. John Adams was a dedicated public servant who devoted his life to the ideals and values that built our country and which many of us continue to hold dear."

Lynch continued, "The fact that there is no memorial in our nation's capital dedicated to this remarkable leader and steadfast public servant is a glaring oversight that must be corrected. The passage of this bill allows the foundation the time it needs to find an appropriate location in Washington, D.C. for this worthy memorial."

The bill was originally introduced in the House of Representatives by former Cong. William Delahunt. The last authorization extension expired on Dec. 2, 2013. The Adams Memorial Foundation includes members of the Adams family and respected historians in its leadership.

In addition to Congressman Lynch, all eight members of the Massachusetts House Delegation are original cosponsors of the bill. A companion bill in the U.S. Senate has been introduced by Sen. Ed Markey and cosponsored by Sen. Elizabeth Warren.

Alternative Teel Field Proposal Makes Sense

The recent "Consider Alternative Proposals in North Quincy" letter to the Quincy Sun (June 17, 2014) suggesting a different way to go with Mayor Koch's $12 million plans for Teel Field made a lot of sense.

Instead of spending millions to take homes on Hunt Street to build a parking lot, the letter writer proposed to instead utilize an adjacent, much larger and overgrown parcel of vacant land, a parcel that is quite an eyesore.

Particularly attractive to this suggestion is that this parcel is well within the FEMA flood maps and thus cannot otherwise be readily developed. As such, utilizing it for parking, flood control and open space makes perfect sense, especially as the parcel should available for small money. Per the Norfolk Registry of Deeds, the parcel would appear to have a long outstanding municipal tax lien on it and could thus be obtained for little more than back taxes and legal expenses.

In turn, not only would homes not need to be taken, many millions could be saved and a longtime neighborhood blight as well as potential fire hazard would be no more.

Whether or not the Koch Administrations opts to consider such a reasonable as well as significant cost saving alternative, however, remains to be seen.

A Challenger For Koch?

I read in The Sun that Doug Gutro is thinking of a run against Tom Koch for mayor.

Is this the same Doug Gutro that voted for the destruction of downtown Quincy that we now have to look at? This is the same Doug Grutro that went along with the Adams Green debacle that is on going in front of city hall? Did Doug Gutro agree with the land taking at Hunt Street, forcing home owners to find a new place to live for a parking lot for students?

If the voters vote for Gutro, we get the same kind of person as we now have.

Tom Koch should not worry about Doug Gutro. Koch should worry about me.

New E-W Connector Would Raze Five Downtown Buildings

Five downtown Quincy buildings housing 12 current or former business establishments would be demolished to make way for the proposed Revere Road Connector.

A public hearing on the route proposed by the State Department of Public Works has been all but assigned after 45 downtown businessmen and others petitioned for it.

The connector is designed to hook up with the Burgin Parkway (Upland Rd.) Extension which in turn is designed to bring traffic from the South Shore into downtown Quincy.

(Editor's Note: The connector was constructed 21 years later at a cost of $18 million and opened in October 2011. The four-lane parkway from McGrath Highway to the Paul Harold Bridge and Burgin Parkway was dedicated as the Mayor Walter J. Hannon Parkway.)

CABLE TV IN QUINCY STILL 1 1/2 YEARS AWAY

Cable television in some 50 percent of the homes in Quincy is still at least a year and a half away.

George Riley, chairman of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Cable Television, told a hearing Monday that his group probably would make its recommendation to Mayor Arthur Tobin around Labor Day.

After that, he said, the bidding process, including public hearings, will take more time and then it will be 15 to 18 months for the winning company to construct facilities in the city.

'Discover Quincy Day' Saturday

Discover Quincy, the tourism agency of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, announces its first "Discover Quincy Day" of the tourist season will be held Saturday, Aug. 2.

Other "Discover Quincy Days" are set for Saturday, Aug. 6 and Saturday, Oct. 4.

On these three Saturdays, visitors and residents can experience Quincy and its history for one admission price.

Participants may purchase a Discover Quincy wristband for $5 that gives them admission for the day to the Adams National Historical Park which operates the birthplaces and summer White House of US Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, the Adams Crypt at the United First Parish Church, Quincy Historical Society Museum, Josiah Quincy House, and Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

"Many visitors to Quincy are familiar with the Adams story and the National Historical Park tour of the birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field," said Margaret Laforest, Director of Tourism for the Quincy Chamber. "Fewer are familiar with the 'Quincy' story, one of Massachusetts' leading families, and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead and Josiah Quincy House. We wanted to bring that inclusive experience to all visitors and residents alike and make it easy and affordable for them to enjoy more of Quincy's rich history this summer."

With the purchase of a wristband, visitors can visit one, two, three, four, or all five historic sites on Discover Quincy Days. They may use their own transportation and travel from location to location or they may take advantage of a shuttle that will depart from the Quincy Historical Society and run on a continuous loop between the sites from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In addition, participants can explore Quincy's history by walking in the footsteps of John Adams. A Walking Tour map provides a self-guided tour for visitors from the Adams Academy/Quincy Historical Society down Hancock Street. Along the way, a variety of statues and markers, such as the John Adams and Abigail Adams/John Quincy Adams statues and Granite Ball are highlighted. At the Hancock Cemetery, located across the street from the United First Parish Church, a historical interpreter will be on hand to guide visitors through the town's earliest cemetery.

Discover Quincy wristbands will be sold at all of the participating historic sites on Discover Quincy Days and in advance at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams Street or the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, 180 Old Colony Ave, Suite 300.

Not able to visit on the Discover Quincy Days, new for 2014, Discover Quincy will offer a similar combined admission valid until Nov. 10. For $10, visitors will receive a ticket and can tour each attraction when convenient for them. These tickets can be purchased online at DiscoverQuincy.com or at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

For more information, visit DiscoverQuincy.com or call the Quincy Chamber of Commerce at (617) 471-1700.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie
By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Zucchini-Pasta Bake

By MARIE

In today's recipe you don't have to boil the pasta or cook the zucchini, and it's a dish that can be enjoyed hot or cold.

My mother made this so much and we all loved it and I cook it to this day. She used preciatelli, but I have used bucatini (both are a wider spaghetti.)

ZUCCHINI-PASTA BAKE

2 medium sized zucchini
1 pound bucatini
Grated Romano cheese
1 tablespoon basil
Salt and pepper
1 can plum tomatoes (Fresh tomatoes are great for this dish in the summer.)

Season the tomatoes with the basil, salt and pepper and some grated cheese-set aside.

Break the pasta in halves and set aside. Cut the zucchini in slices and set aside.

In a slightly greased roasting pan start by placing some of the tomatoes. On top of that put some of the uncooked pasta, then some of the tomatoes, the zucchini, the cheese and layer until done topping it with the tomatoes and the grated cheese.

Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 35 minutes.

It can be served hot or cold.

Mexican Style Quinoa

By SUZIE

This is super easy and delicious, and of course, healthy! Quinoa is an ancient grain of the Peruvians who used the grain for stamina and energy. It is very easily digested, simple to cook, very quick and delicious.

MEXICAN STYLE QUINOA

2 Tablespoons olive oil
1 cup uncooked quinoa (rinsed well until water runs clear)
1 medium onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 red pepper, chopped
1 can (8 oz) tomato sauce
2 1/2 cups broth (I use either chicken or vegetable)
2 tsp chili powder
1 tsp cumin
sea salt
Fresh cilantro, avocado, salsa, for topping.

Simply saute onion, pepper, and garlic in saucepan with oil until fragrant. Add quinoa and toss for a few minutes. Now add the broth and tomato sauce as well as dried herbs, stir, cover, and simmer until liquid is absorbed, about 15 minutes. Season to taste with sea salt and toss with a handful of fresh chopped cilantro. Serve with sliced avocado and salsa, if desired! Great served with a nice large salad.

Okinawa has one of the world's highest population of centenarians (those living at 100 years of age or older). Okinawa, a district of Japan, is a group of islands southwest of mainland Japan. Elders in Okinawa are highly respected, and spirituality, physical activity, and a diet emphasizing natural unprocessed foods, are just some of the ingredients in the Okinawan recipe for a long healthy life.

This program is supported in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, and the Quincy Council on Aging.

Brian Collins Completes Service In Belize

Brian Collins of Quincy, a junior at Boston College High School, recently returned from building a house for a woman in Belize, Central America.

Collins, together with 11 classmates and two BC High faculty members, Shawn Ahern and Dr. John Sullivan, spent the first week of their summer vacation constructing a home for Josefina Garcia.

Collins and the BC High volunteers went to Belize to assist an organization called 'Hand in Hand Ministries' build homes for residents in Belize City. Founded by two brothers who saw an opportunity to make a difference, Hand in Hand provides simple yet stable housing for people in Appalachia and Central America.

The BC High group began each day with a prayer, breakfast and work at a building site, where they helped to construct a new 16' x 16' home for the Garcia family in Belize City.

The boys also visited and delivered shoes to the Hand in Hand Outreach Center, which provides day care and preschool services for children marginalized by poverty and disease. The shoes were made possible by the money raised from the end of the year BC High bake sale and video game tournament.

On the final few days in Belize, they had an opportunity to visit the Altun Ha Maya temple site, tour the Old Belize Museum, rest at the peaceful Caye Caulker beach, and enjoy the rich cultural diversity of Belize at a local Lebanese restaurant.

attributed the decrease to fewer Quincy residents taking out of town family members and friends to the church.

"From my observation we're not getting as many locals bringing in visitors to see the church and the crypt," Haynes said. "We used to get that quite a bit."

According to Haynes, visitation at the church as not been affected by the ongoing Adams Green roadwork in Quincy Center.

"No one has called to ask if they can still get to the church or to say it's an issue," he noted. "You still have access here and you can still get to City Hall."

Among the visitors who have come to the United First Parish Church this summer are Francis Adamo and Bryanna Barber of Bridgewater. They toured the church one recent afternoon after visiting the Adams National Historical Park.

"It was her first time. She had never been to the Adams houses or done any tours like that so I wanted to take her and show her all the historical stuff," said Adamo, whose grandmother was from Quincy and had visited those sites before. "That's why we came up here."

Barber was impressed with the sites.

"I thought they were gorgeous," she said. "I was surprised they preserved everything so well. You can feel the history in all those places."

Dr. Ed. Fitzgerald, the executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, is pleased with the number of visitors who have stopped by the Adams Academy this year.

"We're doing pretty well. It comes and goes but it's been all right," Fitzgerald said. "We've been getting a couple dozen people on a good day."

Visitors, he explained, are interested in several of the exhibits on display within the academy building at 8 Adams St. Among the more popular exhibits are those on the city's early history – including the Adams family and colonial Quincy – as well as exhibits containing information on shipbuilding in Quincy and on Howard Johnson's. Residents and others with ties to the city have also expressed an interest in viewing the documents housed in the historical society's library.

The historical society may also put an exhibit on the Civil War back on display due to popular demand. A display commemorating the war's 150th anniversary was on display from 2011 until Christmastime last year. Fitzgerald said a number of people have asked for information on the war this year, possibly because of the popularity of the 2012 Steven Spielberg film "Lincoln." An exhibit on the War of 1812 may also be supplemented.

The Josiah Quincy House on Muirhead Road in Wollaston has seen a spike in the number of visitors so far this year.

"We have had over 1,000 people on the property," said Melinda Huff, museum operations manager for Historic New England, the nonprofit that owns the historic 18th century home. "Usually we do that by the end of the year."

Huff attributed the increase to an influx of large bus tours, which previously haven't visited the site. In addition, a number of students in the Quincy School Department's Speaking and Writing for English Language Learners (SWELL) program have been able to visit the home.

"Things have been great this year. We have had a number of large bus tours, which we haven't had in the past," Huff said. "We've also expanded our outreach to the school community with the SWELL program. We've been thrilled to open our doors to more people."

Historic New England has also hosted several meetings on site including meeting of more than 50 members of the non-profit's council, an advisory board that sets the direction and long-term goals for the organization. More than 80 employees are set to visit the Josiah Quincy House during a staff appreciation day later this year.

The increase in visitation to the Josiah Quincy House comes amid an ongoing restoration project, which is being financed through Quincy's Community Preservation Committee funds and an anonymous benefactor. Huff said Historic New England has tried to bring attention to the site to showcase the improvements.

"With the CPC money we've received and money from our own anonymous funder, we've been putting a lot of work into the house," she explained. "We're making an effort to bring attention to the house."

The United First Parish Church, Adams Academy, and the Josiah Quincy House as well as the Adams National Historical Park and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, are participating in Saturday's Discover Quincy Day. The event, organized by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For $5, visitors can purchase a wristband giving access to all five sites; a shuttle will run from the Adams Academy and loop around all the sites throughout the day. The wristbands can be purchased in advance at the Adams Academy or the chamber's headquarters at 180 Old Colony Ave; they will be sold at all five sites on Saturday.

Two more Discover Quincy Days are planned this year, on Sept. 6 and Oct. 4.

Tourism can play a key part in the local economy. A study recently released by the National Park Service, the operator of the Adams National Historical Park, indicated visitors to the site spent $15.7 million last year within 60 miles of the park on items such as lodging, fuel, and food and drinks. Visitors to the Boston National Historic Park – including Faneuil Hall, the Bunker Hill Monument and the Charlestown Navy Yard – spent $123.8 million last year within a 60-mile radius, which includes Quincy.

Tom Anacone, the owner of Craig's Café at 1354 Hancock St. has noticed an increase this summer in the number of tourists his restaurant serves. He estimates 15-20 tourists visit on an average each day, with more on weekends, Monday, and Fridays.

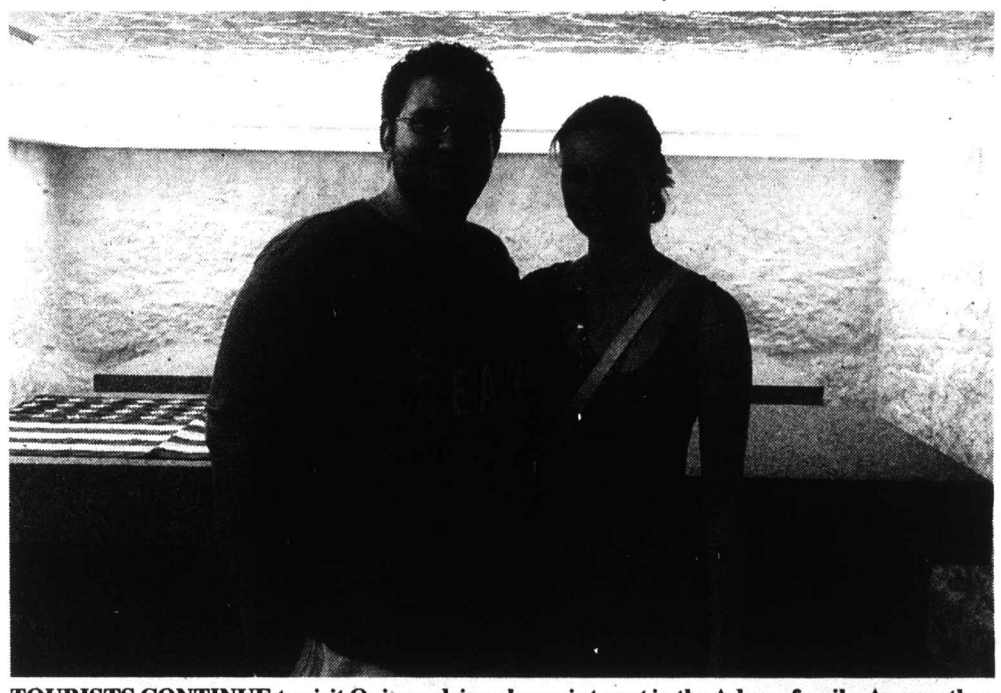
"We've seen more than usual," Anacone explained. "This will be my third summer [owning the restaurant] and each year we've seen more and more."

Tourists, he said, often stop by while they wait for a trolley to depart the visitor center for the Adams National Historical Park. Craig's Café also receives a number of visitors who are staying at the Crown Colony Marriott.

While road construction is underway in Quincy Center as part of the Adams Green project, Anacone said his business hasn't been affected by the work – his weekday crowd consists mostly of regulars who work nearby and no construction is taking place on weekends.

"Our regulars are working so they're here anyway," Anacone noted. "On weekends there is no construction."

Between 10 and 20 tourists a week stop by Rogers Jewelry at 1402 Hancock St. according to Jeff Bertman, whose family owns the store. That number is consistent with the number of tourists who visited the store last year.



TOURISTS CONTINUE to visit Quincy, driven by an interest in the Adams family. Among those to visit the city this year were Francis Adamo and Bryanna Barber, who came from Bridgewater to visit the Adams National Historical Park and the United First Parish Church. This photo was taken in the church crypt where Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives Abigail and Louisa Catherine are entombed. Quincy Sun Photo/Scott Jackson

Breen has been a featured singer with choral groups and bands doing material as diverse as soul and gospel to bluegrass and straight-up country. Classically trained, she has performed on the same bill with such greats as Olabelle, Uncle Earl, Jack Hardy, Paul Geremia, and Cheryl Wheeler. One of the band's three songwriters, Breen regularly contributes to the band's ever-expanding repertoire of originals.

Carlen is a well-known figure in the New England and New York acoustic music scene as a performer, composer, and guitar instructor. A welcome member of many bands, he helped found Wide Open Spaces as well as Acoustic Planet, recipient of Phoenix Magazine's Reader's Poll for Best Acoustic Act, and winner of the Winterhawk band contest.

Dross started his musical journey playing drums, but switched to doghouse bass once he realized it was the next-to-least inconvenient instrument to lug around. With detours through jazz and heavy metal, he found his way to bluegrass jams where his bass is always in demand. A veteran of other bands, including Jona's Run, Dross's rock-steady bluegrass timing forms the foundation of Acousticana's rhythm section.

A veteran of the Boston scene, Stroker introduces decades of influences as diverse as Zydeco, Zappa, Tex-Mex, classic jazz and R&B into the musical gumbo that is Acousticana. Stroker shares songwriting duties with Ellen and Matt. His recently released CD of originals includes everything from jazz to hip-hop, blues to bluegrass, and back again.

The band may be joined by Jenni Lyn Gardner (mandolin, guitar, banjo, vocals) and possibly John Donahoe (banjo, fiddle, guitar, mandolin, sax).

The "Concerts on the Lawn" music series is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

State Rules Bypassed Police Candidate Be Placed Atop New Civil Service List

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state's Civil Service Commission ruled the city improperly bypassed a candidate when it hired more than a dozen new police officers earlier this year.

The commission ordered Quincy to place Justin Ruggiero, 30, atop its list of candidates for the position of police officer, finding he was improperly bypassed when the department added 15 new officers in January. The decision means he will be on top of the list for the next round of appointments to the Police Department, though he would have to go through the normal hiring process again, including medical and psychological screening.

The city said it based its decision to not hire Ruggiero, a Marine Corps veteran who earned a degree in criminal justice from Bridgewater State, based on a psychological examination. A second examination was conducted in March after a pre-hearing conference with the Civil Service Commission had taken place. The doctor who conducted that exam concurred with the findings of the initial test.

The Civil Service Commission, however, later determined neither doctor was familiar with the standards set by the state's Human Resources Division. Both doctors then found that Ruggiero did not have a medical condition that would preclude him from being able to serve as a police officer according to the state standards.

The commission also found that the doctors' initial findings were contradicted by testimony from Ruggiero's long-term employer, who called Ruggiero a "hard-working and serious individual who is a reliable employee." Ruggiero, the commission's findings noted, is also in a long-term, committed relationship with his fiancée, an elementary teacher.

"When the HRD Medical Standards have not been applied, a psychological evaluation should not deny career opportunities to individuals who otherwise have records like that of Mr. Ruggiero," Cynthia Ittleman wrote in the commission's 13-page ruling.

In addition to placing Ruggiero atop the list of candidates for a future opening, the city must give him a retroactive Civil Service seniority date if he is ultimately hired. The commission's ruling said that retroactive date is not intended to give Ruggiero any additional or retroactive compensation and should not be used to determine service time for either retirement purposes or computing eligibility for any future promotional exams.

Quincy was given 60 days to prepare a psychological evaluation plan, which must be approved by the state. The city was instructed not to perform any psychological evaluations of police and firefighter candidates until the state signs off on the plan.

Mayoral spokesman Chris Walker responded to the commission's decision in a statement Tuesday.

"There appears to be some misinformation about how the process works, and that's unfortunate. There were openings for all of the candidates who proceeded to the background process so no one was bypassed in favor of any other candidate or to reach additional candidates on the Civil Service-approved hiring list," Walker stated.

"In this case, a psychologist and a psychiatrist both independently recommended against appointment, which is not something the mayor can ignore. It would be the same if a candidate could not perform the mandated physical test.

"The process then moves to appeal at Civil Service, which determined that the city had not filed a required formal protocol for psychological testing with the state. That's a valid issue that the Civil Service raised, and one that has never been addressed historically in the city. When made aware of it, the city immediately moved to resolve this issue."

and major highways.

"I love Boston, I love Cambridge, but I'm a start-up," Rasmussen explained during a recent interview in the company's new lab. "Through the MassChallenge I had beautiful office space, but for technical space I didn't need anything that fancy. I needed a place to do, sometimes, some pretty grungy work. I got lucky with Quincy because I have not only technical space, but it's very attractive.

"It's the best of both worlds. For me and Eric it's close – it makes a wonderful commute. For people and students in Boston it's an easy commute. We are a 10-minute walk from the Red Line and we're very close to I-95, I-93, and Route 3. It's a gem."

"I grew up on the South Shore so I have a natural affinity to this area," Sandberg added. "In addition, what's fun about this particular building is literally downstairs a little over 16 years ago I found out my wife and I were going to have twins.

"So here we are trying to start a business and 16 years ago I was trying to start a family."

Rasmussen, who grew up in rural Virginia and West Virginia, became interested in prosthetics after her cousin was injured in an accident on a farm while she was a graduate student.

"One of my cousins, who was a welder by trade, would return on the weekend to help his grandfather on the farm. He would commute from as far away from Detroit. He got tangled with a hay spreader and he had a very life altering injury. He lost a lot of tissue in his leg, which was not able to be reconstructed," she said.

"As the resident scientist in the family, I was put in charge of looking at prosthetics. Even at the time I liked what I saw for the leg but I was really disappointed with what I saw for the hand and the arm."

Prosthetics arms, Rasmussen noted, generally fell into one of two categories: those which are more functional but don't look lifelike and those which look lifelike but aren't very functional.

"I thought if you could simply make a material that responded to a stimuli you could bridge that gap between form and function and have both," Rasmussen said. "That's what I consider the beauty of science: if you can think it, science can do it. It may not be easy but it's attainable."

Rasmussen has been working on Synthetic Muscle since 2003; she had been working for a different company before then but decided to branch out on her own. Ras Labs is now focused on getting Synthetic Muscle to the point where it can be used in prosthetics.

"Most electroactive polymers bend, but the ability to contract and expand really sets us up for lifelike biomimetic motion," she said. "I have something that contracts and expands. That's really cool, but how do we make it work? So I'm moving into a very mechanical area, learning as I go."

The material, when placed in a moist environment, has the ability to contract or expand, depending on whether a positive or negative electrode is used.

"When I embed a positive electrode it tends to contract. A lot of that volume change is solvent outflow. This is in a moist or wet environment, so to operate it it's important it stay moist. When I reverse that polarity, then I get expansion even beyond its original weight and I can cycle back and forth," Rasmussen explained.

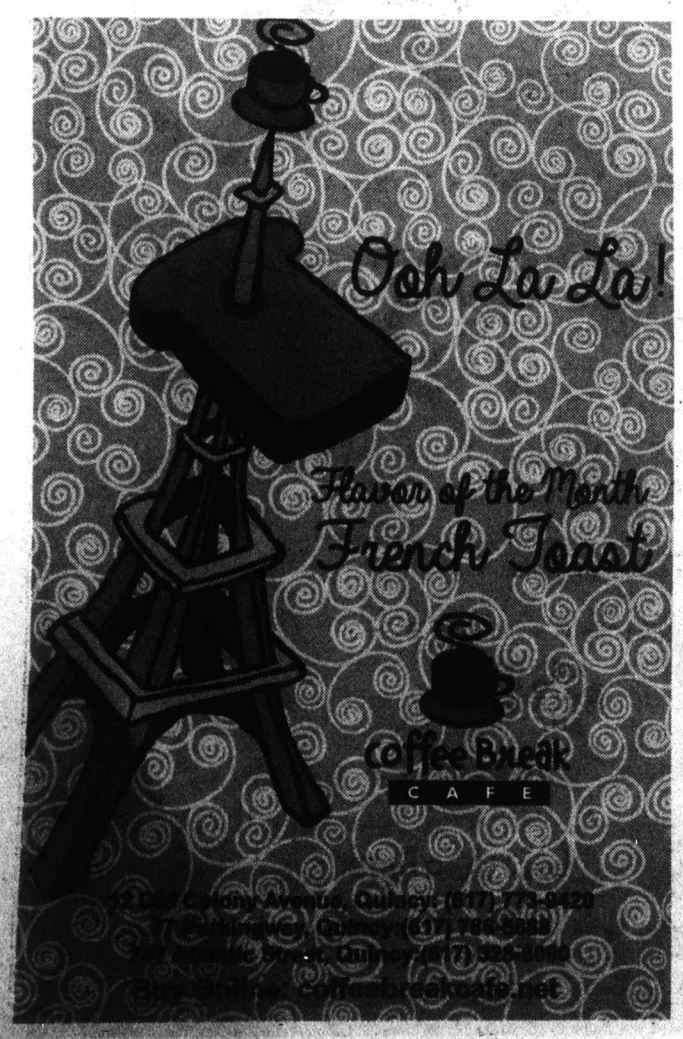
The ability to both contract and expand separates Synthetic Muscle from the real thing as human muscle can only contract; muscles in the body form agonist-antagonist pairs, such as the biceps and triceps in the arms. Testing has found the ability to have Synthetic Muscle contract and expand creates increased work outputs.

"With some forms actuation, we found that by using zones of expansion and contraction we were getting work outputs roughly double that of human work output," Rasmussen explained. "That was actually pretty exciting."

Ras Labs received funding earlier this year from the Center for Advancement of Science in Space (CASIS), which is interested in the potential of using Synthetic Muscle in robotics. CASIS will be sending the material to space for testing aboard the International Space Station (ISS) later this year. As part of that project, Ras Labs is currently working with the U.S. Department of Energy's Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory at New Jersey's Princeton University. At the lab, the Synthetic Muscle is being bombarded with radiation to see how it affects the material.

"There are indications my material might be inherently radiation resistant, plus I have ideas to make it even more so. That's where I got the attention of CASIS. Some of those [materials] will be tested later in the year," Rasmussen explained.

"As part of that project, what we're doing ahead of time is pretesting a lot of the materials at Princeton at their PPL. We're hitting it harder than the ISS…We tested it with levels equivalent of a trip to Mars and back and then even a little harder."



Koch Taps Boston Firm As Downtown Advisor

"The quality of all the proposals and the interested firms was very impressive, something I believe speaks to a level of confidence the market and the development community continue to have in the progress we've made and the direction we're heading."

Redgate, which operates as both a full-scale development firm and as a strategic advisor, will act only as the latter for the City. The firm has provided strategic planning for projects in Kendall Square in Cambridge, Fan Pier in South Boston, and for the San Juan Center District in Puerto Rico, among a host of others. In Quincy, the firm was the chief strategic advisor for the owners of a six-acre site at Marina Bay and its recently approved mixed-use development.

"We are thrilled to be joining the City's team," said Lisa Serafin, Principal of Redgate. "Quincy Center has tremendous historical assets and an attractive proximity to the core. This, combined with the City's vision and the work already completed, forms the foundation for the future of Quincy Center. Our role is to work with the Mayor and the City to determine how the pieces will best fit together to keep it moving forward."

A review committee comprised of Planning Director Dennis Harrington, Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines and Chief of Staff James Fatseas reviewed all of the proposals and recommended two finalists to the Mayor, who chose Redgate.

Funding for the advisory contract will be paid for through money already paid to the City under the previous development agreement.

While Redgate and the City team are focused on the broader planning for Quincy Center, the redevelopment's first step is moving on a parallel course, according to the mayor's office. Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, which remains a major development investor, its continuing its work on plans for what is known as Block 4 – the area that includes landmark Granite Trust Bank building and the enjoining area.

Flood Insurance Relief Law

across the state, triggered by the federal Biggert-Waters Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012 and the implementation of new FEMA Flood Maps.

"I was happy to support this legislation, as it will alleviate the exorbitant flood insurance costs that so many homeowners throughout Quincy are facing due to the new FEMA flood maps and changes to the Federal Flood Insurance Program," Keenan said.

"While this state law doesn't solve the larger flood insurance problem at hand, it's one thing we as state legislators could do to provide much needed relief to our constituents while we wait for the Federal Government to implement a meaningful and fair flood insurance program."

Rep. Mariano said: "This was an important bill which I am glad to see signed into law, we felt it was necessary to do what we could at the state level to provide some relief to so many Quincy families facing these huge cost increases due to the change in federal law.

Ayers stated: "Everything needs to be done to protect the homeowners and business owners from the outrageous ideology behind the Biggert-Waters Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012. I was happy to join with my colleagues in voting to support of this important legislation."

"This new law will help homeowners to pay what they owe on the mortgage and let the homeowner decide what risk coverage the homeowner is willing to assume," Chan said. "This state has no influence on the FEMA flood maps, but working together we were able find a tool to help homeowners."

Hunt added, "This new law is very important because it prevents homeowners, especially those on a fixed income such as the elderly, from being priced out of their homes due to astronomical flood insurance requirements."

The delegation urged those impacted by the new flood maps and with concerns about what amount of insurance may be appropriate, to contact their insurance companies and the holders of their mortgages.

Shipyard Parcel Sold

Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea during in the 1950s during the Cold War before being decommissioned in 1959.

It was mothballed for years before returning to Quincy in 1995 to great fanfare. The following year, the Salem opened as a museum ship meant to honor all the men and women who worked in the Fore River Shipyard over the years. As a museum ship the Salem was known for hosting overnight programs for Boy Scouts and other community groups. It also hosted an annual haunted ship program in the fall leading up to Halloween and was home to Kilroy's Mini Golf.

Then-Mayor James Sheets, who helped coordinate the campaign to bring the Salem back to the shipyard, said getting it back home was a major win for city and all those involved in the effort.

"Getting the Salem here back in the '90s was a long effort. It was a big win when we got the Salem," he said Monday in a phone interview. "Having it come back to Quincy was a wonderful thing."

The Salem's pending move to East Boston, Sheets explained, is a mixed bag. While the ship will no longer be in Quincy, it will remain nearby.

"Obviously we would like to keep it in Quincy, but Boston and Quincy are right next to each other and both have a history of building ships," Sheets said. "It's a mixed bag. We don't want to see it go but we're glad it's going somewhere close to Quincy."

Sheets added the Salem would likely benefit from its new location in East Boston, where it will be berthed near the historic Nantucket Lightship.

"It probably is a better location in terms of using it for functions," the former mayor said. "The Salem will benefit from the visitation."

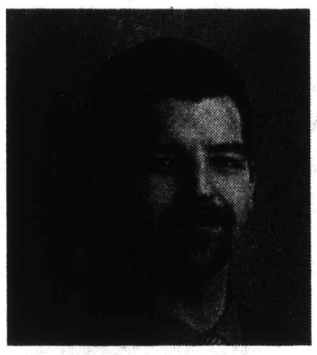
Steven Everson, Carolyn Lewis New Keohane Funeral Directors



STEVEN EVERSON

CAROLYN LEWIS

Funeral service is not the career of choice for many but sometimes the call to serve resonates loudly and in unusual ways.

For Steven Everson, over nine years of service in the U.S. Army and a real interest in human biology led him to funeral service. For Carolyn Lewis, becoming a funeral director did not even cross her mind until she took a course on death and dying in college.

Although they took different paths, Everson and Lewis both arrived at the same place recently when they swore oaths to care for the deceased members of our community and their families.

"We are thrilled to see Steve and Carolyn achieve this goal," said Keohane Funeral Home Co-President Dennis W. Keohane. " They have worked hard and they have demonstrated a sincere commitment to caring for grieving families."

Everson, who lives in Holbrook, is based in the firm's McDonald Keohane locations in Weymouth. In looking forward to caring for families he commented, "I am especially interested in facilitating opportunities for families to see and say goodbye to someone for the last time. So many families have told me how important and meaningful this was for them."

Lewis, a Quincy resident who currently serves families from the firm's Quincy and Hingham locations, said of the being a funeral director, " It is an honor to help families through one of the most difficult times in their lives. I never take that for granted and find it so personally rewarding."

Everson and Lewis represent a growing trend in funeral service. The National Funeral Directors Association reports many of those currently enrolled in funeral service programs are not from families in the industry but are choosing funeral service because of a personal experience or fit with individual competencies. Not only are many of these students new to the industry but 57% of them are female which is also a break from the past.

"The image of the funeral director is constantly evolving," said firm Co-President John Keohane. "Yet the one constant is the care and compassion for the families we serve that is so clearly demonstrated by Steve and Carolyn."

Everson and Lewis join a team of Keohane professionals caring for families from locations in Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham. Keohane Funeral Home, with locations in Quincy, Weymouth and HIngham, is an independent, family owned firm.

Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center Opens Quincy Location

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center, Inc. (BCNC) recently held a ribbon cutting ceremony in celebration of its new location at 275 Hancock St.

About 100 people were in attendance including City Councillor Michael McFarland, Board President of BCNC Selina Chow, and Executive Director of BCNC Giles Li.

With 44 years of providing adult and youth language education and social services to the Asian community, BCNC has been offering its services to local residents for two years but officially opened their Quincy office on April 1.

BCNC was founded in 1969 by Boston residents and community leaders who ultimately formed the Quincy School Community Council. They are headquartered in Boston's Chinatown at 38 Ash St. and have another location at the Josiah Quincy Elementary School at 885 Washington St. Financial support comes from governmental grants, private contributions, special event profits, and participation fees.

"Our Quincy-based Adult Education program ranked third in the entire state last year, and our youth program attracted more than 40 middle and high school students to engage in leadership development, academic activities, and community service," said Li. "We have been engaging with our partners and constituents in Quincy, and learning how to be a supportive member of this community. Soon, BCNC will increase offerings to support more families."

The Quincy expansion of BCNC was made possible in part by key funders including Bank of America, The Blossom Fund, The Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, the Quincy Arts Council, and the State Street Foundation.

City Completes Second Annual Bicycle Count

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The city's second annual bicycle count conducted by the Mayor's Bicycle Commission was recently completed by roughly a dozen volunteers who tallied the number of cyclists seen at five bike-friendly locations in Quincy over the course of three days.

In total, 417 bike riders were counted on Quincy Shore Drive, the Neponset Bridge, at the Beale Street and Hancock Street intersection, at the Beale Street and Adams Street intersection, and on Hancock Street near City Hall. Counts were taken in the morning and evening on June 3, 7, and 12 because "the weather is better in June and school was still in session so traffic was average," said City Planner Kara Chisholm.

Volunteers included members of local group Quincycles which promotes responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise, members of the Planning Department, and members of the Mayor's Bicycle Commission.

The gender of the cyclist was recorded as was his or her direction of travel and whether they were riding on the sidewalk or on the road. Over about two hours, the numbers were jotted down in 15-minute increments on a spreadsheet.

The count indicated that the largest number of riders were present in the morning and evening on the Neponset Bridge, suggesting that commuters were bicycling to and from work over the bridge from Dorchester and Boston. Quincy Shore Drive, which had the second highest amount of cyclists, had seven times as many riders in the evening indicating that the area appealed more to recreational bicyclists. Those larger numbers may also have been due to easier access on shared bicycle and pedestrian lanes, said Chisholm.

Of the 417 riders, 19 percent were women and 81 percent were men. These numbers are in keeping with recent trends seen in Boston in which 30 percent of riders were women and 70 percent were men.

Chisholm said that while there is no definitive way to determine why such a gap exists between genders, it is believed that attire has a large part to do with it. "It's harder for women because of what they wear," she said.

"We're trying to use this data to ensure that the city has prudent infrastructure data," said Director of Transportation Planning Kristina Johnson, who is an advocate for Quincycles.

While Chisholm and Johnson couldn't say whether bicycle ridership has gone up in the city over the past several years, they were able to say that drivers seem more considerate of cyclists possibly due to the presence of police officers who monitor areas used heavily by bike riders. "The awareness has gone up," said Chisholm.

"We counted last September so what's important is getting a baseline," said President of Quincycles Nathan Pipho, who last year counted 17 cyclists in the afternoon on the Neponset Bridge.

The bicycle count will take place again next year and possibly expand to other locations in the city according to Chisholm. This year's numbers will assist in the planning and expansion of bicycle lanes and accommodations in keeping with the City of Quincy Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan which was released in January and calls for 23.22 miles of proposed bike lanes.

Devon ran his 50 meters in a time of 7.48, nipping the second-place finisher by .11 seconds. He is a student at Saint Agatha School.

Saturday is the 37th annual and final Hershey National Championship. The competitors will fly to Pennsylvania today (Thursday) to take part in three days of events surrounding the championship.

Wollaston Sr. Babe Ruth Battles On

Team Chasing State Tournament Championship

By BILL GRIFFIN

Pay attention. This gets complicated.

It was a long and winding road which featured the good and the bad for Wollaston's Senior Babe Ruth team last week. The good news is, as of Monday, they were still playing baseball. The better news is they had their pitching rested and ready for what could be a two-game run to the state title.

The bad news is they lost three playoff games by a total of four runs. A win in two of the three would have kept them alive in the chase for the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League crown and made them solid favorites to win the state tournament.

In the league playoffs, Dedham won twice (2-1 and 2-0 in 11 innings) to eliminate Wollaston in their best-of-three series. Wollaston had won the first game of the series, 6-0 behind Matt Kerin. Dillon Darcy (7-1 on the season) and Jonathan Leveillee (seven shutout innings) were brilliant in the losses. In each defeat, Wollaston was one swing of the bat on several occasions from moving into the championship round against Hyde Park.

The best came in the opener of the double-elimination state tourney. Kerin shook off three unearned runs and fired a tough, smart four-hitter to back the big-game hitting of David Cooper and carry Wollaston to a 6-4 decision over Merrimack Valley at Adams Field Saturday morning.

In the afternoon, Wollaston faced defending champ Cape Cod who had defeated Wollaston in the finals of the states last year. Because the league playoffs just ended on Thursday, the pitching was drained. Neither Leveillee nor Darcy was available.

Sammy Keane and Mike Saccoach stepped up, battled back from three unearned runs in the first and threw six innings of shutout, one-hit baseball at the defending champs. However, Cape Cod survived several late threats and escaped with a 3-2 decision.

On Sunday. Wollaston jumped to a 2-0 lead over old friend Milton, before rain postponed the game in the second inning. The contest will be made up this week. The winner of the Wollaston-Milton game will play Cape Cod for the title Saturday. The site and time for Saturday's game is still to be determined.

Hopefully all of the above is as clear as crystal. Wollaston played five tourney games and started a sixth in one week. That's a lot of drama and a lot of baseball. At the end of it, they were still standing, and they had Darcy, Kerin and Leveillee all rested and available for full-time duty.

"It's been exciting. That's for sure," said assistant

BRACING FOR A FALL

As the popularity of skateboarding increases, the number of injuries sustained by skateboarders continues to rise. While contusions, lacerations, and abrasions are among the most common injuries, fractures also frequently occur. Perhaps the most common fracture involves the wrist, as boarders' outstretched arms reach out to brace for falls. The wrist is composed of eight small bones plus the two forearm bones (the radius and ulna), which come together to form multiple large and small joints that enable the wrist to bend and straighten, move side-to-side, and rotate. Depending on the severity and extent of the fracture, surgery may be required, followed by lengthy immobilization. With this prospect in mind, skateboarders may want to wear protective wrist guards.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe that the more you know, the quicker you will find pain relief, the more control you have of your spine condition, and the better the opportunity you have to regain and maintain the quality of life you want and deserve. Young children, teenagers, adults, and senior citizens can all benefit from chiropractic care. We provide gentle and safe chiropractic care for the entire family. You get your teeth, your blood pressure, and your eyes checked, why not your spine? Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Optimal recovery from a wrist fracture typically takes several months, after which there may be stiffness or aching and the potential for future arthritis.

coach Bob Griffin in what might have been somewhat of an understatement.

Kerin kept them alive with his marathon effort against Merrimack Valley. He mixed his curve and fastball well and he pitched with great heart. He struck out six and walked three, but his numbers do not tell his story. Three of the runs were unearned. The fourth came on a seeing-eye double which barely reached the outfield dirt, a stolen base and a ground ball.

He never gave in to a single batter. He threw 126 pitches because he had no choice. Wollaston had nobody else.

"He shook off the errors and he pitched with composure," said coach Steve Reardon. "He's done that all year. We hurt ourselves with our defense like we did in the league playoffs, but Matt made the big pitches for us and gave us a chance."

Cooper led the 10-hit parade for Wollaston with two singles and a booming double which set up the winning two-run rally in the seventh. He had been in a slump of late, but he scored three runs and crushed the ball out the No. 8 slot in the lineup for Wollaston.

"His head had been flying off the ball, but he did some work in the cage last week, and it showed," said Reardon. "He's a good fastball hitter and that's what he saw today. He was right on the ball."

Kerin helped himself with a double, triple and two runs scored. Mike Pugsley had a clutch game at shortstop. He did a good job of situational hitting with a single, walk, sacrifice fly, and an RBI in four trips. He also made a fine stop and throw from deep in the hole for an out in the second. Padraig Geaney had two hits, two RBI and a run scored. Alex Linskey chipped in with a single and Johnny Marsinelli scored a run.

"Kerin is another player who did a lot of work in the cage. Nobody works harder on his hitting," said Reardon. "Pugsley had a big game. I think he's the best shortstop in our league."

The teams battled tied at 4-4 into the seventh. Evan Feinberg walked, and Cooper stung his double to put runners on second and third. Pinch runner Phil Czajkowski scored the winning run on a balk and Puglsey drove his sacrifice fly to bring home Cooper for the 6-4 final.

Against Cape Cod, Keane spotted his fastball well for four innings, and Saccoach was untouchable in relief. Marsinelli helped greatly with a terrific defensive game behind the plate, throwing out two base-stealers and picking off a runner at first.

After Cape Cod went up, 3-0, Wollaston cut it to 3-1 in the bottom of the first. Pugsley and Kerin walked and forced a throwing error on a double steal for the run.

Wollaston cut it to 3-2 in the fifth on a single by Czajkowski (two hits) and two errors. Wollaston had several chances, stranding seven through the first five, but could not break through. Marsinelli and Kerin each had hits for Wollaston.

"We showed our resilience all week," said Reardon.

That they did.

Interior Decorating Tips With Barbara Graceffa

I have a lot of flat paper and roll up vinyl classroom maps. How can I use them in my large family room I plan to redecor? Joanna

Dear Joanna,

Lucky you! Maps can be expensive to purchase for those who want to use them in a coastal, global, or traditional décor. They are even great in a child's room.

Consider using them as wallpaper on an accent wall. You can either use wallpaper paste to adhere them or use small clear pushpins or white map pins on the corners. The maps do not have to be the same size but a continuity of color will help. Feel free to overlap them as the fit will not be perfect and this add to the interest of the wall.

Use a roll up map as you would a large piece of art and hang it on the wall. Beware, they are typically heavy and will require proper hardware to carry the weight.

Other ideas include cutting the maps and placing them under glass coffee or end table tops. Wrap a few cylindrical vases with maps for a different look. Decoupage them onto a buffet or sofa table top or onto the drawer fronts of a piece of wooden furniture.

I have an extra large kitchen and always wanted a kitchen island. I really want something unusual . Any advice? Jeri

Dear Jeri,

Nowadays, almost anything goes! In fact, the most interesting kitchen islands are those that are not the same cabinets, countertops, or color as wall and base cabinets.

If you like the cabinet look, go to a kitchen store with a photo of your cabinets and countertop (or even bring one of your drawers!) and seek something similar. Maybe the cabinets will have a square frame instead of a rounded top or vice versa. May be they will be the same color but have a different design. If you are lucky enough to find a very close match, consider getting them in a different finish or color.

Consider different heights for food prep (36"H), bar top seating (42"H), or regular kitchen chair seating (29"H). You can build a banquette into one side for extra seating at your kitchen table.

For a different look, you can use two short bookcases, a farmer's table, or an old bureau as the island and add a butcher block or other counter top. Or shop at a restaurant supply store for a prep island, if you like the stainless steel look.

Air Conditioner Alternatives

This Is A Hammer

By SAMANTHA MAZZOTTA

Q: What is the difference between an air conditioner and an evaporator? Is one better for my home? I just need something to cool the front room occasionally in the summertime, and I hate window units. -- George F., Burlington, Vt.

A: An evaporative cooler can be a cost-effective alternative to an air conditioner, but it's not always the best choice. Also known as swamp coolers, evaporative coolers add humidity to the air in your house. They bring in air from the outside, pass it over water-soaked pads, and blow that humidified air inside.

If you live in a hot, dry climate like the Southwest, a swamp cooler can be a very efficient way to cool the house. In hot, humid climates, not so much, because the air in the house is already humid.

Air conditioners work well in humid climates because they help remove some of that humidity from the air. While they're not dehumidifiers per se, the unit recirculates air in the room. As that air passes over the air conditioner's evaporator coil, the moisture in the air condenses and is drained from the unit, while the air is blown back into the room. That process helps cool the air and reduce mugginess.

Both units need regular maintenance: An evaporative cooler's pads need to be changed every few weeks while in use, and an air conditioner's filter needs to be cleaned or replaced each month in the warm season.

If you hate lugging window units in and out of the window each year, look into buying a portable air conditioner. These typically cost more than window units (sometimes twice as much for the same BTU level) but can be rolled from room to room as needed and stored out of the way when not needed. Just remember that the portable unit's ventilation hose must vent outside, meaning the unit needs to stay near a window. And you probably will need to empty the condensation tray regularly, in cheaper units.

A final alternative is natural ventilation. If you get cool nights or steady breezes, open windows in the early morning and late evening, and invest in heavy curtains to cover windows in which the sun shines during the afternoon. Add an electric fan to keep fresh air circulating constantly. In certain climates, this can give you a comfortable home except for the hottest, most humid days of the year.

HOME TIP: BTUs are important in buying an air conditioner, so find out the minimum BTU level you need for the space you're trying to cool before purchasing.

Upon arrival, the Officers met with the Manager, who said that he called because two homeless men were in the parking lot screaming at each other and intimidating customers. He said that he approached the two men and asked them to leave. One of the men left without incident, while the second male refused to leave and stated, "I know all the cops - I have the scan app on my phone. Call them - they won't do anything to me, so f@#$ you." When the Manager pointed to the male suspect in the parking lot, the Officers recognized him from past run-ins.

The Officers advised the suspect that the Manager wanted him trespassed and removed from Wal-Mart property. The suspect then sat down on the guard rail inside the Wal-Mart lot and stated, "I have no where to go, so I am not leaving. You can't do s@#$, it's a parking lot". The Officers urged the suspect to leave the property to avoid arrest but the suspect retorted, "Well, I'm not leaving so, I guess f@#$ you." At that point, the suspect made it clear that he was not going to comply with a lawful order, so the Officers placed the 44 year old, local homeless shelter resident under arrest for "Trespassing after notice." Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE..... On Sunday July 20, 2014, at approximately 11:07 p.m., Officers Lauren Lambert and Robert Kelly were dispatched to the area of 45 School Street on a report of a male smashing car windows. While en route, Communications provided a description of the suspect. Officer Lambert arrived within a minute and as she turned right onto Hancock Court to check the rear parking lot of 45 School Street she observed a suspect matching the description. The suspect suddenly ducked down behind a vehicle.

As Officer Lambert closed in, the suspect began walking very quickly across School Street toward St. John's Church. The Officer caught up to the suspect and requested identification.

As he searched for his I.D., Officer Lambert observed that the suspect had a hand towel wrapped around his right hand and in his left hand he was carrying a clear plastic cup with several dollars of loose change in it. The Officer pat frisked the suspect and then read him his Miranda rights, which he said he understood. The suspect was instructed to empty his pockets. He took out several plastic cards (medical cards, AAA cards and personal identification cards) from his front right pocket and attempted to throw them in the mulch behind him. All the cards and identification belonged to the same named person.

Officer Kelly arrived on scene and guarded the suspect while Officer Lambert checked the area where she first observed the suspect. She found the front passenger window of a Cadillac smashed in and the center console was open with paper strewn about the front seat area. The suspect, a 53 year old local homeless shelter resident, was placed under arrest for "Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle in the Nighttime and Malicious Destruction of Property."

As the suspect was handcuffed, several small pieces of automobile glass fell from the towel he was holding. In his front left pocket was a key chain with several store cards and a worker's compensation benefits card belonging to the vehicle owner.

The owner of the vehicle met the Officer at his vehicle and confirmed that a cup of loose change was missing along with the contents of his center console. He said very little was in the car because he just purchased it yesterday. Officer Lambert then spoke with the witness, who said that she had her slider door ajar and heard a loud banging sound coming from the street. She stepped out onto her balcony and observed the suspect trying to break the window of a vehicle so she called "911." While she was talking to the Dispatcher, she heard the loud sound of glass breaking. Nice Work goes out to the Officers and to the witness who acted before the crime occurred, which helped Officer Lambert catch the suspect!

QUINCY'S MARILYN REISBERG won first place in the mixed media category at the 19th Annual Arts Affair at Marina Bay held over the weekend. Her art piece is entitled "Like Daughter." Reisberg was taking an art class, her daughter joined her and the teacher sculpted Marilyn while Marilyn sculpted her daughter. She loved the sculptures so much she painted them and put the pieces together calling them, "Like mother, like daughter." The painting won first place in its category. City Eyeing St. Mary School

To Alleviate Overcrowding At Lincoln-Hancock School

By SCOTT JACKSON

City and school officials are weighing the possibility of using the former St. Mary School in West Quincy to help alleviate overcrowding at the nearby Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

In 2010, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston closed the St. Mary School on Crescent Street, merging it and St. Ann and Sacred Heart Schools into the Quincy Catholic Academy amid declining enrollment.

The city recently began discussions with the parish about using the building as a way to relieve overcrowding at Lincoln-Hancock, Mayor Thomas Koch explained in an interview. Previously, officials floated the idea of moving fourth graders from Lincoln-Hancock to the planned new Sterling Middle School, but the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) chose to keep the middle school at its current grade 5-8 setup.

"I'm going to be looking at the old St. Mary School to see what kind of condition that it is in, to see if that plays in any way. For example, could that be just a kindergarten place? Could that take the pressure off of Lincoln-Hancock and just ease it up a little bit?" Koch said.

"The question is what kind of condition is that building in. You're not only talking about the educational requirements, but the ADA requirements today for public buildings are pretty extensive."

To that end, the mayor and School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro will visit the Crescent Street school later this summer. It is unknown if the city would simply lease the building or purchase it outright.

"Later in the summer he (DeCristofaro) and I are going to have a walk with the pastor to take a look at the viability of such," the mayor said.

"It could be a lease deal, where the parish leases it to the city. I don't know that they'd be interested in selling it. It has not gotten

Consultant's Downtown Study Due In 90 Days

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Boston-based firm retained by the city to serve as a consultant for downtown redevelopment will issue a report within 90 days outlining the next steps Quincy should take moving forward.

Redgate Real Estate Advisors was hired by Mayor Thomas Koch to advise the city going forward, as first reported by The Sun last week. The mayor discussed Redgate's role and the future of Quincy Center – including Adams Green – as part of an hour-long interview in which he also touched on other issues, such as the Quincy Housing Authority and his plan to expand the North Quincy High campus, among others.

Roof, Exterior Repair Work At JQA Birthplace

Historic Site Remains Open To Visitors

By SCOTT JACKSON

The birthplace of the nation's sixth president is getting a facelift this summer, but remains open to visitors.

In early June, workers began repairing the roof at the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin Street. Adams, the sixth president, was born in the saltbox house in 1767. His father, John Adams, used the home for his law office. It was inside the house that the elder Adams, along with his cousin, Samuel, and James Bowdoin drafted the Massachusetts Constitution, the oldest written constitution in the world.

The roof work, being funded by the National Park Service at a cost of $64,000, is expected to wrap up as early as this week, according to Kevin Kelly, facility manager for the Adams National Historical Park. The roof's old shingles, made of western red cedar, are being replaced with new ones from the same type of tree.

Following completion of the roof work, the exterior of the home will be worked on. Kelly said about 25 of the clapboards will be replaced, along with 10 window frames and a half-dozen or so window sashes. After that, the house will get a fresh coat of paint on the outside. The National Park Service has allocated $70,000 for that work. The funding expires at the end of the federal government's fiscal year on Sept. 30, and Kelly is hopeful the work can be completed by that point.

The birthplace will remain open for the duration of both projects.

"When people plan ahead for vacations, they're disappointed to find a site is closed for repairs," Marianne Peak, the park's superintendent, explained.

"Through most of our work we try to do it without impacting visitors. If not we work around it."

City Eyes St. Mary School To Ease L-H Overcrowding

Mayor Also Comments On New Sterling, Building A New Squantum Elementary School that far along."

Assessing the viability of the former St. Mary School is just one option the mayor is considering to tackle overcrowding in the city's schools. Enrollment in Quincy Public Schools is on the rise, coupled with an increase in the amount of space needed for each student.

"I'm going to be looking at a number of options with the superintendent, really to dig down to see where are the real challenges," Koch said.

"We're increasing in population. Our numbers are up pupil-wise. They're not up dramatically, but the difference today is the requirements for space per pupil, there is a lot more square footage needed. When I was in elementary school, there were classrooms, there was the library, and there was the office. Now you've got science labs, computer labs, special education rooms – all those things needed to deal with the challenges in education.

"It's not just the increase in pupils that is causing the challenge. It's the change in the educational environment and the need for additional space to deal with those challenges."

The idea of building a brand new school, as opposed to replacing an older building, remains in play. But doing so could prove more expensive because of the cost of acquiring land, the price of which is not reimbursed by the MSBA.

"The problem with trying to locate a new school is we're a built-out city so you're looking at heavy land costs," Koch said.

Redistricting, or ending the city's open enrollment policy, is another option that could be contemplated.

"I'm one member of the School Committee. As chairman and mayor, I hold the purse strings, obviously, but policy-wise everything will be on the table," the mayor explained. "If we have to redistrict to make things work, that will be on the table."

During his interview, the mayor also commented on the proposed Sterling Middle School. With the School Committee giving approval to the MSBA's preferred configuration, which calls for a school with the ability to hold 430 students, the discussions between the city and state will shift focus to the financial aspects of building the new Sterling.

Koch had no estimate for how much the new Sterling will cost or how much the MSBA will reimburse the city for the construction project, but expects at least 70 percent reimbursement from the state. The MSBA provided 80 percent reimbursement for the Central Middle School project though certain expenses, such as the cost of acquiring land and legal fees, were not reimbursed.

It's also unknown at this point whether the MSBA's model school program will be used at Sterling as it was at Central. Under the program the design of a recently built school is adapted for a school planned elsewhere, which can save on design costs and expedite the process. Koch favors using the program for Sterling if given that choice.

"Obviously if there is an option for me to save money for the taxpayers, I'm going to grab that option, provided it's a good model," he said. "And I'd have to believe it would be."

While the two schools are being built within a few years of each other, Sterling and Central may have different designs. The new Sterling will hold about 200 fewer students than Central. The design will also factor in the presence of fifth graders in the school.

"Central you're building a school for 620 students. This is a 430-student school. Right off the mark, that's a huge reduction in square footage needed. So it will look different," Koch explained.

"It will be a quality building. There may be a different concept and design, because we have fifth graders there. We're designing a building where the fifth graders won't be near the eighth graders; that will be part of the design.

"It's early on layout. Obviously it will have a gym. It will have a cafeteria. Hopefully we'll have a full-sized auditorium. Those are things we're going to get into with the state as far as what they want to reimburse. They call a lot more of the shots than they used to."

There is no timetable for when the new Sterling should be ready to open, but the mayor said construction could begin in early 2016 or possibly sooner if the model school program is used.

With the process to replace Sterling well underway, the city has identified the next school in need of replacement. As reported previously, Koch plans to go to the state to start the process of building a new Squantum Elementary School. He may do so as soon as early 2015, but has held off so far while the MSBA works with the city on building a new Sterling and replacing windows at several Quincy schools.

"It's actually in the self-study process," Koch said when asked about his plans to replace the Squantum Elementary School.

"We haven't gone forward to the state yet because we've been in the cycle for Sterling and in the cycle for new windows. I'm anticipating in one of the future cycles, perhaps after the first of the year, we would then start the process with the state of looking for replacements for Squantum."

The current Squantum Elementary School opened its doors in 1919 as a four-room school hosting grades 1-8 and was subsequently expanded over the past century. Now, with the school turning 95, there is a consensus that it needs to be replaced.

"You can talk to anyone in our maintenance department. You can talk to any of our school personnel. Before I announced it I asked them all, 'what's the worst school. physically?' Every one of them said Squantum," Koch said.

"There is a recognition that it's an old sneaker. The additions over the years when it was modified were done in a poor quality way. It's going to need to be addressed.

"We're a few years away from shovel in the ground."

Fort Square Pumping Station Work Underway

Work to overhaul one of one of the primary sewage pumping stations for Quincy Center and West Quincy is now underway at Fort Square, Mayor Thomas Koch's office announced Tuesday.

The aging pump station – located on School Street near the Star Market – is undergoing a total rehabilitation of its mechanical system. The project is among a series of water, sewer and drainage projects underway or completed across Quincy as the city continues its wide-ranging plan to upgrade infrastructure, some of it more than a century old, citywide.

The $3.6 million project is financed through the Water and Sewer Department's capital budget and low-interest financing from a state revolving fund created for major water and sewer system upgrades. It has no impact on the City's general operating budget.

"These kinds of project are vitally necessary and affordable, and they are precisely the kind of projects that we are going to continue to pursue as we move forward with restoring and protecting our public infrastructure," Koch said.

The pump station is designed to relieve the surcharging of the trunk sewer that runs parallel to the Town Brook. It has a design capacity of over 3,500 gallons per minute (7 million gallons per day) and pumps sewage directly to a high-level sewer, ensuring that wet weather and high flow events do not cause sewer overflows.

Crews are now mobilizing on the site, and work will continue for the next several months, city officials said.

Sales Tax-Free Weekend Set For Aug. 16-17

Beacon Hill lawmakers reached a compromise last week, agreeing to hold the state's tax-free weekend Aug. 16 and 17.

The House and Senate had previously passed legislation setting a tax-free weekend in August; the House's legislation called for holding the tax holiday on Aug. 16 and 17 while the Senate bill set the tax-free weekend on Aug. 8 and 9.

On July 30th, a conference committee with legislators from both chambers agreed to set the tax-holiday for Aug. 16 and 17. The compromise is included in an economic development bill, which is set to be voted on Thursday as the legislature's formal session comes to an end. Both chambers will need to approve the bill and send it to Gov. Deval Patrick for final approval.

The sales tax holiday was originally proposed to boost retail sales during a typically slow time of the year. Traditionally, the tax holiday has been held on the second weekend of August; this year it will on the third weekend of the month.

As in past years, the sales tax will be waived for items under $2,500 during the tax holiday.

The 90-minute program is suitable for ages 8 and up. In the event of rain, the program will be cancelled. If weather conditions are questionable, call 617-333-7404, extension 104.

GETTING PERSONAL

As lovers of fine jewelry continue to look for ways to make more personal statements in precious metals and gemstones, interest in pendants with micro-sized engraving has increased. Whether a woman chooses to display a pendant with her birthstone or engrave her name or birthdate in gold, she is looking for something that separates her from everyone else. For those interested in limited edition jewelry and pieces with serial numbers, the accent is on exclusiveness. On the other hand, much more affordable pieces with horoscope signs and symbols also bring special meaning to one's individuality. No one knows a woman better than herself, which is reason enough for her to purchase the pieces that best reflect her own personal style.

Whether you choose to engrave a personalized message on a ring or pendant for a special occasion, customize your selection with gemstones that have meaning to the recipient, or desire a one-of-a-kind piece, your jeweler is an excellent resource for information and suggestions. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches and earrings. Manet Marking National Health Center Week

Manet Community Health Center is celebrating National Health Center Week Aug. 10-16 with a special Progress Showcase and Open House at its newly renovated North Quincy practice site, along with Open Houses at five other locations.

Manet is adding 27 additional exam rooms to its North Quincy practice site at 110 West Squantum St., along with new specialty services including an optometrist-staffed Vision Center opening in October/ November and an on-site pharmacy anticipated for January 2015. Also in the works is a new Center for Older Adults and the integration of Behavioral Health services.

"We are excited to mark National Health Center Week at this period in Manet's history, when the role of health centers nationwide is more critical than ever," said Henry "Hank" Rittal, Ppresident, Manet Board of Directors. "Come and visit our new North Quincy site, and stop by our other sites to see our progress for our patients and community."

The North Quincy Showcase and Open House on Tuesday, Aug. 12, will begin with a special program, guided tour and healthy refreshments from 8:30 to 9:45 a.m. Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch will speak. Also expected to attend are Congressman Stephen F. Lynch, State Senator John Keenan, and Majority Leader Reps. Ronald Mariano, and state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan and Walter Timilty.

The Open House follows from 10 am to 2 p.m.

Manet recently achieved recognition as a Level 3 Patient-Centered Medical Home at its North Quincy practice site—the highest-possible ranking—from the National Committee for Quality Assurance.

Manet's other open houses, all 10 a.m. to 2 pm, are:

- Monday, Aug. 11: Houghs Neck, 1193 Sea St. & Snug Harbor/Germantown, 9 Bicknell St.
- Wednesday, Aug. 13: Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St.
- Thursday, Aug. 14: Taunton, Manet's newest practice site, One Washington Street, Suite 900, Mill River Professional Center.
- Friday, Aug. 15, Hull, 180 Washington Blvd. and Nantasket Beach.

Visitors can tour the sites, register as a new patient, get back-to-school readiness information, schedule back-to-school physicals, and signup for health coverage, the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) and the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) Nutrition Program. Also available are confidential HIV and STI testing and training in nasal Narcan to prevent opioid overdose. In addition, each open house will include nutritional education, giveaways, healthy snacks, and a daily raffle.

The theme for the 2014 National Health Center Week is "Celebrating America's Health Centers: Local Engines for Healthier Communities."

Community health centers like Manet, supported by the U.S. Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), treated approximately 22 million people in 2013. One out of every 15 people living in the U.S. now relies on a HRSA-funded clinic for primary care.

In addition to increasing access to quality health care, health centers positively affect local economics. Manet has a yearly economic impact of more than $18 million on the South Shore region and hires from the community. "We're an essential part of the supportive fabric of the communities we serve, dedicated to increasing health and well-being for our patients and for our neighbors," said Cynthia H. Sierra, Interim Chief Executive Officer.

Roof, Exterior Work At JQA Birthplace

The ongoing work at the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is the first such repair project there since the early 1990s, Kelly noted. Last summer, the National Park Service replaced the roof at the neighboring John Adams Birthplace.

In addition to the projects at the birthplaces, work took place earlier this year at the Old House at Peace field, also known as the Adams Mansion. The linoleum floors inside were replaced over the winter as they had started to crack and became a safety hazard.

"Replacing the linoleum in the Old House was critical because of the wear and tear," Peak said.

The National Park Service had allocated $57,000 for the linoleum replacement, but the work came in under budget, costing only $32,000 to complete.

The portico, or front porch, of the Old House was worked on over the spring at a cost of $75,000.

Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey recently sponsored a three-day youth basketball camp at Quincy High School for local children in grades 3 through 8.

More than 30 students, mostly from the Germantown Neighborhood Center, worked not only on improving their basketball skills but also on other important life skills.

"We tried to talk to the kids about making good decisions," said Paul Wilder, a spokesman for Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey and one of the camp's organizers and instructors.

The three-day basketball camp, funded by Morrissey's office, wrapped up last Friday with three speakers including District Attorney Morrissey. Lisa Devine, Quincy Police Department's school resource officer and Lt. Gerard Ceurvels from the Quincy Fire Department spoke to campers about making good decisions while Dr. Wayne Westcott, an instructor of exercise science at Quincy College, emphasized the importance of exercise and healthy eating.

Camp counselors surprised Morrissey by bringing in a birthday cake for him and one of the campers. Morrissey celebrated his 60th birthday on Saturday.

In addition to the police and fire department, campers also saw a police dog demonstration led by Sgt. Frank Reynolds and Officer Mike Monaghan from the Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's office. The officers presented a K-9 demonstration with two police dogs, Randy and Evonne, who are trained to identify drugs and perform searches and seizures.

Besides Wilder, Aaron Calixte and Joe Bunce-Grenon, both from Stoughton, served as camp counselors.

Let's Welcome Immigrant Children

The acceptance of illegal immigrant children in Massachusetts will not benefit Quincy immediately. It will in the long run.

The greatness of the United States can be attributed to its political system, its fortunate physical position on the continent, and its people. Energetic and intelligent folks have come from all over the world to improve their situations.

Each of my grandparents came to America to have their children born here. When war clouds began in Europe, my parents came to America. I have read of a Chinese woman who did the exact same thing, that is, to have her child born here. There is a resentment that these children came here illegally. This status is a case of geographic propinquity. It would be foolish to reject them for this reason.

While there are thousands of illegal immigrant children, this is a country of some 300 million. This country needs young people. Our citizenry is aging.

Once having reached retirement age, as I have, relaxation is the order of the day. Retirement is time for pleasant things like writing letters to The Quincy Sun. It is heartrending to see interviews with children in war zones whose greatest hope is for the fighting to stop so they can get an education.

Let us welcome the children that are here now. They are our future.

Falco, Mullen Face 'Intensive Interviewing' For Police Chief's Job

With the retirement of former Police Chief Francis X. Finn approved by the State Retirement and Pension Boards, Mayor James A. Sheets said that he will begin "intensive interviewing" with the two candidates to succeed Finn next week.

Sheets said he plans to meet with Sgt. William Falco and Lt. Francis Mullen for two hours each next week.

If all goes according to plan, Sheets said he will name the new chief by Sept. 1 Falco was the top scorer in a Civil Service examination while Mullen finished second.

REHIRING UNLIKELY, MORE LAY-OFFS LOOM

With the city slated to lose $1.5 million in local aid this fiscal year, Mayor Sheets said it is unlikely 47 laid-off workers will be rehired this year and it is possible that more employees will be cut from the payroll next year.

The state legislature voted to reduce local aid by four percent to balance the state budget. With the governor expected to approve the measure, Quincy's local aid will drop from $35,535,759 to $34,100,000.

Sheets called the legislature's action "the worst news of my administration" because it's really the first time the legislature has itself cut local aid.

Chocolate Sour Cream Cake

By MARIE

Here is a recipe that I found recently for a chocolate cake made with sour cream instead of butter, and pretty easy to bake.

And I also include in today's column an easy and a delicious way to make a banana dessert.

CHOCOLATE SOUR CREAM CAKE

1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1 cup sour cream
1 egg (beaten)
1 teaspoon baking soda
3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
1/4 teaspoon salt

Mix the sugar and the sour cream together. Add all the other ingredients, and bake in an eight inch square baking pan for 35 minutes.

BANANA, CARAMEL SURPRISE

2 bananas (sliced)
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup caramel sauce (or butterscotch sauce)
Strawberries for topping
Ice Cream

Heat the butter, and add the bananas. Saute for a couple of minutes, and add the caramel sauce and cook until well blended.

Serve over vanilla ice cream topped with cut strawberries. It is so easy to make and is a gourmet treat.

Walnut Spread

By SUZIE

So, before you read the recipe, here is some information regarding walnuts that you might not know.

Walnuts help reduce "belly fat," help decrease LDL cholesterol (and increase the good kind) increase heart healthy omega 3's in red blood cells, help to reduce inflammation, in human subjects have been shown to reduce the risk of pancreatic cancer, and in rat and mice studies, have been shown to reduce the risk of breast cancer, may help with bone loss and improve overall bone health, and contain high amounts of important minerals (like magnesium) which is found to be lacking significantly in our diets in general.

This is a terrific spread and takes only a few minutes. Great for a summer party or a quick and easy appetizer!

WALNUT SPREAD

1 can garbanzo beans
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup basil leaves
1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
2 Tblsp. lemon juice sea salt and pepper
1 small clove garlic, minced (or garlic powder, just 1/4 tsp or so)

Drain beans and reserve liquid. In food processor, combine 1/4 cup reserved liquid with all other ingredients. Cover and process. (You may need to add more liquid as you go along to make it nice and smooth) Serve with raw vegetables, crackers, or spread on your next healthy sandwich . . . whatever you enjoy!

Bike Month At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy hosts a special Bike Movie presentation Thursday nights during August at 7 p.m.

It kicks off Aug. 7 with "Bikes Not Bombs." Each year Bikes Not Bombs collects roughly 6,000 used bicycles and tons of used parts from our supporters around Greater Boston and New England. They ship most of these bikes overseas to economic development projects through our International Programs in Africa, Latin America, and the Caribbean.

Bikes that don't get shipped often land in their Youth Programs where teens learn bicycle safety and mechanics skills in the process of earning bikes to keep for themselves. Their retail Bike Shop also reconditions and sells some of the donated bikes that they receive, employing many graduates of their programs. The Shop's profit from the bicycle sales, parts sales, and repairs goes towards funding their youth and international work.

Jodi Sugerman-Brozan, Bikes Not Bombs' Executive Director, will attend the Aug. 7 presentation.

Other films featured are "Power to the Pedals," on Aug. 14 at 7 p.m.; the independent film "The Bicyclists" on Aug. 21 at 7 p.m.; and "Pee Wee's Big Adventure" starring Paul Reubens and Elizabeth Daly on Aug. 28 at 6 p.m.

The Aug, 14th screening will be followed by a panel discussion with the film maker, Quincy's director of Transportation Planning, and local bicycling activists.

In addition to bike movies every Thursday evening in August, the Library will host two workshops. Learn all about bike maintenance on Aug. 20 at 6:30 p.m. and get all your questions answered at the Bikes De-Mystified workshop on Tuesday, Aug. 26.

The entire month is co-sponsored by QuinCycles.

HOW STRESS AFFECTS YOUR ORAL HEALTH

Stress not only harms your heart and digestive tract, induces hypertension, and causes skin problems, it can also affect the soft tissues of the mouth, teeth, and gums. To begin with, stress (as well as fatigue and allergies) increases the risk of developing canker sores, which, although not contagious, can be painful. They usually disappear in seven to ten days, during which time over-the-counter topical anesthetics may help quell discomfort. Additionally, stress causes tooth-grinding (bruxism), which has the potential to chip and even fracture teeth. Finally, extreme stress may cause some people to overlook brushing and flossing or even to eat sweets, and even short-term stress increases the likelihood of "gingivitis" (bleeding gums), which can progress to serious gum disease.

While there are promising treatments for stress, the management of the same is mostly dependent on the ability and willingness of a person to make the changes necessary for a healthy lifestyle. There is an abundance of innovative technologies and devices available to help us improve the quality and comfort of care we deliver. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We emphasize preventive dentistry for the entire family. When was the last time you had a dental check-up? 5-8 Grade Configuration OK'd For New Sterling

School Committee Unanimously Approves Enrollment Certification With MSBA

By KRIS KALABOKAS

School Committee members voted unanimously to sign an enrollment certification agreement with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) that gives the new Sterling Middle School a 5-8 grade configuration and 430 student enrollment figure at a special meeting of the School Committee last Wednesday.

Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro had originally proposed both 4-8 and 5-8 configurations but in a letter sent on July 14, the MSBA recommended Sterling remain 5-8 due to future capacity concerns.

"While the district's middle schools appear to have adequate capacity in the near term, the anticipated growth in the student populations served by those facilities will cause many if not all of those facilities to reach or exceed capacity," the letter stated.

According to a capacity analysis performed by the MSBA, "it would be appropriate to include 50 additional students in the design enrollment for the Raey E. Sterling Middle School, to relieve existing and anticipated overcrowding in other middle schools in the district."

The MSBA arrived at the 430 figure by looking at the amount of students who advance from one grade to the next, the city's birthrate, the rate of annual home sales, and the issuance of building permits.

"This decision of the four to eight or five to eight is really not coming from the MSBA. This is coming from enrollment," said DeCristofaro. "Enrollment drives the bus."

"They looked at our enrollment projections and then they allowed through this other analysis additional students so that's how they arrived at the 430 number and again, balanced with historical trends it's a number that certainly that middle school can live with."

School Committee member Noel DiBona was not as convinced as DeCristofaro that the school could handle what he called a "storm" of students looking to go to the new Sterling because of Quincy's open enrollment policies.

"The biggest issue we're going to run into right now is it's built for 430 [students]. I know we're going to run into an issue down the road where it's not big enough," he said. "I can guarantee you that everybody is going to want to go to Sterling because they can't fit into Central. We're already packed at Central at 620 and we're at the capacity there."

"I forecast that happening at Sterling."

Central has the largest student body of all of the city's middle schools and sees the most requests for open enrollment. In 2013 alone, 53 requests were made and 21 were granted.

DiBona said that even though Sterling will be 50 students below the maximum enrollment rate when the school finally opens, it will not be able to handle the influx of students coming from the growing K-4 student population which increased from 2,902 in 2004 to 3,711 in 2013. He also said that parents looking to take advantage of current open enrollment policies will place their children in the new school because of the appeal of a modern building fitted with up-to-date technology.

The inability to expand off of the new building will also pose a problem in the future according to DiBona.

"I don't think this is going to solve the problem and when the MSBA says that you can build it for 430 you have to have a certain amount of green space, you have to have a certain amount of parking, you have to have a certain amount of guidelines for this," he said.

Committee member Anne Mahoney has been the most vocal in her opposition of the now scrapped 4-8 configuration and while she was happy to see the findings of the MSBA, she still was displeased with how the process played out.

"One of the disappointments that I have was that we didn't do it early enough – if we were going to be discussing alternative enrollments such as four to eight – because we could have made different plans," she said.

Mahoney's attempt at proposing a resolution to further address enrollment issues throughout the entire public school system, and discussing a more proactive rather than reactive approach to the city's growing student population as to alleviate what she called "very bad tension in our community" was quickly tabled by Mayor Thomas Koch who cited open meeting laws.

"We were suggesting that the reason we were putting the fourth graders into middle school was because we had overcrowding in the elementary schools and our way to solve it was reactionary by putting fourth graders in middle school," she said, reiterating the findings of the MSBA which show a steady increase in student enrollment between 2004 and 2013 in grades K-12 and predict kindergarten enrollment to be 795 students this September.

Mahoney said that while the five to eight configuration was preferable over the four to eight, she still was concerned with how the grade five students would be treated in a middle school setting and questioned if they would be receiving an elementary or middle school curriculum. She also noted that middle schools do not receive Title 1 benefits, leaving Sterling's grade five students, as well as Point Webster Middle School's grade five students, at a disadvantage over all other grade five students who are in Quincy's elementary schools.

Title 1 funds are awarded to schools with a high percentage of low-income students and can be put toward English proficiency programs for English Second Language (ESL) students or toward programs catering to children with special needs.

DeCristofaro called signing the enrollment agreement with the MSBA the first benchmark of the process with the second being the execution of a feasibility study which would review the school's educational program, document current conditions, and establish a basic design with an architectural team who would share their plans with the building committee.

Following the study, the cost of constructing the school as well as the reimbursement rate to the city will be determined.

"There is tremendous hope within this decision. A tremendous hope for incremental improvement for every child at Sterling...but I have to tell you that these are unbelievable schools," he said. "I'm very proud of the work that we do."

Koch, who chairs the school committee, said that agreeing on the enrollment figure was a step in the right direction. "I think that we have made incremental progress in our system. We can't resolve everything with one vote or with one sweeping action," he said. "We've leveraged our funds, we've leveraged our political will as a community and we're making great progress.

"Here we are tonight moving on a new Sterling Middle School. Let's not lose sight on the joy in that and what it's going to mean to our system city wide," he said.

Mulvey To Supervise New Central Principal DeCristofaro

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The School Committee voted 6-1 last Wednesday at a special meeting at City Hall to designate Deputy Superintendent Kevin Mulvey as the supervisor of Richard DeCristofaro, Jr., who recently was hired to be the new principal of Central Middle School.

The new principal – who served as the Central's assistant princpal for three years – is the son of Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"As the father of [DeCristofaro, Jr.], he's got a direct conflict of interest," said Quincy City Solicitor James Timmins. "We disclosed that to the body during the appointment process."

The position was posted May 23 and remained online until June 13. Approximately 25 applicants submitted resumes. The pool of applicants was narrowed down to six. Four of those six withdrew their applications and DeCristofaro, Jr. was ultimately chosen on June 27 to head the school based on his experience level.

DeCristofaro recused himself from the hiring pro-

SJC Upholds Ruling Against City In Woodward Case

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state's highest court has upheld the lower court's ruling that Quincy breached its fiduciary duties as a trustee of a fund benefiting the Woodward School for Girls but set aside a judgment of $3 million against the city, remanding the award back to the lower court.

"We're very pleased the court vacated the damage award, which was the most troubling aspect of the decision," City Solicitor Jim Timmins said in response to the court's ruling. "We'll be prepared to present evidence at the rehearing so the issue is more properly considered."

While he was satisfied with the Supreme Judicial Court's decision to set aside the $3 million judgment, Timmins said he was disappointed the court rejected Quincy's argument it was protected from the suit under the concept of sovereign immunity. Timmins noted the SJC ruled Quincy implicitly waived that protection when it became trustee of the funds in question according to Chapter 258 of the state's general laws, which were signed into effect in the 1970s – decades after Quincy became trustee and after the Woodward School was named beneficiary.

"I don't see how it (Quincy) could have waived the protection when the law had not been enacted," Timmins said.

The decade-long dispute between Quincy and the Woodward School began in 2005, when the chairperson of the school's board of trustees requested a full accounting of two trust funds that benefited the school – the Adams Temple and School Fund, established by John Adams in 1822, and the Charles Francis Adams Fund, established in 1886. The Woodward School sought the full accounting because it received lower than anticipated payments from the funds the previous two years.

In July 2007, the school filed a complaint with a member of the state's Supreme Judicial Court after not receiving the information it sought from the city. The dispute was transferred to probate court, and a special master was appointed to gather pertinent documents regarding the funds' assets filed since the Woodward School was named the beneficiary in 1953.

A 13-day bench trial followed the special master's report. At the end of the trial in February 2011, the judge ruled Quincy failed to keep accurate records of its stewardship of the funds; failed to obtain appraisals for real estate in the trusts and sold property at less than fair market value; failed to act on professional investment advice; and failed to comport with its duty of loyalty to the funds.

As a result of those findings, the judge ordered the city to pay nearly $3 million to the school – including $1.6 million in prejudgment interest and $1.1 million for unrealized portfolio gains. The city was also removed as trustee of the fund.

Quincy appealed the judge's decision to an appellate court; the Supreme Judicial Court transferred the case from the appeal's court. In a ruling dated July 23, the SJC upheld the lower court's ruling that the city breached its fiduciary duties .

"Finally, and most significantly, Quincy failed to invest with the long-term needs and best interests of the income beneficiary in mind, creating a portfolio that consistently provided income but that left the principal vulnerable to inflation and, as a result, depreciation," Associate Justice Robert J. Cordy wrote in the 50-page decision.

"Accordingly, based on these considerations, the judge's ruling that Quincy committed a breach of its fiduciary duty of prudent investment was not clearly erroneous."

The SJC set aside the $3 million award, remanding it back to the lower court. The lower court's award was based on specific investment advice given to the city in 1973 regarding diversification of the Adams Temple and School Fund. Quincy argued during its appeal that it did not need to use specific investment advice. The SJC agreed with the city on that point, setting aside the award.

"An award of damages cannot be based solely on what the trust's investment portfolio performance would have been had the trustee complied with certain, specific advice. Such reliance on a potential investment portfolio necessarily and improperly employs the benefit of hindsight. Unfortunately, this is precisely the formula the trial judge employed here," Cordy wrote in the decision.

"The award must be based on more than just the unheeded investment advice a trustee received, and should instead consider the totality of the circumstances as they would have informed prudent investment decisions over the relevant time period."

A related lawsuit was filed by James DeGiacomo, the Boston attorney the lower court appointed to serve as the trustee of the funds. He sued the city and the Quincy Historical Society over a 50-year lease allowing the historic society use the Adams Academy building for $100 a month in rent. The building is in the Temple and School Fund's portfolio, and lawsuit argues the trust fund should be reimbursed because the rent paid was below market value.

The historic society, however, has argued it has made more than $1 million in upgrades to the building since the lease was signed in 1972 and paid about $700,000 in various costs like sewer and water fees. The group's response to the lawsuit also notes the SJC issued a decree in 1972 approving the lease.

cess once he became aware that his son had applied for the position at Central Middle School. As to avoid a conflict of interest, the hiring was instead overseen by a committee assembled by Mulvey and former Braintree School Supt. Dr. Peter Kurzberg, who worked for the Braintree school system for 22 years and has recently retired.

As superintendent, DeCristofaro has a non-delegable duty to appoint principals in the city. That duty is in direct conflict with his obligation to not participate in the hiring process of a family member under Section 19 of the State Ethics Commission's disclosure laws.

DeCristofaro opted to have the school committee make the final decision on who would supervise his son, which is permissible under Section 19.

In keeping with the law and at the suggestion of Timmins, DeCristofaro left City Council Chambers before discussion regarding the motion began.

Committee member Anne Mahoney, who has been vocal in her opposition of the hiring of DeCristofaro, Jr. due to concerns of impropriety and nepotism, was the only person to vote no on the motion.

"I voted no because I voted no for him to go for the job," she said, noting that entrusting supervision to Mulvey—who was appointed by the superintendent and suggested that he himself supervise DeCristofaro, Jr. at a June 11 meeting—still did not create enough of a gap in the employment hierarchy to eliminate a conflict of interest. "By pure fact that he is one step away from his son by nature there would be contact."

"He's more than qualified. He just happens to be the superintendent's son," said Mahoney.

DeCristofaro, Jr. began working for Quincy Public Schools in 2004 as a grade 4-5 teacher at the Montclair School. He was then a guidance counselor at North Quincy High School for five years and became assistant principal at Central Middle School in 2011. He will begin his duties as principal at Central this September.

Legislature OKs Substance Abuse Bill

An omnibus substance abuse prevention and treatment bill, championed by state Sen. John F. Keenan of Quincy and two other Beacon Hill colleagues, was approved last week by the state legislative. The legislation is now before the governor for final action.

The bill comes in the wake of increasingly frequent reports of overdose deaths – with the State Police estimating over 185 opiate-related deaths in a 4 month period beginning in November 2013. Advocates for addiction prevention and treatment also raised strong concerns and calls for reform earlier this year when the FDA approved Zohydro, a powerful new opiate drug formulated without recommended abuse-deterrent properties. The drug is chemically similar to Vicodin, one of the most commonly abused prescription drugs, but carries a more potent dose.

Keenan acknowledged that reports from the State Police, as well as the Zohydro approval, were catalysts that helped spur action on the bill, but says that policymakers have "been aware of this increasingly severe issue for several years, and have taken several significant steps since 2010." He said the legislation "is another step, and certainly not our last, against an epidemic that is constantly evolving."

Supporters hailed the bill as a comprehensive, multi-pronged approach to an epidemic issue. One aspect of the bill would require that prescriptions for opiate drugs be filled using available abuse-deterrent, tamper-proof product, unless the prescribing physician specifically contradicts the substitution.

Another provision would grant emergency scheduling authority to the Commissioner of Public Health, allowing for an emergency and immediate ban of high-risk synthetic drugs, such as K2, and variants on Bath Salts. These products often evade regulation, because manufacturers regularly change the chemical composition of the products, thus exploiting legal loopholes in drug classification.

Keenan cited the state's experience with Bath Salts, noting that they were being abused as early as 2009 and remained legal and available well into 2012 due to the length of the current scheduling process.

The bill also takes major steps towards expanding access to addiction and recovery services. During a series of public hearings across Massachusetts, legislators frequently listened to stories of repeated denials by insurance carriers to cover addiction treatment services, particularly the step-down services that help stabilize a patient after detoxification. Public and commercial insurance carriers would now be required to cover, without prior authorization, at least 14 days of detoxification and step-down stabilization services whenever the treating healthcare clinician determines such services are necessary.

Keenan said that the state's annual budget also includes significant funding and reform to addiction treatment services. This includes funding for 64 new public detox and step-down service beds, a $5-million pilot project for mental health and substance abuse counselors in schools, dedicated funding to operate drug courts and other specialty court programs, a new program for accreditation and quality assurance of sober homes, and a $3.7-million expansion to the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program.

Social Security Celebrates 79 Years

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

For the past 79 years, Social Security has maintained its place as an American cornerstone. Secure as its foundation is, Social Security has also been at the forefront of change. As the face of America has evolved over the course of the last eight decades, so too has Social Security changed along with the needs of the nation.

Social Security Online Services

On Aug. 14, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said that Social Security "represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete. It is, in short, a law that will take care of human needs and at the same time provide the United States an economic structure of vastly greater soundness."

The Social Security Act that President Roosevelt signed that day covered a limited number of workers in commerce and industry and provided only retirement benefits.

Today, Social Security is much more than a retirement program. It provides benefits to disabled individuals and their families and benefits to widows, widowers and the minor children of deceased workers. Supplemental Security Income (SSI) helps aged and disabled people who have low income and limited resources. We have work incentives to help those people with disabilities go to work. Social Security even provides Extra Help with Medicare prescription drug costs. In so many ways, Social Security benefits America.

Social Security works because it is an enduring agreement between generations. It is arguably our government's most important program, and quite possibly the strongest expression of community our nation has. For 79 years, Social Security has made a tremendous and positive difference in the lives of millions, and this is certainly something to celebrate.

Nearly 75% Of City Covered By Expanded Mosquito Control Program

In less than two months, Water and Sewer Department crews have already reached an estimated 75 percent of the city's 9,000 storm drains with a special treatment designed to stall the spread of mosquitos, Mayor Thomas Koch's office said Tuesday.

Crews are dropping non-toxic mosquito treatment in catch basins across the City in an effort to target a primary breeding ground for the potentially dangerous pests – standing water. The crews, working in conjunction with a storm drain cleaning program, started the treatment in the middle of June and are well on their way to completing the project shortly.

"They are doing a terrific job, and we believe it's making a real difference," Koch said. "Mosquito control is a major quality of life issue, and a public health issue. So while we certainly aren't going to get them all, we wanted to complement the spraying work performed by Norfolk County Mosquito Control with something on our own, and this program does that."

With this year's first signs of West Nile Virus being reported to state health authorities, city officials said the project takes on added importance.

The Mayor tasked the Health Department and DPW to come up with the plan, and it is being carried out by a licensed pesticide applicator already working for the DPW. Until several years ago, municipalities were allowed to drop treatments into catch basins without a pesticide license.

The city uses non-toxic briquettes of a pesticide called Altosid, which prevents mosquitos from growing into full-sized biting adults but it is not harmful to the fish population or any other animals who may come into contact with it.

Squantum Homeowner Facing Fines Of Up To $2,300 Per Day

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A Squantum man has continued to allegedly run an illegal bed-and-breakfast out of his 85 Bayside Rd. home despite increasing fines and pressure to cease operations from city officials.

Complaints from neighbors spurred police, fire, and inspectional service officials to arrive at the home at roughly 11 a.m. last Friday unannounced to issue owner Richard Cope with a fine for violating zoning and building codes.

"We've been getting complaints of transient people coming and going with suitcases," said Director of inspectional Services Jay Duca.

Cope was issued a $500 fine July 17 following his initial offense. The second offense Aug. 1 resulted in a fine of $1,000.

A no-occupancy order was posted on the home's front door which applies to transient visitors, not residents. Removing the notice is illegal, and would result in further fines.

Officials were prevented from entering the home by an unidentified person, however Duca expects the City Solicitor's office to soon issue a search warrant for the property.

Running a transient lodging facility in a residential district is a use violation and failing to change occupancy is a building code violation according to Duca.

Despite the warnings, Cope continued to rent out his home to transient visitors, Duca said. "He's had people all weekend," he said.

This third offense will bring increased fines of $2,300 per day.

The fines will continue unless the home is closed to visitors. Further action will be determined by the City Solicitor's office.

It was not clear whether Cope was the only person living in the home nor whether food was being served to renters.

Vacancies were posted on the lodging website airbnb.com advertising two nights minimum at $150 per night. The listing indicated that the home could sleep six people. August and September were almost completely booked before the listing was removed from the site.

Cope has had no prior violations with inspectional services according to Duca. "He's never been on my radar," he said.

Cope will appeal the decision before Hearings Officer and Public Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele sometime in the upcoming weeks. "In my view, it's a violation of the ordinance," said Duca, who added that contesting the allegations is a civil right.

Center Study Due In 90 Days

On the downtown, Koch said developers have continued to express interest in Quincy Center. Redgate will help the city by analyzing how best to break up downtown parcels going forward.

"I want to make it clear that there has been a lot of work going on, even before Redgate came aboard. There has been a lot of interest and a lot of developers have been in my office with great interest," Koch said.

"The purpose of Redgate is to assist us going forward. Part of the first scope is 90 days to come back to us with their thoughts on how we dispose of our land, how we break up the downtown, how many pieces it should be in. Should the Parkingway be split in two at Cliveden Street or do we keep the thing as a whole? Do we break up the Hancock Parking area?

"We obviously tried the one master developer route – we weren't successful. I believe we need to break it up. The question is how broken up. Is it building-by-building? Block-by-block? Corner-by-corner?

"My guess is there are probably going to be somewhere between two or three, or as many as five, developers."

The overall makeup of the new Quincy Center – the mix of retail, residential, and commercial space – will be in line with Street-Works' original plan for the area, Koch explained. Keeping that the same, or mostly the same, means the city won't need to seek Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) permitting, a process that can drag on for months or longer.

"I don't want to go through the MEPA process again. We now have all the MEPA permitting in place, so if we do too much we're going to have to back to the state, which is going to start all these permitting processes again and could take months certainly – it could be a year or two," the mayor said.

"We're trying to keep it within the same confines of the vision we had. That doesn't mean things won't change. As long as we're in the parameters of the original vision, I think we'll be okay."

The developer for one part of the downtown is already known. The Quincy Mutual Group has taken responsibility for the parcel where Street-Works started construction on Merchants Row, in the 1400 block of Hancock Street. Koch will meet with the company's executives in the coming weeks to get an update on their plans for the site.

"I'll be meeting with Quincy Mutual in a couple weeks. I know they're working extremely hard on their end. They're committed to Quincy. They're committed to this project," the mayor said. "So I'm expecting to see some great progress when I meet with them in a couple weeks."

While private development is not yet underway in Quincy Center, roadwork necessary before the city can create a new park linking City Hall, the United First Parish Church, and the Hancock Cemetery began earlier this year. Since its inception, the park has been known as Adams Green, but the mayor said he plans to change the name to honor John Hancock, as well as John Adams.

"It's Hancock Street. It's Hancock Cemetery," Koch said. "I think we've got to keep the Hancock name as part of the park."

The final name is still unknown, but Koch indicated it could possibly be known as the Adams-Hancock Common or the Adams-Hancock Green.

Designs for the park, which will feature fountains and a promenade where Hancock Street currently runs, are being finalized. Koch anticipates holding a public meeting to let residents see first hand the plans for the park.

"We're in that final stage of design," he said. "I'm going to do another major public hearing for the public to come in and see everything."

Featured inside the park will be new statues of John Adams and John Hancock. The two statues of John Adams and Abigail and young John Quincy Adams presently located near City Hall and the United First Parish Church, respectively, will also be displayed inside the park.

"The existing statues are going to have a place within the park. It's going to be almost like a little park within the park, which I think is a beautiful concept," Koch explained.

"Then there are the two larger pieces – they're underway now. It's Hancock and Adams and they'll be the two pillars, if you will, one at one end and one at the other end of the major entrances to the park."

In anticipation of the ongoing renovations at old City Hall, some 4,000 bricks were

Feds Begin Inspecting Housing Authority Units

By SCOTT JACKSON and KRIS KALABOKAS

Federal officials began inspecting Quincy Housing Authority units Tuesday in the wake of a state report that identified widespread maintenance issues.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is inspecting the units. Six-hundred fifty public housing units within the city receive federal funding, though its unknown exactly how many will be inspected.

HUD's decision to inspect the units came nearly three months after the state's Department of Housing and Community Development released a report detailing numerous issues in QHA's 930 state-aided units. The April 30 report identified major issues including a leaking sprinkler system at Tobin Towers, mold/mildew growth in certain inspected units, units with inoperable or removed smoke and carbon monoxide detectors, and numerous trip hazards and inoperable lights.

Following the state report, QHA tenants complained of long overdue maintenance problems in their residences at public meetings. Rhonda Siciliano, the public affairs officer at HUD's New England office in Boston, said the department opted to inspect the units in light of the report and subsequent meetings.

"Based on that information we decided to go out and do an assessment of the properties," she explained.

Last Monday, Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director James Lydon said he had a meeting scheduled with Marilyn O'Sullivan, HUD's director of public housing for the New England region, on Tuesday morning. Lydon welcomed the upcoming federal inspections, noting they would be more thorough and would be done better than those from any outside consulting firm.

"The work is being done with a lot of legitimacy," he said.

Lydon placed David Ferris, QHA's maintenance director, on paid administrative leave as a result of the DHCD report and the response at public meetings that followed. Crown Colony based-law firm Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane is currently overseeing an investigation into the maintenance issues, which could result in Ferris' termination once completed.

"We're doing a complete overhaul of the maintenance system," Lydon said.

The Housing Authority is also in need of a new finance director. The deadline to submit resumes for that post passed Tuesday.

The federal department has performed inspections of several Quincy properties in recent years, according to Siciliano. HUD's 1-100 point grading scale includes up to 40 points for the physical condition of a building, up to 25 for the financial assessment, up to 25 points for management assessment, and up to 10 percent for the capital fund assessment. Overall grades between 60 and 89 are considered standard; any score higher than 90 is considered high.

Pagnano Towers on Curtis Avenue was last inspected in March 2013. HUD gave the building an overall score of 47 out of 100 and 18.8 out of 40 for the physical assessment of the building. The report found one or more non-life threating health and safety deficiencies.

An inspection at the Riverview development in Germantown was conducted in February 2013. The development was given an overall score of 65 out of 100 and 26 out of 40 for the physical assessment. A smoke detector in need of repair was identified during the inspection.

At O'Brien Towers in Germantown, HUD performed inspections between August 2011 and October 2012. The report gave the building an overall score of 87 and a score on the physical assessment of 34.8. The report found one or more non-life threating health and safety deficiencies.

HUD inspected the Drohan Apartments on Copeland Street in West Quincy between August 2011 and October 2012. Inspectors gave the building an overall score of 93 and score on the physical assessment of 37.2. One or more non-life threating health and safety deficiencies were identified during the inspection.

In addition to the planned inspections, federal officials have been working with the Housing Authority since June to restore elevator service at Pagnano Towers and O'Brien Towers. Both buildings have been down one elevator since the winter. Elevator service could be restored at Pagnano Towers by the end of this week and at O'Brien Towers by the end of next week, Siciliano explained.

"It was brought to our attention last month that two buildings had issues with elevators," she said. "We've been working with the Housing Authority to get those issues resolved."

O'Brien Towers has also been without a hot water heater for three weeks. The Housing Authority will spend $24,000 to fix the system there, but it will be 4-6 weeks before repair work can be done as a coil needs to be custom built. A temporary heater is being used in the interim.

"Unfortunately the hot water heater is not a model that's made anymore," Lydon explained. "Maintenance found the problem. I never had any residents complain to me."

Lydon, a former planning director in Quincy, has been in charge of the Housing Authority for just over a year and has two years remaining on his contract. He is unsure of whether or not he would continue on with the embattled housing agency, but wants people to know he has done all he could to correct the problems encountered.

"I want to get these problems solved," Lydon said. "I want to get us back on our feet."

To Fill Leo Kelly's Unexpired Term

Koch To Recommend New QHA Commissioner In September

Mayor Thomas Koch is expected in September to recommend a replacement for Leo Kelly who resigned last week as a commissioner of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Koch's nomination for a successor to fill Kelly's unexpired term must be confirmed by the City Council. The Council does not meet again until after Labor Day.

Kelly, 82, submitted his resignation "with mixed emotions" in a letter to the mayor last Wednesday. The former Ward 1 city councillor served about a year and a half as a QHA commissioner. He cited personal health reasons for his resignation.

"I've been dealing with a series of health-related issues for the last several years, and I have come to the conclusion that the responsibilities, particularly the time commitment, is not suitable for me at this junction of my life," Kelly wrote in his letter to the mayor.

"I wish to thank you for the opportunity to serve as a commissioner of the Housing Authority, which you know I care very much about. I believe without doubt that Executive Director (James) Lydon is now leading the agency in the right direction by facing the challenges directly."

Kelly was appointed commissioner in January, 2013 to fill an unexpired term that expires in February, 2017. The person who is recommended and confirmed to fill out the balance of Kelly's term is eligible for appointment to a full five-year term that would start in February, 2017.

It is expected that a Quincy resident will be recommended to fill the post.

In accepting the resignation, Koch cited Kelly's "tremendous contributions to our community" as a community leader, city councillor and QHA commissioner.

"I know he cares very deeply about the future of the QHA, which is why he was appointed, but at the same time I certainly understand the health challenges he has faced and the need to make his own well-being a priority," the mayor said.

Blood Drive Aug. 16 At Quincy Lodge Of Elks

Sketching Classes Start Sept. 11

The Quincy Council on Aging is offering Sketching classes at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, beginning Sept. 11th.

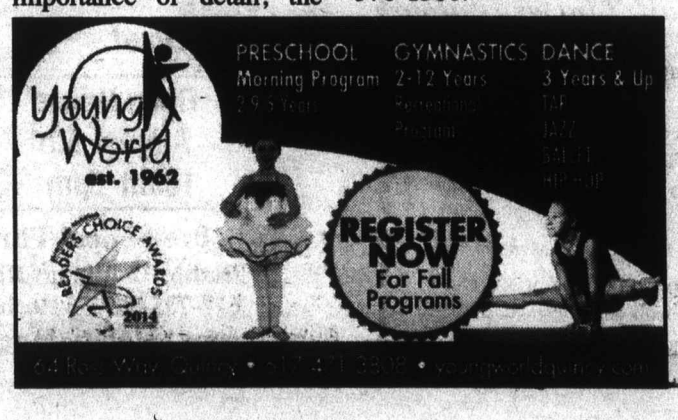
The Sketching class is an opportunity for seniors (60 years old and over) to re-learn and re-experience the love for drawing they had as children. Under the guidance of Robert Farrell, a local artist with almost 30 years of experience in drawing, watercolor and oil painting, students are slowly reacquainted with the joy of expressing themselves through the ancient language of art.

Using a Number 2 pencil and copy paper which will be supplied, the new artist will relearn to produce line drawings and tonal sketches.

Course topics include tools of the trade, the quality of line as a means of expression, sketchbooks and their uses, where to begin and where to go from there, good shapes and bad, the importance of detail, the value of tones and to color or not.

This free six-week course also includes weekly homework, professional critiques and lots of laughs and camaraderie.

Registration is required for this event as space is limited. To register, call the Kennedy center at (617) 376-1506.



Marina Bay Arts Affair Showcases 130 Local Artists

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Over 130 local artists had a chance to showcase watercolors, sculptures, oil paintings, and mixed media creations Saturday and Sunday at the 19th Annual Marina Bay Arts Affair.

Calls were made to local art associations and advertisements were placed in local publications to attract artists to show their works during the two-day exhibit in the 6,000 square foot Corporate Park building lobby and cafeteria, said Event Chairperson Ellyn Moller.

Artists representing Quincy, Braintree, Brockton, Canton, Hull, local community colleges, the Milton Art Museum, and art associations from across the South Shore submitted one to two works in hopes of winning first prize or selling their entries to interested observers.

According to Moller, roughly 500 visitors walk through the exhibit annually.

Participants, who were all 18 or older, were judged in six categories: watercolor, oil and acrylic, drawing, mixed media, photography, and sculpture.

Marilyn Reisberg, who was the chairman of the event during its first 18 years, won first place in the mixed media category for her piece titled "Like Daughter," an abstract portrait of a young girl gazing at the viewer.

"The first year we were on the boardwalk," she said of the event that was the brainchild of local businessman and watercolor enthusiast William Beyer. "Over the years we've had some really excellent shows. We have, I think the best artists."

The event was funded by participants' entry fees which range from $14 to $25.

Tony Andrade of Quincy, a graphic designer who competes frequently, took inspiration for his first-place winning watercolor entry titled "Easy Read," from a photograph of his daughter-in-law reading on a couch while vacationing in San Diego. "I thought it was pretty successful in terms of the format because of the horizontal kind of feel of it," he said. "It's unusual."

Andrade said he starts out with small, rough sketches and eventually realizes his vision on a full-sized canvas.

"A painting kind of takes you somewhere else most of the time," he said. "That's what I love about painting. It kind of takes you away."

Other Quincy Art Association ribbon-winning entrants were first-place artist Laura Lee Zanghetti for her oil and acrylic piece "Best Friends," runner-up in the oil and acrylic category Tatiana Yanovskaya-Sink for "Posing in Paris," and third place oil and acrylic winner Kris Kreitman for "Family Portrait."

Phyllis Andrade took second place in the mixed media category for her piece "Blueprint for Flowers."

Third place in the photography category went to Amber Buck for "Team Heroes."

First place for the sculpture "Dolphin Rider" went to Daniel Myers, III.

Honorable mentions included Jean Mayer for "Moment in Time," and Isabel Shamitz for "Heading Home III."

Winners received a small cash prize and were invited to display their works in a Ribbon Winners Exhibit at the Akillian Gallery at Massasoit Community College's Canton campus, Aug. 6 to Sept. 14.

"We've got some of the best artists of the South Shore here," said Kreitman who competes annually.

His oil entry this year took him six months to complete.

"It just gets better and better," said Reisberg. "For the average artist, we put our work in not for the gain but so that we can take our granddaughter with us and show her what her grandmother knows how to do."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

In June 2014, the Quincy Police Drug Control Unit received information that residents of a house located on French Street frequently sell marijuana from their residence.

After conducting surveillance, Detective Coen determined that one tenant was recently arraigned on 05/15/14 in Dorchester District Court for Possession with Intent to Distribute Class D Substance. On 03/16/11, he was arraigned for Possession with Intent to Distribute Class D Substance in Worcester District Court. He was also arraigned in Quincy District Court on 03/07/11 for Possession with Intent to Distribute Class D Substance.

During the first week of July 2014, Detective Coen conducted sporadic surveillance of the address. He observed a vehicle pull up to the house and then a male got out and opened the trunk. The male then took out a small suitcase and a black trash bag and went inside the house. Ten minutes later, the male came back out with the suitcase, which now appeared lighter and without the black trash bag.

On 07/21/14, Detective Coen again observed a vehicle pull up front. A male went in and out of the house and then drove away. These types of "visits" occurred often during Detective Coen's surveillance of the premise.

On July 27, 2014, Drug Unit Detective Sergeant Tapper, Detectives Duran, Powers, Barkas, O'Brien and Coen set up surveillance on French Street. At approximately 4:20 p.m., a vehicle pulled up with two occupants.The passenger got out and went to the door. At the same time, a second vehicle pulled up with a male and a female. The male also went inside the house. The first male came out and they drove down the street to a nearby parking lot on French Street. The driver backed his car next to a gray BMW which had two males in it.

Detective Coen observed drivers exchange items. The BMW occupants stayed in the lot as the other vehicle drove away. At that time, Detective Coen believed that the driver in the car leaving the parking lot just sold marijuana to the occupants of the BMW, so he approached the BMW on foot and identified himself as a Police Officer. The Detective saw marijuana on the lap of one of the occupants as he was preparing to make a blunt.

The marijuana was seized and both occupants admitted that they purchased the marijuana from the driver of the vehicle that just left. The two occupants were sent on their way.

With this information, Detective Sergeant Tapper and Detective Duran stopped the two suspects who drove away. Detective Duran approached the passenger side and could immediately smell the odor of fresh marijuana. The two occupants were asked to exit the vehicle and as they did Detective Duran observed a sandwich bag of marijuana on the passenger seat. Detective Duran then read them both their Miranda Rights to which they stated they understood. One of the occupants then stated that he sold some of the marijuana to the two males in the parking lot and that he got the marijuana at a house on French Street. He added that he bought the marijuana for $120.00 from a male wearing a black shirt.

With their personal information documented by Detectives, the two occupants were sent on their way. Detectives Powers and Coen then went to 65 French Street to place the suspect under arrest for Distribution of Class D Substance. When Detective Coen arrived back at the house, the second vehicle that pulled in was gone, however, another vehicle was parked out front. A male driver exited the vehicle and went inside the house, with a female passenger waiting outside.

Detectives Powers and Coen then walked up to 65 French Street and rang the doorbell for unit #2. A male came to the 2nd floor window and asked "Who is it? What do you want?" Detective Coen replied "Can you come to the door?" After several minutes, the male came to the door. After identifying themselves as Police Officers, they informed the suspect he was under arrest. The suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his apartment, but he refused. He was then asked who else was in the apartment and he stated that his girlfriend and another friend were there. The suspect was then advised that his apartment would be secured as the Detectives filed for a search warrant.

Detective Powers, Duran, and Coen then conducted a protective sweep of the apartment and located a male and a female inside. The male was pat/frisked by Detective Coen and he found three large folds of money in a cargo pocket. The three folds were (2) of $2,000.00 and (1) of $1,000.00 dollars for a total of $5,000.00. They were advised that they would have to leave the apartment.

During the protective sweep a strong odor of marijuana permeated throughout the apartment. Detective Duran then dialed the suspect's phone number and his phone rang. When asked why he had so much money on him, the suspect became nervous and first said that the money was for his mother. When asked if he worked, the suspect said he did not. He said he got the money from his father, who owns a restaurant. When asked why he had the money to give to his mother if it was his father's money, the suspect did not respond. He said that they were together to "party a little" (meaning smoke some marijuana).

Detective Coen then asked who was down in the car and he stated it was his wife. Detective Coen then asked if him if he was there to party, why would she stay in the car? The suspect again could not explain it. The suspect also claimed that he was the uncle of the other male in the apartment, but recanted, stating that they were not related.

Once the apartment was secured, the Detectives went outside. The vehicle with the female in it was now gone. It appears that his "wife" saw the police and got into the drivers seat of the vehicle and left the area. Detective Coen applied for and was granted a search warrant from Quincy District Court. At approximately 8:00 p.m., the search warrant was executed at 65 French St #2 by Detectives.

During the search large amounts of marijuana and other items associated with the distribution of marijuana located in the apartment. Some of the main items found in the apartment were a large amount of marijuana (believed to be over 50 lbs of marijuana), a large amount of U.S. currency (appears to be more than $50,000 dollars), a digital scale, a heat sealer, packaging products, numerous large duffel bags and residency papers.

As a result of these items found during the search warrant, the suspect, a 21 year old Quincy resident, was also charged with "Trafficking in Marijuana and Conspiracy to Violate the Drug Laws, Distribution of Class D, Possession of Class C (white crystal substance found in bedroom believed to be Ethylone), Possession of Class C (hashish also found in bedroom), Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Act, and School Zone Violation. The female, a 25 year old Quincy resident, was also charged with "Trafficking in Marijuana, Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Act, and School Zone Violation." Nice Work!

Rallies To Defeat Rockland, 3-2

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's 10-year-old team very well could have had its most frustrating game of the season in last Thursday's showdown - and that's the way it was heading - against a tough Rockland squad in the South Shore Softball League's championship at Welcome Young Park.

Bob Glavin's talented crew took care of business with its regular-season game against Rockland, dealing out a lopsided 18-8 victory and garnering a boatload of confidence in the process. It was apparent very early, though, that there would be no blowout and the game was destined to be a low-scoring affair, the way it usually plays out in championship matchups.

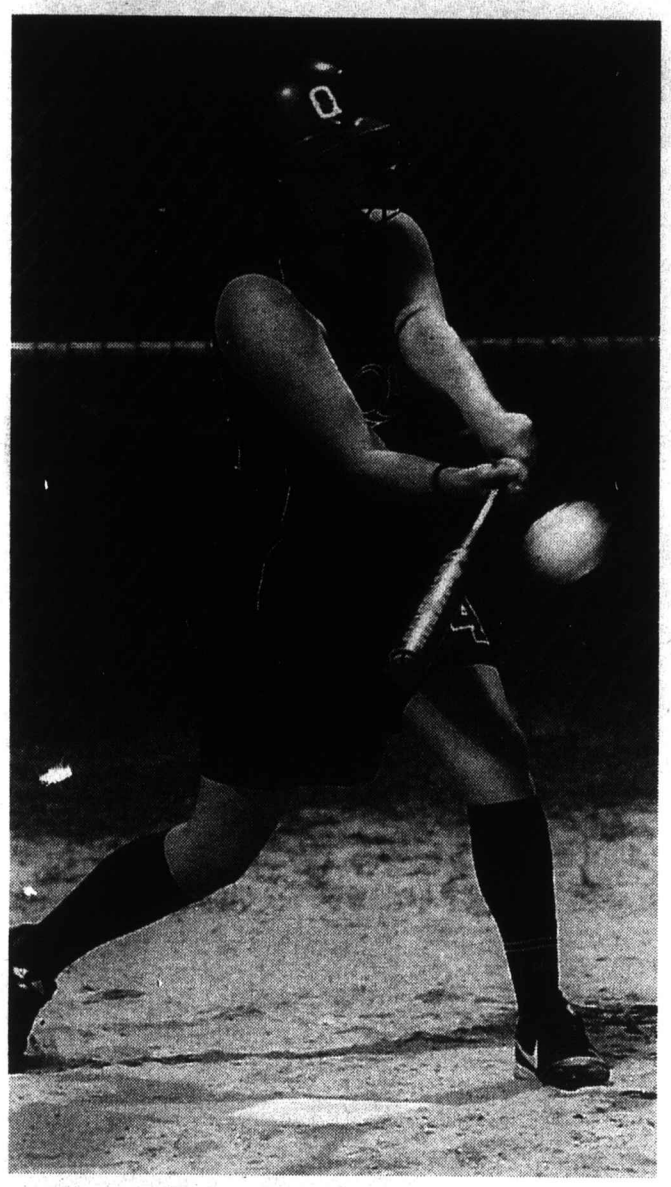
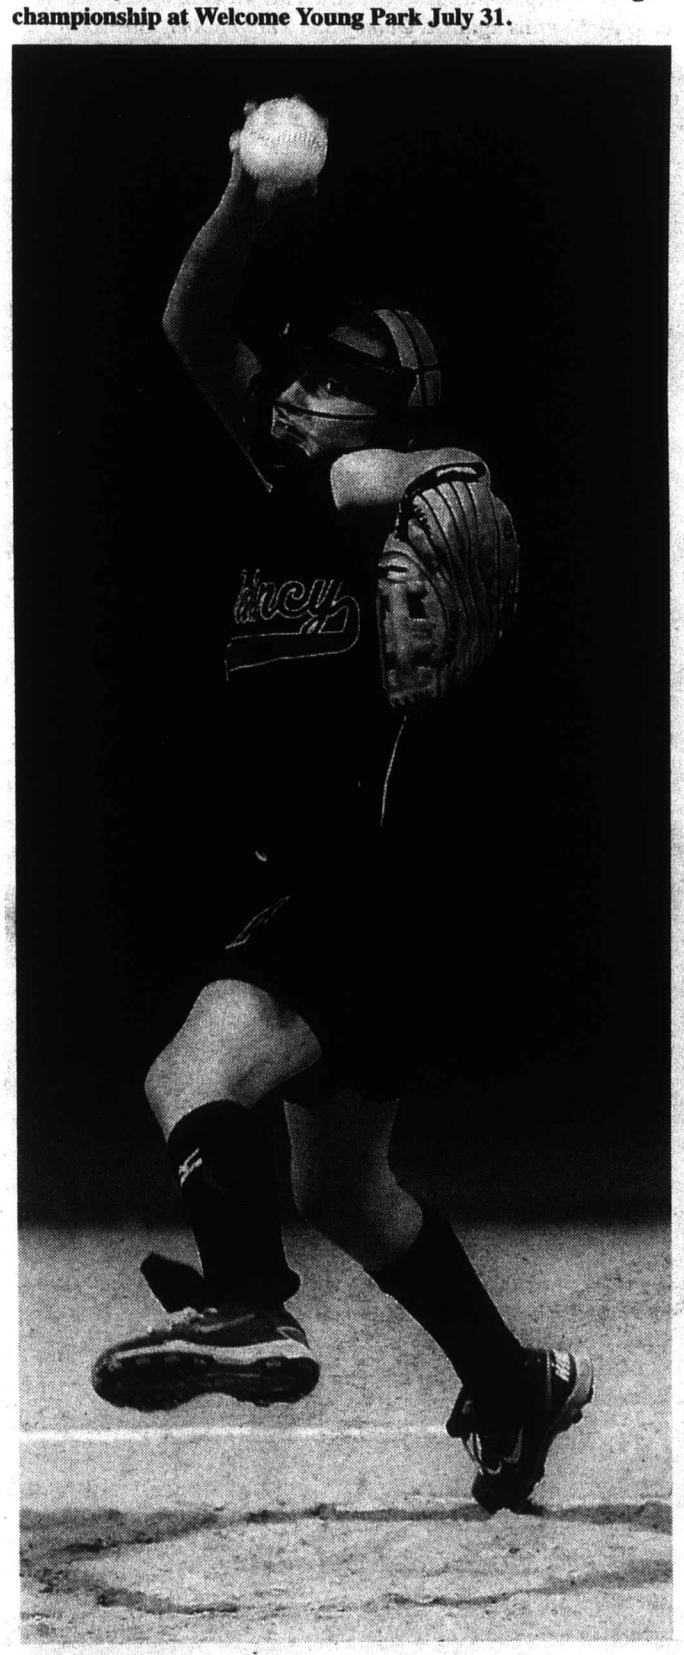
Quincy U14 Softball Rallies For Playoff Title

Meghan Davis Delivers Crown With 2-Run Walk-Off Double



MEGHAN DAVIS doubled in two runs in the bottom of the seventh to give the Quincy U14 softball team a dramatic walk-off 5-4 victory of Marshfield for the South Shore Softball League championship at Welcome Young Park July 31.



SAMANTHA SMITH delivers a pitch to home plate for Quincy against Marshfield in the U14 softball championship.

By JOE REARDON

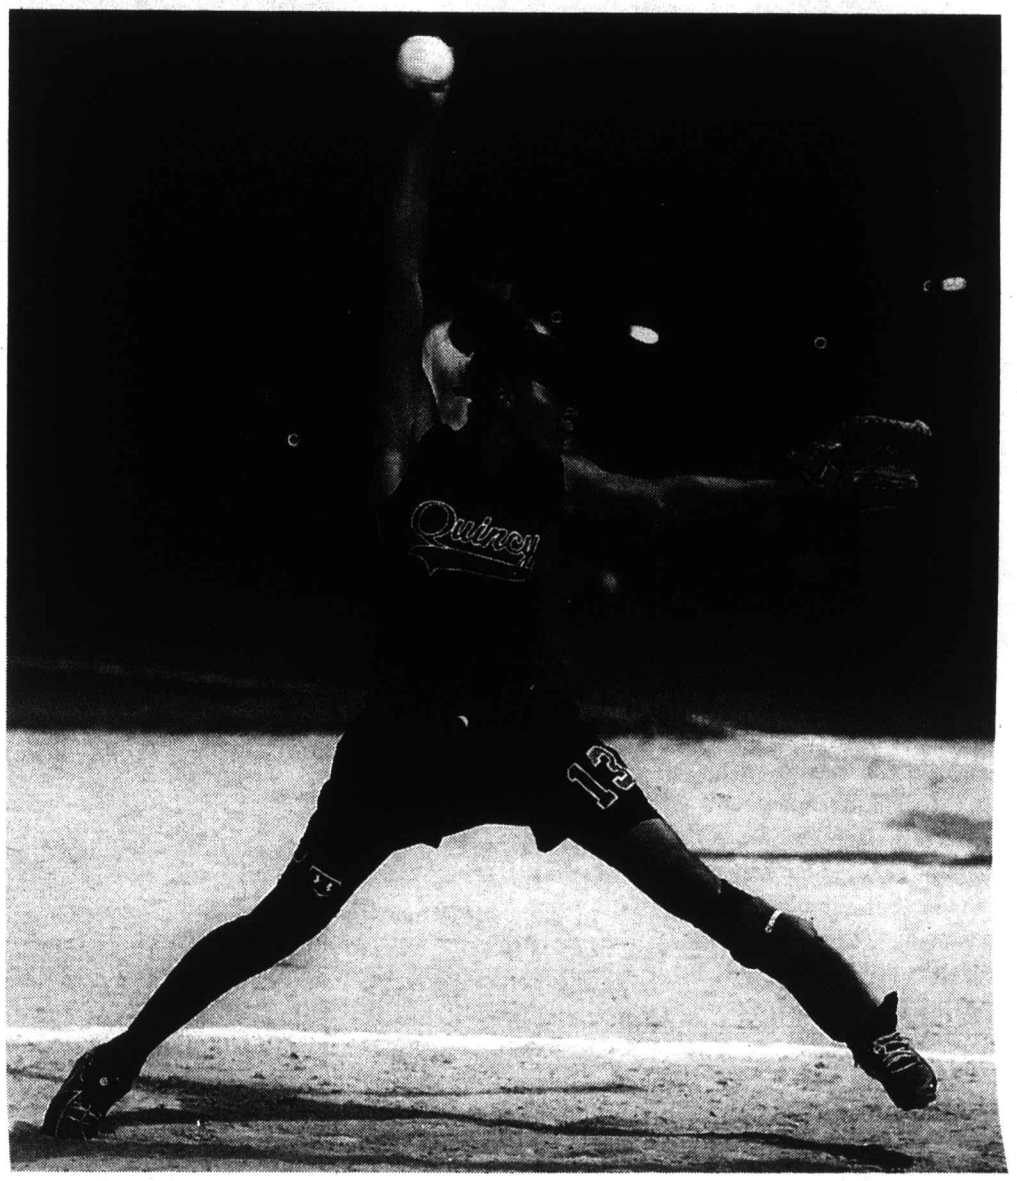
The scene was one of the most heartwarming of the night in a night of heartwarming moments for Quincy girls' softball at Welcome Young Field.

The 10-year-old team had just defeated Rockland 2-1 for the South Shore Softball League title and as the players walked off the field after hugs and photographs, they were met by a congratulatory phalanx of Quincy's 14-year-old players, who stood head and shoulders taller than the youngsters. were ready to do battle with Marshfield in the night cap title game under the lights.

Two hours later in the night cap, it was the 14-year-olds turn to clinch a championship. Meghan Davis drilled a double in the top of the seventh to score Kelsie Dwyer and Johanna Douglas to give Quincy a 5-4 win and the SSSL title. Quincy finished off its sterling season 11-1 after winning the regular-seaon championship and then barrelling through the playoffs.

Douglas led the way for Quincy with a pair of hits and two RBI to go along with Davis' heroics in the team's final at bat. Mia Sapienza, Shannon O'Brien, Sarah Ainsley, Cam Burgio and Dwyer all had hits for Quincy. Sapienza picked up the win in 2-2/3 innings of work, allowing just two hits and striking out two.

No one was more satisfied with the win than Davis, who soaked up every bit of the post-game celebration on the infield. Davis struggled at the plate at times during the regular season, trying to find some consistency with her offense. It didn't help when she missed two weeks to a sprained ankle. She returned for the final week of the season and her running-scoring single proved to be the biggest of her young career.



MIA SAPIENZA allowed just two hits and fanned two in 2 2/3 innings of work to pick up the win in Quincy's win over Marshfield in the U14 Softball Playoff Championship.

Davis relished the opportunity to bat with the game on the line.

"Confidence is key and I did it for my team," said Davis. "I've been having trouble (hitting) and I just wanted to get her (Dwyer) home. My hitting has been kind of on and off. I was yelling at it to go through. It was on the inside a little bit and I got around on it. I was glad to get up. I wanted to get up."

Marshfield picked up a run in the first inning but Quincy came back in the second with some nifty offense and base running. O'Brien led off with a single and moved to second on a perfect bunt laid down by Quincy's Blue team showed it can win the low scoring affairs just as efficiently as the blowouts.

Quincy had plenty of opportunities to score, evident of the 10 base runners who were stranded on the diamond. The team, however, did find a way to win, putting together a huge fifth inning and pulling out a 3-2 win to put the crown on a perfect 12-0 season. The gritty Rockland team wound up at a solid 9-3.

Quincy sent seven batters to the plate in the bottom of the fifth and it was Kathryn Boylan who had the winning hit, breaking the 2-2 tie with a single that scored Maria Geary.

Boylan, who will be a fifth-grader at the Squantum School in September, was looking for a good pitch to drive and admitted she had a case of the butterflies. The nerves all disappeared when she laced the championship-clinching hit.

Boylan was all smiles as she hugged her teammates shortly after.

"It was scary," Boylan said after with a smile. "I had a lot of pressure on me and I didn't want to strike out. I really wanted to get a hit. My coach just told me to smash it."

For a while, it looked like neither team was going to get the second run. Quincy loaded the bases in the first inning when Maureen O'Brien and Emma Glavin walked and Katie Downey was hit by a pitch. That threat ended when the next two batters struck out.

Rockland scored in the second for the 1-0 advantage, but Quincy's pitching was terrific as Colleen Moran and winning pitcher Adrianna Moosick allowed just five hits and struck out eight in six innings.

Quincy clogged the bases again in the second inning with Ciara O'Connor, Maria Geary and Leila Akhouzine all reaching on walks only to be stranded there. Right-fielder Myra Qasim showed off her cannon arm when she cut down a runner at the plate in the third to save a run in what was the defensive play of the game.

Rockland scored in the fourth to make it 2-0 and that's the way it stayed until Quincy's big fifth inning edged them ahead.

O'Connor jumped on a fastball and drilled it to right field to lead off the inning. She stole second and third, and scored on Messing's bunt single to cut it to one at 2-1. Quincy continued to be aggressive on the basepaths as Messing swiped second and third and came in on Maria Geary's single to tie it 2-2. Three batters later, Geary scored on Boylan's huge single to clinch the win. Moosick allowed a single in the sixth, but retired the next two batters on a groundout and strikeout before catching a pop up for the final out of the game.

Wollaston Bows In Senior Babe Ruth State Tournament

By BILL GRIFFIN

Unfortunately for Wollaston's Senior Babe Ruth team, history does indeed repeat itself.

Last summer, Milton edged Wollaston in the South Shore League championship game on an unearned run. Fast forward to Wednesday night at Adams Field. It was deja vu all over again.

Milton pushed across an unearned run in the sixth inning to spoil a terrific pitching effort from Dillon Darcy and eliminate Wollaston, 3-2 in the semifinals of the state tournament.

Wollaston had previously beaten Merrimack Valley and lost to Cape Cod in the double-elimination tourney. Milton played Cape Cod for the title.

"Some teams just have your number. It seems we just can't get past Milton," said coach Bob Griffin.

Darcy pitched a complete-game five hitter. He gave just one earned run. He mixed his pitches, changed speeds, pitched to contact, and let his infield defense of Jonathan Leveillee (third), Mike Pugsley (short) and Phil Czajkowski (second) help him.

"Dillon is just a horse. He carries us. He's unflappable on the mound. He threw all his pitches for strikes and gave us a chance to win," said Griffin.

After Milton went up 1-0 in the top of the first, Wollaston scored both its runs in the home half. Pugsley reached on an error and Johnny Marisnelli (two hits) singled. A double-steal moved the runners to second and third and Matt Kerin (2-3 for the game) doubled the runs home.

Milton tied it in the fifth and went ahead on the unearned run in the sixth. Wollaston had a threat in the seventh. Marisnelli beat out an in field hit and David Cooper singled to put runners on first and second, but Wollaston could not push across the tying run.

"We hit some balls hard throughout the game. Czajkowski and Evan Feinberg each hit shots, but Milton made great plays on them," said Griffin."

It was a fine season for Wollaston. They finished the league tied for second place with a 12-4 record and went for 4-4 in the playoffs for a final mark of 16-8. It was maddeningly close to being a lot better. The four playoff losses came by a total of five runs. They had a 2-0 lead against Milton in the states wiped out by rain. They were close, very close to a league and state title.

"It was a hard-working ball club and very resilient. No matter how tough the loss, we came back the next game ready to play," said Griffin.

"Our manager Steve Reardon should get a lot of credit. He spent a great deal of time in the off season working with the players on their hitting. It was rewarding to see us develop as a good offensive team during the season."

Wollaston boasted quality people on an off the field.

"They're a civic-minded group. Four of five of them work with special needs players in challenger baseball," said Griffin.

Wollaston loses its top three pitchers in Darcy, Leveilllee, and Kerin. Kerin is a six-year veteran who dates back to the 2008 team which went to the Babe Ruth World Series. He earned wins in two of Wollaston four playoff victories. Bill Campbell, a valuable utility player, contributed for five years and was also on that 2008 team.

"I think Matt played every position for us in six years," said Griffin. "He started as a scrawny 5'3" kid and grew into a 6'2" powerhouse."

Darcy had a run of eight straight wins at one point this season, beat Braintree in the playoffs and had the best winning percentage of any pitcher on the team over the past three years. Leveillee was a solid veteran pitcher and an excellent third baseman.

"Dillon was so dependable. He just chewed up innings for us," said Griffin. "Jonathan was a star pitcher for Quincy High. He worked and made himself a polished third baseman for us."

Wollaston brings talent back for next year. The defense up the middle with Marsinelli (catcher), Pugsley (short), Czajkowski (second) and Padraig Geaney (center) will form a strong core. Sammy Keane, Mike Saccoach and Ben Martin gained valuable experience on the mound. Pugsley, Feinberg, and Joe Dwyer are also other pitching possibilities.

"Our strength should be pitching depth and we also should have experience in the outfield," said Griffin. "Pugsley, Marsinelli, and Geaney are not only excellent players, they will be leaders for us. It should be a promising season."

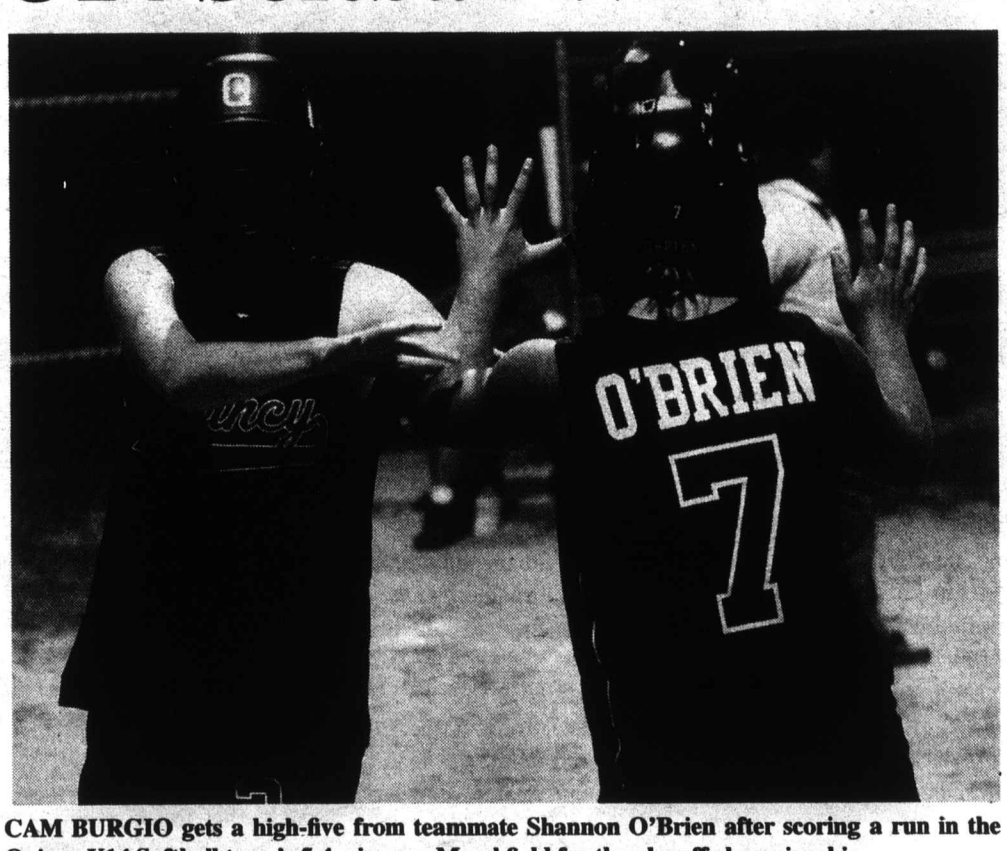
by Burgio. Jesse Caldwell and Shauna McColgan worked the count to draw walks and two batters later Douglas laced a double to score O'Brien and Caldwell to give Quincy the 2-1 advantage.

The tenacious Marshfield squad came back in the third for a pair of runs to go up 3-2, which led to Quincy digging tying it in the fourth. Burgio lined a single to right field and a throwing error on Caldwell's bouncer brought Burgio all the way around for the advantage. Marshfield proceeded to knot things at 3-3 in the fifth.

Quincy threatened in the bottom half of the inning. With one out, Samantha Smith reached on an error. Sapienza jumped all over a fastball and lined out hard to left field and Smith moved to second on a throwing error. A fielder's choice bouncer by Ainsley put runners at first at second, but Marshfield got out of the jam unscathed when the next batter was retired on a pop out to the catcher.



CAM BURGIO gets a high-five from teammate Shannon O'Brien after scoring a run in the Quincy U14 Softball team's 5-4 win over Marshfield for the playoff championship.

Davis put an end to Marshfield's season in the dramatic seventh inning. Dwyer led off with a single and Douglas bunted her way on and managed to move Dwyer to third. Davis punched a single to right on the second pitch to score Dwyer and Douglas.

Quincy was led this season by a solid coaching staff that included head coach Mike O'Brien, Jay Davis, Brendan Smith, Nicole Sapienza and Steve Burgio.

BACK MUSCLES IN SPASM

Even the simplest of actions can trigger back spasms that leave you with so much pain and stiffness that you're unable to straighten up and resume your normal posture. Caused by an involuntary muscle contraction, back spasms are painful and most often affect the lower back since it supports a good portion of the body's weight. Muscle spasms sometimes occur as a result of irritation of the nerve that connects to it, such as when a herniated disc irritates a spinal nerve. Otherwise, back spasms occur when lifting or pulling heavy objects, twisting the body awkwardly, or overstretching, particularly if you have poor posture. Chiropractic treatment can help alleviate nerve irritation and improve posture that leads to back spasms.

If the debate is ever about the best baseball city in the state, Quincy certainly belongs in the conversation.

For two straight summers, from age 10 to age 19, from house league to senior legion, from league titles to national championship tournaments, Quincy has forged a remarkable record of success.

As a wise man once said, you can look it up.

• The 10-year-old all stars from Quincy won the state championship and competed in the New England Regionals this summer.

• The 13-year-old Babe Ruth All Stars (26-6) won their AAU league, finished second in their summer league and competed well in the state tourney which was played at Adams Field.

• The 14-year-old All Stars won their second straight state title, their fourth in six years and traveled to the Northeast Regionals in Freehold Township, New Jersey. Quincy rolled past Freehold, 11-0 in the regional opener and fell just short, 4-3 against Delaware in the second game of the double-elimination tourney. They posted a 49-8 record, swept through the districts, sectionals and states at a perfect 11-0 and a run-differential of 141-26.

• Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth finished second in the South Shore league with a 12-4 record and came within an unearned run of advancing to the finals of the state tournament for the second straight season.

• The junior Morrisette Legion team tied for second place in Zone 6 with a 15-5 record and made the playoffs for the second straight year.

• The senior Morrisette Legion team had one of its best seasons in 10 years, boasting an 18-4 record, good for first place in Zone 6 East and the top seed in the playoffs.

This summer was no fluke. Last year, the 12-year-old Cal Ripken team won the state and New England titles and competed in the national championships in Indiana. The Babe Ruth team qualified for and hosted the state tourney at Adams Field. Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth came within a run of the league crown and advanced to the title game of the state finals. Both senior and junior legion teams made the playoffs. Both the 14-year-old and 15-year-old all stars won state titles and played well in the regionals in New Jersey.

The only reason the 15-year-old team didn't make it two straight this summer is not enough teams were willing to face them. They were unable to find enough willing opponents to satisfy the 12-game minimum required to qualify for the districts.

By any measure that is a four-star resume.

"We have had good summers in the past in the city, but this year has been remarkable," said Mark Jaehnig, the coach of the 14-year-old all stars. "We may not have the quantity of players we have had in the past, but the quality is very, very good right through all age groups."

A main reason is the Red Stocking program. When youth teams finish their house-league schedules, all-star teams are selected. The all stars then compete against teams from other towns and cities. This has two benefits. First, there is more baseball to play. Second, when the all stars compete in tournaments they are accustomed to playing together as a team. This is a big advantage.

"When I look at the senior legion team, the junior legion team and the 14-year-old all stars, I see kids who came up together through the Red Stocking program," said Jaehnig. "The senior legion team that went to Braintree for the playoffs must have played 200 games together. The Red Stocking program is a big reason for the success."

The quality of the coaching and the style of baseball that is taught are also important factors. Coaches like Jaehnig and Rick Beach love to teach aggressive, go-go baseball. They run, they steal, they put runners in motion, they play hit-and-run. It makes baseball fun. The kids like it. It helps keeps them playing baseball at an age when many give up the game.

"We had at least 350 stolen bases with the 14-year-old team this summer. It's a style that the kids enjoy. They have fun with it and I think it keeps them close to the game," said Jaehnig.

There is also hard work. The 14-year-olds played 57 games entering the regionals. There is practice. There is baseball every day. Vacations are sacrificed. Parents and families make a huge commitment of time and effort. It does not start when the ground turns warm in April. It starts in the dark cold of winter.

"We start indoor workouts and batting practice on Jan. 25," said Jaehnig. "There's no secret. The kids are good because they work at it.

It is hard not to let the imagination run free while watching the teams play. The older teams had players who attend North Quincy, Quincy, BC High, Catholic Memorial, Xaverian and St. Sebastian's.

A question comes to mind. How good would North and Quincy be in baseball if players with this talent and dedication all went to the two city schools? Imagine.

Quincy 14U Elite Softball Travel League Champs

Quincy's 14U Elite Softball Team – with a record of 9 wins and 1 loss – are champions in the South Shore Summer Softball "Elite" Travel League.

The "Elite League" the team participated in was intended for teams looking to play solely against the top programs in the South Shore League. The team decided to play up in this league because of the success of years past.

As for most of the players on the team, this is their third South Shore League Championship in as many years.

This season's success is in part due to the hard work and dedication these young female athletes have shown over the last couple of years, said Head Coach Michael O'Brien who was assisted by Nicole Sapienza, Jay Davis and Brendan Smith.

Many of the players have participated in both a "Fall Ball" and "Indoor Winter Ball" league, with indoor training throughout the winter months including hitting lesson conducted by BC's Women Softball Hitting Coach, John Pandolfo.

In addition to participating in the Quincy Youth In-House and Travel Programs, all of the players have played on the Massachusetts Junior Olympic Amateur Softball Association (ASA) Club Team, the Quincy Red Stockings.

Quincy Youth Softball is excited in the growth of their league and the direction it has taken and are looking for anyone interested in volunteering to assist in this endeavor.

Team members include Sarah Ainsley, Cam Burgio, Jesse Caldwell, Meghan Davis, Clare Doherty, Johanna Douglas, Kelsie Dwyer, Shauna McColgan, Shannon O'Brien, Mia Sapienza, and Samantha Smith.

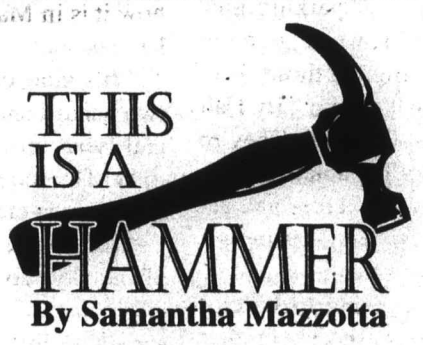
Repair Or Replace Broken Screen Door?



By Samantha Mazzotta

Question: On a visit to our friend's house, my youngest son ran toward the sliding-glass doors leading to the back yard and went right through the screen door. He's fine, but I want to fix the damage. Can I do so without having to buy a whole new door? -- Joe T., Hartford, Conn.

Answer: If the door frame is undamaged, you should be able to replace the screen itself without paying too much. With your friend, inspect the door frame for warped or broken rollers. Make sure it's seated properly in the track and rolls easily back and forth.

If the door sticks when it rolls, check the bottom rollers. (Gently wiggle each side of the door; the side with more resistance may have a roller off the track.) Carefully lift up that side of the door as far as it will go (usually a fraction of an inch). Use a small putty knife to gently push the roller wheel back down into its track, and test.

Now, you can elect either to replace the screen and any damaged components (if the rollers broke or were loosened, for example), or to replace the entire door ($50 to upward of $100). Also consider how much time and effort you want to put into the repair versus a replacement.

For time's sake, let's go with the screen replacement. If replacement parts are available for that specific model, get those; otherwise, a generic replacement kit with nylon screen and spline should work fine. Purchase a spline roller as well.

Remove the screen door from its tracks by lifting upward and tugging out. Lay the door flat on a clean surface with the screen side nearest you. Locate the rubber spline around the perimeter of the screen. Using a flat screwdriver, ease a section of spline out of its track and then pull the entire run out. The broken screen will come out with it.

Next, roll the replacement screen out and pre-measure. Leave at least 1 inch extra around all four sides. Use a utility knife to cut the screen to size.

With a helper holding the screen in place, use the spline roller's convex (ungrooved) end to push the new screen down into its groove on one side of the door. Follow up by pushing the new spline into place in the groove, pinning the screen in. Use the grooved side of the roller to push the spline in tightly.

Repeat the process on all four sides, working carefully around each corner so that the edges don't tear the screen. Hold the screen taut as you work.

Once the spline is in place, carefully cut away the extra length at the end and push the nub down into the groove. Use a utility knife to trim away the excess screen from the outer edge of the spline groove.

Put the door back into place, setting it into the top of the frame first and then easing into its bottom track, being careful not to damage the rollers.

HOME TIP: Screens with one or two minor flaws can be repaired using needle and thread; screens with tears or large holes should be replaced.

Koch: Memorial Bricks Going Back Near City Hall

removed from the McIntyre Mall last year. They will be featured prominently in the new park, though fresh bricks, engraved with the same names, might be used instead of the older ones.

"We may be putting new bricks in with the names. There is a reluctance to put the old bricks – some of them are pretty beat up, faded, and chipped – back into a new setting," the mayor said. "So we may be doing new bricks, but all those names that were memorialized are going back near City Hall."

The creation of the new park will result in the removal of parking spaces in front of City Hall. Residents raised concerns about the loss of those spots in previous public meetings, because it could make it more difficult for visitors attempting to get to City Hall. To help alleviate those concerns, Koch now plans to allocate spaces in the municipal employee parking lot near the MBTA station to visitors who need to access City Hall.

"The only compliant I heard during the planning stages was about how are people going to pay their bills at the City Hall. Where the City Hall parking now is, by the T, we're going to take a portion of those spaces and make them City Hall business [spaces]. They're going to be able to park there and cut across and get in and do their business," the mayor said.

"We're going to be creating some spaces in that piece, that parking lot we have over by the T. I think it will help ease that concern."

Housing Authority

The Quincy Housing Authority has been besieged in recent months after a state report identified widespread maintenance issues in several properties. Tenants also raised concerns about long overdue repairs during public meetings held in the wake of the report.

Koch voiced his support for Jim Lydon, who has served as QHA's executive director since last summer. He praised Lydon for welcoming in the state's Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD), the agency that released the initial report, to oversee maintenance as a result of problems identified.

"If Jim had been there five years, I would be looking for Jim's ouster. Jim is new; he's been there a year," the mayor said.

"I was very pleased with his reaction to the situation. He welcomed DHCD in. Typically, the natural response is to put the defenses up – put the walls up. He didn't do any of that. He invited them in."

"These things didn't happen overnight," Koch added. "There obviously was a systemic failure on the maintenance side – that's what this is. It's a failure on the administrative side. Jim is new so he's got an opportunity to fix it and going forward I'm going to hold him accountable."

The Quincy Housing Authority operates independent of the city, though the mayor appoints four of the five commissioners with the City Council confirming the appointments. The agency receives funding from the federal and state governments, but not Quincy. Because of that, Koch described his ability to make changes at the Housing Authority to having his hands tied behind his back.

"The city does not put any money in the Housing Authority – there is no city taxpayer money in the Housing Authority. So it's an odd combination not unique to Quincy; that's how it is in Massachusetts," he explained.

"It's kind of like having two hands behind your back and you are expected to fight. The red tape and bureaucracy is crazy.

"If this were a department of the city this wouldn't be happening. There would be accountability. It would be a whole different ballgame."

NQHS Campus

Expansion

Koch's $12 million plan to upgrade the North Quincy High campus by renovating Teel Field and creating a new, 157-vehicle parking lot calls for the city to purchase nine homes on Hunt Street and Newbury Ave. The mayor's administration, led by City Solicitor Jim Timmins, has been negotiating with the nine homeowners since the City Council approved the project in June.

"They're ongoing," Koch said of the negotiations. "Mr. Timmins informs me that he's making good progress. They're in negotiations so I can't really say a whole lot more than that."

When asked, the mayor said there is no firm deadline for the city to purchase the houses.

"Obviously the quicker we get this accomplished and the quicker they move along, the quicker we're able to start the project," Koch explained.

"But we're not putting anybody on the street. We're working also with some tenants in some of the [multi-family homes] who have applied for public housing, so we're working with the Housing Authority for transition for some of those tenants. It will take a little time but I'm feeling good about it."

He later added he would rather the sales be finalized by summer's end.

"I would like the deals all done by the end of the summer," the mayor said.

Koch noted he plans to go before the council in September to cut the bond authorization for the project from $12 million $9 million to account for the $3 million Quincy will receive for the sale of the former Central Middle School.

Emergency Preparedness

The interview with Koch came just days after a tornado packing winds in excess of 120 miles per hour touched down in Revere. The tornado, one of five confirmed by the National Weather Service in New England so far this year, was the first to strike Suffolk County in more than 60 years. It damaged 65 buildings, of which 13 were left uninhabitable.

Quincy was relatively unscathed by the storm, though downed trees were reported, caused by either high winds or possibly a microburst.

Koch said Quincy is prepared in the event a weather emergency, such as a tornado or tidal event, affects the city.

"I think we're well prepared. We're well manned. We've got great equipment. We've got a lot of contractors under contract, so in the case of an emergency situation we could draw equipment and manpower like that," the mayor said, snapping his fingers.

"We've got a true pro running DPW and a true pro running Parks and Forestry. Those departments and the Police and Fire Departments have been top notch. We've had winter issues – snowstorms – and the department heads work so well together.

"Obviously you don't wish for any event, but if something had occurred or does occur, we will be well prepared."

USS Salem

With the USS Salem departing for Boston next year, the city will be without a museum dedicated to the city's shipbuilding past.

Koch anticipates being able to work with the two businessmen who own a majority of the Fore River Shipyard – Dan Quirk and Jay Cashman – on such a museum in the future. But the mayor noted the shipyard is one of many significant sites in Quincy – along with the granite quarries and Souther Tide Mill as well as the first railroad and the first iron furnace in the U.S. – worthy of such a museum.

"As a city, part of the problem is we have so much stuff," Koch said. "You've got a group that wants a museum for the quarries – Al Bina does a great job working on that. You've got the tide mill group that wants resources to accentuate the tide mill. We've got our other city places – the railway, the iron furnace – so there is a lot of stuff we have. It's not like we can focus on one thing and use all our resources.

"Having said that, shipbuilding is a very, very important part of things. Both Mr. Quirk and Mr. Cashman are extremely sensitive to that. I think down the road they would both be willing to work with the city with that on doing something in that regard."

"I do think there is an appropriate way to honor the shipbuilding," Koch added. "It's pretty amazing when you look back at it."

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is a good time to take a break from your busy schedule to plan for some well-deserved socializing. You could get news about an important personal matter by the week's end.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An offer of help could come just when you seem to need it. But be careful about saying yes to anything that might have conditions attached that could cause problems down the line.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Sometimes a workplace colleague can't be charmed into supporting the Lion's position. That's when it's time to shift tactics and overwhelm the doubter with the facts.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You continue to earn respect for your efforts to help someone close to you stand up to a bully. But be careful that in pushing this matter you don't start to do some bullying yourself.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Don't ask others if they think you're up to a new responsibility. Having faith in your own abilities is the key to dealing with a challenge. P.S.: That "private" matter needs your attention.

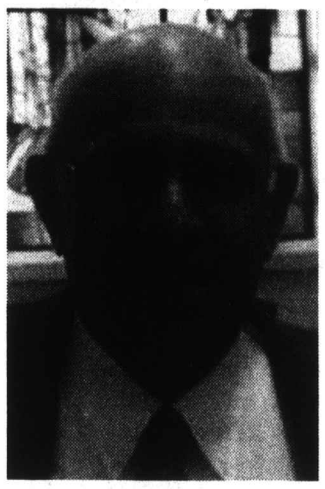
Dr. Frederick G. Heller, 72

A celebration of life for Dr. Frederick George Heller, 72, of Warner, NH and formerly Quincy was held yesterday (Wednesday) 3-7 p.m. at The Tirrell Room, Quincy.

Dr. Heller died July 28 after a long battle with cancer, surrounded by his children, his longtime partner, Elizabeth Griffey, and his beloved boxers, Dusty and Copper.



FREDERICK G. HELLER

He was born in Newark, NJ on March 1, 1942, son of Irving and Sally (Freidman) Heller and spent his childhood years in Hillside, NJ. After graduation from Lafayette College in 1964, and from New York Medical College in 1968, he served his country as a captain in the United States Air Force at Griffiss AFB in Rome, NY, until his honorable discharge in 1972. Immediately following his service, he relocated to the Boston area and began practice as an orthopedic surgeon. Dr. Heller successfully practiced for nearly 40 years until his illness forced him to retire in 2012.

Dr. Heller was defined not by what he did for a living, but rather defined by the legacy he left behind with the people he served – his patients. His professional career was spent by immersing himself in the greater Quincy community and giving whatever help he could, medical or not, to whoever needed it the most, regardless of one's resources. In a time when house-calls were a thing of the past, Dr. Heller was most comfortable providing personalized, attentive, and genuine care to his patients. His patients were his friends, and his friends were his patients. He approached his medical world with the same enthusiasm and energy that he approached his other passion – fixing stuff. Whether it was an engine, an old house, or some outdated piece of equipment, he tried to fix it. He spent his life researching the appropriate field, developing expertise, and then, tinkering to perfection. He was also deeply knowledgeable in the world of antiques and spent his lifetime researching and locating lost treasures.

In his earlier years, he was extremely well travelled; he spent three months camping and hunting in Uganda in the late 1960s with his father, Irving, and then travelled Europe by motorcycle with a number of friends. His passion for his children is something he was very proud of. He did his best to pass along his interest in how and why things work to his children, and up until the end of his life, he assisted in many fix-it projects for his children. As a fixture at his children's sporting events over the years, he developed lifetime friendships in the hockey and lacrosse worlds that continue today. He served on the board of trustees at St. Sebastian's School where his three sons attended school at various times.

He adored his children, Philip and Alex (Evanovich) Heller, Benjamin and Amanda (Key) Heller, Joshua and Sarah (Daly) Heller, and Marisa Heller, his step-daughter Andrea Galligan, and his grandchildren, Thomas (deceased), Alexa, Jessie, Maxwell and Buster Heller. He is survived by his long-time partner, Elizabeth Griffey and by his former wife, Diane (Lafleur) Heller, his sister Ellen Goldberg, as well as numerous nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Chadwick Funeral Home, New London, NH.

Memorial donations may be made to the Kevin T. Mutch Scholarship Fund, c/o St. Sebastian's School, 1191 Greendale Ave, Needham, MA 02492.

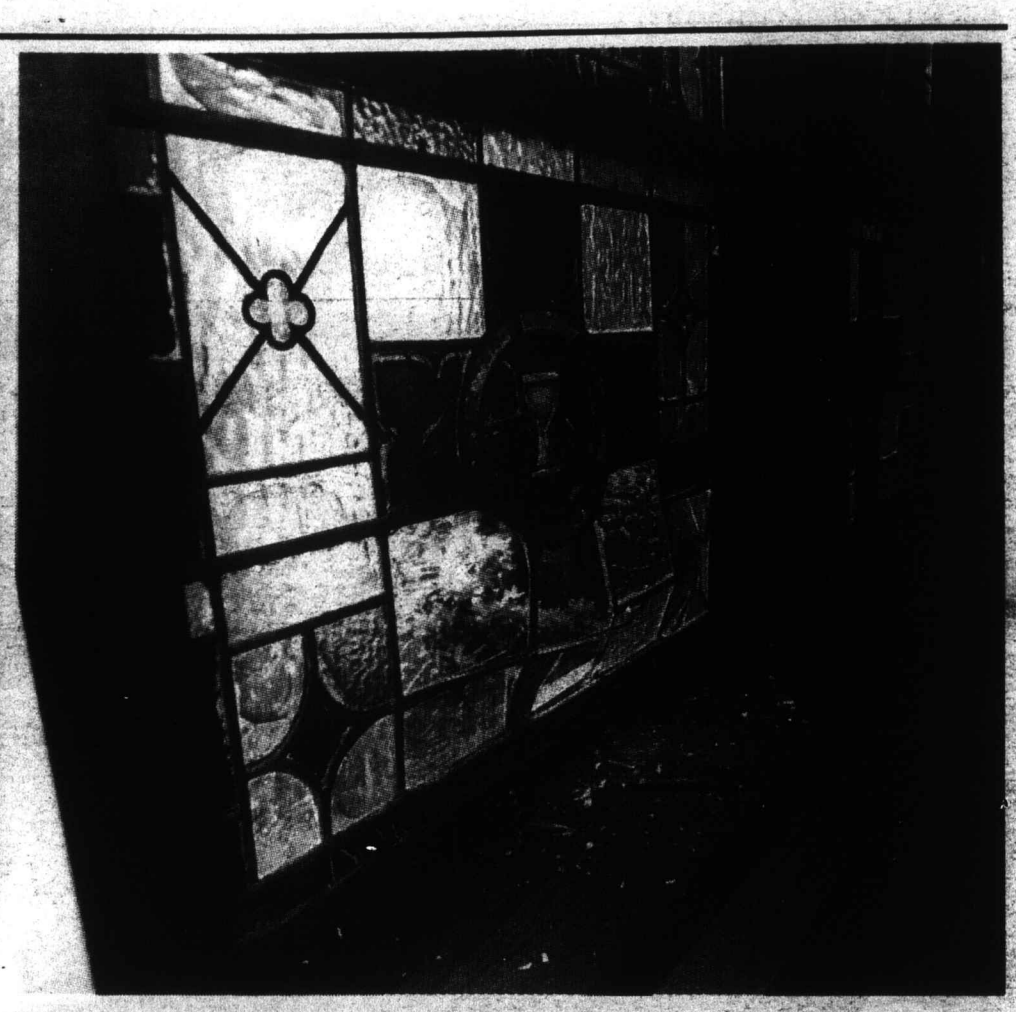
TWO FRONT DOOR windows were vandalized at Quincy Community United Methodist Church July 29th or July 30th. Police believe a morning newspaper was used to clear out the glass in the window on the right, then the door was opened from the inside. Once inside, a bathroom window was vandalized with a stone and furniture in the upstairs gym was strewn all around. No items were reported stolen and the church sanctuary was not damaged.



VANDALS ALSO THREW stones through seven windows at Quincy Community United Methodist Church including this stained-glass window. The vandalism was discovered around 11 a.m. July 30th.

'You Need To Get Help If This Is Your Idea Of Fun'

Pastor's Message To Perpetrators After Quincy United Methodist Church Vandalized

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Police Detective Lt. John Steele is "cautiously optimistic that forensic evidence will reveal something fruitful," following the recent break-in at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston.

Estimates place the time of entry sometime between Tuesday at 11 p.m. and 10 a.m. on Wednesday. An undetermined number of vandals broke glass panes in the chapel doors, reached inside and managed to unlock them. Steele said that shattered glass on the floor behind the doors led police to this conclusion.

So far police have lifted fingerprints off of a fire extinguisher that was used to smash seven, centuries old, stained glass windows. Steele said he is unsure as to when results from the crime lab will be available. Stones from a memorial pet garden outside were also used to break windows.

No items were stolen. "It appears to have been unjustifiable vandalism," he said noting that the stained glass was irreplaceable due to its age and religious significance.

The building had been locked and secured on Tuesday evening. The damage was discovered the next morning at roughly 11 a.m. by the church's sexton.

"They trashed the gym and threw furniture around," said Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden who said the vandals used a 12-pound rock as a battering ram to break through glass. She speculated that the person or people responsible must have used a massive amount of upper body strength to cause as much damage as they did.

This is the second break-in to occur at Quincy United Methodist. A computer was stolen from an office in January by someone with intimate knowledge of the building's layout, said Glidden.

Steele said events such as this are exceedingly rare in Quincy. Last month, a break-in occurred at the Christ Church at 12 Quincy Ave., however, the perpetrators may have been targeting a business that is connected to the building; not the church itself.

"We're going to stand together as we always stand together," said Glidden of her congregation.

She could not speculate on the total cost of damages.

Her message to the vandals was straightforward and clear; "you need to get help if this is your idea of fun."

Steele urges anyone who saw or heard anything suspicious Tuesday evening and into Wednesday morning to contact the Quincy Police Detective Bureau at (617)-745-5764.

QUINCY POLICE DETECTIVE Chuck Landry points to a stained glass window at Quincy Community United Methodist Church that was vandalized last week. In the foreground is a memorial pet garden. Stones from the garden were used to break some of the half dozen windows damaged by vandals. A larger cobblestone was also hurled through the basement window (visible below the stained glass window.)

Member Of Australian Parliament Tours County Correctional Center

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti recently hosted a member of the Australian Parliament who toured the Norfolk County Correctional Center and came away impressed by the jail and its staff.

"I found the Norfolk County Jail to be progressive, employing best practices, well-maintained and offering a full range of programs," Dr. Alex Douglas said after his tour of the Dedham facility.

A physician by training, Dr. Douglas previously served as an administrator of the Queensland Prison system in his native Australia. Dr. Douglas took special interest in the medical center at the Dedham jail.

"The medical facilities were outstanding and seemed to fully meet the needs of the inmates' dental, medical and physiological needs," Douglas said.

Sheriff Bellotti said, "It was a great honor to be able to help Dr. Douglas and the Australian government. It is always beneficial to get some outside perspective and feedback to how we're performing here."

Sheriff Bellotti said he was especially pleased to see how interested Dr. Douglas was in the inmate reentry programs initiated at the Dedham jail to reduce criminal recidivism.

About Sheriff Bellotti's programs, Dr. Douglas said, "The excellent educational programs offered by the jail would help reduce recidivism as they better prepared the inmates for reentry into society."

Dr. Douglas, who visited the jail on July 9, is the past chairman of the Parliamentary Crime and Misconduct Committee in Australia. During his visit here, he also met with Massachusetts House Majority Leader Ron Mariano (D-Quincy) and Secretary of Transportation Richard Davey.

Ayers Advocating Swift Passage

Legislators Seek New Law Increasing Penalties For Animal Abuse And Neglect

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Lawmakers are using informal legislative sessions to reach an agreement on a bill that would increase penalties involving animal abuse and neglect according to Legislative Director for State Rep. Bruce Ayers Kerry Morris.

"Rep. Bruce Ayers is working with his colleagues in the House and Senate to advocate for the swift passage of this important bill," she said. "The bill now needs only final enactment votes in each branch to reach Gov. Deval Patrick."

Ayers, who drafted the bill relative to the penalty for killing, maiming, or poisoning of animals following the discovery of "Puppy Doe" on Aug. 31 last year near a Whitwell Street playground, is still hopeful for the future of the bill that failed to pass prior to the closing of the 2013-2014 formal legislative session on July 31."I am optimistic and have been continuing to advocate with my colleagues and animal advocates," he said.

Puppy Doe was so badly beaten and tortured that she needed to be euthanized. Injuries included burns, stab wounds, dislocated joints, and evidence of starvation.

"My office has received a tremendous amount of interest pertaining to this legislation particularly since the Puppy Doe incident last summer," said Ayers.

If the bill passes, the penalty for abusing animals would increase from $2,500 to $10,000 and maximum jail time would increase from two and a half years to five years in a state prison.

The bill also states that all veterinarians who suspect animal abuse or cruelty must report the incident to officials. Veterinarians who do so cannot be held liable in a civil or criminal action for reporting the abuse. Veterinarians who fail to report abuse to the proper authorities would be reported to the Board of Registration in Veterinary Medicine.

Under the new bill, a task force would be established which would complete a review of all laws pertaining to animal protection and animal cruelty. The task force would also review services in place that care for animals seized when abuse is suspected. Training would be offered to law enforcement officers, animal control officers, judges, and veterinarians on how to spot the signs of abuse and neglect, how animal abuse is linked to domestic abuse, and how to deal with animal hoarding.

The task force would also review how housing situations impact animal abandonment and the voluntary surrendering of pets.

The findings of the task force would be submitted to the clerks of the Senate and House of Representatives and the chairs of the joint committee up to 18 months following the passage of the act.

A national animal abuse registry would also be created.

"The fact of the matter is that the current laws in Massachusetts are not tough enough to protect our animals," said Ayers in a press release. "Animal abuse is inhumane and it is an issue that needs to be taken more seriously."

"I filed legislation at the beginning of this session to toughen the laws against animal abuse as a legislator and animal advocate, and I am hopeful that the legislature moves to pass this bill into law and give a voice to the voiceless animals in the Commonwealth."

Ayers has also begun drafting a bill that would ban the sale of puppies and kittens through puppy mills—which breed large amounts of animals in cramped and unhealthy conditions—to state pet stores. He has begun reviewing the laws in place regarding puppy mills in other states across the country to assist him.

If the legislation is en-

Housing Proposed For Temple Beth El Site

Residents Can Review Plan For 53 Units At Meeting Tonight

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents will have a chance to review plans to convert the Temple Beth El into a 53-unit building during a public meeting planned for tonight (Thursday).

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the temple, located at 999-1003 Hancock St. City Councillors Kirsten Hughes and Margaret Laforest are co-hosting the meeting.

The site's developer – Boston Property Development – plans to raze the temple on site and construct a residential development consisting of 53 one- and two-bedroom units. A parking structure with room for 66 vehicles would also be added.

The new building would be placed in essentially the same location as the existing temple, according to Laforest. It would not encroach any closer to the adjacent Furnace Brook than the existing temple and parking area already do. The developer also has no plans to do any construction in the landscaped area featuring mature trees in the rear of the proposal; that part of the site will remain green space.

In addition to the building and parking structure, Boston Property Development plans to do substantial landscaping on site to both beautify it and give it a residential character. Modern storm water drainage controls to manage and control storm water runoff from the site to ensure that there is no negative impact to Furnace Brook or surrounding neighborhood are also included in the developer's plans.

The Temple Beth El site occupies a 94,000 square foot (2.2 acre) lot. The parcel sits in a Business C zoning district, which allows the proposed residential use with the issuance of a special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals and site plan Approval from the Planning Board. The proposal will also be reviewed by the Conservation Commission to ensure that there will be no negative impact to Furnace Brook.

Boston Property Development – headquartered on Greenleaf Street in Quincy – is also planning to renovate a former industrial building at nearby 10 Merrymount Rd. into 23 townhouse units. The city's Planning Board approved the site plan review for that project in July.

Additional development in that same block of Hancock Street is anticipated at the former Central Middle School, located at 1022 Hancock St. Plainville-based Edgewood Development Company plans to convert the closed school into 39 condominium units, all with either one or two bedrooms. Edgewood was the high bidder for the site, agreeing to pay the city $3 million.

BOSTON PROPERTY DEVELOPMENT plans to build a 53-unit residential building at the site of the former Temple Beth El at 999-1003 Hancock St. The developer's plan also calls for a 66-vehicle garage on site. A neighborhood meeting on the proposal is scheduled for 7 p.m. today (Thursday) at the temple.

NQ Intersection Reconstruction Set To Begin

Neighborhood Meeting Tonight

The state-funded reconstruction of the Hancock Street and Squantum Street intersection will begin in coming weeks, and project coordinators will host a neighborhood meeting to discuss details of the project at 6 p.m. tonight (Thursday) in the North Quincy High School cafeteria.

The $4 million project will completely transform the long-problematic corridor surrounding North Quincy High, creating a smoother traffic flow and dramatically improving public safety for pedestrians, particularly NQHS students, officials said. Construction is expected to take roughly a year.

The state Department of Transportation is running the project, which is among a series of major infrastructure projects designed, engineered and prioritized by the City but with construction paid for by state transportation funding.

"This is an absolutely vital infrastructure project that will make a tremendous difference for students getting to the school, for their parents dropping them off, for pedestrians getting to and from the North Quincy MBTA station, and for drivers who use that area every day," Mayor Thomas Koch said in a statement Tuesday. He added that city councillors and the city's state legislative delegation were instrumental in moving the plan forward over the last

Faith Lutheran To Open Time Capsule

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Pastor Heidi Johnston of Faith Lutheran Church doesn't know what is in the time capsule being removed from the 125-year-old building's cornerstone on October 18 but she is sure that whatever is found will reflect the cultural history of the church and its congregation.

"Many of the artifacts will be of Swedish heritage," said Johnston who has been the church's pastor since February 2012, replacing Rev. James Kimmell who retired after serving the church for 38 years.

Formerly known as the Salem Lutheran Church, it was built in 1894 to serve the large population of

A GLOWING EXAMPLE

One of nature's loveliest creations is moonstone, which features an enchanting play of light known as "adularescence." This mysterious shimmer varies depending upon the angle at which the moonstone is viewed. In ancient times, the beautiful light display was thought to be reflective of the waxing and waning phases of the moon, hence the name moonstone. This fine shimmer of pale blue light and shadow plays against a nearly transparent background of beige-brown, green, orange, or brown. The resultant appearance is very feminine and sensual in nature, which is why in was so highly regarded by the Art Nouveau movement. Today, moonstone is also favored by New Age believers for its calming and healing properties.

Moonstone is considered to be a good luck stone and very personal. It is thought to be a reflection of the person who owns it. The moonstone is often cut in oval shapes since which tend to preserve the most carat weight. In frequently, highly transparent stones may be faceted, but faceted moonstone is extremely rare. The larger and more intense the moonstone color is and the more valuable it is. THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Aug. 31, 1888, Mary Ann Nichols, the first victim of London serial killer "Jack the Ripper," is found murdered. The police were at a complete loss for suspects. However, two letters alluded to facts known only to the police and the killer. These letters, signed "Jack the Ripper," gave rise to the serial killer's nickname.

• On Aug. 27, 1937, George E.T. Eyston breaks his own automobile land speed record at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah, raising the mark to 345.49 mph. Eyston described his built-for-speed Thunderbolt as having two 2,000-horsepower Rolls Royce motors geared together.

Jim Stamos Is Boss

Jim Stamos is Boss.
And so is his Mustang.

Perhaps you've seen the 64-year-old Squantum resident driving his 2012 Ford Mustang Boss 302 that's equally race car and daily driver. Decked out in an attractive competition orange and white color scheme (one of only 96 in those colors for that model year), the 444-horsepower muscle car goes 0-60 in four seconds, features racing seats and tires and redlines at over 7,500 rpm.

For Mustang fans, the Boss is a car to behold.

"It's a special edition motor by Ford," Stamos says as a bright afternoon sun shines down on his prized possession parked next to his garage at his Squantum home. "The car comes with a track key that will change the parameters to race it. It's made to drive on the street and use the other key to race it on the track," explains Jim, who has his racing license and enjoys unleashing its power on racetracks throughout the region.

If you ask him if this car is a keeper, Jim nods "yes."

His wife, Marie, chuckles at the answer and why not?

Jim's owned 124 cars over the past 50 years. He was just 14 when he bought his first car. Before he had his driver's license.

He's been a Ford guy - and Mustang aficionado - ever since.

"I started with $50 junk boxes and when each of my three kids were going into the 12th grade, I bought each them $500 junk boxes. I bought my first car before I turned 14 years old. I cut lawns all summer for a man - $2 each time I cut the grass. I got 50 cents and I gave the rest to my parents because we were poor."

He worked and worked until he had enough cash to buy his first car. A 1940 Ford Nash four-door sedan that he bought from an old lady on Beale Street for $35.

"I had it for two months before my father found out and he sold it on me."

In hindsight, that "end" was really just the beginning of Jim's fascination with automobiles.

Soon, Jim was working as a "grease monkey" at Egan's Sunoco pumping gas, changing oil and learning exhaust systems. "I used to buy Volkswagens down at Goldie's Foreign Auto Ace Junk yard. You buy a car for $25 and work on it."

His first Mustang was a 1966 289-horsepower four speed. "The front fender was crushed by a tractor trailer. I bought that car and cleaned it up and painted it. I've always been a Ford guy."

And for Ford guys, this year is a biggie.

The 50th anniversary of the launch of the Ford Mustang in 1964. Today, it is the only sports car coupe to remain in production for 50 straight years.

For Mustang loyalists like Jim Stamos, the car's golden jubilee was not to be missed. So, earlier this year, Jim came across an ad for a 50th anniversary Mustang celebration in Charlotte, N.C. in April. It featured driving on a NASCAR track and joining in a record-setting caravan of Pony cars.

The Stamoses – who both work as Realtors and run their own company, Stamos & Stamos in Squantum – don't take a lot of time off but this experience couldn't be passed up.

They soon found out other people were going and they joined in. By the time they left Quincy, they were among a group of 35 cars heading to North Carolina. One guy Jim met outside his office. He was from Milton and drives a blue and white Boss.

"It just snowballed. We made all the travel arrangements and the list kept growing and by the time we left, we had close to 35 cars. And we picked up other cars along the way that we met at rest stops.

"There was one gentleman who was in his late 80s. He was the original owner of a 1966 Mustang. He was licensed to drive during the day and he drove his car all the way down there.

"This was a phenomenal experience," Jim says, relaxing on his deck overlooking Quincy Bay on a gorgeous Saturday with Marie by his side.

"When we stopped for gas or for rest breaks, people would swarm the cars and the further we got the more people we picked up. We finally made it to North Carolina on April 16th for a worldwide event sponsored by the Mustang Club of America and the Ford Motor Company.

"It was such a huge event that simultaneous events were held in North Carolina and Las Vegas."

The Stamoses met Mustang enthusiasts from all over the world including Australia, Iceland and 10 people from Brazil who had shipped their cars to Florida to drive to North Carolina.

Jim put 2,800 miles on his Boss making the round-trip from Quincy to North Carolina and back. He encountered road conditions that he wouldn't otherwise consider driving in.

"It got rained on and snowed on during the trip. When we got there it was 26 degrees. You're not supposed to drive these cars with racing tires with temperatures below 40 degrees but it was 26. We drove very carefully."

But it was all well worth it.

Soon Jim and his Boss were taking laps on a NASCAR track - the Charlotte Motor Speedway. The 1.5-mile quad oval track hosts such professional racing events as the Sprint All-Star Race and the Coca-Cola 600. The track

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD view of the Quincy Yacht Club at the end of Hough's Neck was postmarked in 1923. The club was organized in 1874 and built the peaked roof building on the right in 1888, the year Quincy became a city. Many of Quincy's prominent citizens had yachts and were members of this club including Mayor Charles Francis Adams II who went on to win the America's Cup race in Newport in 1920 and later became Secretary of the U.S. Navy. Originally built on the shore, the clubhouse was moved out over the water onto pilings in 1910 and the two-story section on the left was added. The building was badly damaged by the Blizzard of '78, but was rebuilt and reopened the same year. A fire two years ago closed the club again and has taken a while longer for repairs, but it is hoped that it will reopen this fall. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

NQHS Campus Expansion A Worthwhile Project

I have been reading with interest the news coverage, along with the readers' opinions, of Quincy's plan to expand the North Quincy High School campus and to make athletic facility improvements in the North Quincy neighborhood.

As a lifelong Quincy resident, NQHS graduate and former School Committee members and city councillor, I was disappointed to read the June 26th Ledger editorial entitled, "What are Quincy's mayor, city council thinking?"

Anyone familiar with NQHS knows that the facility has been far less than ideal for many years. From insufficient parking for staff and students, to sub-par athletic fields for our student athletes, to chaotic traffic flow and access points for drop-off and pick-up of students, our high school facility has long been in need of improvement. And without expansion the situation will only worsen. I applaud the mayor and city council for having the foresight and good judgment to address the issue.

Inexplicably, only a few months ago the Ledger lauded the city's decision, calling it a "thoughtful, result-oriented handling of our tax dollars." And now it's NOT warranted?

No city should lightly decide to take private property. And property owners should not be in the dark about the process. My understanding, though, is that the mayor's office has been in communication with owners since before public knowledge of the project and has been ongoing in discussions with them. If communication needs to be better, then improve it. But that doesn't make this expansion a bad project.

Contrary to the assertion of the Ledger and others that eminent domain must be exercised only in the "most dire of circumstances," as an attorney I can tell you that's just not true. Private land-takings should not be a final resort, but they are entirely appropriate when done as a best option for the public good. And this is a very worthwhile project which will not only benefit Quincy's young people far into the future, but which will address chronic drainage problems for area residents as well.

Finds Quincy A Disgrace

An open letter to Mayor Koch:

I am deeply saddened at the condition of Quincy and what you consider to be going forward.

Giant holes everywhere, vacant storefronts, and few parking spaces seem to be the norm now and you want to tear down homes in North Quincy for parking spaces and a football field.

Gone are the days of old and I understand there is no more Sears, or Woolworths but digging up the city is not the answer. The money that is needed is to fix the deplorable condition of the roads, and stop this nonsense.

I voted for you with a promise of change, little did I think that this would happen. I used to be proud to say I was from Quincy, but now I am ashamed.

Get in your own car and drive around a bit. This is a disgrace.

'Shakespeare Behind Bars' Aug. 15 And Aug. 16

Quincy Residents Performing At New Theatre Company

By KATHLEEN RYAN

For Quincy residents, Rachel Bargoot, Jackie Montminy, Julie Montminy, and Cindy Truong, this summer has been quite dramatic, to say the least.

KJ Moran and co-founder Kathleen Ryan developed an idea to create a theatre company specifically focused on promoting social justice. Within a few months, the Justice Theatre Company was established, the first production chosen, a cast selected, and the inaugural performances of Shakespeare Behind Bars scheduled for Aug. 15-16. Rachel Bargoot lends her talents as stage manager, Julie and Jackie Montminy work together on costume design, and Cindy Truong is a part of the cast.

KJ Moran, a freshman at the College of William and Mary, and Kathleen Ryan, a senior at Fontbonne Academy in Milton, founded the Justice Theatre Company with the idea that "young people can change the world by using the medium of theatre to perform plays that expose and raise awareness of social injustices." The Justice Theatre Company plans to donate the proceeds from its productions to organizations that work to end the injustices featured in the show.

A memoir written by Jean Trounstine, Shakespeare Behind Bars describes Jean Trounstine's experiences teaching English and directing Shakespeare plays in a women's prison in Framingham, Massachusetts. With the author's permission, KJ, Kathleen and Larissa Jeanniton, the show's director, adapted the memoir into a script specifically for the Justice Theatre Company's production. A thrilling tale that follows seven women and their journeys through life, literature, lock-ups, litigations, and larceny, Shakespeare Behind Bars reveals the humanity of these women prisoners and with help from their teacher Jean, overcome the obstacles of performing Shakespeare in prison.

This year, the Justice Theatre Company is focused on the issue of education in prison. While the national recidivism rate is 67.5%, education in prison reduces this percentage by 29%. Prisoners enrolled in college classes in prison commit 75% fewer infractions than incarcerated people who were not enrolled. Education also offers an opportunity to break the cycle of poverty and inequality, making it less likely that children of prisoners end up in prison. Through the loss of Pell Grant Funding in 1994, almost all education opportunities in prison were eliminated. In 2008, some funding was renewed, but not enough. To directly target the problem, the Justice Theatre Company has partnered with the Prison Books Program in Quincy to donate proceeds from the show to support the education of prisoners.

Performance dates are Friday, Aug. 15 at 7:30 p.m., and Saturday, Aug. 16 at 2:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. at Fontbonne Academy, 930 Brook Rd., Milton.

After the Aug. 15 performance, there will be a Q&A session with the author Jean Trounstine. Following the Aug. 16th 2:30 p.m. performance, there will be a panel discussion about the state of education in prison.

For admission, a $7 donation or a soft covered thesaurus, dictionary, or GED textbook is requested. For more information, email the Justice Theatre Company at justicetheatrecompany@gmail.com.

Power To The Pedals Film Tonight

Bike month continues at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, with a screening of the independent film, "Power to the Pedals," tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m.

The film portrays the trans-formative vision and extraordinary efforts of Wenzday Jane, a woman whose mechanical skills and innovative actions are reshaping her community. Wenzday goes to the heart of the sustainability issue by offering solutions, and suggests that things don't have to be the way they are.

Raised in public housing, Wenzday discovered the bicycle. To her, it meant personal freedom and self-determination. She would later develop a passion for mechanics and welding, and learned how to reshape the world around her. Now a self-taught innovator and revolutionary community leader, she heads an urban movement to replace trucks with cargo bicycles for local delivery, municipal waste-hauling for the city of Cambridge, and agricultural distribution. She's creating a more sustainable future by helping others discover the power of the pedal.

A panel discussion with the film maker and local bicycling experts will follow the film. The panel will include: film maker, Bob Nesson; Quincy director of Transportation Planning, Kristina Johnson; president of Quincycles, Nathan Pipho; and car-free living/cycling advocate, Kevin Gillespie

The library is also hosting two bike workshops this month. Learn all about bike maintenance on Wednesday, Aug. 20 at 6:30 p.m. and get all your questions answers at the Bikes De-Mystified workshop on Tuesday, Aug. 26.

There will be a second stage featuring more performances and a watermelon contest, as well as amusement rides and a dunk tank where proceeds will benefit QARI's programs and services.

As part of its civic participation initiative, representatives from Quincy Asian Resources will provide voter registration information and tips and guidelines for how to handle the American flag.

Parking is available in the free municipal lots on either side of Hancock Street. The area is also a short distance from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

Pecan Crusted Cheese Cake

By MARIE

As far as desserts go, I think that cheese cake is a favorite. I've had it served with a cookie or graham cracker crust, but I found one made with vanilla wafers with pecans that was the best.

VANILLA WAFER CRUST

1 box vanilla wafers
1/2 cup chopped pecans
1 stick butter

I used a rolling pin with the wafers in a plastic bag to crush them. Add the stick of melted butter and the pecans and mix until well blended. Place in a pie plate making sure all sides are covered. Set aside.

CHEESE CAKE

3 packages of cream cheese
1/2 cup sour cream
4 eggs (beaten)
1 1/2 cups of sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix the cream cheese, the sour cream and sugar together until smooth. Add the eggs and the vanilla and mix well.

Place in the pie crust and bake in a 350-degree oven for one hour or until a toothpick comes clean from the center.

Top with blueberries or any preferred fruit.

Wild Salmon

By SUZIE

Wild Salmon (please do not purchase farm raised salmon since it is raised questionably and even gets its "pink" color artificially) makes a heart healthy, delicious and easy summer dinner when served alongside a green salad with a bowl of seasonal fruit for dessert.

While the salmon is baking all you have to do is prepare the salad and you have dinner in about 20 minutes! Quicker than takeout and so much better for you. You don't have to be a gourmet chef to cook fish. It is easy and quick.

EASY BAKE WILD SALMON

About 6 ounces salmon
3 Tablespoons honey
3 Tablespoons Dijon Mustard
1 Tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 Teaspoon pepper
1/2 Teaspoon sea salt
Fresh parsley for serving

*Preheat oven to 325 degrees F.

In a small bowl whisk ingredients together for the fish. Arrange fish on baking dish that has been greased with coconut oil or olive oil. Spread mixture over fish.

Bake 20 minutes or so in oven until fish flakes easily with fork but do NOT overcook. Sprinkle with fresh chopped parsley before serving.

Enjoy!

Boston Harbor Islands Illustrated Presentation Monday

The Boston Harbor Islands will be the subject of a presentation Monday, Aug. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

This illustrated presentation will be given by Kevin Rogers, Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands (FBHI) Community Outreach Coordinator. Kevin has volunteered for the FBHI for close to eight years. He has been an interpreter on Georges Island and at Boston Light. He served on the FBHI Board of Directors for three years before greatly expanded FBHI's Community Outreach Program. He is a resident of Halifax and when not working to promote the Harbor Islands is an interpreter/volunteer at The Franklin Park Zoo.

Learn how the Boston Harbor Islands National Park was created geologically and politically. Get an overview or the recreational and volunteer opportunities that exist in the National Park. Special attention will be given to the two "Gateway Islands" of Georges and Spectacle Islands.

The Boston Harbor Islands have been home to many different people, starting with Native Americans and fur traders to soldiers of various wars to patients at different hospitals to hotel guests to ship wreck survivors to summer residents to modern park visitors.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Free Nature Tour Aug. 23

The Park Department's Environmental Treasure program invites the public to a free nature tour on Saturday, Aug. 23.

Entitled "Stalking the Great Piddock!", the tour will feature a low tide stroll with naturalist Peter Fifield. Bring sunscreen, a hat, water and bug repellant and wear shoes that you don't mind getting wet. Although the first part of the tour will be on sand, the second part (optional) will require walking in mud that can be slippery (a stick or cane is recommended).

HUD Officials Inspecting QHA Units

O'Brien Towers Receives 'Passing Grade' By Feds

By KRIS KALABOKAS

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) officials, who began inspecting Quincy's federally funded housing authority properties last Tuesday, have given O'Brien Towers a passing grade, according to Executive Director of the Quincy Housing Authority James Lydon.

The authority came under heavy scrutiny following inspections by the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) conducted on March 31, April 1, and April 3, 2014 that revealed subpar living conditions in need of immediate repair such as exposed electrical wiring, holes in walls, improperly stored combustibles, mold and mildew, and in one case raw sewage from a unit's bathroom leaking through the floor and onto a tenant's stove in the unit below.

So far, 200 units have been repaired at O'Brien Towers following initial walkthroughs by DHCD officials who have been cooperating with HUD.

"DHCD has been prepping us for the federal inspections," said Lydon. "They are just absolutely unbelievable."

The disturbing conditions were allowed to progress due to internal disagreements between departments he said. "I think we've historically had clashes between maintenance and modernization with both [managers] being at about the same level in terms of management but tossing problems back and forth between one another."

In an effort to correct this, a new position as a mediator between maintenance and modernization called the Head of Maintenance, Modernization, and Inspections will be created.

Former Maintenance Director David Ferris, who was put on paid administrative leave July 9 following suspicions of "serious wrongdoings" was given the opportunity to resign last Wednesday, however he refused.

"[DHCD] is very happy with the people that have departed. As we move into the future, we've been having discussions with DHCD about how we should be staffing up in the future," said Lydon.

While Ferris still has the ability to voluntarily resign, Lydon clarified that firing him may be necessary. "The process is painful both for the individual that's being fired as well as for the housing authority." He went on to say that terminating a civil servant can be an adversarial process that takes substantial time and money.

An investigation led by local law firm Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane, who met with DHCD officials last Wednesday, is ongoing. Lydon could not elaborate on any of their findings but attributed much of the authority's disfunction to negligence on the part of Ferris.

"We have many instances of problems that have been reported to the maintenance department where work orders had been issued, the work was not done, and the work order has been signed by the director of maintenance," he said. "People were just not paying attention. People were being lied to. People were hiding the fact that they weren't doing the work. There are a lot of things that were just totally, totally dysfunctional about the housing authority."

Members of the maintenance staff previously managed by Ferris are not at risk of losing their jobs. Instead, four new, temporary employees have been added to the 50-person maintenance team to assist with correcting years of damage.

"We have a lot of problems to correct on both the state side and the federal side and my sense is that we'll be at this for months; not years but months," said Lydon.

In the absence of Ferris, staff have been able to complete work orders quickly and efficiently. "They feel for the first time in years that they have the ability to make things better," he said, noting that residents and employees of the housing authority reported often times feeling intimidated by Ferris. "[Ferris intimidated] his staff and he did it to his tenants," Lydon said.

Prior to HUD inspections, faulty elevators at both O'Brien and Pagnano Towers were partially repaired with full service made available during the weekend and limited service made available during the week.

Elevator repairs at Pagnano Towers will be completed Aug. 18. O'Brien Towers elevators are scheduled to be completed the following day.

Lydon said he welcomed new legislation signed by Gov. Deval Patrick on Aug. 6 which aims to improve oversight and efficiency of local housing authorities. Titled H.4374 "An Act Relative to Local Housing Authorities," the bill will create a performance-based monitoring program which will assess housing authority performance and provide guidelines to authorities deemed "chronically poor performing."

"I think accountability is never a bad thing," he said. "I think had there been more accountability before my arrival it would have been a good thing for the housing authority."

Under the new bill, the position of Chief Administrative and Financial Officer (CAFO) will be created to oversee underperforming authorities. Each housing authority deemed to be a chronic poor performer will have its own CAFO. Additionally, all executive direc-

Planned Power Outage In Houghs Neck Aug. 19

By SCOTT JACKSON

Houghs Neck will be without power early next Tuesday morning (Aug. 19th) as part of National Grid's project to update electrical service in the area.

The utility company will shutdown power service to the peninsula as it converts service from the substation on Sea Street to a substation on Field Street, according to Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest. Two feeds run out from the Sea Street substation; one power outage will occur from 1:30-3:30 a.m. and the second from 4-5 a.m. Aug. 19.

All affected customers should receive a letter from National Grid. The company is coordinating its efforts with the Quincy Police and Fire Departments.

Rain dates have been scheduled for both Wednesday, Aug. 20, and Thursday, Aug. 21. If National Grid opts to use one of those alternate dates, Laforest said she would email residents and post updates on social media.

Following the planned power outages, National Grid can begin the process of deconstructing the Sea Street substation. That process should be completed by next summer.

Utility work in Houghs Neck will continue, as Verizon, Comcast, and the Quincy Fire Department all need to move their equipment from old poles to new ones before the double poles in the area can be removed.

A Night For Rich Kenneally Aug. 28

Colleagues and former students of Rich Kenneally will host 'A Night For Rich Kenneally, Volume 2' on Aug. 28.

The event will be held 6-11 p.m. at The Beachcomber, 797 Quincy Shore Dr., Quincy. It will include performances by The Danny Gallagher Band, The Coalition, and other various special guests throughout the night. It will also feature an auction and raffle prizes, with all proceeds going directly to Rich.

The event is for anyone age 21 and up. The recommended donation is $20. For more information, or to donate a raffle item, contact Janet at 617-529-6369 or Rob at 857-244-9767. Tickets may be purchased online at eventbrite.com/e/a-night-for-rich-kenneally-tickets-12604748141.

In addition, all Rich's current and former students are encouraged to continue this series with shows of their own to help Rich and his family offset some pretty outrageous medical expenses.

11 Police Officers Graduate Academy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Eleven new officers – Veronica Acevedo, Jeffrey Bossart, Sean Crowley, Bryan Donovan, Michael Dougan, Christopher Fish, Sean Fitzgerald, William Griffin, Erin McFarland, Michael Reilly, and David Sansevero – graduated from the MBTA police academy on Aug. 6 at a ceremony held in Boston's historic Faneuil Hall.

The event was extra special for Bossart as his brother, Kevin, was on hand to pin him during the ceremony. When Jeffrey was preparing to attend an orientation for the academy on Jan. 27, he learned Kevin had collapsed and tumbled down a flight of stairs at the MBTA's Wollaston Station after going into cardiac arrest.

Luckily for Kevin, Tomas Gonzales – a CPR training instructor for the transit agency – was at the Wollaston Station that day and was able to immediately administer CPR after Karen Kane, an MBTA customer service agent, saw the fall. The Quincy Fire Department responded to the scene and took over Kevin's care before he was transported to Quincy Medical Center and then Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston, where he remained in critical condition for some time.

The 11 officers who graduated Aug. 6 were among the 15 sworn in during a ceremony at Quincy High School in January. The remaining four officers sworn in that day – Maura Hayes, Andrew Keenan, Eugene Smith, and Tara Waters – had already attended police academies and began field training soon after the ceremony at Quincy High.

The officers who graduated Aug. 6 will now undergo field training of their own. All 15 will initially be assigned as patrol officers.

North Quincy Intersection Reconstruction Set To Begin

several years.

The project is designed to create a new, safer pick-up and drop-off area for NQHS students on Squantum Street as well as completely rebuild traffic islands and crosswalks throughout the area to improve access to both the school and the MBTA station. A new walkway from the intersection to the school parking lot will be built, and a decorative fence will be built around the parking lot area of the school to encourage students to use the safest access points.

The traffic choke points in the intersection itself will be eased by widened lanes and additional left-turn-only lanes to access both Squantum and Hancock Streets. All new traffic signals are also included in the scope of the project.

At the meeting, project engineers will provide details of the plans and answer questions from residents. In addition to this community meeting, there will be further informational opportunities for the North Quincy High community. A project of this scope may cause a level of disruption, but City leaders will be working with the state contractors to minimize those disruptions to the greatest extent possible – including limiting work during school opening and closing times, officials said.

Faith Lutheran Church To Open Time Capsule

Scandinavians coming from overseas to work in Quincy's granite quarries.

The church was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1989.

At 10 a.m., stone workers from M. J. Nicholls Landscaping and Construction will remove the capsule, which was buried in November of 1892, and present it to the crowd made up of the church's congregation and history buffs.

"This is a historic site in the community," said Johnston.

Following that, tours of the interior of the church as well as lectures on the importance of its stained glass and its symbology will be offered. Guests will also have an opportunity to walk through the church grounds and view the gardens.

The time capsule unearthing is part of an overall celebration of the church's 125-year anniversary. On Aug. 19, "a special service lifting up the voice of our past" will be held, said Johnston.

A gala dinner open to ticket holders will be held Aug. 26.

Johnston is not completely clear as to what will be found in the capsule nor does she know what will go in the replacement capsule. She speculates that newspapers, a photo directory of church staff, and possibly a cellular phone will be included but no concrete decisions have been made as of yet.

City Fortunate To Have Rick DeCristofaro, Jr.

My thoughts on Rick DeCristofaro reporting to Mr. Mulvey:

I find it pretty ironic that all of the nepotism involved in the great old city of Quincy and people decide to pick on Rick DeCristofaro!

If people knew this wonderful teacher, mentor and most of all great person they would realize there is no question that Rick worked hard to get where he is today.

Any student who had Rick as a teacher I'm sure can attest to the devotion, time & teaching skills he gave to all our kids. Not to mention all the after school intramural sports he brought to Montclair that were never there before that kids totally enjoyed. From there Rick went on to mentor the students of North Quincy HS as a guidance counselor. He was the best thing that ever happened to that department. It was a sad day for me and my son when he left but he was obviously destined to move on.

There has been a lot of whispering behind the scenes about Rick becoming the Principal of Central Middle School. Let me tell you, they are very lucky to have such a caring, smart, devoted person who truly loves his job and will give everyone in that school from the students to the teachers and parents 100 percent.

Thank you Rick for making a difference in my kid's life!

INTERFAITH SOCIAL SERVICES Executive Director Rick Doane holds a box of diapers donated by Boston Medical Center HealthNet Plan. ISS Receives 6,000 Diapers For Low-Income Families

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Interfaith Social Services (ISS) received a delivery of 6,000 diapers to be distributed to low-income and struggling families in Quincy on Tuesday.

"These diapers fill an urgent need in the Quincy community. Many of the families who come to us don't have money for food, let alone diapers," said Executive Director of Interfaith Social Services Rick Doane. "When we ask them if they could use some diapers, their faces light up because that is an extra 30 dollars in their pocket, and for families that are living on a tight budget that is a significant amount."

The diapers were provided through a generous donation made by the non-profit Boston Medical Center HealthNet Plan (BMCHP).

Parents or caretakers of young children are offered diapers through the ISS food pantry which is open Monday through Friday, and is staffed by volunteers—mostly from Quincy—who load up carts with food and even backpacks for school-aged children.

Doane said that each person who enters ISS fills out a card indicating whether they have a small child or children at home. They are then offered diapers which can cost a parent of one child over $100 a month.

The diapers given away during ISS's first donation event, which occurred last year, only lasted a few weeks. Doane hopes that additional funds raised at the organization's upcoming Feed the Hungry gala will allow them to have an even greater diaper supply this year.

"We hope we'll be able to do this on a more regular basis," said Doane who estimated the 6,000 diapers would last only a bit over a week. "BMC HealthNet is an amazing partner with them donating [diapers]."

"Diapers are not a luxury item," said Director of Community Relations and Outreach at BMCHP Julie Nations. "One box of diapers can cost as much as 25 dollars and a baby can go through 32 diapers a week. It is a huge expense and families have nowhere to turn for help. Our goal is to help Interfaith Social Services become an ongoing source for free diapers to help struggling families make ends meet."

ISS is one of the largest social services and charitable program providers south of Boston said Nations.

"We just started focusing on the issue of diapers with low-income and underserved families because it's something that really touches my heart," she said. "I'm hearing stories about families that are reusing diapers."

ISS was founded in 1947 by a group of religious leaders in Quincy. Originally called Protestant Community Services, the organization provided counseling, foster care, and financial assistance to families throughout the South Shore.

Since its opening, ISS has converted to a nonreligious organization focused on assisting families of all backgrounds and religious affiliations.

"I come here to get diapers to make ends meet for my family," said Jacqueline Mikell of Quincy. "My daughter is a single mother."

"We're a homeless family and now we're moving into our new home and I'm trying to help my 24-year-old who's going to college. She's a first time mom," she said.

Justyna Zreter helped hand out diapers on what was her first day as a volunteer for ISS. "I want to help," she said. "I'm so happy that they let me to do some volunteer work."

She said that after some online research, she felt ISS was the right place for her to volunteer her time. She plans to continue with ISS in the future.

Doane hopes that through social media and word of mouth, more people will realize the needs of local social services and food pantry centers. "We hope that [BMCHP] lead by example so that people know that food pantries need more than just mac and cheese," he said.

15th Annual And Final Steven Barrett Memorial Golf Tournament

The 15th Annual and Final Steven Barrett Memorial Golf Tournament recently took place at the Halifax Country Club.

The tournament was marked by great weather and fun for all.

This year's winners included the team of Jack McInnis, John McInnis, Dickie Doyle and Will Cullen.

The family and friends of Steven would like to thank all of those who have contributed and donated to his memorial fund over the past 15 years. All donations have been utilized to assist those less fortunate as well as members of the community and surrounding communities, scholarships, schools and the Quincy Public Schools.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton Opens Clinical Decision Unit

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) recently opened a new Clinical Decision Unit for the medical management of patients whose treatment and diagnosis are anticipated to take approximately 24 hours and are thus considered outpatient in nature. The CDU was opened in a newly refurbished 15-bed area, part of the hospital's 2North Nursing Unit.

The new CDU provides patients with a quieter, dedicated area away from the Emergency Department which facilitates testing and treatment to determine a diagnosis. Once a diagnosis is made, the patient's physician can then make the decision whether the patient will be discharged home or admitted to the hospital as an inpatient.

Medical conditions that can be typically diagnosed and treated on an observation status include unexplained fainting (syncope), cellulitis, allergic reactions, dehydration, acute pain management and asthma, among others.

While in the CDU, patients are cared for by physicians, physician assistants, nurses and other clinical support staff. In addition to diagnostic tests, such as CT scans or blood work, patients may also receive respiratory treatments, wound care, physical therapy or IV medications on the unit

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, July 29, 2014, at approximately 10:40 p.m., Officer David Zupkofska was dispatched to Presidential Drive for an unresponsive female. Upon arrival, the tenant opened the door for the Officer and showed him a female victim lying on the floor. Her body was positioned strangely in that she was on her back with her right leg up on a wall and her left leg bent and missing a shoe. She was totally unresponsive, so Officer Zupkofska administered one vial of Narcan with no effect.

At this time Fallon Ambulance and the Fire Department arrived on scene. The Officer then interviewed the tenant who said, "The woman outside brought her here." The Officer did note that there was a woman sitting on the stoop of the entrance next door upon his arrival.

Meanwhile, the Narcan started working and the unconscious victim started speaking slurredly as her eyes rolled back in her head. Officer Zupkofska spoke with this woman outside, who immediately claimed she didn't know what was going on.

The Officer then interviewed the tenant and as she was sitting on a stool, she became dizzy and fell forward, striking her face off a wooden chair. Another ambulance was summoned for her.

While waiting for the ambulance, the tenant said that the unresponsive woman was named Jaclyn but didn't know her last name. She again stated that the woman outside brought her to this apartment. The tenant denied that any alcohol or drugs were used by either the unresponsive woman or herself. The Officer re-interviewed the female outside who again denied any knowledge of what had occurred inside the apartment, but she now revealed that she and victim did arrive there in a cab and she was okay upon entering the apartment. This woman then gave the full name of the victim, but there was no official record of her.

The victim, now breathing on her own but still unresponsive, was transported to the hospital. The tenant was also transported to the hospital for treatment. A warrant check of the female outside showed that she had a default warrant for her arrest.

During the ride to the station, she continued to be very evasive, denying that anyone took drugs. Once at the station, the Officer learned the identity of the victim. She too had several outstanding warrants to include a violation of probation warrant. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE . . . . . On Saturday, August 2, 2014, at approximately 7:40 p.m., Officer Colleen Paccioretti was dispatched to 1250 Hancock Street for a disorder. The Security Guard there told Dispatch that a male knocked over the planters in front of the building, destroyed the plants and smashed the large pots. He said that the suspect pushed and spit at him as he tried to calm the suspect.

Upon arrival, the Security Officer pointed to a suspect crossing Hancock Street. When the suspect saw the Officer, he ran toward the Quincy Center T Station. Officer Paccioretti caught up to the suspect in the parking lot in front of the bus terminal. The suspect immediately started to fight the Officer, striking her in the side of the head and body with his fists. He continued to swing but the Officer was able to get one handcuff on him.

As Officer Paccioretti tried to get the second cuff on him, he got his hand free and started to swing at her again. The Officer again tried to put the other handcuff on but then the suspect grabbed her by the hair with his free hand and tried to hit the Officer with the other cuffed hand.

Officer Paccioretti then took the suspect down to the ground where she was able to spray him with her mace. At this time, Officers Dan Clark and Dave Coletti arrived and attempted to restrain the suspect.

During the struggle, the suspect scratched Officer Coletti on the arm. After a brief struggle, the suspect was brought under control, handcuffed and led to a cruiser. The suspect then began spitting at the officers and resisted getting into the cruiser.

Sergeant Richard Tapper arrived on scene and assisted in getting the suspect into the cruiser. At the station, the suspect was treated by EMS for mace exposure and cuts acquired during the arrest. The suspect, a 44 year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Assault and Battery (Security Officer), Assault and Battery on a Police Officer, Malicious Property Damage over $250.00 and Disorderly Person and Resisting Arrest." Officer Greg Hartnett took photos of the destroyed planters and large pots. Nice Work!

YOUR CHILD IS WATCHING: a 2013 AT&T survey showed that 49% of adults admitted to texting while driving. This is higher than teen drivers. Are children learning that it is ok to do this from parents, even though it is against the law?

GREEN DOT CARDS: beware of these cards. Scammers, such as callers claiming to be from the IRS or a public utility may call to tell you that you owe money and then threaten with serious consequences if you don't pay up immediately by purchasing a green dot card for payment. These are reloadable prepaid debit cards. You give the store clerk money and she applies the money to the card. The instructions are usually for the victim to call the "IRS" back and give them the card number so they can get the money. The Green Dot card has a $500 maximum that can be reloaded. If the payment or fee is over $500, the scammer will ask you to purchase multiple cards that will total the amount they are requesting. Once you give the caller the card number, the funds loaded on the card are now available for immediate use by the scammer. If the call you received is a scam, you will lose the funds loaded on the card and will not receive the goods or services promised. Government agencies and legitimate businesses do not conduct business with green dot cards.

Green Dot cards are a legitimate payment system – it's the scammers who are not legitimate and they keep doing this to citizens because it works!

Call Lieutenant Dan Minton at (617) 745 5719 BEFORE you give out your money because once you do, it is highly unlikely you will get it back!

Game Development

The Game Development Certificate gives students the tools which they need to develop computer games. The students will create two dimensional and three dimensional games as well as single and multiplayer games. They will customize the visual profile of objects in the game using two dimensional and three dimensional graphics and animation.

More Than 100 Youngsters Compete, Have Fun

Quincy Track Club Hosts Frank Kelly Memorial Meet

By JOE REARDON

Using just the eye test, Devin Hiltunen looks as though she has all the tools to be a star on the track for years to come.

Hiltunen, who is going to be a freshman at North Quincy, has had a stellar summer on the track and she had spectators whispering about her talent at the recent Frank Kelly Memorial Track Meet on the spongy Faxon Field oval. The meet is named after the founder of the Quincy Track Club in the mid 1970s.

Tall, strong and possessing a fluid stride that makes her running look almost effortless, Hiltunen went to the front immediately in the 800 meters and was never challenged as she soared across the finish line in an impressive time of 2:41. Her win came on the heels of capturing gold medals in the 200 and 400 at the Bay State Games.

Considering the fact that she'll be under the tutelage of legendary coach Geoff Hennessy for four years and training with the talented Bryson twins, Emily and Julia her rookie year, Hiltunen, who has been a member of the Quincy Track Club for four years, should flourish as a Red Raider and could become the next big female star on the trails and track in Quincy.

Most importantly, Hiltunen loves to compete and the Kelly meet, with its big turnout of young kids of all ages, provides competition that can be tough to find during the summer months. "This is a really fun meet," said Hiltunen. "I really look forward to this. He trains you really good. You get a lot of good people here because there are other track clubs that compete."

Held on a perfect evening for a track meet, kids from the Quincy Track Club and other local towns and track clubs, competed in a number of races on the track and field events that included the turbo javelin, softball throw, high jump and long jump. Ribbons were given out to the young athletes after their events and parents cheered enthusiastically for all the competitors as they roared down the straightaway to the finish line.

Hiltunen won't be the first major talent to come out of the Quincy Track Club program. Emily Bryson is coming off a tremendous junior year where she finished fourth in the Div. 1 All-State Cross Country Championships in the fall and was runner-up in the All-State 2 mile in June before taking fifth at New Englands. Julia has improved steadily since her freshman year and is regarded as one of the top high school distance runners on the South Shore and a solid competitor at the state level.

World class talent has emerged from the Quincy Track Club as well. North Quincy alumnus Karen Cashman, the most celebrated athlete ever in Quincy, was on hand to watch her 8-year-old son Bryan compete in the sprinting events on the quick track.

Cashman, who earned a bronze medal in speed skating at the Lillehammer Olympics in 1994, got her start in athletics as a member of the Quincy Track Club and competed in cross country, indoor and outdoor track at North Quincy. She eventually switched over to speed skating, but it was on the track where her competitive juices were first wetted.

"I tried different things, but it was the Quincy Track Club that gave me the passion for competition," said Cashman, who teaches figure skating. "I just loved it. It lit the competitive fire in me."

Cashman credited Hennessy and his love and enthusiasm for track as one of the main reasons she took to the sport so passionately. "Geoff is just awesome," said Cashman. "He is so dedicated to the youth in Quincy. Quincy is lucky to have him. His dedication to kids through high school was amazing."

Hennessy is a big believer in role models for the kids and considers Cashman and the Bryson twins three great talents for the girls to emulate.

"We try to provide them with a sense of history of what others have done before them," Hennessy said. "I think that's kind of important that someone like a Karen Cashman comes back here. It means the program had a lot of positive ends for her. The Brysons like giving back to the community. I just think that if a kid wants to go far in this particular sport, we'll help them."

Thirteen-year-old Tamara Cowhan will begin eighth grade at Milton Academy in September and is already looking forward to competing in the 800 for the prep school's track team.

"I love track a lot," said a smiling Cowhan. "I love to do the 800. We definitely train a lot for this. It's definitely a big deal. Geoff is an amazing coach. He makes track fun, but he also makes it very educational on and off the track."

Hennessy's goal in coaching the young kids in the Quincy Track Club is to instill a love for the sport by making it fun and giving them a small taste of competition in a fun and friendly atmosphere like the Kelly meet.

"We just try to make it fun for the kids," said Hennessy. "Normally this track attracts about 100. I think we had more than that this time.

"The talent is scary. There's plenty of talent. I've been around the ringer a few times and what I've learned over the years is it's not just talent, it's the interest and commitment level. For myself, being around the ringer a few times, I can see where the slow steady way makes more sense. There's too much youth sports that's about entertaining parents. It should be about education, kids learning and having fun. Competition is secondary. Track kids have a much different relationship with each other than other sports."

Julia Klincewicz captured gold ribbons in both the long jump and turbo javelin, while winners in the long jump include Alex Pham, Joey Ferreira and Julia Klincewicz, while Juliana Salbibia took a gold ribbon in the high jump. Daithi Quinn, Violette Ingram and Anushka Raj were winners in the softball throw. The standing long jump had talented winners in Christopher Brady, Angelie McGrath and Victoria Reed, while winners in the turbo javelin include Matthew Roper, Charlotte Shapiro and Klincewicz.

features 22-degree banking in the corners. That took some adjustment, Jim said.

"The first day on the track was just a spin around the track. It's strange to be sitting in a car and think you're on flat ground and you look up and there's a car there because of the banking."

Before being allowed on the track, cars had to pass stringent guidelines for safety reasons including a half-hour vehicle inspection. Drivers were required to purchase liability insurance and physical damage insurance. They also had to wear a helmet and all cotton clothing. "No synthetic," Jim said, "because if you catch fire, synthetics melt. Cotton just burns."

Cars were driven with their windows down on the track. "In case you crash, they can get you out," he said, adding a fire extinguisher was also required inside the car.

Jim and other drivers also were required to attend an hour-long class of instruction with certified drivers who told them about the track and what to watch and not watch for.

"For example, you're coming down the straightaway and all the stands and then you start to go into a 22-degree turn. Your eye catches the stands and it looks like the stands are falling away and if you stay on that line you will go up to the wall.

"But if you keep focused on the gray line on the track – because it's the darkest color on the track – the cars sit down and say 'drive me fast.'"

A Class B racer, he qualified at a hair over 125 miles per hour and believes his top speed was about 130 miles per hour. He took 64 laps at the speedway – 8 runs of 8 laps each. But his final run was made even more special because his wife Marie joined him in the passenger seat.

He made this ride memorable for his wife, too.

"I dropped down to 80 miles per hour because I wanted to take Marie out. We got up on the track and the same route and the second run around the track I put her within a foot or two of the wall where you see where all the cars smashed into it."

Marie enjoyed the experience as much as Jim did.

"It was amazing to see these (wall) scars. It's painted and it's beautiful pristine and white, yellow and blue and there are dings in the paint," she said.

"It was exhilarating. The grin on Jim's face was ear to ear."

"I loved it," he says. "It was really anticipating it. Being out on that particular course to know it's a professional track you've seen on television. Now you know that it feels like to be in that car and around that track. It was an amazing feeling.

"Every inch of that driving that track and you know you are driving and your car is performing right – it's just awesome. You become one with your car."

He says the track did not intimidate him.

"I never felt there was any risk to driving on the track. Once you get strapped in and you start driving you get that rush from driving the track and being in control. The car is talking and singing to you and you get familiar with the changes in the road and the curves and how to handle the curves.

"All your senses have to be going. It's not driving down the Mass. Pike at 80 mph because everyone is."

Jim sees himself sharing another common bond with other drivers: safety first.

"I firmly believe every race car driver has the same respect that they have for their well being they have for other drivers. You learn that real fast and you don't forget it."

After the track experience, the Stamoses participated in another signature event: the caravan procession.

The Mustang Car Club of America set out to break the Guinness Book of World Records mark for most Mustangs in a caravan procession. Some 1,000 Mustangs pre-registered for the attempt, nearly 400 more than the previous mark of 620.

"We lined up at the drag strip next to the track and it was unbelievable," Jim recalls.

"All you could see – 10 rows wide – for as long as the eye could see – was Mustangs. They were lined up by colors, including pre-owned police cars, and the caravan proceeded on a pre-determined route from Charlotte to a little town called Kannapolis, N.C. – the birthplace of Dale Earnhardt, Sr. – the legendary NASCAR driver who was killed driving in the Daytona 500 in 2001. The town is also where his son, Dale Jr., lives.

"The procession was led by the police and we drove 26 miles on city roads, highways, one-lane roads and a few miles out they had a hook-and-ladder truck up and television cameras atop filming the event.

"They had people on the ground counting the cars with clickers. By the time our group got there, it took us almost three hours, it was pitch black and pouring."

Jim says he'll always remember people lined up along the route cheering. "They got drenched in the pouring rain. Some of them had umbrellas, others tailgated. Even on the major highways people pulled over and blew their horns and whistled.

"It was phenomenal."

Jim says he believes about 4,500 Mustangs were registered for the celebration in Charlotte.

"It looked like the taxi cabs in New York City. That's all you saw – Mustangs.

"There were every size and shape. They weren't all show cars. Sure there were rich folks with very expensive, collectible cars and some 'trailer queens' that were never driven. And there's a lot of discussion about that. Okay, so you've found the love of your life? You're never gonna kiss her, hug her, and squeeze her?"

Asked to sum up his love for cars, Jim says it's a hobby, passion and part of who he is.

"People know me for my cars. I've very passionate about them. Lots of time it's a great stress relief. I'll go out for a cruise – on one side of the Expressway, down an exit ramp and come back on the other side.

"I enjoy the racing. We're doing more car shows. We've developed a whole new group of friends. I'm totally immersed in the hobby."

The Boss shares Jim's garage with his current restoration project: a 1985 Mustang GT with glass T-Tops and just over 36,000 miles on it.

And Jim likes what he sees from the 2015 Mustangs that are expected to roll into dealerships later this summer or early fall. He calls the lines exotic with a European flair.

He insists the Boss is the last racing car he will own.

But no one will blame him if he gets another one at some point down the road.

Jim Stamos, you might say, was born to Mustang.

ANOTHER HIGHLIGHT of Jim and Marie Stamos's trip to North Carolina - driving in a caravan of some 1,000 Ford Mustangs. The procession drove 26 miles and set a new Guinness Book of World Records mark.

14-Year-Old All Stars Compete Against The Best In Regionals

By BILL GRIFFIN

The goal all season for the 14-year all star team from Quincy was to make a another trip to the regional finals in New Jersey. They played exceptional baseball all season and when the all stars returned, they did themselves proud.

Quincy rolled to an 11-0 win over Freehold, New Jersey and played tough, close games against the two finest teams teams in the tourney, games which went down to the final swing of the final out of the final inning.

Delaware edged Quincy, 4-3, and Connecticut posted a 9-7 win to eliminate the all stars in the Junior League Eastern Regional Tournament at Freehold Township, New Jersey last week.

"It was a great experience playing high level baseball against the best competition from Maryland to Maine," said coach Mark Jaehnig, whose team finished 50-11 on the season. "I'm proud of them. The tournament atmosphere was great. The gave the kids a big banquet and a trip to Six Flags. The kids enjoyed themselves."

Against Delaware, Quincy rallied from down 4-0 to come within a run of victory. Against Connecticut, they rallied from down 3-0 and had leads of 5-3 and 7-5 before falling to a two-run homer in the sixth inning. They were close, so close to a big run through the tourney.

"It's a tough, emotional loss because the kids played and tried so hard. Playing this type of baseball will only make them better in the future," said Jaehnig.

Delaware (3-0) and Connecticut (3-1) were offensive forces early in the tournament. They can hit. They had runners on against Quincy. Quincy stayed close thanks to the defense of catcher Matt Fox who threw out nine runners in three games and the pitchers who picked off three baserunners.

"Both teams hit the ball and Fox's defense was a big reason we could stay close," said Jaehnig

Against Freehold, lefty Mark Monahan and John MacDonald split the shutout. Monahan used his excellent pickoff move to catch two base-runners. MacDonald entered with runners on first and third and no out in the fourth. He escaped the jam and allowed just two hits while striking out three the rest of the way.

MacDonald had two hits to lead the offense which used the bunt and aggressive baserunning to jump-start the offense.

"We bunted effectively. We must have put down eight bunts. They had trouble with them, so we kept using them," said Jaehnig.

Quincy got its first hit and broke the scoreless tie with three runs in the fourth. Max Storch and MacDonald singled. Martin McCormack squeezed home one run, a second scored on an error and Matthew Eagles drove in another with a sacrifice fly.

Dara Griffin had an RBI single in the fifth and Colin McGrath had a two-run double in the seventh. Fox had a fine defensive game.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

NOT SITTING SO PRETTY

Chiropractic treatment largely concerns itself with realigning joints so that nothing will compromise nerve function or body movement. When freed of pain and allowed to function properly, the body is less vulnerable to disease. People who are more physically active and spend less time sitting have a lower risk of developing chronic diseases such as heart disease, diabetes, and stroke, as well as breast, colon, and other cancers. Recent research shows that the mere act of standing appears to significantly promote health and quality of life while sitting for prolonged periods translates to limited muscular contraction. This, in turn, shuts down a molecule called "lipoprotein lipase" (LPL) that helps the body use fat for energy.

If you sit for long periods of time in your daily activities and are experiencing discomforts, chiropractors are well trained to help you. Let us help you live life to its fullest. When you visit FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC for chiropractic care, your health is in caring, competent hands. With your understanding and cooperation, a well-planned program of chiropractic care should ensure you a healthier, happier, and even longer life. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and find out for yourself. Why suffer with pain when help is just a phone call away? We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. According to a study from Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine, every additional hour per day that people over the age of 60 spend sitting is linked to doubling their risk of disability.

Local Hoopsters Help Raise $20,000 For Cancer Research

By JOE REARDON

Efthim Butka knew alternating free throws, mid-range shots and three-pointers over the course of two hours would lend itself to some fatigue and soreness, but the former North Quincy star was still surprised at just how tired he was at the recent Shot For Life Challenge at the University Sports Complex in Hanover.

Butka, who will be attending Saint Anselm in September, was one of four Quincy hoopsters who competed in the cancer fundraiser. The event that featured 16 boys and 10 girls putting up shots, as well as a separate dunk competition, raised nearly $20,000 for the fight against cancer.

The event was founded by Mike Slolina in 2011, who gained attention when he shot free throws for 24 hours straight to raise money. The Shot For Life Challenge features some of the best pure shooting talent in Massachusetts.

Butka was methodical with his shooting and tried to be as efficient as possible in the massive gym that boasts eight full courts. Butka put up 1514 shots and made good on 1093 of them for an impressive 72.2% completion rate. "It was fun," he said. "It started off easier than I thought it would be, but as time went by it got harder. The last half hour was brutal."

Quincy High's Drew Myers was almost an automatic at the free throw line last winter for the Presidents and the captain-elect for this season was just as deadly from the charity stripe. Myers wound up knocking down 958 of his 1060 shots for a 70.4% number.

Myers, who was part of the Quincy team that captured this season's Braintree Summer Tournament title, prepared vigorously for the event and is confident the hard work he put in will carry over into the basketball season.

"I found out I was doing this right after the school season ended," said Myers. "I had a lot of time to prepare and I needed it because it's a lot of work. I tried not to rush my time and take my time."

After a strong run in the tournament last season, Myers is looking forward to another trip to the postseason. And with four returning starters, he is confident the Presidents are going to be tough to contend with once again. "We have high expectations," he said. "It's going to be a good year. My stamina has improved a lot. I've been shooting and running every day. That was a little bit of a problem for me last year."

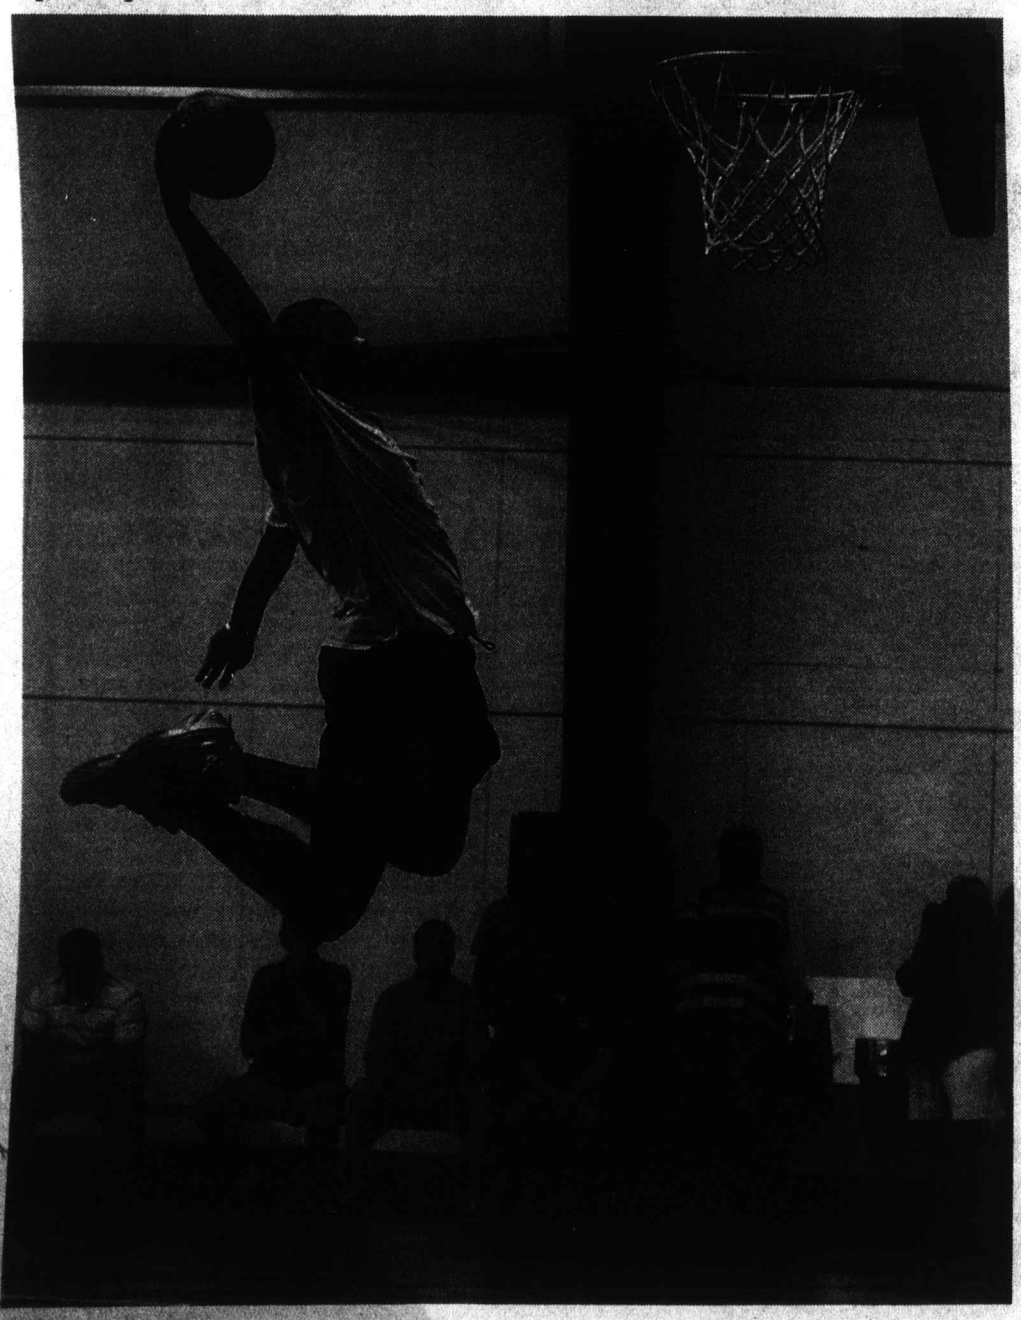
Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth



Quincy resident Jack Loughnane, who attends BC High, shot for 69.3%, hitting 746 of his 1077 shots and North Quincy's Anthony Green competed in the dunk competition. Green's specialty was a 360-degree windmill shot that he put down during the tight competition. His marquee dunk earned Green third place.

Green, who will be playing ball at Tilton Academy, misses high school but is looking forward to a strong season on the court for Tilton. Green knew he had to come up with something big in the dunk competition. "I'm 6-8," he said with a smile. "I had to do something really creative."

Safety First For Youth Football

League Hosts Concussion Awareness Family Fun Day At Quincy High School

The Quincy Youth Football League was founded in 1950 with one principle in mind: safety.

Back in the 1940's and 1950's, unorganized "sandlot" football caused an epidemic of injuries. The QYFL was organized to provide a safe and supervised program for children of Quincy to learn the game of football.

Some 64 years later, safety is still the primary concern. On the top of the list: concussions. This past Saturday, Quincy Youth Football held its first annual Concussion Awareness Family Fun Day at Quincy High School. The event started with an hour-long multimedia presentation by the Sports Legacy Institute, followed by food, games and inflatables outside at QHS.

The Sports Legacy Institute is one of the pioneering organizations in head injury research. The presentation included the Advanced Concussion Training (ACT) program which educates parents, players and coaches how to recognize signs of a concussion and protocols for treatment, rest and recovery.

"Concussions are a serious concern in all organized sports today. Tackle football has the stigma of head injuries attached to it," said QYFL Vice President Sean Halpin. "Our goal is to prevent injuries, educate families and help overcome some of the myths associated with football and head injuries. Today's game is safer than the sport we grew up playing. Rule changes, helmet technologies, coaching techniques and most importantly, education, all combine for a safer game," said Halpin.

The Event was sponsored by Quincy Mayor Tom Koch and Julie Nation of Boston Medical Center HealthNet Plan. Nation's Company BMC HealthNet, made a generous donation this offseason, purchasing, 5 star rated, Xenith football helmets for the West Quincy Elks franchise of the QYFL. Elks Franchise Holder, Dana Calabro, who coordinated the Concussion Awareness event said, "Safety, is the most important thing we do here. Facts show that 99.9% of all people who suffer concussions make full recovery if the injury is recognized, diagnosed and given the proper time for recovery.

"The biggest danger is when the brain is re-injured because of inadequate healing time. What we can do as team leaders is be advocates for the children and the children need to become advocates for their own safety. When in doubt, sit them out," Calabro said.

All of the Quincy Youth Football teams have made great improvements with their football helmets. QYFL Teams utilize NOSCAE certified helmets made by Xenith, Riddell & Schutt. All helmets undergo regular reconditioning and if a helmet exceed 10 years of age, it must be taken out of service.

Practices have already begun for all team and many are still accepting new players and cheerleaders for the 2014 season.

For more information or to join Quincy Youth Football & Cheer, contact Sean Halpin at (617) 980-2674 or email seanhalpin1@comcast.net. Check out Quincy Youth Football on the web at www.QYFL.org.

In the second, he accounted for all three outs by throwing out three base runners. He caught two basestealers. On the third out, he hustled, backed up first and nailed a runner who tried to take second on a wild throw.

In the second game, McGrath pitched 6 2/3 innings of clutch baseball, keeping Quincy within range of a powerful Delaware team. He did not walk a batter and was brilliant with people on base, stranding 13 base runners in the game. Storch came on in the seventh to record the final out.

"In thought Delware was the best team in the tournament. They can really hit," said Jaehnig.

Delaware jumped to a 4-0 lead before Quincy rallied for two in the fifth and one in the seventh. In the fifth, Shawn Kelly singled, Storch walked and MacDonald singled to load the bases. Monahan delivered a big single to left to cut the lead to 4-2.

In the seventh, Kelly singled and Griffin hit into a fielder's choice. Pinch runner Owen Carberry scored on an error to bring Quincy within 4-3, but Quincy could not break through for the equalizer.

Against Connecticut, Quincy fell behind 3-0. The all stars got one back in the second on singles by McGrath and Fox, a sacrifice bunt by Eric Barber and a sacrifice fly by Eagles.

MacDonald drilled a home run to narrow it to 3-2 in the fourth and Quincy took the lead with three in the fifth. Kelly had a double in the rally while Monahan had an RBI single. A sacrifice fly by MacDonald put Quincy up, 5-3.

Connecticut tied it at 5-5, but Quincy took the lead back with two in the top of the sixth. Kelly doubled and Barber, Griffin, and drew walks to load the bases. Storch worked a walk to force in one run for a 6-5 edge and another scored on an error for a 7-5 lead.

Connecticut won it with four in the home sixth. The go-ahead runs scored on a two-run homer. Quincy put two runners on in the seventh, but could not score.

The team was dominant all season posting a 49-8 record en route to its second straight state title and its fourth in the last six years. Hallmarks of Jaehnig's teams are aggressiveness and solid, fundamental baseball. They work counts, get on base, steal and move along the runner. This is well shown in a team batting average of .385 and a team on-base percentage of .517 entering the regionals.

Quincy's pitchers throw strikes and the defense makes the plays. Stay away from walks and errors. Make the other team hit the ball to score. It is a formula that is as old as baseball, and it is one that served Quincy well.

"We have had some good teams, but I think this is one of the best," said Jaehnig.

It was at its best in an 11-0 run through the district, sectional and state tourneys. In the Districts, Quincy defeated Hanson (14-2), Cohasset (24-1), Rockland (12-1), and Scituate (16-1, and 9-2 in title game)

In the sectionals, they rolled past North Reading (13-4), and Canton (5-0 and 10-5 in title game). In the state championships, Quincy swept aside Brookfield, 13-3 and 17-7 to capture the best-of-three series.

"In the tournament, I think we averaged more than 12 runs a game and gave up just over two," said Jaehnig. "Canton gave us our toughest two games."

It always begins with the pitching and pitching was the core of the team. Monahan was also the ace in last year's run to the regionals. He was untouchable early in the season and pitched well in the tourney. He throws strikes. All of Quincy's pitchers throw strikes.

MacDonald can throw both his fastball and curve for strikes and combined with Monahan for the win over Scituate in the district championship. He was also the winning pitcher in the first game of the states against Brookfield.

Matthew Tomlinson was a reliable strike-thrower in relief and earned the win in the title game against Brookfield. McGrath, a 13-year older who starred for last year's championship Cal Ripken team, showed poise and control against blue-chip competition.

Fox (.421 batting average) and Barber (.383) gave Quincy solid defense, dependable hitting, and surprising speed at the catcher's position. Monahan (.396) and Griffin Lynch (.391) split duty at first base. McCormack (.364) had an excellent season at second base.

Storch played great shortstop and hit from the No. 2 slot in the order with a .452 average and an on-base percentage of .651. Griffin (.456 average, .553 OBP) played well in the field at third and led the teams in hits over the final 25 games of the season. Ryan Cox chipped in with a .385 OBP and solid work as a utility infielder.

Kelly is another fine athlete in center. He hit .354, covered a lot of ground and showed off a strong arm. On three occasions, he threw out runners at first base on what looked like routine groundball hits. From center field. To first base.

MacDonald hit .431 and played a strong left field. Tomlinson (.357) and Eagles (.375) were good two-way players in right. Carberry (.558 OBP) played excellent defense at all three outfield spots.

Kevin Kelly and Mike Lynch did fine jobs as assistant coaches.

Recreation Department City-Wide Knockout Tournament

The Quincy Recreation Department recently hosted its annual city-wide Knockout Tournament at the Fenno Street Playground.

Over 60 youngsters from 15 parks throughout the city attended the event, displaying their shooting, speed, and basketball skills. The competitors were broken into 3 separate age groups, with the girls competing with all age groups combined.

In the girls division, the champion was Fallon Hobin from Perkins playground. In second place was Caitlin Ainsley from O'Rourke playground. Both competitors put on a great shooting display and showed great sportsmanship.

In the midget division (ages 8 to 10), the final two contestants were Drew Boretti of Fore River playground and Quinn Murphy of Forbes Hill playground. After a tightly contested battle, Boretti was able to pick up the win.

In the junior division (ages 11 and 12), the final two competitors were Colby St. Marie and Joseph Ban. The match came down to the wire with St. Marie edging out Ban in the end. The competitors showed great stamina and basketball skills during the competition.

In the Senior Division (ages 13-16), there was a boy's competition in which Albi Biba of Fore River Park defeated his fellow park-mate Melvin Gonzalez. Albi and Melvin put on a fantastic display of shooting to end the event.

All participants played well and put in a great effort. Sports Specialists Colin Ryan, Eddie Grennon, and Paul Carson ran the event.

150 Youngsters Take Part In Hot Shot Competiton

The Quincy Recreation Department recently hosted its annual city-wide Pepsi Hot Shots Competition at Fenno Street Playground.

Over 150 youngsters from across Quincy's 15 supervised playgrounds took place in the district wide qualifying round, with about 50 of these contestants qualifying and competing at the city-wide championship. Sports Specialists Edward Grennon, Colin Ryan, and Paul Carson ran the event.

Pepsi Hot Shots is a fast paced shooting competition where contestants are given one minute to make as many shots as possible from different marked off spots on the court. Shooters complete two one-minute rounds, and the player with the highest combined score wins.

Participants compete against youngsters in their own age division, with girls and boys competing separately. The competition shows off the youngsters' shooting, awareness, and speed.

For the boys, the Midget division (Ages 8-10) competition saw Drew Boretti from Fore River playground narrowly beat out Heron Road's Joseph Frye to take home the win.

In the Junior Division (Ages 11-12), Lukas Schaaf from Palmer park posted the highest score of the competition and ran away with the championship. Aaron O'Toole of O'Rourke playground kept things close, but in the end finished second.

In the Senior Division (Ages 13-16), Tom Jaehnig of Fenno Street playground took advantage of home court, overcoming an impressive shooting display by Josh Murphy of Faxon playground to win by one point.

For the girls, Angelina Coletti of Kincaide park claimed the Midget championship. Abby Dunn of O'Rourke shot well and finished second in her age group.

The Junior division saw some very high scores, with Abby Hanly of LaBrecque park claiming the highest score and the victory. Fallon Hobin of Perkins playground fell just short of her second consecutive championship, finishing as runner up.

Finally, in the Senior division, Gia Calabro of O'Rourke showed off her skills and put up a big second round to hold off Cassandra Davis of LaBrecque to become Pepsi Hot Shots champion.

All shooters who took part in the qualifying and final rounds were awarded a Pepsi. The recreation department would like to congratulate all those who participated in the competition, and extend its thanks to all those who helped make the event a successful one.

Real Estate Activity 'A Mixed Bag'

July Shows Strong Growth In Sales Volume, Challenges Faced By Mortgage Industry

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports real estate activity in Norfolk County for the month of July was a "mixed bag" with strong growth in real estate sales volume tempered with continuing challenges faced by mortgage industry.

Moving into the second half of 2014 calendar year, O'Donnell expressed optimism that real estate activity in Norfolk County would continue to show signs of improvement.

"An improving economy coupled with the outstanding quality of life in Norfolk County and if there are reductions in mortgage interest rates will in my judgment result in increased real estate activity and improvements in the mortgage market," O'Donnell said.

Total dollar volume of real estate activity for the month of July, 2014 increased a healthy 39% year over year. For the month of July, 2014, total sales volume was $956 million dollars compared July 2013 figure of $686 million. The total number of deeds recorded was flat year over year with 1,303 recorded in July compared to 1,297 recorded in July, 2013.

Mortgage recording activity continued to struggle for the month of July. Total number of mortgages recorded in July, 2014 was 2,606 compared to 3,560 recorded in July, 2013, a significant 27% reduction. While disconcerting, total mortgage indebtedness only saw a 6% reduction year over year. The total mortgage indebtedness in July, 2014 was $1.1 billion compared to $1.2 billion in July, 2013.

Key factor in the reduced mortgage recording activity was a continued slowdown in mortgage refinance market. A combination of homeowners taking advantage of historically low interest rates in recent years coupled with a previous uptick in interest rates has resulted in reduced mortgage refinance volume.

A bright spot for July, 2014 was a 16% reduction in number of foreclosure deeds recorded at the Registry. While encouraging, foreclosure deed recordings is a benchmark that is closely monitored by Register O'Donnell and the staff at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

Homestead recording activity in July, 2014 decreased 6% year over year. A total of 1,253 Homesteads were recorded in July, 2014 compared to 1,339 in July, 2013.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101 or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Computer Seminar At Registry Of Deeds

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host a free informational seminar on computer assisted land records research at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Dedham from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 25.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the general public. The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises. There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is currently available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

There is no charge for the seminar, but anyone planning to attend is asked to register by calling Alicia Gardner at 781-461-6104 or by email to agardner@norfolkdeeds.org. Please include your name, address, email and a daytime phone number when you register.

Women & Social Security

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Women's Equality Day is Aug. 26, and this is the perfect time to remind you how much Social Security values and appreciates women. Even though men and women with identical earnings histories receive the same benefits, there are things women in particular should know about Social Security. There are trends and differences in lifestyle and patterns of earnings that can affect benefits.

For example, some women may be caregivers for many people: spouses, children, and parents. Taking time away from the workplace to care for a newborn child, ailing spouse, or aging parent can have an impact on your future Social Security benefits.

Also, despite significant strides through the years, women are more likely to earn less over a lifetime than men. In addition, women are less likely than men to be covered by private retirement plans, so they are more dependent on Social Security in their retirement years.

Did you know that women tend to live on average about five years longer than men? This means more years depending on Social Security and whatever other retirement income or savings they accumulate.

If a woman's spouse earns significantly more than she does, it is very possible she will qualify for a larger benefit amount on the spouse's record than on her own. To learn more, visit our Women's page at www.socialsecurity.gov/women and read, print, or listen to our publication, What Every Woman Should Know.

You may also be interested in listening to Carolyn Colvin, Acting Commissioner of Social Security, on National Public Radio as she talks about women and money. Just visit www.npr.org/2014/04/15/301782870/social-security-chief-women-live-longer-so-they-should-save-early.

'The Anonymous People' Film Screening Sept. 20

A feature film about the 23.5 million Americans living in long-term recovery and the emerging public recovery movement will be shown at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Quincy on Saturday, Sept. 20 at 1 p.m.

There is no admission fee, but reservations are needed. Call 617-773-3319.

The Anonymous People screening is sponsored by Quincy Community UMC and Learn to Cope and features interviews with more than 30 people among the millions in long-term recovery from drug and alcohol addiction who are making the courageous decision to speak out publicly.

They, and the film, question why the United States has criminalized and too often given superficial treatment to a chronic illness – addiction. As a result, addiction now comes with an annual price tag of $350 billion. The American approach has put most of the burden of long-term addiction treatment on anonymous, free, 12-step programs. Those programs have done a good job, but no other health problem is treated this way.

In addition, the culture of anonymity in these programs, while it has protected individuals from stigma, has also unintentionally perpetuated false perceptions of people with addiction – as the public doesn't see how often people in their lives recover.

"This film is not your tired old addiction story often seen on reality television or in the news," said film producer Greg Williams. "There are no needles hanging out of people's arms, pictures of the brain, or fried eggs in a pan. We set out to find the answer to one very fundamental question: Why don't we treat addiction in this country like any other health issue?"

The Anonymous People also shines a light on prominent people who are not very anonymous and are living publicly as people in long-term recovery themselves: Award-winning actress Kristen Johnston, former NBA star Chris Her-

Quincy United Methodist Church Fundraiser Aug. 23

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Community United Methodist Church located at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston will hold a fundraising and educational event Aug. 23 following a break-in which occurred in the late evening of July 29 into the early morning of July 30, that resulted in smashed windows and a vandalized gymnasium.

Seven windows, which included two panes of historically-significant, centuries-old stained glass, were broken using a 12-pound rock, a fire extinguisher, and smaller rocks from an exterior pet memorial garden. The vandal, or vandals, broke glass panes in the chapel doors, reached inside, and managed to unlock them. No items were stolen, however, this is the second break-in to occur at Quincy United Methodist. A computer was stolen from an office in January by someone who has yet to be identified.

The damage was discovered on the morning of July 30 at roughly 11 a.m. by the church's sexton.

"They trashed the gym and threw furniture around," said Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden, who added that fingerprints had been lifted by Quincy Police Department detectives off of the fire extinguisher that was used as a battering ram.

She speculated that the person or people responsible must have used a massive amount of upper body strength to cause as much damage as they did.

A presentation by Jarek-Glidden, who holds a Ph.D. specializing in Medieval studies, outlining the historical significance of the stained glass will begin at 1 p.m. and will last for roughly one hour. Following a break for refreshments, interested parties can return to the sanctuary to view the windows further or ask additional questions.

"Some of Quincy Community's windows have some very unusual aspects to them; things I've never seen before in stained glass windows," said Jarek-Glidden. "I hope people will find them as interesting as I do."

There is no fee. Money earned will go directly to the cost of repairing the windows. Jarek-Glidden was unsure as to the total cost of the damages.

Parishioner Julie McKeon suggested the fundraiser idea following a previous sermon series Jarek-Glidden gave based on the church's stained glass windows.

"We're going to stand together as we always stand together," said Glidden of her congregation following the break-in.

Jarek-Glidden urges anybody with questions to call the Church Office at (617)773-3319.

acted, all pet stores would have to get their animals from shelters, as rescues, or directly from animal control. According to Ayers, his office is working with cities and towns throughout Massachusetts to address the issue on a more local level.

"The essential need for this type of law stems from the horrid, unsanitary conditions that encompass the puppy and kitten mills and their commercial breeding methods that churn out puppies and kittens for resale through pet shops," he said.

He went on to say that large sums of money are being spent on unknowingly sick animals bought at pet stores, requiring costly veterinarian visits and care. "This vicious cycle sometimes causes consumers to neglect and desert these animals," Ayers said.

"Animal shelters then become congested with these puppies and kittens. This is a vicious cycle that needs to be fixed in our state."

tor contracts will be open for review by the DHCD. If a director is deemed unfit to run an authority, he can be terminated from the position.

Lydon said that he wants to continue improving conditions at the authority, despite the criticism being hoisted on him and his staff. "I've made commitments to [Mayor Thomas Koch] that I'm committed to fix this thing. I'm here for the long haul. I'm not looking to opt out."

"Residents are just really excited and they're saying that they're seeing stuff happen for the first time in years that hasn't happened," he said. "I really have the feeling that I've begun to turn the corner with this huge ocean liner. I feel as though we're finally getting it to begin to move in the right direction."

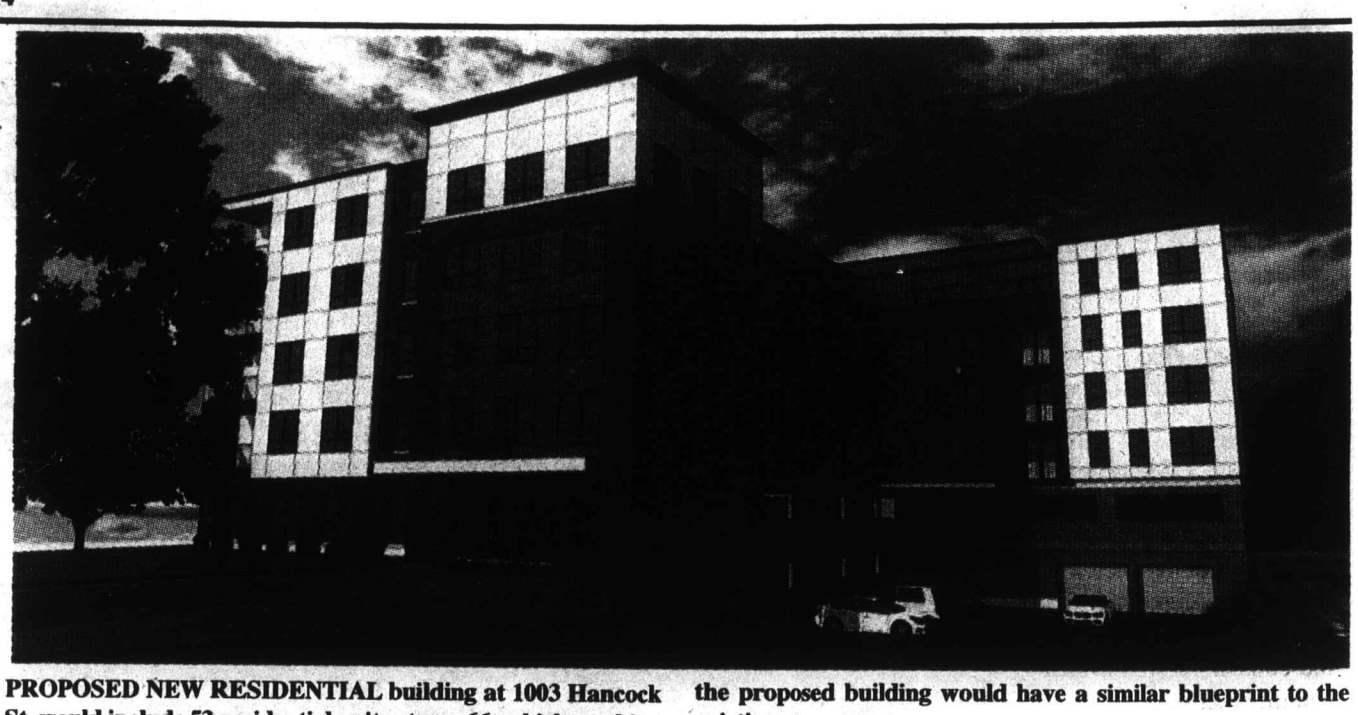
53 Units Proposed On Site Of Former Temple

Mixed Response To Condo Plan



PROPOSED NEW RESIDENTIAL building at 1003 Hancock St. would include 53 residential units atop a 66-vehicle parking structure. The site is home to the former Temple Beth El, and the proposed building would have a similar blueprint to the existing synagogue.

A proposal to build 53 residential units at the Temple Beth El site on Hancock Street drew mixed reviews from residents.

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 60 people attended a community meeting on the proposal, held Aug. 14 inside the temple at 1003 Hancock St. Boston Property Development– a company headquartered on Greenleaf Street, just a short distance away from the proposed project site – wants to raze the temple to make way for 53 one- and two-bedroom residential units and a 66-vehicle garage. The developer plans to sell the units as condominiums, attorney Ed Fleming explained, though that is dependent on the market.

"Whether the market bears out a demand for units at that time will really determine whether they will be sold or rented," Fleming said. "But the goal is to sell them as condominiums and certainly to build them as condo quality so they'll be prepared to be sold."

One-bedroom units inside the proposed building would be about 800 square feet in size and the two-bedroom units about 1,000 square feet in size.

If sold as condos, Boston Property Development Principal Peter McLaughlin estimated each unit would sell for between $300 and $360 per square foot. That would put the price of the one-bedroom units in the $240,000-$288,000 range and the price of the two-bedroom units in the $300,000-$360,000 range. If rented, he estimated each unit fetching approximately $800 per bedroom. Those prices would appeal to those who find Boston too expensive.

"People are being priced out of [Boston]," McLaughlin said. "Quincy has some of the best natural assets of any of the surrounding cities around Boston. It's a very natural place for people to migrate toward. I think that's why there is very good opportunity here."

In particular, the developer hopes to draw adults between 20 and 30 years old who rely on public transit, instead of cars, to get where they need to go.

"We [will] have hopefully a younger generation come into the area," Jon Hanson, the firm's vice president for design and construction, said. "Working professionals who rely on jobs in Quincy Center or the Red Line or bus access that is provided on Hancock Street."

The proposal calls for a six-story building. The first two floors would be used for garage space. The third floor of the building would include a lobby area and other common space. The residential units would occupy floors

The upcoming reconstruction of the Hancock Street and Squantum Street intersection will address concerns regarding traffic choke points and safety according to vice-president of engineering firm BETA Group Inc. Kien Ho who moderated a neighborhood meeting of roughly 50 residents on Thursday night in the North Quincy High School cafeteria.

The project was received mostly favorably with a few in attendance voicing concerns over a lack of bike lanes and the addition of a student drop-off and pick-up area for North Quincy High School which some said would cause additional congestion on East Squantum Street.

The $4 million federal and state-funded project will begin shortly after the school year begins and will last two construction seasons. Construction seasons begin after April and end on Nov. 15 or when the first major snow event occurs. Signs informing motorists and pedestrians of the construction will go up some time before school begins.

Lanes may be reduced during off-peak hours to accommodate construction. Bus stops will remain open, however they may be temporarily relocated a few feet away if necessary.

All road work will be paid for by state transportation funding while underground work, which will prepare Quincy for the future installation of utilities under both streets, will be paid for by the city. Engineering manager for the City of Quincy and part-time redevelopment advisor to Mayor Thomas Koch, Frank Tramontozzi, could not estimate the cost

Expects Full Report On Money Spent To Date

Gutro: Multiple Meetings On Quincy Center Redevelopment This Fall

By SCOTT JACKSON

The chairman of the City Council's downtown committee anticipates a series of meetings on Quincy Center redevelopment after the council returns from its summer recess.

Councillor Doug Gutro, the longtime chairman of the downtown and economic growth committee, said in an interview Tuesday that he expects to hold several meetings related to the downtown before the council takes its winter recess. Sometime in September or October, Gutro anticipates a full report from Auditor Susan O'Connor on the money spent to date on the project; he introduced a resolution seeking such an update this spring.

"A matter pending in committee we're going to get through this fall is an accounting of moneys spent on the downtown," Gutro explained. "What we got for the money that was spent. What tangible projects were completed – reports in hand. What still has a benefit to us going forward."

The discussion will include a review of money paid out of an account paid for by Street-Works that went towards various consultants who advised the city on the downtown project.

"One of the things we will do is have an opportunity in committee to walk through each of these pieces and say 'what did we get for this money and is it still of value to us,'" Gutro said.

A similar accounting will take place regarding the $850,000 in an escrow account Street-Works forfeited when Mayor Thomas Koch terminated the land disposition agreement (LDA) in March. The mayor has said that money would go towards paying a new consultant for Quincy Center redevelopment – Boston-based Redgate Real Estate Advisors was named the consultant in July. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci had previously submitted a resolution urging Koch to seek council approval before any funds in the escrow account are allocated.

"I understand and I don't necessarily dispute the mayor's desire to use it to pay Redgate," Gutro said when asked about the use of money in the escrow account.

"The question is how much, what are we buying, and are there any other proposed uses of that money the administration intends to spend it on. Those are the questions Councillor Palmucci was saying – and that there should be notification, if not an authorization, by the City Council on moneys coming out of that.

"I think the City Council is within its bounds to consider that in light of where we are. We've essentially pressed the reset button on Quincy Center. We, as the City Council, had rigorous oversight of the downtown project. In light of what transpired we obviously need to redouble our efforts."

In addition, Gutro also wants an update on how the city plans to pay off a $30 million district improvement financing (DIF) bond authorized by the City Council in 2007. Street-Works agreed to take on that debt as part of the LDA. With the agree-

George Nicholson New Veterans Services Director

Mayor Thomas Koch has appointed a Vietnam War veteran with more than 35 years experience working directly on behalf of local service men and women as the City's new Veterans Services Director.

George F. Nicholson will take over a department responsible for providing emergency financial assistance and a range of other benefits to the City's military veterans. He succeeds Thomas Stansbury, who retired earlier this year.

Nicholson, a Quincy resident, began a career advocating for veterans shortly after returning from three tours of duty in Vietnam and Southeast Asia in the United States Air Force 1972, becoming a National Service Officer for the American Legion representing veterans and their families entitled to state and federal benefits.

In 1979, he joined the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs as a claims examiner, and would go on to serve as a benefits counselor and fraud examiner during a career that would continue until 2007.

"George has spent a lifetime working on behalf of his fellow veterans, and we are thrilled to have someone with his experience, his knowledge of the complicated web of state and federal benefit programs and his commitment to our community to serve in this vital role," said Mayor Koch, who also thanked retired Veterans Service Director Hank Bradley for stepping back into his old role for several months following Stansbury's retirement.

"Hank did a tremendous job coming out of retirement for us, and I am deeply grateful for all of his contributions over the years to our City," Koch said.

Nicholson is a long-time member of the Morrisette American Legion Post, where he is a past commander and currently serves as its adjutant. He also recently completed a term as the Commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, the umbrella organization of the several local veterans organizations.

"George is a dedicated expert who has been tireless in his efforts on behalf of Quincy veterans, and I very much look forward to working with him in this new role," said Ward 5 City Councilor Kirsten Hughes, who is chairwoman of the Council's Veterans Committee.

COLOSSAL INTEREST IN COLORED DIAMONDS

Recent record prices paid for colored diamonds, which account for only 0.01 percent of all diamonds, provide ample testament to the fact that collectors now fully appreciate the quality and rarity of colored gemstones. One recently sold diamond, known simply as "the Blue," brought $24.2 million at auction only one day after the Graff Vivid Yellow diamond sold for $16.3 million at auction. The Blue, a pear-shaped gem weighing 13.22 carats, is the largest flawless vivid blue diamond ever sold at auction, while the Graff Vivid Yellow set a record sale price for a yellow diamond. Until the 1970s, colored diamonds were worth less than their colorless counterparts. Since then, people have become more knowledgeable and interested.

Most people are familiar with the fact that in white diamonds the absence of color is makes the diamonds so precious. When considering fancy colored diamonds, the existence of color and the intensity of how it shines is exactly what increase the value of the stones. Fire Chief Unveils Official Portrait

Photograph Taken By 2014 NQHS Graduate Rebecca Liu

By SCOTT JACKSON

Fire Chief Joseph Barron recently selected his official photograph – one that was taken by recent North Quincy High graduate Rebecca Liu.

Mounted on one wall of Barron's office are pictures of Quincy's 14 fire chiefs, starting with Walter H. Ripley, who oversaw the Fire Department from 1889 to 1893. Barron, who has been chief since 2008, decided he wanted a student from one of the city's high schools to take his official photo.

"We're always looking for opportunities to interact with other city departments – we're very interdependent," the chief explained Monday in an interview. "We've gotten back into the schools with our SAFE (Student Awareness of Fire Education) Program. I've spoken with a few school groups.

"This just seemed like a natural offshoot to take advantage of the talent we have in our schools."

So Barron reached out to School Committee member Barbara Isola, who in turn reached out to Michael Hanson, a photography teacher at North. Liu was surprised when she first learned she would have the chance to take the fire chief's official photo.

"It was a great opportunity," she said. "I never expected it would happen. It was cool to be able to do a portrait in a professional setting."

Liu first photographed Barron in June 2013 as he spoke at an annual firefighters memorial in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

"That was the firefighters memorial Sunday we have every June. We eulogize the firefighters that have passed away that particular year. We have it at the monument in the cemetery across from the police station," Barron said. "Rebecca was nice enough to come to that and that's where the picture was taken."

Liu shot the chief several months later at Fire Department headquarters on Quincy Avenue, this time taking more traditional photos. Barron's wife, Patricia, then selected which photo would become the official one. She settled on a photo from the firefighter's memorial, showing the chief speaking. That picture was also Liu's favorite.

"I liked this one the most. I feel like it shows the most personality out of all of them. I personally feel it's more interesting than a traditional portrait," Liu said.

Barron was grateful that Liu was able to take the photo.

"I really appreciate Rebecca doing it," he said. "She had a tough job."

"I'm just glad I was given the opportunity," Liu added. "It was fun."

Liu's interest in photography began when she was younger. She was hooked after taking a course as an elective in high school.

"I've always been interested in it but I never really took it seriously until I started high school. I started taking photography as an elective and I really liked it from there," Liu explained. "I always knew I wanted to do something with the arts. I was a pretty artsy kid – I liked drawing, and writing, and everything."

People are her favorite subject to photograph.

"I like to shoot portraits more than anything else," Liu said. "Portraits interest me the most because I like capturing people and having them tell stories through their actions. Being able to show aspects of their personality through photos."

Liu graduated from North Quincy High in June. She is leaving Quincy this week, bound for Manhattan where she will study film at New York University, one of the top film schools in the nation. Liu decided to career in film in high school, but she has always had a passion for telling stories.

"I always knew I wanted to do something with art, I just never knew what in particular. I always liked telling stories," Liu said. "When I was little I always read a lot, but I felt like writing never captured my interest as much as photography did."

After NYU, Liu hopes to one day direct a film about Batgirl.

"I really like super hero movies. It sounds kind of lame and silly, but I love super hero movies so it would be cool to be able to direct one," Liu said. "I would love to do a Batgirl movie. I've always loved Batman and Batgirl is my favorite."

Quincy Band Boosters Seeking Instrument Donations

On July 31st I attended the CYO National's drum and bugle event at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Upon entering the stadium the first thing I noticed was the sheer volume of the crowd that was in attendance that night: the stands were bursting at the seams. Those in attendance that night were treated to a world-class performance by the best drum and bugle corps in the country. The group that peeked everyone's interest of course was the Boston Crusaders. The Crusaders were the original CYO National champions and their performance was spectacular.

I attended this performance with the "Quincy Band Boosters," a group of parents whose students are members of the City of Quincy's Band program. The parent group is taking an active role in the music education of the students attending Quincy Public Schools.

The Boosters hold fundraisers to help raise money to purchase and maintain musical instruments. The Boosters also lobby school committee for increased funding for music programs in Quincy.

They are looking for instrument donations from people who may have an instrument laying around in the attic or basement somewhere. If you have any questions or want to get involved with the Quincy Band Boosters, a 501 (c)3 charity, you can contact the boosters at quincybandboosters@gmail.com.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1943 postcard view of the Quincy Lawn Bowling Club at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park. Lawn Bowling was very popular for many years, but required meticulously manicured greens which became prohibitive to maintain. Today, there are no remains of this club's presence in Merrymount Park. Also long gone is the Walter Smith Memorial Shell in the center distance, home to band concerts in Pageant Field for almost 20 years. Built as a make-work project early in the Depression, the shell was demolished in 1952 due to a lack of city funds to maintain it and repair vandalism. Merrymount Park was purchased and donated to the Town of Quincy in 1885 by Charles Francis Adams, Jr. after the town could not decide to buy the land, which had been Quincy family property. Pageant Field derived its name as the site of a week-long historical Pageant marking Quincy's Tercentenary celebration in 1925. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

SQ Residents Oppose Apartment Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

South Quincy residents raised concerns over a proposed 168-unit apartment building at the intersection of Brook Road and School Street and the impact it would have on flooding in the area.

More than 20 residents – including Ward 3 Councillor Theophilus McLelland III and Pasquale DiStefano, chairman of the Quincy Environmental Protection Society – voiced their alarm over the plan during a Conversation Committee hearing on the proposal.

"I am dead set against the apartment complex at the current time," McLelland said. " I'd like to see what happens there for a few years – how the new Lincoln-Hancock School effects water runoff and if federal flooding funds are appropriated. If in five years the situation is corrected, I'd possibly be for apartment buildings."

DiStefano, a candidate for School Committee, called Brook Road a "disaster area."

"It seems foolish to put a structure where there is so much controversy," he said.

Charles Owens, Jr., an engineer for the site's proponent, opened the meeting by saying the project would include new landscaping to ensure water would properly flow into an existing drain on Brook Road. He also noted an apartment building would improve the odds of Quincy receiving federal funds for flood control projects.

"The land they help must be worth more than the money they spend," Owens explained.

South Quincy was no stranger to flooding from the nearby Town Brook. In 1955, nearly 85 million gallons of water covered 3.6 million square feet of land when the brook overflowed. Residents living near the proposed apartment building told the Conservation Commission about other flooding woes they had encountered over the years.

MOMS DEMAND INTERIM LUNCH PROGRAM

A group of mothers demanded an interim bag lunch program be put in place throughout Quincy's school until a hot lunch program could begin.

The Quincy Parents Advisory Committee on School Lunches criticized schools for not implementing the hot lunch program on time. The group did so in a press conference on the steps of the historic United First Parish Church in Quincy Center. Thirty parents were on hand for the press conference.

State law required a hot lunch to begin no later than Oct. 1 in all elementary schools, but the deadline would not be met in Quincy. The advisory committee demanded an interim bag lunch program be implemented at the beginning of the school year.

"Money has already been appropriated for lunchroom matrons and there are over 300 applicants, so why not have a bag lunch program?" asked Mary Collins of Lansdowne Street.

According to School Committee Vice Chairman Paul C. Kelly, the hot lunch program would be implemented within 60 days and starting a bag lunch program in the interim would "ridiculous."

GROUNDBREAKING FOR NEW BANK HQ

Mayor Walter J. Hannon was among the officials expected to speak at the groundbreaking ceremony for Quincy Savings Bank's new headquarters at 1200 Hancock St.

The bank planned to build a new three-story building with 51,000 square feet of office space; Quincy Savings Bank would occupy 26,000 square feet with the rest rented out. The bank's previous headquarters at 1374 Hancock St., which first opened in 1897, would remain open and offer full service for customers.

"The primary purpose of this move is to provide better service for our customers and a more pleasant banking and working environment," bank president Charles Pearce said.

Create Quincy Industrial Museum

The ship is leaving the dock and I don't mean just the Salem but also a shipbuilding museum.

As the Salem heads for East Boston or probably to its destiny, I think of all of the memorabilia that must have been donated by shipbuilders and their families that will be leaving Quincy and probably never to return to Quincy. Quincy is missing the opportunity to create a niche for itself in the tourism potential we have in Quincy.

Today tourists come in record numbers to visit the Adams's sites and then they're gone. With all of our history and historical sites, Quincy has the potential to keep tourists here for several days longer than just one day but for a longer stay in our historic Quincy.

If we, as a city, could keep tourists here for several days they would stay in our hotels, motels, and eat in our restaurants and spend tourist dollars here in Quincy and the city would benefit from the taxes that go into our city treasury. Quincy should realize that tourism dollars are cheap dollars that require few city services or resources.

This could be the right time for everyone to get on board and I don't mean the Salem, I mean all groups, the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum, Shipbuilders Museum and any group interested in preserving Quincy's history to create a Quincy Industrial Museum under one roof.

The granite industry and the shipbuilding industry were two of the major industries that built Quincy, but there were more. Boston Gear Works, Tubular Rivet Stud Company, Pneumatic Scales Company and many more Quincy industries that contributed to the growth of the Town of Quincy into the City of Quincy.

A great start to the establishment of the Museum would be the combining of the two industries that had such an impact on Quincy's growth, the granite industry and the shipbuilding industry. Combining both and expanding to others would be a great tourist attraction.

As a Quincy taxpayer, one thing I don't want is the city getting into the museum business. A museum should be self-supporting. What I would like to see is the city support these efforts and to work to expedite this possibility with interested parties by the establishment somewhere within the City of Quincy a Quincy Industrial Museum.

Time To Clean House

A man making $160,000 doesn't have to worry about raising taxes. The thousands of seniors who live on a fixed income are sick and tired of taxes going up every year and there is no end in sight as long as we have Mayor Koch in office. He has a short memory if he wants to compare the Adams and Father Bill's pot haven with the Rose Garden.

It appears as if we have only one councillor with a lot of guts to take on the mayor and that is Doug Gutro. The other eight are under a rock somewhere.

We the taxpayers have to clean house from the mayor to the city council. Quincy is on a fast track to bankruptcy.

Art-In-The-Park Program In Carriage House

Adams National Historical Park will present its annual Art-in-the-Park program Saturday, Aug. 23 and Sunday, Aug. 24 in the Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

This year's event will be presented by acclaimed Ipswich folk artist Johanne Cassia. She will conduct two three-hour painting classes for "artists" of all skill levels who will follow a model Cassia painted of the John Adams Birthplace, the 17th Century "saltbox" style house where the second president was born and raised.

Two painting classes are being offered: one on Saturday, Aug. 23 from 1 to 4 p.m. and one on Sunday, Aug. 24 from 1 to 4 p.m. The classes, led by Cassia, will enable participants to reproduce her original painting of the John Adams Birthplace as it might have appeared in the Fall, complete with a "housewife" garden, corn stalks, pumpkins, and trees laden with colorful Autumn leaves.

Cassia will provide step-by-step instruction; supplies and materials will be provided, and light refreshments will be served. Participants will complete a 16 X 20 canvas and take home a completed painting ready to frame. Artists will work with acrylic paints, and should wear painting clothes.

The program is free, but space is limited, and reservations are required.

He has been riding bmx bikes since then and started working professionally in 2002. Starting out at the bottom, learning everything, he moved on to fixing geared bicycles as a head mechanic before setting out on his own. He is now the owner of the Boston Bike Guy shop at 27b Cottage Ave.

Yes or no, come join us to fold some at the library. On Friday, Aug. 22nd from 2 to 4 p.m. in the large meeting room at the Main Library we'll be learning a basic shape or two, then trying out changes to the wings and nose to see how they affect what our planes do.

Feel free to fold a pattern you love or try something new, then test it out.

This program is intended for children ages 5 and older who can follow the folding directions and use their observational skills to improve on the basic designs. Our paper airplanes will be flown indoors.

Allure Spa Cut-A-Thon To Benefit Local Family's Missionary Trip

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy's Allure Spa will be hosting a Cut-A-Thon to raise funds for the Parada family before they leave for South Africa as missionaries for the Christian volunteer organization Youth With A Mission (YWAM). The event will take place on Sunday, Aug. 24, noon to 4 p.m. at 15 Quincy Ave.

Joanna Parada, the daughter of South African parents, and her husband Alberto, along with their four children are being sent out by the Park Street Church in Boston to work with poor and underserved youth, and children with HIV/ AIDS.

The family will be leaving for South Africa on Sept. 7 and will be staying for a minimum of five years but hope to to remain longer.

Molly Follett, a stylist for Allure, said that every year the spa participates in one charitable event or donates funds through the organization Friends of the World Charitable Trust.

The Quincy-based group provides vocational cosmetology training to orphans in developing countries.

Follett, as well as Spa Proprietor Sandra Ishmael, are trustees of Friends of the World Charitable Trust.

"We connected with Allure Spa through its owner, Sandra Ishmael," said Joanna. "We met Sandra when we did a presentation about our mission at her church, First Presbyterian Church in Quincy. She immediately invited us to her spa and said she wanted to do something to help our mission financially. That is how talks of the Cut-A-Thon began."

YWAM will provide housing opportunities for the family as well as connections to local doctors for their daughter, seven-year-old Phoebe, who has Down syndrome, autism, and type 1 diabetes.

The Paradas have three other children: 17-year-old Ana, 14-year-old Isaac, and 10-year-old Margaret. Schooling opportunities have been made available to the family through YWAM.

"They are excited!" said Joanna. "We have been talking about this trip for five years now, so they are really looking forward to finally getting there. Of course, they will miss all their friends here though. It helps that we did similar missions work in Paraguay for four years when they were little, so they have very happy memories from that."

In fact, youngest daughter Phoebe was born in Paraguay during the mission.

Alberto will spend his first year overseas taking Bible and counseling classes.

"The following years he will work with at-risk youth in the 'coloured' community. The 'coloured' people are descendants of black, white and Malaysian people in South Africa," said Joanna. "This group has faced rejection from all the other races in South Africa. In a country torn apart from racial injustices due to apartheid, there is much need for a voice of hope and reconciliation."

Allure Spa will be offering haircuts for $25 and mini facials for $30 during the event with 100 percent of the proceeds going towards the family's trip.

The spa will also have small items such as travel size shampoos and conditioners, and possibly jewelry, for sale at a discount with all funds going directly to the family.

Allure Spa hopes to collect gift cards and other items to be raffled off. Separate money donations are also encouraged.

Funds raised will go toward outgoing expenses such as travel, and monthly living expenses for the Paradas.

"Some people give one-time gifts, and some people commit to supporting us monthly," said Joanna. "Right now, we have $700 a month still to raise."

Ann's Hershey Chocolate Cake

By MARIE

Whenever my niece Ann bakes, you can be sure that not only is it scrumptious, but lovely to look at as you will see in today's column.

It was a birthday cake for her dad (my brother Phil) and the cake got raves.

Beat until fluffy and top the cake-what a treat!

Turkey Vegetable Meatloaf

By SUZIE

Meatloaf is a comfort food for many, whether served hot for dinner or cold in a sandwich (with relish and mustard like my father used to love) the next day.

This is a healthy and delicious recipe that is loaded protein, fiber, and flavor with some vegetables snuck in. A little trick I learned over the years to make sure meatloaf is seasoned properly (since you really do not know how much salt until it is all done) is to break of a little "meatball" from the meatloaf and fry up quick with some olive oil in a pan. This way you can quickly see if you need some more salt and pepper. (Always start with less to be safe.)

This is terrific served with some sautéed broccoli with garlic, olive oil, and a squeeze of fresh lemon juice. And of course, there is always that beckoning baked potato to go along with it.

TURKEY VEGETABLE MEATLOAF

1 lb ground turkey
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped fine
1 red pepper, chopped fine
4 mushrooms, chopped fine
2 garlic cloves, minced
1/2 cup shredded zucchini
1 egg
1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons of tomato paste
1/2 cup oatmeal
2-3 teaspoons sea salt and1/2 tsp pepper
1/4 cup fresh chopped parsley
1 tablespoon dried thyme

Preheat oven to 350 and lightly grease a cookie sheet. Meanwhile, saute' onion, thyme, red pepper, mushrooms, and garlic in olive oil until fragrant and softened.

Add salt and pepper and tomato paste and stir to mix well. Let cool a bit, then mix with ground meat, add egg, oats, zucchini and fresh parsley.

Lightly need together but be sure to mix well. Mound mixture on cookie sheet and bake about 45 minutes or so, until lightly browned and cooked through. Enjoy!

KING-SIZED PROBLEMS

Among the many problems facing England's King Richard III was the fact that his battlefield death in 1485 halted his brief two-year reign. To add insult to (fatal) injury, he was also the subject of a Shakespearean play in which he was referred to as a "hunch-back'd toad." Now, computed tomography (CT) scans of the king's skeletal remains (discovered in 2012) reveal that the monarch did, indeed, have some serious back problems. In fact, the warrior king took to the battlefield in custom-shaped armor designed to fit over a spine that was not only curved by scoliosis, but was also twisted in a spiral. His badly contorted spine was artfully concealed with carefully draped clothing.

If you have a serious spinal curve, make sure to research your treatment options carefully. Our goal is to help you and your family achieve optimal health through natural chiropractic care. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our goal is to understand our patients and their needs. Whether you're suffering from asthma, headaches, backaches, neck/arm/shoulder pain, low back/leg pain, numbness, and injury on the job, or whiplash, call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment for relief. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Don't live with pain! Give chiropractic a try. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. About 3 in every 100 people have scoliosis, which can worsen as a child grows, making early examination and detection a good reason to visit the chiropractor.

Helping Hands Preschool Closes After 14 Years

By MARY McMORROW

June 12th was a very special night for the children and parents of the 2014 graduating class of Helping Hands Preschool.

But it was also a bittersweet event for so many families in Quincy who had the priveledge of sending their children to Helping Hands, run by directors Karen Watson and Cathy Sullivan. Helping Hands opened its doors in the fall of 2000 when Karen and Cathy left their positions as teachers at the Sonshine School/Salvation Army Preschool to open their own preschool. They lovingly transformed what was an old carpet cleaning shop at 276 South St. into a magnificent, colorful and well-planned space for children to play and learn.

Word quickly spread about Karen and Cathy's wonderful way with children and how they complemented each other so well within the classroom. They were fortunate to have the help from many assistant teachers over the years as well, including "Mrs. Nazz," "Miss Joanne," "Miss Sheila," "Miss Mary" and the beloved "Mrs. Kathy" (Kathy Nazzaro) who was with Helping Hands for over 10 years.

The philosophy of Helping Hands Preschool, learning through caring and sharing, not only prepared their graduates for kindergarten, but helped to produce some of the kindest kids in Quincy.

So many families were touched by these gifted and dedicated women and we all wish them luck as they move on to the next chapter in their lives.

'Where Is John Adams' Program At 133-141 Franklin St.

The Adams National Historical Park announces the program "Where In The World Is John Adams" will be held Mondays on Sept. 1, 15 and 29 and Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 133-141 Franklin St., Quincy.

"John," potrayed by Michael Lepage, will discuss his life and composes the letters that he will forward to his "Dearest Friend" and confidant, Abigail Adams, from Philadelphia, Europe, or the nation's capital.

In these entertaining and informative presentations, Lepage offers an intimate look at the now-famous correspondence between delegate, diplomat, and future President John Adams and his "dearest friend" Abigail. Their letters provide a sometimes heartbreaking, often amusing, and always inspirational record of the events that shaped the life and times of this truly American family and the new American nation they helped to create.

Lepage is an ardent student of history and a devotee of John Adams who portrays Adams and other "Founding Fathers" for appreciative audiences at Adams National Historical Park and other venues throughout the commonwealth.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of Second and Sixth United States Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and the "Old House" at "Peace field, home to both Presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

Includes $3.5M For Squantum Point Park, $3M For Maintenance, Repair Of Seawalls

$7.1 Million In Funding For Environmental Projects

Members of Quincy's state legislative delegation announce over $7.1 million in authorized funding for environmental projects for the City of Quincy.

The projects were included in an Environmental Bond Bill, which Governor Patrick signed into law Aug. 13. The bill authorizes the state to issue bonds, supporting capital spending over the next four years on preservation and improvements of the Commonwealth's land, parks, and clean energy resources.

Several Quincy projects were included in the authorization bill, including:

• $3.5 million for improvements to the Squantum Point Park Pier making it more accessible to persons with disabilities.

• $3 million for the maintenance, repair and reconstruction of seawalls in the City of Quincy.

• $500,000 to improve the water outflow of Black's Creek at Wollaston Beach, to help alleviate flooding along the creek and the adjoining Furnace Brook.

• $75,000 for design and engineering costs for a fishing pier and improved public access at Squaw Rock in Squantum.

• $75,000 for design and engineering costs for a boat ramp at Squantum Point Park.

"Investing in our coastal infrastructure is a critical priority, not only for the preservation of our environment, but for the public's safety as well," said state Sen. John Keenan. "We had several goals for Quincy with this legislation – addressing ongoing flood control issues, maintaining or improving the quality of our public beaches, providing for seawall maintenance, and increasing public access to some of the City's most beautiful natural resources – and I think we have taken a major step towards all of them."

The bond bill includes a $3.5 million project to put the Squantum Point Park pier in compliance with the federal Americans with Disabilitiy Act. "This would be a vital step and major component to creating a new ferry service at Squantum Point Park," state Rep. Bruce Ayers said.

Another initiative that the delegation successfully advocated for was $20 million in funding to improve water quality at state-owned beaches, including Wollaston Beach, and $30 million for dredging projects for public channels.

The delegation members pointed out that while the law now authorizes this spending, each project will still be subject to further review and approval by the Governor's Office and by the applicable Executive Agency to which the funding is authorized.

In addition to these local projects, the legislation also authorizes the following statewide programs which could impact the City of Quincy:

• $117.1 million for the design, construction, reconstruction, improvement or rehabilitation of coastal and inland waterways projects;

• $30 million for the dredging of coastal public harbors;

• $48.8 million for the design, construction, reconstruction, rehabilitation, repair or removal of municipally-owned dams and for inland-flood control projects;

• $255.4 million for the Department of Conservation and Recreation for the design, construction, reconstruction, removal, improvement, or rehabilitation of department reservations, forests, parks, harbor islands, and other recreational facilities;

• $100 million for Department of Conservation and Recreation parkways, boulevards, multi-use trails, internal state park roads and recreational trails;

• $120 million for the design, construction, reconstruction, rehabilitation, or removal of coastal infrastructure.

Gov. Expected To Sign 'Puppy Doe' Legislation

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Gov. Deval Patrick is expected to sign into law legislation that will increase penalties for animal abuse and neglect sometime before Aug. 24.

Kerry Morris, Legislative Director for state Rep. Bruce Ayers, said officials "are looking to arrange a ceremonial bill signing," in the fall and possibly in Quincy in honor of Puppy Doe, the dog found so badly beaten and tortured near a Whitwell Street playground that she needed to be euthanized.

Lawmakers reached an agreement Aug. 14 during informal session on the bill drafted by Ayers relative to the penalty for killing, maiming, or poisoning of animals following the discovery of Puppy Doe on Aug. 31 last year. The dog's injuries included burns, stab wounds, dislocated joints, and evidence of starvation.

"Both the House of Representatives and Senate worked to pass Senate Bill 2345; An Act protecting animal welfare and safety which creates harsher punishments along with increased financial penalties for animal cruelty," said Ayers. "The bill will take effect 90 days after Gov. Patrick signs the bill into law."

The new law increases the penalty for abusing animals from $2,500 to up to $10,000 for repeat offenders and maximum jail time will increase from two and a half years to five years in a state prison.

The bill will also require veterinarians who suspect animal abuse or cruelty to report the incident to officials. Veterinarians who fail to report abuse to the proper authorities will be reported to the Board of Registration in Veterinary Medicine.

Under the new bill, a task force will be established which will complete a review of all laws pertaining to animal protection and animal cruelty. The task force will also review services in place that care for animals seized when abuse is suspected. It will also review how housing situations impact animal abandonment and the voluntary surrendering of pets.

The findings of the task force will be submitted to the clerks of the Senate and House of Representatives and the chairs of the joint committee up to 18 months following the passage of the act.

A national animal abuse registry will also be created.

"From this incident we received a tremendous amount of support towards strengthening the laws to prevent animal abuse," said Ayers. "Working with Sen. Bruce Tarr of Gloucester, Rep. Lou Kafka of Sharon, and legislators, along with animal advocates and organizations throughout the state, Puppy Doe did not die in vain, for when Gov. Patrick signs this bill, we will have a new law to prevent animal cruelty and give a voice to the voiceless animals in the Commonwealth."

Ayers has also begun drafting a bill that will, if enacted, ban the sale of puppies and kittens through puppy mills. He is reviewing laws in place regarding puppy mills in other states to assist him.

Under the legislation, all pet stores would have to get their animals from shelters, as rescues, or directly from animal control. According to Ayers, his office is working with cities and towns throughout Massachusetts to address the issue on a more local level.

"The essential need for this type of law stems from the horrid, unsanitary conditions that encompass the puppy and kitten mills and their commercial breeding methods that churn out puppies and kittens for resale through pet shops," he said.

Ayers said large sums of money are being spent on unknowingly sick animals bought at pet stores, requiring costly veterinarian visits and care. "This vicious cycle sometimes causes consumers to neglect and desert these animals. Animal shelters then become congested with these puppies and kittens. This is a vicious cycle that needs to be fixed in our state."

"The current laws in Massachusetts are not tough enough to protect our animals," he said. "Animal abuse is inhumane and it is an issue that needs to be taken more seriously."

Germantown Neighborhood Center Students Receive Scholarships, Visit From Boston Bruin

Students from Quincy were recently awarded college scholarships and a surprise celebrity visit.

On Aug. 14, six high school students at The Germantown Neighborhood Center were presented with scholarships from Sullivan Tire. The scholarships, totaling $5,000, were divided among the six recipients who were chosen by a selection committee based on their applications.

The recipients are: Krystina Stoker, Victoria Samsel, Vanessa Anjunthe, Joanne Ruan, Bryan Stoker and William Wu.

The scholarship presentation was made even sweeter by the guest appearance of Boston Bruins player Gregory Campbell, who also appears in Sullivan Tire TV commercials. In addition to signing autographs and mugging for photos, Campbell received a tour of the facility.

"I was very impressed with the spirit of the young people at the center. No matter the hardship, they seemed to be prevailing against all odds," said Campbell.

Added Paul Sullivan, Vice President at Sullivan Tire: "These students and the staff at The Germantown Center have worked incredibly hard to make college a reality. If we can help defer the expenses of college in some small way, it's our privilege."

Vaccination Key To Prevent Contagious Canine Disease

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Parvovirus, an acute and highly contagious canine disease spread through the stool of infected dogs, has killed 15 dogs in Lowell over the last month, however it is unlikely pet owners have to worry about the virus spreading to Quincy according to Dr. Meg Connelly of the Willard Veterinary Clinic, who has only heard of one case of parvo in the area this year.

"The vaccine is very effective," she said. "We typically only see parvo in unvaccinated dogs that come from puppy mills or shelters."

The infected dog, which was quarantined in a Weymouth facility in the spring, was critically ill upon arrival and could not be saved.

"Despite incredible efforts, they were unable to save the dog," she said. "[The owner] had purchased the puppy from a puppy mill in Kentucky…the puppy was on a truck for ten days."

It's possible the puppy came into contact with parvo during its long trip from Kentucky while confined in its cage she said.

The virus typically infects puppies between six and 20 weeks of age, before they can receive proper vaccination due to maternal antibody interference which causes vaccine antigens to be neutralized when administered.

When infected, dogs begin exhibiting symptoms following a four to five-day incubation period. Illness comes on suddenly with depression and lethargy, vomiting, and diarrhea which is foul smelling and can contain mucus and blood. Dehydration develops rapidly as a result.

Some dogs may develop a high fever while others remain fever free.

What distinguishes parvo from other dog illnesses is that the animal will suddenly lose its appetite and stop eating completely said Connelly.

She also noted that parvo is "as a virus, a very tough virus to kill." It can survive for as long as ten months on concrete, where dogs can pick it up on their paws and spread it to other surfaces. Several intense washings with a ten ,percent bleach solution is recommended for disinfecting surfaces believed to be contaminated.

Connelly also recommends that owners be aware of what their animals are sniffing or licking and to keep pets away from dog feces.

"Because it's viral, you can't kill it so we administer supportive care," she said.

With immediate treatment, a dog's survival rate can be as high as 70 percent with the administration of intravenous fluids and nutrition.

Even following successful treatment, dogs may experience long-term repercussions because of irreversible damage done to their intestines. They will often remain very thin and require high-quality pet food rich in nutrients. They also require greater amounts of water to remain hydrated.

Connelly said she didn't anticipate parvo "jumping" from Lowell to Quincy but advised that all dog owners make sure their pups always have a bowl of clean water available to them, preferably inside and away from insects such as flies that can carry the virus on their legs and onto the rim of a dog's water bowl.

Dogs should also receive the series of vaccinations as puppies and follow up with booster shots every three years for maximum protection, she added.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
OLYMPIANS FACE BIG HURDLE

What effect can energy drinks, gels, bars, and frequent snacking have on athletes' teeth? The dental director for the International Olympic Committee reveals that a great many Olympic athletes have broken teeth, abscesses, decay, and other dental issues. The problem is that many of them consume acidic, sugary drinks and energy bars that attack teeth while their dehydrated bodies do not produce enough saliva to remineralize their tooth enamel. In addition, most Olympic athletes are ages 16 to 25 years old, which is the group at highest risk for tooth decay. As these young adults fly the family nest and abandon many of their healthy eating habits, they become more susceptible to tooth decay. Athletes and exercisers take careful note.

Diet and nutrition are important environmental factors affecting oral health problems such as dental caries and periodontal disease. The best time to see your dentist is before you have a problem. The most valuable service we can provide is a thorough and complete examination. Virtually all dental problems - decay, gum disease, jaw joint difficulties and loose teeth - are easily detected in their early stages and can be treated economically and comfortably at that time. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com ment terminated, the bond will now be paid by new tax revenue generated in the Quincy Center DIF district, just as it would have before the developer agreed to pay it off.

P.S. Many competitive athletes grind their teeth at night, probably in response to the competitive pressures they face.

Gutro: Multiple Meetings On Downtown Redevelopment

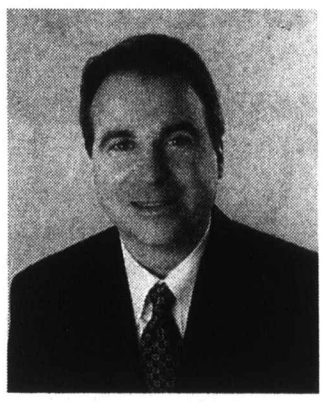
He also plans to ask officials from Quincy Mutual to update the council on plans for their development in the 1400 block of Hancock Street. Street-Works broke ground on their Merchants Row project there in June 2013, but the project stalled months later. Even before the city's LDA with Street-Works was terminated, officials announced Quincy Mutual would be taking the reins on the Merchants Row work – a project that initially called for new five- and 15-story buildings featuring hundreds of residential units and street-level retail.



DOUG GUTRO

"Merchants Row deserves a council update. I understand Quincy Mutual and LaSalle were working on ownership and development options. It's been a while here since Quincy Mutual has separated itself from Street-Works and the LDA went into default," Gutro said.

"We have not, since the period of the default, had representatives from those projects come before the council. They might say it's private development and will take its own course. They may ultimately go to planning or zoning.

"But in the eyes of the public, for the better part of a decade that block was part of a master redevelopment. Not only that, it was the signature piece that was accelerated back in 2012 with great fanfare. I think all eyes are on that block and what exactly is going to happen and when."

In yet another meeting, Gutro hopes to receive a presentation detailing which of the council's votes related to the downtown remain in effect or possibly need to be rescinded. The council passed at least 21 votes related to downtown revitalization over the last decade, covering a wide-range of topics such as establishing an urban district redevelopment plan and asking the state for more liquor licenses for Quincy Center.

"The question is which of these votes remain in force and apply to future redevelopment, and which don't," Gutro said.

"Shall we assume the rezoning stays in effect? I would assume it does. There was a master TIF (Tax Increment Financing agreement) that was signed, so does the master TIF stay in effect regardless if you develop across that district or within that district, one building or block?

"The question about the DIF is also geography – how in the application did we define the DIF boundaries or was that a necessary piece of the application? The other piece is the urban redevelopment district. The urban redevelopment district allows us to do a number of things, including appoint a master developer."

Additionally, Gutro wants to know how the city plans to pay for the $30 million Adams Green park project. Quincy had applied for, and received preliminary approval, to use money from the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) program to pay for the new park and the new Cliveden Street Bridge.

Under the I-Cubed program, the state would take out bonds and use revenue from newly generated state taxes to pay them off. In Quincy's case, the original plan was to pay the bonds with new state money – including sales, income, and hotel/motel taxes – gener-

Two Quincy Projects Featured

Video Premier Friday To Mark 40th Anniversary Of CDBG

To celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Community Development Block Grant Program, the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development has produced a series of videos and multimedia tools to highlight some of the best projects that have ever been undertaken nationwide through CDBG funding.

Two of Quincy's CDBG projects – Manet Community Health Center and the Germantown Community Center – are prominently featured in HUD's video entitled, "The Role of the CDBG Program in Creating a Suitable Living Environment."

In 1978, the City of Quincy allocated $338,974 in CDBG funds for the construction of the Manet Community Health Center in Houghs Neck. When it opened in 1979, Manet had 3 employees and operated 1 clinic. Today, Manet has over 150 employees at 6 health centers.

And in 2005, when St. Boniface Church in Germantown was suppressed by the Archdiocese of Boston, the City of Quincy stepped in and purchased the property with CDBG funds and redeveloped the building into what is now the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

To celebrate CDBG's 40th anniversary locally, the City of Quincy will showcase the official citywide premier of the video Friday, Aug. 22 at noon in the first floor conference room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The public is invited to attend the premier.

The video premier will mark the 40th anniversary (to the day) when President Gerald R. Ford signed a law creating the CDBG Program on Aug. 22, 1974. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 merged seven individual competitive grant programs into a single block grant providing local communities the flexibility to decide for themselves how best to meet their own community development needs.

Since then, thousands of cities, urban counties and rural communities have come to rely upon this critical resource, investing $144 billion to undertake a wide variety of activities from improving public facilities to producing affordable housing. Each year, CDBG funds are distributed to state and local governments according to their population, poverty, and other housing variables.

Last year alone, the program allowed state and local governments to help nearly 28,000 individuals to find permanent employment or to keep the full-time jobs they have. CDBG also supported the rehabilitation of nearly 95,000 homes and financed public improvement projects that benefitted an estimated 3.3 million residents in communities from coast to coast.

Helen Shiner Elected To DOVE Board

Helen Shiner, manager of Jack Conway, Realtor's Quincy Office, was recently elected to the Board of Directors of DOVE, Inc. (Domestic Violence Ended).

A lifelong Quincy resident, Shiner is a member of the Quincy Charitable Foundation, serves as secretary of the Quincy Preservation Committee, and is a director of the Manet Community Health Centers.

"I've been an ardent supporter of the DOVE organization for many years," Shiner said. "I'm honored to serve on its board of directors and to further its mission of providing much needed help to individuals and families affected by domestic violence."

HELEN SHINER

The focus of the group in the year ahead will be to create concrete plans to secure a new emergency shelter, according to a statement released by DOVE Executive Director Sue Chandler.

"We are thrilled to have Helen on our team," said Chandler. "She is an exceptional member of our community and will bring a network of resources and skills to help us continue and expand our services."

Since its establishment in 1978, DOVE has sheltered more than 5,000 South Shore families whose lives were impacted by violence in their homes.

Beware Back-To-School Shopping Scams

According to the National Retail Federation (NRF), book-to-school shopping is the second largest spending season of the year, and this year an estimated $75 billion will be spent for back-to-school and college expenses.

Mobile shopping is on the rise, as consumers are utilizing their smartphones more and more. The NRF states that 37% of shoppers will research school items with their smartphones, the highest percentage they've seen yet, and 58% of college bound students will use their device to shop for college items.

It's also important to be aware of back-to-school scams that target smartphone and social media users. Be wary of ads or links found on social media sites that offer large monetary gift cards for filling out surveys or entering contests. These links will lead you from your social media channels to malicious sites that will download malware to your devices. Scammers are also known to send text messages claiming to be brand name stores asking consumers to claim a free gift card by texting their personal information. These are smishing (SMS phishing) scams that lead to identity theft.

The Better Business Bureau advises families who are preparing for back-to-school the following tips for savvy shopping:

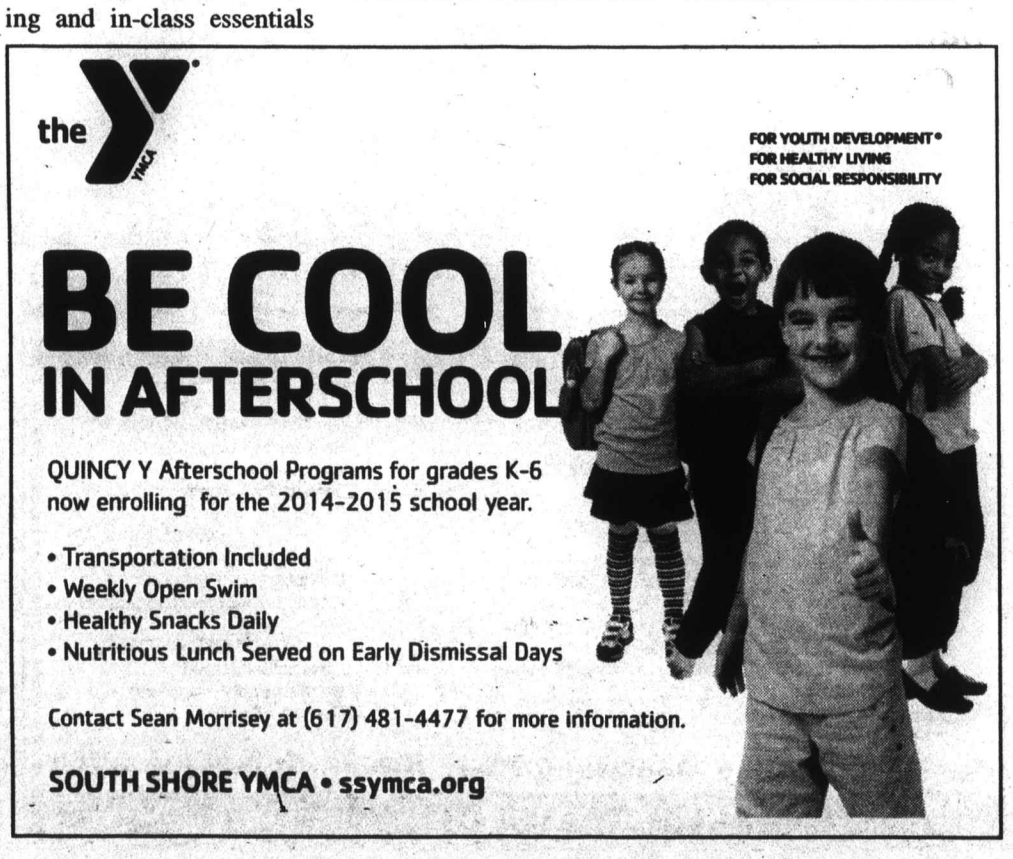
Make a List. Even if you don't have a school supply list yet, you can still purchase other items like clothing and in-class essentials like pens, notebooks and binders. Make a list for each child, but start by "shopping at home" for items that you may already have left over from last year. For some items, it's worth spending a bit more (a high quality backpack will last for years).

Set a Budget. Decide how much you are willing to spend. After taking inventory, create a shopping list and stick to it. Be sure to clip coupons and make a note of discount codes or rebate programs.

Avoid Social Scams. Some ads or links on social media sites will offer free products or gift cards by filling out surveys and giving your personal information. Some links will even lead to malicious sites that download malware onto your device or steal your information. Be sure to avoid ads that look too good to be true.

Sign Up for Alerts. By signing up for email or text alerts for you or your children's favorite stores, you can monitor pricing early on and you won't miss out on the hottest items or limited opportunities. But be sure to never respond to an unsolicited text from stores that offers free gifts cards or products and ask for your personal information.

Check Refund Policies. Be sure you can exchange or return items purchased during this time period. Keep in mind, some items may be non-refundable or have restocking fees associated with a return.



Jane Kisielius Retiring As Health Services Coordinator

By SCOTT JACKSON

Students and teachers are heading back to school next month, but one longtime administrator won't be joining them.

Jane Kisielius is retiring from her role as the school system's coordinator of health services effective Aug. 29. Kisielius, 62, has served in that capacity since 2003 and worked as a school nurse in Quincy for a decade before that. She worked as a nurse in Boston for years prior to becoming a school nurse.

"I became a nurse in 1973. I actually worked at Children's Hospital for 10 years. During that time I had my own family," she recalled in a recent interview.

"I left Children's because of my children and started to work part-time. Then I kind of thought about school nursing – working with people in the community, with families – it was right up my alley and I decided to look into it."

Kisielius began working in the school system in September 1993, when she was hired as a part-time nurse at the Squantum Elementary School. At the time she worked two days a week at the school and three days a week at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston. She soon fell in love with her new job.

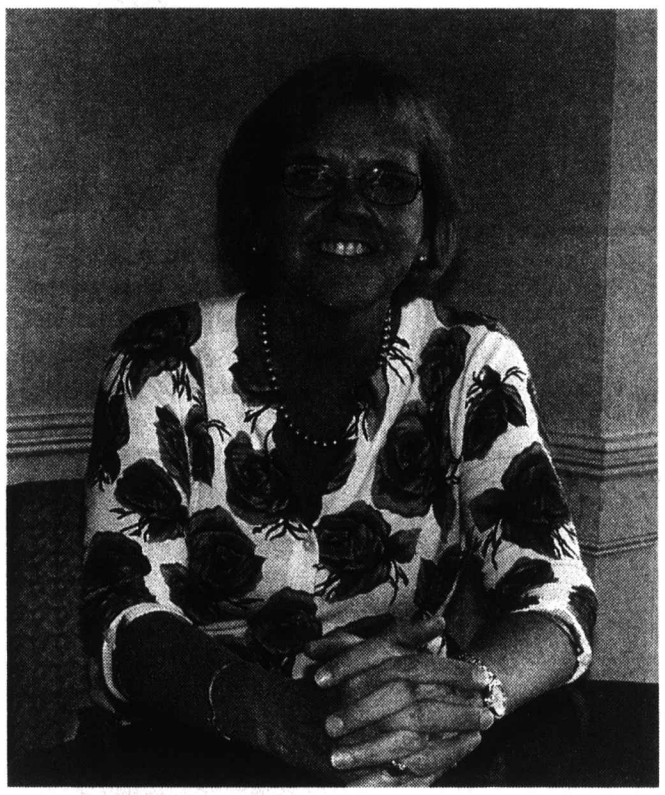
"I absolutely loved it. I loved working with children. I loved working with the staff. There was a lot of communication with primary care providers," Kisielius said.

"It was a whole different nursing practice for me, which was really exciting. It was a lot more than I had ever anticipated because, especially with children with medical needs, you need to plan their care so they can manage through the school day with the least amount of interruption to learning."

Months later, in February 1994, Kisielius agreed to work full-time for the school department, which had just opened the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, and left her position at Brigham & Women's. At the start of the following school year she was permanently assigned to the Della Chiesa center.

Kisielius remained at the Della Chiesa center until 2003, when she was promoted to her current position as health services coordinator. As the health coordinator, Kisielius is a member of Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro's leadership and oversees the nurses who work in the city's 19 public schools.

"I'm responsible for coordinating the entire health services program for the district. All of our schools have full-time nurses – I'm responsible for hiring and supervising the nurses. I'm responsible for program development, policy development. I also coordinate a substitute nurse pool," she explained.



JANE KISIELIUS is retiring from her role as the school system's coordinator of health services.

"I'm a member of the superintendent's leadership team and also work closely with all the principals on various health issues and complications that come up.

"There have been several mandates recently like the concussion for Quincy Public Schools. I was a major player in that. Our wellness policy – that's an ongoing responsibility – I'm the chairperson of the district-wide wellness team."

Under Kisielius' watch, the school district has worked in concert with a national group that aims to combat childhood obesity.

"We formed a partnership with the Alliance for a Healthier Generation to try and address promoting healthy schools and try to look at ways to make our schools healthier for students," she said.

"I worked very closely with Joanne Morrissey, who is our director of food services, changing menu items in the cafeteria and looking at outside fundraising activities, making sure we are getting away from some of the candy sales trying to promote healthier school environments."

Additionally, Kisielius oversaw the school department's drafting of new policies to help students with severe food allergies as well as the placement of automatic external defibrillators (AEDs) in Quincy's 19 schools.

"We set up new policies for life threatening food allergies, which is a really major issue in schools," Kisielius said. "We also, in terms of emergency planning, were able to develop a policy for automatic external defibrillators and we've got them placed in all the schools. That was through the generous collaboration of the Masons, they helped us purchase them."

Kisielius was raised in South Boston but has resided in Quincy for the past 30 years. Her and her husband John, a retired Boston Fire Department lieutenant, raised three children in Quincy – John, age 32, Katie, who turns 28 in September, and Julie, age 24.

"I love Quincy – I think it's a great place," Kisielius said. "I think the school system is great. The people I work with are phenomenal – really hardworking, dedicated people from the superintendent all the way down."

The decision to retire wasn't an easy one.

"It's a tough decision," Kisielius explained. "I guess I feel like I've given my career full time and I'm interested in maybe accepting some new challenges – just taking a breath and figuring out what that is. I really don't know what that is – it's not like I have a big plan."

The hardest part of retirement, she noted, is leaving all the people she has come to know over the years, including fellow administrators, the nurses, and the students and their families.

"One of the hardest things, I think, is the people I work with. It's a great, committed team of professionals that really are committed to making Quincy Public School the best education district in Massachusetts," she said.

"I'm really going to miss that. I love the practice. I love the nurses. It's hard to leave. I love my job so it makes it hard to leave, it really does.

"I've met great families and kids. It's interesting, because every year as an administrator I go to graduation – this year I was able to see students I had in kindergarten and they were graduating. It was so wonderful to see what nice young adults they've become."

Rita Bailey, currently the nurse at Snug Harbor Elementary School, will be taking over for Kisielius. Beginning this week, Kisielius will help show her successor the ropes to help ensure a smooth transition.

"I'm really excited about that," Kisielius said. "I think she is going to do a great job. It's a large district – we have 19 schools – and she is familiar with the nursing staff. I think she'll just do a phenomenal job. She had good leadership qualities – she is hardworking.

"It's a process of learning the new role and I think this year is kind of like a learning curb year for her, but I think she'll be phenomenal. …I'm here to help her for a little bit and I'll be around if she has any questions."

72 Students Participate In YouthWorks

Thanks to the support from the South Shore Workforce Investment Board and Quincy Career Center, 72 students from Quincy Public Schools participated in the 2014 Summer YouthWorks program. Participants worked at sites including several Quincy School Community Partners. South Shore YMCA, Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy Career Center, Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy Public Schools, and many others have taken on YouthWorks participants with open arms and have made this experience a continued success for all of our YouthWorks students.

The primary component of the YouthWorks program is subsidized employment in which participants worked for approximately 30 hours per week over the last six weeks. Students worked in a variety of fields including maintenance, landscaping, information technologies, youth camps, and a variety of office professions.

In addition to the summer work experience, students attended career development days where they learned how to maximize their value as employees. Skills such as financial literacy, interviewing, job selection, and professional job etiquette were addressed. Participants created portfolios including resumes, cover letters, thank you notes, and business cards of their own. They gained valuable experience practicing their interviewing skills and had an opportunity to network with various officials and executives from the business community.

Each student-employee of the Quincy YouthWorks Program worked closely with program facilitators and site supervisors setting goals and improvement targets for their employment. Throughout the summer, students were mentored on how to improve upon skills they have learned throughout their employment. All participants will leave the program with a completed Massachusetts Work Based Learning Plan to add to their already extensive work readiness portfolio as they pursue future employment opportunities.

NQ Intersection Project To Address Traffic Choke Points

of the underground work.

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) is overseeing the project.

Safety improvements include clearly marked crosswalks which Ho hopes will reduce the amount of people jaywalking diagonally through the intersection, and ensuring that pedestrians are given enough time to cross without holding up waiting vehicles resulting in further congestion.

The flashing light currently at the Hancock Street crosswalk near McDonald's, a high foot traffic area for students after school lets out, will be replaced by a conventional red, yellow, and green traffic light. "When you push the button, you want to make sure that the cars stop because you're not talking about five or ten students crossing here," said Ho. "You're talking about there are times where we've encountered hundreds of kids. They just dash across."

All stop lights in the area will communicate with one another, resulting in a smoother flow of traffic and reduced wait times for both pedestrians and vehicles.

Currently, the Hancock Street and Squantum Street intersection is operating on level service F; a failing grade meaning that pedestrians must wait 80 or more seconds after pushing the cross button before traffic stops. With the improvements, the level of service will be raised to either a C or D, meaning that pedestrians will wait a maximum of 35 to 45 seconds to cross.

According to Ho, safety is such a major concern because the intersection's current crash rate is 1.7 per million vehicles. A maximum rating of .65 is considered acceptable.

Widened lanes will improve traffic flow as will an exclusive right-turn-only lane onto West Squantum Street and additional left-turn-only lanes to access both Hancock and Squantum Street. Two exclusive through lanes will connect East and West Squantum Street.

At the request of the Quincy Police Department, traffic operations will be remotely observable from their offices.

In front of North Quincy High School, a direct connection from the intersection into the parking lot will be created, encouraging students to utilize the crosswalk instead of jaywalking. An ornamental fence will funnel them to the connection.

"You see a gazillion people crossing all over the place at the intersection," said Ho.

Current street lighting will be replaced with LED lights and additional lights will be added, more than doubling illumination in the area.

The drop-off and pick-up area for the high school will extend for 400-450 feet on East Squantum Street and will ease traffic congestion assured Ho, who said that at the beginning and end of the school day he has witnessed "cars everywhere," including on nearby Hunt Street.

Certified Orientation and Mobility Instructor for the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind Cynthia Guise raised concerns about tone locators remaining at each corner of the intersection. Ho confirmed that locators would remain not only at each corner, but on the island in the middle of the intersection.

"That's important because if someone gets stranded there they can push something, but also if they were by the Shell station and going across, somebody who's totally blind needs that sound locator on the island so that they can walk a straight line because it's not a perfect T-intersection," she said.

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee stated that adding bike lanes, which is not planned but was suggested by some at the meeting, would create hazards to drivers and bicyclists.

"Hancock Street has already had numerous pedestrian fatalities," he said. "This is a very busy area; a highly distracted corridor. There's a lot going on. I don't think you can introduce bike lanes there without creating a public safety hazard and I want to be on record for that."

He made an example of the Neponset Bridge which was narrowed by nearly two feet per lane for the accommodation of bicyclists. He said that as a result, motorists now experience difficulty with merging and cars go over the bridge at a slower rate.

"It's a recipe for disaster and I'm totally opposed to it," he said.

West Squantum Street resident Colum Flaherty said he agreed with McNamee "100 percent" as someone with years of experience driving tractor-trailers and other large vehicles. "The most dangerous thing in the world is a bicycle because they will ride similar to our speed, they will come on our inside and we cannot see them in that right hand mirror," he said. "Not now, and not with this intersection because there's too many oversized vehicles that travel through that intersection."

Players Sign Banner Dedicating Match To Fellow Alumni Cpl. Steven Peterson

QHS Soccer Boosters Host 3rd Alumni Game

The Quincy High Boys Soccer Boosters hosted their Third Annual Alumni Soccer Game at Veterans Stadium Aug. 10. It was a beautiful day and nearly 50 past players gathered for an afternoon of fun – sometimes intensely competitive -- soccer.

"We are missing one alumni today though," said QHS Boys Varsity Soccer Coach Mark Spendlove. After attending the inaugural alumni game, Corporal Steven Peterson missed the last two games. Cpl. Peterson is serving in the Marine Corps and is currently stationed in Afghanistan.

Coach Spendlove keeps in touch with many of his past players and when he found out that "Petey" wasn't going to make it, he wanted to dedicate the game to him. The soccer boosters had a banner made and all players that attended the game signed it signifying their support of their former soccer teammate. Both the banner and a game t-shirt will be shipped to Cpl. Peterson in Afghanistan.

Players from as far back as the Class of 2003 took part in this year's game. The two teams, "Blue" and "White," were made by graduation year. Players graduating on an even year wore blue jerseys, while those graduating on an odd year wore white jerseys.

It was an action-packed, close game throughout the afternoon with the Blue Team prevailing as the winner with a final score of 4-3.

Back in the spring of 2012, Charles DyBaud, Class of 2007, approached Coach Spendlove with the idea of having an alumni game. Spendlove asked volunteer booster parent, Janice Dane if she would handle the logistical details for the event and asked QHS Boys JV Soccer Coach Ken Decie to officiate the game. Together, the four have been organizing the game ever since.

"It's great to see some of my former players return; it's a good way to catch up and see what they have been doing," Spendlove said "I'm amazed at the turnout and the fact that players from years prior to my becoming the QHS Boys Varsity Soccer Coach in 2009 are involved is tremendous!"

Charles DyBaud said "Everyone should be proud to be a QHS President again. The hard work and talent of all the past players made it the best Alumni game so far."

Event organizer, Janice Dane, said, "This was the biggest turnout yet. Our first game barely had 25 players, and to see it grow little by little each year is a testament to what it means to play soccer for the Presidents."

The net proceeds from this year's game will be donated to the Lamar Thompson Book Award given by the QHS Boys Soccer Boosters each year to a graduating QHS Soccer Player. Lamar played soccer for Quincy High School until his tragic passing on July 1, 2012.

Recreation Department Holds Wiffleball Tournament

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual Citywide Wiffleball Tournament at Bishops' tennis courts.

The weather was perfect, a slight breeze, the sun not too bright, and the air quality just right.

The wiffleball tournament is co-ed. Each team can consist of three to five players. Teams play with one pitcher and two fielders, instead of running bases scoring bases are automatics. Games are umpired by park leaders.

The tournament was a success with many teams competing. Each district held a district wiffleball event and the top three teams from each age group – midgets (8-10), juniors (11-12) and seniors (13-16) – qualified to compete in the citywide event.

The Midget champions from Fore River are Drew Boretti, Shawn Kozlowski and Harrison Stengal.

Runners-up in this age group from Squantum are Lucas Whooley, James Whooley, Vinny O'Leary and David Dantona.

The Junior champions from Labrecque are Joseph Smiddy, John Bousquet and Doug Concannon.

Runners-up in this age group from O'Rourke are Ethan McDevitt, David Ryan, Brandon Sullivan and Zach Hatfield.

The Senior champions from Forbes Hill are Devlin St. Marie, Dylan Richardson, John Norton and Jack Meade.

The runners-up, also from Forbes Hill, are Brendan Keaveny, Colin Keaveny and Colby St. Marie.

The tournament was exciting to watch as teams had the fundamentals down. Players and youngsters watching the games were very enthusiastic and cheered on each team.

Each player on the champion teams received a gold wiffleball trophy. Silver wiffleball trophies were presented to each player on the runners-up teams.

Roberts St. 'Cops N' Kids' Summer Program A 'Win-Win'

7-11 Chain Proud Supporter

("Teamwork" is a term used by the Quincy Police Department when working with other public or private entities to enhance the quality of life in the city.)

Back in 2006, then Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis and former Sterling Middle School Principal Earl Metzler saw the need for a summer program at night to keep local youth busy and off the streets in the Brewer's Corner/Kincaide Field/Sterling Middle School area.

They enlisted the support of Quincy Community Police Officer Patrick Buonaugurio as they created a nightly sports program. The program was considered a success because local youth were involved in positive activities and they were not hanging on the corners or causing neighborhood problems.

Based on this initial program, Sgt. Christine Hurton of the Quincy Police Department's Planning Division obtained a grant (the Shannon Grant) for both the Police Department and the Recreation Department to reduce problems in high crime neighborhoods. Under the direction of Recreation Department Director Barry Welch and Lt. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit, the Roberts Street playground area was chosen as an area where an impact could be made by enhancing the original program with additional staffing. The plan was to have a Police Officer and Recreation Leaders at the Roberts Street Park Monday through Friday from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. through the summer.

To certify an area for the grant, police crime statistics were gathered which showed a high rate of calls to the area. In the year prior to the start of the program, there were 65 calls in the immediate area for service during the months of June through August. After the first summer of the program, there was only one call and that was for a domestic disturbance a block away.

The turnout of kids initially was slow but as word got out that Officers and Recreation staff were at the park, parents began dropping off their kids and families began using the facilities. During the initial first weeks of the program, the youths were naturally leery of Officers on scene, but over time, the terms, "Cops" and "Five-0" among other labels disappeared and the Officers were soon referred to on a first name basis.

Trust-building was in progress. The Police Officer at the park is not dressed in uniform or armed. He/she is dressed to participate with the youth. The Recreation Leaders initiate and supervise the activities and the Police Officer is there to play, coach or assist while providing overall safety. In the event that there is an issue, the Officer, wearing a t-shirt with the Quincy Police logo on the front and "Cops N' Kids" on the back, can quickly resolve any issues on scene or call for an Officer to respond. For the past two years, there have not been any significant incidents at the park.

Nightly, there are up to 50 youths participating in basketball, Frisbee, soccer, wiffleball or just simply socializing. Parents and neighbors are frequently seen walking the track or just hanging out watching their children.

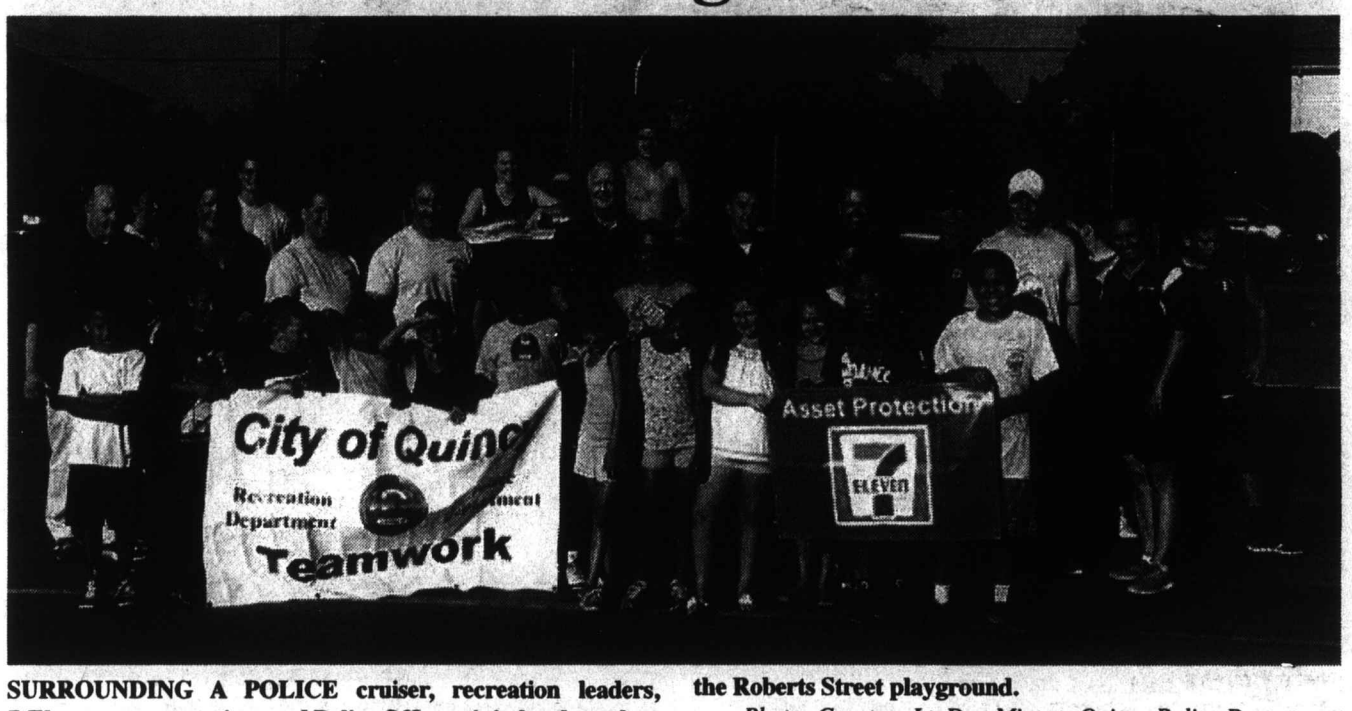
For the past three years, the "7-Eleven" store chain has sponsored a large supply of free "Slurpee" coupons for Quincy Police Officers to give out to the kids who attend the program. Officers also give them out to kids who are at different parks, at DARE camp, in the library or involved in healthy activities.

Dennis Lane, President of the New England 7-Eleven Owners Association and owner of the 7-Eleven store on Adams Street augmented the "Teamwork" approach by working with the corporate offices to add free hot dog and Big Gulp coupons for the youth of Quincy. For some less fortunate kids, the hotdog coupon was lunch or dinner.

Lane, who also supports the Quincy Police Blood Drive each Halloween at his store, said on behalf of 7-Eleven, "The Cops n' Kids program that plays host to the neighborhood youth on and around Roberts Street every weekday evening during the summer could be a national model. The respect that these kids have for the Officers is genuine and the results are amazing. There is no doubt that many of these kids will grow up to lead better lives."

Recreation Director Welch added:

"For the past seven years, this program has been a highly successful collaboration between the Quincy Police staff and Recreation Department staff. The program has significantly increased attendance at the playground location's and resulted in positive recreational activities for residents of all ages. Community buy-in by the 7-Eleven chain only enhances our opportunity to succeed and their community out reach is greatly appreciated."



SURROUNDING A POLICE cruiser, recreation leaders, 7-Eleven representatives and Police Officers join local youth at the Roberts Street playground.

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan, a strong proponent of the program said, "The area had one of the higher crime rates and we needed to reach out to the community on another level. It was the proactive approach of Officers and Rec leaders associating directly with the youths each summer that has brought the community together. We are appreciative of the efforts of Dennis Lane and the 7-Eleven chain for their continued support – together, it is clear that we are making a difference."

In summary, there are nightly basketball games with the Police Officers and Recreation Leaders against the talented local teens. They always seem to win and they let the adults know by good natured taunting, "We win, we win."

For the Police, the Recreation Department, the community and the kids, everyone wins!

Interior Decorating Tips With Barbara Graceffa

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

Is it OK to have different carpets in each bedroom? Samantha

Yes, as long as a room has a door that closes, it's perfectly fine. However, if you are planning to sell your home, buyers would consider this a drawback. So, if ongoing on the market soon or even if you need to replace one of the room's carpets, do spend the extra money and replace them all. You won't regret it.

My new apartment has a carpet with a subtle (but still noticeable) stripe in it. Am I limited to solid color furniture, pillows, and window treatments? Nan

Solids always work; I call them "safe" choices, but they can be boring at times, too, without other patterns in the room. If the stripes are wide and/or bold in color, you are better off with solid furniture.

If the stripe is a similar value and in the same color family as the rest of the rug (like a light tan stripe on a light beige background), simply treat the carpet as if it was a solid color. I do understand what you are saying: the stripes will be noticeable to you when there is nothing else in the room, but when you add furniture and accessories, they will "disappear" into the predominant carpet color.

Otherwise, if the stripes are small, you can introduce a large patterned sofa. In fact, pairing different geometric patterns together not only works well but can be very sophisticated. For example, a contemporary sofa or chair with a circular or rectangular pattern will nicely compliment the stripes under foot. (Beware of plaids, most will not work with a striped rug, but, in the same colors, might be fine on a pillow or two.)

You can always bring a photo of the carpet to the furniture store and ask the salesperson to help you pick out something to compliment the stripes.

Finally, you might want to place a solid area rug on top of your carpet and, in most cases, the sky's the limit for fabric choices on large and small furniture and accessories.

I'd like to purchase a zebra print rug but I'm not sure it will go with my existing décor. How will I know?

That's easy, audition it. Many don't know that you can take a rug home for a few days and return it if the size, pattern, or color do not suit your needs or taste.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior. Barbara Graceffa owns and operates an interior decoration company offering creative solutions at reasonable rates. For more information on her services, visit www.sec-interior.com.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, Aug. 8, at approximately 5:20 a.m., Officers Jimmy Chen and Ann Marie Reilly were dispatched to Essex Street for a Breaking and Entering into a motor vehicle call in progress and that someone was chasing the suspect. While en route, Communications stated that the male suspect, wearing a white T-shirt, gray sweat pants, a black and white cap, was carrying a black backpack. The caller said that he saw the suspect break a car window and steal a laptop, then flee down Huckins Avenue.

Officer Chen arrived on scene and spoke to the caller while Officer Reilly searched the area. Officer Chen noted that the victim's passenger side window had been shattered. He then interviewed the caller who lives in the apartment building. He said that he was in bed when he heard glass break, so he looked out the window to see the suspect take a laptop from the car. The caller said he then woke up the owner of the vehicle and told her what happened.

Officer Chen interviewed the victim, who said that all doors were locked when she parked it. She confirmed that her Apple laptop was missing from under the passenger seat. The laptop was valued at approximately $1300.00 and was in a black and green case. The Officers then patrolled the area looking for the suspect.

At 5:47 a.m., Communications received a call from a Lansdowne Street resident who said that he saw a male going through some packages at his neighbor's front door and it was unknown if he stole anything. Officer Chen arrived on scene and spoke to the caller who said that the house across the street was vacant and is being renovated. He said that 3 boxes were at the front door and the suspect was going through them but he was unsure if anything was taken. The suspect was last seen headed towards Crabtree Road. The boxes were inspected and it was determined that they had not been opened, however, this suspect matched the one described pertaining to the laptop theft.

Meanwhile, Sergeant Bruce Trieu and Lieutenant Brian Tobin assisted in the search of the area. They came across a male fitting the description in the area of 440 East Squantum Street. The male had a hand injury so Fallon Ambulance was requested. Officer Chen arrived on scene and read the male suspect his Miranda rights and then asked him if the backpack belonged to him and he said it did. When asked if there was anything in the backpack that didn't belong to him, the suspect said no. Officer Chen asked for permission to search it and the suspect said it was o.k., adding, "There might be drugs in there." The Officer pulled out a laptop without the case along with a bloody white envelope with the victim's name on it.

At this time, the suspect said he didn't want to answer any more questions, but did say, "I took a lot of drugs earlier." Fallon Ambulance EMTs arrived on scene and treated the suspect's left hand/ middle finger, which was bleeding from the knuckle area. The victim and the witness were brought to the scene. The witness confirmed that the male being detained was the suspect. The victim was shown the laptop and she stated, "That's mine." She then powered up the laptop and it showed her last name at the password screen.

The suspect, a 22 year old Dorchester resident, was placed under arrest for Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle in the Nighttime and Larceny Over $250.00." Nice Work!

Multiple Downtown Meetings This Fall

ated from Street-Works' downtown project.

With downtown work stalled, the state won't be receiving any new revenue. Three residential projects are planned further north on Hancock Street – proposals at the former Central Middle School, the former Temple Beth El, and 10 Merrymount Rd. – but Gutro does not know if they would provide enough new state revenue for the I-Cubed funding to be approved. As residential projects, the only new state revenue would during construction.

"I did not see anywhere in the information from the state about residential being eligible. But that's why we have these meetings, so we can have a discussion where somebody can point to the law, somebody can point to the regulations," Gutro explained.

"It's additional state income tax, it's hotel/motel tax, and it's sales tax. It sounds to me that – if it were eligible – would just be a one-time slug of money. It's not like you created Merchants Row and you have ground level retail and a consistent slug of annual cash to pay down the debt service."

In anticipation of the new park, a $10 million roadway project funded by the federal government is already underway in Quincy Center. Businesses in the area, Gutro said, have done a good job coping with the project.

"The retailers in closest proximity have been troopers handling and adapting. They've been terrific on the whole dealing with the construction impacts from it. I think there is a fear of the loss of parking, which is reasonable," he said.

"If in 2015 the roadway project is complete and we're not in a position to break ground on the Adams Green, the question is going to be what do you do with the area between City Hall and the Church of the Presidents. The City Council will be looking for a plan from the administration to find out what they're plans are going to be. Maybe they have found another revenue source for the Adams Green and maybe they're going to break ground on that as well."

Since terminating the LDA, Koch has maintained he sees multiple developers – between two and five – assuming responsibility for parts Quincy Center and downplaying the chances of one master developer assuming responsibility for the entire project. On Tuesday, Gutro said bringing on multiple developers could work, but only if done on a block-by-block, and not building-by-building, basis.

"I don't think I would be a fan of developing individual properties. The city got into this business 10 years ago with a strategic vision. This strategic vision included a new crosstown connector, which is an economic driver. As part of the LDA we came up with three different public amenities, which were going to be paid for with new tax revenue," Gutro said, referring to the Adams Green and Cliveden Street Bridge plans, as well as the completed Town Brook project.

"The vision, which is still the vision I think we need to pursue, is a bigger vision of what can happen downtown wide. I would be reluctant if someone came in and said 'we just want to take one or two buildings and redevelop that into x.' I think we, at a minimum, need to keep our eye on a block-by-block basis."

"I wouldn't rule it out but the mayor has indicated that is not on his list," Gutro added when asked if he would prefer moving ahead with one master developer.

Gutro remains optimistic about the future of Quincy Center and hopes the project will result in a new downtown residents can be proud of.

"The planning Department has done a great job over the last decade in terms of building a framework and putting the City Council in position to cast a number of important votes that will entice mixed-use to downtown Quincy. We have to move very carefully," Gutro said.

"I have two boys – one is 10 and one is 11. I want them to see this built out and a place they can be proud of, and that all Quincy residents can be proud of.

"The disappointment of allowing good businesses to vacate, buildings to be demolished, and then the bottom fall out is huge. But there is potential. We need to make sure we not only hire the right people, but it's all about oversight, oversight, oversight. It's a tough economy and we want people back to work in Quincy Center and we want to build something everybody can be proud of.

"I think that it's all absolutely possibly. We just have to take it one step at a time."

Condo Plan

four through six of the new building. Most units would have their own balcony. The penthouse on the sixth floor would be stepped back and also include a balcony.

The project will require a site plan review from the Planning Board, a special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals, and approval from the city's Conservation and Historic Commissions before construction can begin. The developer hopes to have the review process completed by November and permits in place by January so work can commence in the spring. Construction should take about a year to complete.

The project at 1003 Hancock St. is the largest of three residential developments proposed for a quarter-mile stretch of Hancock Street. Boston Property Development is also planning to convert a commercial building at 10 Merrymount Rd. into 23 townhouse condo units. And Plainville-based Edgewood Development has agreed to purchase the former Central Middle School – located at 1022 Hancock St. – and use the building for 39 condos.

At the community meeting, Beechwood Knoll resident Pam Brennan expressed concern about the impact those three projects, as well as proposed work further south in Hancock Street in Quincy Center, would have on traffic in the city.

"I think it would be great to get more residents in Quincy that can add value to the city, but I am concerned about traffic flow," she said.

"I'm someone who lives in Beechwood Knoll and I do work in Boston so I take train in everyday. But on the weekends when I'm trying to get around the city it's bedlam trying to get through Wollaston or Quincy Center…I'm concerned about all the projects being done at the same time. You have the Central one. You have this one. You have all the other construction going on."

Other residents present for the meeting raised concern about parking at the site. The developer's plans include room for a total 66 vehicles on the first two floors of the building as well as five guest spots outside the building, roughly where the temple's current parking lot is. Two residents at the meeting said that wouldn't be enough for the 53-unit building.

In response to the concerns about traffic and parking, Fleming noted both would be considered by the Planning Board as part of its review process.

"One of the requirements of the Planning Board process is to provide them with either a traffic study or a traffic report of some nature. The level of that will be determined by the Planning Department and the peer review consultant they retain," Fleming explained.

"But these kind of issues – issues like parking, traffic flow, and safety – all of those things will be considered."

A handful of people in attendance felt the proposal would help keep younger people in Quincy. Among them was Terry Connor, who works at a Hancock Street bank and lives in the city.

"I see the college graduates coming in to get pre-approved. A lot of them want to stay in the Quincy," Connor said. "There's not a lot of affordable housing – meaning affordable for them…Quincy is losing a lot of those people. They realize they can't afford Quincy.

"A single-family home is probably almost $400,000 now. If you can get a condo for $350,000 – maybe buy it with a friend – you can live here."

Other questions were posed about the design of the building.

One resident in attendance, for instance, asked whether the developer planned to install a plaque or something else along those lines noting the site was formerly home to Temple Beth El, Quincy's last synagogue until it closed in 2012. Officials from Boston Property Development, and from the temple, both said there had been discussions of doing so but there are no definitive plans at the moment.

Another person who attended the meeting asked if the developer would consider using a green roof on the building, which would entail the use of vegetation on the roof. Hanson said a garden on the roof could be a possibility, adding that planters will be wrapped around the building for its occupants to use.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be careful not to allow the backers of a new financial "deal" to pull the wool over the Lamb's eyes. It could hold fewer plusses and more negatives than you were first led to believe.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good idea to finish all incomplete tasks so that you can devote your attention to next week's projects. The weekend could hold surprises for romantic Fernandas and Ferdinands.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A workplace suggestion you made a while ago that you might have forgotten could come back with a request to turn it from idea to reality. Your social life picks up considerably this weekend.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Someone from the past could return with an intriguing opportunity for a future project. Check into it, by all means. But don't neglect your current responsibilities in the meantime.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Keeping your claws sheathed and using good humor instead to counter someone who's bad-mouthing the Big Cat isn't easy. But it's the best way to avoid more problems down the line.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A workplace situation could improve if you're less critical and more supportive of those who are, after all, trying to do their best. Let them know you're there to help when necessary.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new job offer might not carry all the benefits you're seeking. Make sure you know what you're entitled to, what is off the table and what is negotiable before you make a decision.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A social obligation you would rather get out of could hold some surprisingly positive aspects. Why not go and see for yourself? A family member makes a curious request.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Before tackling that new project awaiting you at home or on the job, take time out for some much-deserved pampering to help lift your spirits and restore your energy levels.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your social calendar begins to fill up more quickly than you expected. And that's great. You deserve to enjoy some good fun after so much time spent on serious matters.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A domestic situation continues to improve, thanks to all the tender, loving concern you've shown. A colleague makes a questionable move that you might want to check out sooner rather than later.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A sudden turn in a romantic relationship calls for both a rational and passionate response. Keep the love level high, but also find out why the problem arose in the first place.
BORN THIS WEEK: You often set high standards for others. But to your credit, you set the same expectations for yourself.

Church Celebrating 125 Years

Faith Lutheran To Open Time Capsule Oct. 18

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Pastor Heidi Johnston of Faith Lutheran Church doesn't know what is in the time capsule being removed from the 125-year-old building's cornerstone on Oct. 18 but she is sure that whatever is found will reflect the cultural history of the church and its congregation.

"Many of the artifacts will be of Swedish heritage," said Johnston who has been the church's pastor since February 2012, replacing Rev. James Kimmell who retired after serving the church for 38 years.

Formerly known as the Salem Lutheran Church, it was built in 1894 to serve the large population of Scandinavians coming from overseas to work in Quincy's granite quarries.

The church was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1989.

At 10 a.m., stone workers from M. J. Nicholls Landscaping and Construction will remove the capsule, which was buried in November of 1892, and present it to the crowd made up of the church's congregation and history buffs. "This is a historic site in the community," said Johnston.

Following that, tours of the interior of the church as well as lectures on the importance of its stained glass and its symbology will be offered. Guests will also have an opportunity to walk through the church grounds and view the gardens.

The time capsule unearthing is part of an overall celebration of the church's 125-year anniversary. On Oct. 19, "a special service lifting up the voice of our past" will be held, said Johnston.

A gala dinner open to ticket holders will be held Oct. 26.

Johnston is not completely clear as to what will be found in the capsule nor does she know what will go in the replacement capsule. She speculates that newspapers, a photo directory of church staff, and possibly a cellular phone will be included but no concrete decisions have been made as of yet.

Overdose Candlelight Vigil

Sept. 17 From 7 To 9 P.M. On Crane Library Lawn

The City of Quincy will host a candlelight vigil Wednesday, Sept. 17 to bring attention to the issue of substance abuse.

The vigil will take place on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Prior to the program - from 6:30 to 7 p.m. - a list of names will be gathered of those who have died.

Candles will be provided and lit when the names are read aloud during the program.

Participants are also encouraged to bring a photo of their loved ones.

The public is welcome to join in a remembrance of those lost to drug overdose and give hope to others still struggling with addiction.

"Let us stand together as a community to bring a face to these individuals, support each other, and make our voices heard to fight this devastating problem," said Arlene Goldstein of Impact Quincy-Bay State Community Services.

There will be no seating on site during the vigil but participants are invited to bring a lawn chair.

Opioid addiction is a serious medical problem; the brain "rewires" because of the addiction. Statistics show that more people die of drug poisonings than car accidents in Massachusetts.

The City of Quincy and the surrounding communities of Weymouth, Braintree and Randolph are experiencing this issue along with many other towns along the South Shore. Since 2010, Quincy Police, when first to the scene, have reversed overdose in 292 individuals with Naloxone (Narcan).

Other statistics show, in FY 2011, there were 102,789 admissions of substance abuse treatment services in Massachusetts. Of that number, 2,233 were under 18 years of age.

"The reason for the vigil is to bring light, education, and truth to the issue," Goldstein said.

Early Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Labor Day holiday, there will be an early news and advertising deadline for next week's Quincy Sun.

News, church, organizations and youth sports releases, retail and classified advertising and legal notices should be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., by noon tomorrow (Friday) to assure publication in the Sept. 4 issue.

The Sun will be closed Monday, Sept. 1.

Have a nice, safe, holiday weekend.

Rev. Rebecca Froom New Minister At United First Parish

Will Lead First Worship Service Sept. 7

By SCOTT JACKSON

The new minister at the United First Parish Church will lead her first worship service Sept. 7.

The Rev. Rebecca Froom was chosen to serve as the church's minister in May following a lengthy search process to replace the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, who served as minister at the United First Parish Church for 25 years before retiring in June 2012. Froom said she was beyond words when she learned the members of the United First Parish Church voted to name her the new minister.

"I was very excited. I wouldn't say I was without words – I was beyond words," Froom recalled in a recent interview.

"I had many words of excitement, gratitude, and humility, and pride all mixed in together – and love. There is a great, great affection in ministry. People open their hearts and their spirits to a minister and really share deeply with the minister, and also with one another. To be present to that is really a sacred trust and a great honor. That's already begun. I love this community already."

The congregation's decision to name Froom the church's settled minister was also a historic one, as she will be the first woman to serve in that role.

"We've had community ministers who are women. We've had guest preachers who are women. But this is the first time the congregation has had a senior minister be a women. So that's pretty exciting," Froom said. "I like to think Abigail Adams is very pleased about that one."

Froom's first service as the new minister will take place Sept. 7. Since July she has been meeting people from the church and the greater community as she transitioned to her new position.

"I've mainly been getting to know people, both within the congregation and within the community. Getting to know the staff. Meeting with our worship committee and our leadership committee. Planning for the coming year," Froom said in a recent interview.

"I'm really grateful I had the opportunity to build relationships before stepping into the high pulpit on a weekly basis."

As part of her first service on Sept. 7, Froom will be holding a water ceremony at the church. Members will be invited to bring water to the service, where it will all be combined to symbolize the coming together of the community.

"What we call our Ingathering worship on Sept. 7 is going to be a multigenerational service for children, youth, and adults together," Froom explained. "One of the things we'll be doing is having a water ceremony where people bring water from a place that is important to them – it could be far away or nearby – or water that is symbolic of something going on in their life. We'll be bringing that water together, sharing it in a common bowl and creating the sacred waters of our community."

Froom, 32, grew up in Philadelphia, the daughter of a third generation Unitarian Universalist and a Presbyterian minister. She was active in her church from an early age.

"I am third generation Unitarian Universalist on my mother's side and my father is a Presbyterian minister, so I have my mother's faith and my father's vocation. They're both excited I'm in ministry," Froom said. "I was active in my own congregation and my youth group and learned pretty early that I really loved crafting worship and I just really loved church."

THE REV. REBECCA FROOM will lead her first worship service at the United First Parish Church on Sept. 7. Froom, 32, was named the church's minister in May after serving as the assistant minister at a Unitarian Church in Franklin. Quincy Sun Photo/Scott Jackson

Froom attended Vassar College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., volunteering for different community groups. Her experience in college led to her decision to become a minister.

"In college I began working in a domestic violence shelter, a homeless shelter, a rape crisis center, and from that I felt there was just so much need in our world and some of that is spiritual need," Froom explained.

"When people are experiencing different kinds of trauma, they need physical resources, they need love, they need support in many ways. Including the spiritual support at religious communities. Having a sense of connection at the worst of times and the best of times. That's what called me into ministry."

After graduating from Vassar, Froom decided to take time away from school before going to seminary. Instead, she moved to Arizona where she became the director of religious education for a Unitarian Universalist congregation. Froom also volunteered with humanitarian aid groups No More Deaths and Tucson Samaritans while in the state.

"I knew I wanted to be a minister, but I didn't want to go into seminary right away. After college I moved to Arizona for a while, partially to live somewhere different – ecologically, so-

Planning Dept. Next To Move To Coddington

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's Planning and Community Development Department – the last of three departments transitioning into the newly renovated Coddington School – will complete its move to new office space in September.

The Planning Department has already begun to move from the third floor of the City Hall annex into the Coddington School – a 106-year building renovated into state-of-the-art office space over the past year – according to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker.

"They've already started moving stuff such as boxes," he said Tuesday. "We expect them to be fully moved in September."

While the Planning Department has yet to complete its move into the Coddington School, located at 34 Coddington St., the building's two other tenants are all moved in.

The School Department completed its move into the renovated building last week from rented space in the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) building on Burgin Parkway behind City Hall. The move went off without a hitch, according to School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"Our move went really smoothly. Everything is in place and we didn't miss a beat," he said in a phone interview. "The whole move was something that went very, very smoothly."

The move, DeCristofaro noted, went better than expected and was completed within two days. School officials had prepared for the

A REAL STAR!

Sapphire (the birthstone for September) is very desirable to begin with, and a natural star sapphire is even more so. As with other gemstones that display the phenomenon known as asterism, star sapphire shows its star effect when needle-like inclusions (known as rutiles) intersect at just the right point. To see asterism to its best effect, the star sapphire is almost always cut "en cabochon" (dome-like) and polished to a glossy finish. The most common color for star sapphire is blue, but it can also be seen in yellow, green, pink, gray, and lavender. As a matter of fact, the Smithsonian Institution has a star sapphire weighing more than 50 carats on display that is a vivid purple color.

In ancient times, star sapphires were regarded as powerful talismans for protecting travelers and seekers. Women in many countries desire a sapphire ring for their engagement. The sapphire symbolizes loyalty, but also gives expression to people's love and longing. Joe Koch: A Good Man

For those fortunate to have known him, Joe Koch's unexpected passing Aug. 20 leaves an irreplaceable void.

For those who never met the man but appreciate the city's parks, athletic fields and open spaces, there should be a sense of loss – and gratitude – too.

Virtually every field, playground and green space in this city has been the beneficiary of Joe Koch's care, talent and vision – a quiet legacy in the hometown he loved.

His resume simply states he worked for the city for 35 years as an arborist, laborer and heavy equipment operator. Most of his time was with the Park Department but for the past year he was a general foreman with the Department of Public Works.

But Joseph William Koch was much more than that.

"Every park and playground in our city he touched," said his brother, Mayor Thomas Koch. "He built the Quarry Street fields, he built the Mound Street fields. He built Teel Field and the fields at Faxon Park."

Joe Koch was also the guiding force behind many other projects including the renovation at Adams Field, Pageant Field and upper Merrymount Park.

"No matter where you go, he left his mark," Tom said. "He was an incredible talent. He could do anything with a machine. He could pick the wallet out of your back pocket with an excavator, he was that good."

Joe's talents and expertise were forged during his Army years. He enlisted at the age of 17, just after graduating North Quincy High School in 1974. His father, Dick Koch, Sr., had to sign off on Joe's decision to enter the service because he hadn't reached 18 yet.

As it turned out, Joe was shipped to the same Army installation that his father had graduated basic training: Fort Leonard Wood, MO. Dick had served during World War II.

Joe learned his craft while he was stationed at Fort Bragg with the Operating Engineers. They operated cranes and other heavy equipment. The type of vehicles that offered no modern luxuries like automatic transmissions, cushiony seats or air conditioning.

After this Army service, Joe returned to Quincy and took a Civil Service exam to become a laborer. After passing his test, in 1977, he was hired to work for the Park Department by former Mayor Joseph LaRaia.

He started in the parks and worked his way up. But he never received any preferential treatment from his father who was the Park Director at the time.

"It was quite the contrary," Tom said. "He had to prove to everybody else that he could do the job. He worked doubly hard. With my father everything was black and white – there was no gray area. You pulled your own share.

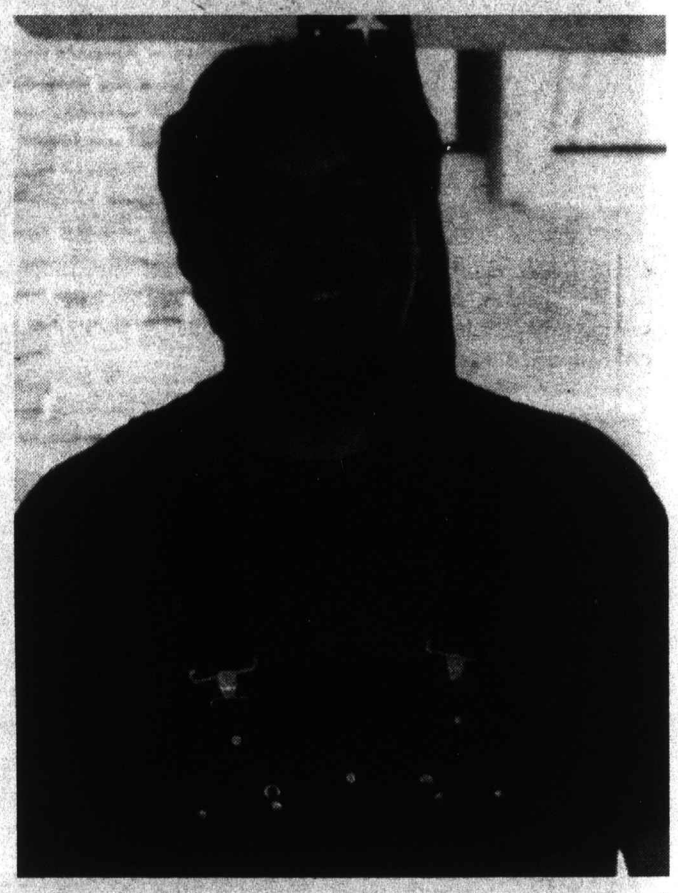
"That work ethic and dedication were definitely in the blood. They were cut from the same cloth."

Joe had his operating licenses from the service but there were not any operator jobs at the time so he started as a laborer but quickly moved up because he was so talented.

"There wasn't anything he couldn't do," Tom recalled. "Whether it was laying curb, pouring concrete, asphalt, taking a tree down, planting a tree, grading. He was so good at what he did and he saved the city thousands of dollars because he could do so many things."

One contractor stopped by the mayor's office the other day to offer his condolences to Tom and his family. He told Tom that he had never seen anyone with a knack for grading like Joe had.

Many others marveled at his work.



JOSEPH W. KOCH – wearing his trademark overalls – worked for the City of Quincy for 35 years as a certified arborist, heavy equipment operator and foreman.

Obituary On Page 26

"Before the turf was installed at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, we hired an engineering firm to come in and help us design it," Tom said. "We told them, 'we'll do all of the sub-work in-house.' He said, 'No way. City workers can't do that.'

"Trust me," Tom retorted. "We have a good team."

Soon, the grading was done and the doubter was a believer.

"He apologized after the job was done. He was astonished. He had never seen a better grade. They came in, the laid the carpet (field turf) and it was perfect."

After the turf was put down, Tom returned to the stadium one day while the paving was being done. The contractor came up to Tom and said, "I don't know who graded this but I've never been on a job where we didn't have to touch it up or fix things."

Joe Koch was like a modern day James Kilroy. But unlike the legendary ship inspector, he didn't have to write "Joe Koch was here" on every project he worked on. You knew just by looking at it that his skill set had shaped a park, field or playground to perfection.

And that's precisely what Joe Koch was – a perfectionist.

"I was talking to a guy the other day who worked with Joe," Tom says. "He was tough to work with because it had to be perfect and he had no patience for slackers. One of his good friends, Kevin Murphy, saw him in his excavator a few weeks ago.

"He told Joe, 'you're in your glory when you're in your machine.'

"And Joe replied back: 'That's because it does exactly what you tell it to do.'

"Joe didn't have patience for people who didn't want to give a full effort and didn't have a strong work ethic. But those around him were challenged by him, learned from him, were motivated by him, so it made everybody that much better," the mayor said.

Joe Koch also excelled as a snow-fighter and DPW foreman.

He started plowing when he joined the Park Department and knew how to clear snow "frontward and backward," Tom says. He remembers riding along in one of the plows with his older brother when he was

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN old picturesque postcard view of Squaw Road in Squantum Park. The wooden structure on top of the rock built in the 19th century served as an observation deck from which you could see the expanse of Boston Harbor while enjoying the ocean breezes. A ramp ran down the other side to the water where floats were kept by local residents for their boats. Nearby was the Old Squantum House for a resort hotel complete with its own pier for regular steamboat service from Boston. The park later could also be reached by electric trolley from the Atlantic railroad depot. Very popular in the middle and late in the 19th century this spot lost its appeal as the newly built nearby Moon Island sewer vats became increasingly obnoxious. LaRaia Master Plan: Raze, Rebuild Half Of Downtown Area

Mayor Joseph LaRaia will unveil a comprehensive downtown Master Plan in six phases that calls for the eventual demolition of virtually half of Quincy Center from Cottage Avenue to Elm and School Streets.

It will include a new highway through the very center of downtown Quincy from Granite Street across the old Soda Hut through the site of the Kincaide's building, to join a reconstructed McGrath Highway on the other side of Hancock Street.

It will also feature an international merchandise mart over the Hancock Parking area, a high-rise motel topped by a restaurant at the site of Napoli Pizza and a high-rise office building on the site of the Colman's parking lot.

The plan, designed by Planning Director L. Norman Lundin and T. Owen Trainor Associates, Inc., architects, is to be officially presented to businessmen and city officials Aug. 26 at the Quincy High School Method Center.

LaRAIA SEES UNDER $5 TAX HIKE

Mayor LaRaia says he expects that the assessors will be prepared by the end of August, to set the tax rate for 1978 and it will show an increase of less than $5 over the $194.80 rate of last year.

He said the state Department of Corporations and Taxation will probably approve the rate a day or two later if the City Council resolves pending financial matters at its upcoming special meeting.

Bicycle Lanes A Benefit, Not A Public Safety Hazard

On Aug. 14th Quincy officials presented plans for the redesign of the Hancock/Squantum Street intersection in North Quincy. There is a glaring omission in those plans – safe, approved bicycling infrastructure.

Apparently some in our city government believe that there are few cyclists in Quincy when the actual number of cyclists here has prompted the MBTA to install bike racks at North Quincy Station and a bike cage at Wollaston Station to ensure safe parking for those who ride there daily. Indeed, two years of city sponsored bicycle counts show that hundreds of cyclists are using our streets. Our police department also acknowledges the increasing number of cyclists in our city and is participating in a grant funded program to promote better interactions with and enforcement of cyclists.

It seems Quincy cannot make up its mind about bike lanes. We recently partnered with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council to develop city-wide recommendations for a network of low-cost cycling and pedestrian facilities. Those recommendations, endorsed by the Planning Department, include a route named The Spine: Hancock Street from the Neponset Bridge through Washington Street to the Fore River Bridge. We have state-of-the-art cycling infrastructure planned for our new Adams Green and we have had bike lanes on Adams Street for eight months without any increased public safety issues, but we deny that the same accommodations would be appropriate for Hancock and Squantum Streets.

It appears that Quincy also does not recognize the economic benefits cycling infrastructure can bring to a city. A 2012 NYC DOT study showed that New York City neighborhoods with bike lanes saw a 49% increase in local business retail sales compared to a 3% rise overall in that city. Are our city officials against such potential economic growth here?

Finally, some city officials seem to have misconceptions about what constitutes a public safety hazard. Clearly designated, safely designed bicycle lanes are a traffic calming measure that benefits all road users – pedestrians, drivers, and cyclists alike – by increasing awareness and slowing the average speed of cars. While other communities in Massachusetts are reducing congestion by narrowing roadways, adding cycle lanes, and timing traffic signals, parts of Quincy seem stuck in the era of wider roads for more and faster car traffic.

When public safety is used as an excuse to deny improvements that would benefit all road users it is a failure on the part of our leaders.

Fond Memories Of John W. Kane

As I was reading last week's obituaries, I came upon the name of John W. Kane who had been my friend and neighbor for many years on Atlantic Street. When I first met him it was back shortly after having moved onto the street, he came up and introduced himself. Mr. Kane was an imposing guy but quite approachable. Very Irish Catholic with that great Irish wit of his.

Over the years as neighbors we became good friends. He was the kind of neighbor that made the neighborhood safe. He didn't just live in Quincy, he was a part of the life of Quincy.

His house was very beautiful and allowed me a tour of the place. It was very imposing just like him. I remember him and his wife who died several years ago and he seemed rather lost without her. You could tell how much they loved one another.

I also remember Halloween's when he opened his house for the costumed kids to hand out apple cider and plenty of pennies. After all he was a retired banker, right?

He was always commenting on my latest letter in The Quincy Sun. He was a New Deal Democrat and I was a Reagan Democrat. Our chats were always exciting and humorous too.

I stayed in contact with him after he moved over to an apartment on Quincy Shore Drive as he would be seen walking everywhere around his old neighborhood chatting up a storm. When we got together, it became the perfect storm especially when talking politics.

I loved the photo of him that ran with his obituary last week. He always wore hats and always looked quite dapper. The last time I saw him was a while back while both of us were having some breakfast down at O.B.'s Diner in Norfolk Downs. He had lost lots of weight but still looked great for his age.

I will miss him and all the time debating my politics with his politics. He was lucky to live a good and long life and now he has gone home to his loving wife and leaves both sadness and joy behind for all who knew him.

New Music School Opening In September

Pianist Ellyses Kuan announces the opening of EKS Music School located at 121b Standish Ave. in Quincy in September.

An open house at the new music school will be held Sept. 3-5 from 4 to 7 p.m. each day. Students who sign up for a group class at the Open House will be offered a discount on their first session tuition.

EKS Music School will offer private, group and introductory music lessons in piano, guitar, violin, flute, cello, trumpet and more.

Kuan, a Hong Kong native, began taking piano lessons when she was three. She has trained with instructors in Hong Kong and performing around the world. She says her experiences as a teacher and performer helped shape her vision of her music school: having the highest quality teachers and making the school truly a community.

ELLYSES KUAN

"When I was young, I had wonderful instructors, but rarely had contact or interaction with other students," she said. "It was lonely sometimes. I want my school to promote collaboration among the students, with duets, regular performances with feedback from the teachers."

STEP Group Classes introduce new students to a particular instrument with a proper start of understanding the basics, guided training with qualified teachers, learning to enjoy and appreciate music, and performance with other students to demonstrate a mastery of an instrument.

"I'm excited about our STEP curriculum," Kuan said. "It's very structured and designed to foster a love and appreciation of music for each students. They get to explore music in a small group setting, with games and activities designed to increase their cognizance of tempo, note reading, proper posture, daily practice: all the good habits that make a musician successful."

The school also offers private and semi-private lessons, customized to match the learning style and goals of each students.

All the instructors at EKS Music School have masters' degrees in music as well as strong performance background. Instruction available in English, Cantonese, Mandarin, Japanese, Spanish, Dutch, Armenian, Indonesian, French.

For more information, contact Kuan at 617-770-7677.

'Where Is John Adams' Program

The Adams National Historical Park announces the program "Where In The World Is John Adams" will be held Mondays on Sept. 1, 15 and 29 and Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 133-141 Franklin St., Quincy.

"John," potrayed by Michael Lepage, will discuss his life and compose the letters that he will forward to his "Dearest Friend" and confidant, Abigail Adams, from Philadelphia, Europe, or the nation's capital.

In these entertaining and informative presentations, Lepage offers an intimate look at the now-famous correspondence between delegate, diplomat, and future President John Adams and his "dearest friend" Abigail. Their letters provide a sometimes heartbreaking, often amusing, and always inspirational record of the events that shaped the life and times of this truly American family and the new American nation they helped to create.

Lepage is an ardent student of history and a devotee of John Adams who portrays Adams and other "Founding Fathers" for appreciative audiences at Adams National Historical Park and other venues throughout the commonwealth.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of Second and Sixth United States Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and the "Old House" at "Peace field, home to both Presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

FORMER MAYOR and MRS. FRANCIS X. McCAULEY

Mr., Mrs. Francis McCauley Celebrate 60th Anniversary

Former Mayor and Mrs. Francis X. McCauley recently celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary at a celebratory dinner hosted by their children.

The celebration began when the McCauleys – lifelong Hough's Neck residents – were picked up at their home in a stretch limousine and taken on a tour of some of the Quincy locations that played a major role in their life together. In addition to stopping at their childhood homes, the trip took them all around the Hough's Neck peninsula, including a drive by the former location of the neighborhood delicatessen where a young Frank McCauley first met Sandra MacKinnon, who worked there.

The tour also included stops at Quincy City Hall – where the McCauleys were married on Friday Aug. 13, 1954 – as well as Quincy Medical Center and the Thomas Crane Public Library.

As mayor, McCauley oversaw the construction of the new hospital building, which was named The McCauley Building in his honor. Sandra McCauley was a driving force behind the construction of the new library building during her long service on the library's board of trustees.

Following the tour of Quincy, the McCauleys celebrated their anniversary with a dinner at The Common Market restaurant, where their children and grandchildren honored them with toasts, songs and poems to mark the occasion. The McCauleys also received a number of citations honoring their anniversary from Mayor Thomas Koch, Gov. Deval Patrick, Cong. Stephen Lynch and Sen. Edward Markey.

The McCauleys are the parents of five children: Michael McCauley of Quincy, Robert McCauley of Natick, Melissa Higgins of Braintree, Julie Tympanick of Plymouth and Jennifer Logue of Ponte Vedra, Fla. They have 13 grandchildren.

Sweet Potato Biscuits

By MARIE

I'm always looking for ways to cook certain foods differently, but simply, and so as I was looking through some recipes, I found a delicious one for sweet potatoes.

Most of us enjoy sweet potatoes, either baked, mashed or fries, which are so popular these days,

Today's recipe is for a biscuit, which not only was it easy for me to prepare, but delicious as well.

Sweet Potato Biscuits

1 small sweet potato, baked or boiled
2 tablespoons butter (melted)
1 cup all purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 to 3 tablespoons milk (I used 1%)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees

In a bowl, peel and dice the potato. Cut the potato in with the melted butter, the salt and baking powder into the flour, (I used a pastry cutter)

Add the milk until well blended, and easy to handle.

Turn into a floured board and knead gently. Roll into 1/2 inch thickness and cut.

Bake in a greased cookie sheet or parchment paper for about 12 minutes depending on how big the pieces were made. This recipe makes about a dozen biscuits also depending on the size.

Peanut Butter Cookies

By SUZIE

These cookies have no flour, or eggs and can be made in a jiffy! (Just don't use Jiffy peanut butter. Too much sugar.)

We all have over ripe bananas and don't know what to do with them. They are great cut into pieces and frozen in baggies for smoothies, or for baking as well. I would bet everyone has all of these ingredients in their homes most of the time, minus the chocolate chips. Delicious and good for you as well.

If you are allergic to nuts, you can substitute a product called Sunbutter which is made from sunflower seeds rather than peanuts and makes a great substitute. Just make sure you get the kind with no sugar or the cookies will be too sweet. Enjoy!!!!!

1 cup organic peanut butter (made with just peanuts, no extra sugar, or oil)
3/4 brown sugar
1 very ripe banana, mashed
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup organic chocolate chips

Directions

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Mix everything except the chocolate chips in a food processor (or by hand just mix well) until well combined. Stir in chocolate chips.

2. Using moistened hands, form generous 1 tablespoon (use more if you want bigger cookies) dough for each cookie into ball. Arrange on 2 ungreased baking sheets, spacing 2 inches apart.

3. Bake cookies until puffed, golden on bottom and still soft to touch in center, about 12 minutes. Cool on sheets 5 minutes. Transfer to racks; cool completely.

'Puppy Doe' Bill Signed Into Law

Stronger Penalties For Animal Abuse, Neglect

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Gov. Deval Patrick signed a bill into law last Wednesday that increases penalties for animal abuse and neglect, according to Legislative Director for State Rep. Bruce Ayers Kerry Morris who said the bill will take effect 90 days following its signing.

Ayers was spurred to draft the bill relative to the penalty for killing, maiming, or poisoning of animals following the discovery of Puppy Doe on Aug. 31 last year near a Whitwell Street playground. The dog's Injuries included burns, stab wounds, dislocated joints, and evidence of starvation.

She was so badly beaten and tortured that she needed to be euthanized.

With the passage of the bill, the penalty for abusing animals has increased from $2,500 to up to $10,000 for repeat offenders and maximum jail time has increased from two and a half years to five years in a state prison.

The bill also requires veterinarians who suspect animal abuse or cruelty to report the incident to officials. Veterinarians who fail to disclose abuse to the proper authorities will be reported to the Board of Registration in Veterinary Medicine.

Under the new bill, a task force will be established which will complete a review of all laws pertaining to animal protection and animal cruelty. The task force will also review services in place that care for animals seized when abuse is suspected.

The task force will also review how housing situations impact animal abandonment and the voluntary surrendering of pets.

The findings of the task force will be submitted to the clerks of the Senate and House of Representatives and the chairs of the joint committee up to 18 months following the passage of the act.

A national animal abuse registry will also be created.

"From this incident we received a tremendous amount of support towards strengthening the laws to prevent animal abuse," said Ayers. "Working with Sen. Bruce Tarr of Gloucester, Rep. Lou Kafka of Sharon, and legislators, along with animal advocates and organizations throughout the state, Puppy Doe did not die in vain."

Ayers has also begun drafting a bill that will, if enacted, ban the sale of puppies and kittens through puppy mills. He has started reviewing the laws in place regarding puppy mills in other states to assist him.

Under the legislation, all pet stores would have to get their animals from shelters, as rescues, or directly from animal control. According to Ayers, his office is working with cities and towns

February Larceny Trial For Puppy Doe Suspect

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Polish national accused of torturing Puppy Doe – young pit bull whose story gained national attention – will go to trial in February on charges he stole $130,000 from an elderly Quincy woman he was taking care of.

Norfolk Superior Court Judge Kenneth Fishman set a Feb. 9 trial date for Radoslaw Czerkawski on the larceny charges Aug. 19. Czerkawski, 33, was arraigned this February on two counts of larceny over $250, one count of larceny over $250 from a person over age 60, and one count of attempted larceny. During the arraignment, a county prosecutor said the charges relate to $130,000 in savings bonds Czerkawski improperly converted to cash for his own personal use. Czerkawski pleaded not guilty to those charges at the arraignment, and was held on $500,000 bail.

Czerkawski is also awaiting trial on a dozen counts of animal abuse related to the Puppy Doe case. The young pit bull was found last August in a Whitwell Street park with wounds so severe she was euthanized. On Tuesday, Fishman scheduled a hearing for Nov. 7 in that case, at which point a trial date may be set. Czerkawski pleaded not guilty to those charges and had been held without bail.

In the wake of the Puppy Doe case, state legislators approved stiffer penalties for animal abusers earlier this month. That bill was signed by Gov. Deval Patrick last Wednesday. The law increases the maximum sentence for animal abuse from two-and-a-half years in prison to five years and the maximum fine to $10,000 for repeat offenders, up from $2,500. The new penalties do not apply to Czerkawski.

The city will dedicate a granite bench in memory of Puppy Doe Sept. 13 in the park where she was found last August.

cially – than Philly and New York, and partially to get involved in social justice issues around the border and immigration," she said.

"I did work in a UU congregation while I was out there as a director of religious education and also volunteered with some humanitarian aid groups that work in southern Arizona with migrants crossing through the border – providing food, water, and basic medical care."

After living in Arizona, Froom began training to be a minister at Meadville Lombard Theological School, a Unitarian Universalist school in Chicago. She earned her master of divinity from the Harvard Divinity School. At Harvard, she also met her husband, Alec Aman. After graduating from Harvard in 2012, Froom spent two years as the assistant minister at First Universalist Society in Franklin.

While Froom's first service is in September, a formal installation ceremony won't be held until next spring. Other ceremonies are already set for this fall, as the United First Parish Church celebrates the 375th anniversary of its founding in 1639.

"We will be having some commemorative events in the fall, including an event on Nov. 9 in the afternoon. We're still planning that," Froom explained.

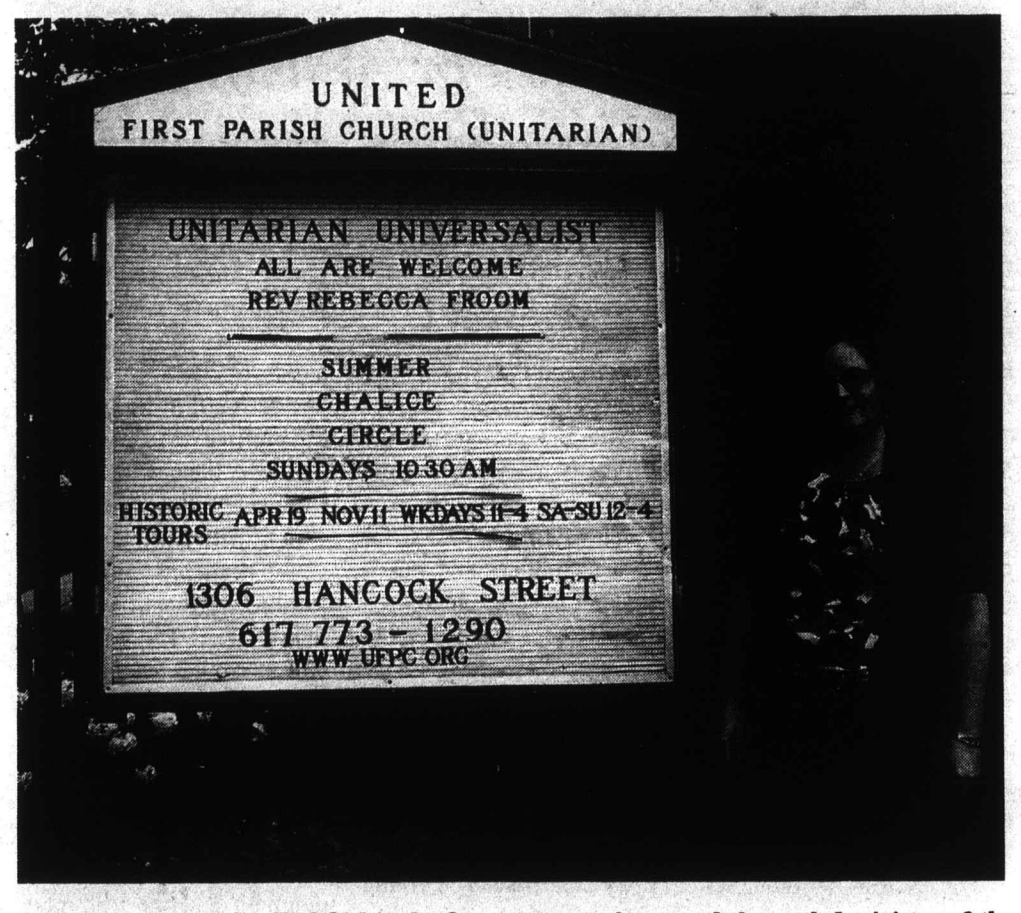
"Throughout this year – the school year/church year – we'll be looking from the past to the present with our anniversary celebration, and then from the present to the future with the installation in the spring.

"This is a congregation with a lot of history and a city with a lot of history – Church of the Presidents and the City of Presidents. The history with the granite, and the harbor, and the shipyards. I think of this year, celebrating our history and beginning a new chapter in our ministry, it gives an opportunity to reflect on what are the highest ideals that we share with our ancestors. How can we act on those ideals in the present in a way that is relevant to the way we are in 2014?"

The United First Parish Church – whose congregation includes 90 adults and 32 children – may be best known as the final resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine. Froom said that crypt, and other programs also on the ground floor, represent all aspects of the church.

"The ground floor of the church is really a great example of who we are as a community. We have the crypt of John Adams and John Quincy Adams where we talk about our history. Then we have our religious education spaces, where we have a Montessori-based program for children to learn about their own sense of wonder and their own sense of the sacred. We also share space with the prison books program, which sends books to people in prison," Froom noted.

"So we have the history, the multi-generational community, and social justice all on one level."



THE REV. REBECCA FROOM is the first woman to be named the settled minister of the 375-year-old United First Parish Church. She replaces the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, who served as minister for 25 years prior to his retirement in June 2012. Quincy Sun Photo/Scott Jackson

Planning Dept. Next To Move To Coddington School

possibility of phone service being down, or taking more time to unpack items such as furniture, but that was not an issue.

"We got a lot of work done that we didn't think we'd be able to do," DeCristofaro said. "Quincy Public Schools staff are thrilled with where we are now."

School administrators moved into the NAGE building in 2007. Prior to that their offices were located on the Woodward Avenue side of Quincy High School. The School Department had one floor of offices inside the NAGE building; inside the Coddington School the department's staff will be spread out across three floors.

"NAGE was terrific for us. It was all on one level, which was great for communication and meeting face-to-face," DeCristofaro said. "[The Coddington School] has so many great places to meet. The organization will work beautifully."

The move into the Coddington School was completed two weeks before the city's 9,400 plus public school students return to classes Sept. 3. The superintendent said it was critical the move be completed so administrators could be available to students and parents as the school year starts.

"It was incredibly important. We wanted to make sure we didn't have any downtime so the public could have access," DeCristofaro said. "It was really important to our students and parents first and foremost."

The School Department's information technological (IT) personnel are now located on the lower level of the new building. The School Department's heads of transportation/security, business, personnel, and custodial/maintenance are now on the first floor of the new building. DeCristofaro's new office, along with those for the assistant superintendent and other academic support staff, are all on the second floor.

The first floor also includes a permanent home for the School Committee, which previously met at the NAGE building, City Hall, and different schools throughout the city. The committee's new chamber will have seating for up to 40 people, with a conference room across the hall providing overflow seating for 40 people. The first meeting inside the new chamber, a facilities and subcommittee meeting, was scheduled for 6 p.m. (yesterday) Wednesday.

The city's IT Department was the first tenant to move into the renovated building, heading there the weekend before the School Department did so. The city's new IT suite is located in the lower level of the building, sharing space with the school system's IT suite. The IT Department completed its move from the City Hall annex to the new school, beginning after business hours on Aug. 15.

"It's going very well," IT Director Chuck Phelan said of his department's move. "We were able to get in here over the weekend (Aug. 15-17). Some systems were down but everything was back up by 1 a.m. Friday (Aug. 15)."

The Coddington School project was done in concert with the ongoing renovation work at old City Hall. The City Council approved an $18 million bond order to finance both projects in 2012. About half the bond will be paid for from the city's Community Preservation Act account, with the rest from the general fund. The city paid nearly $300,000 a year to rent space in the NAGE building and about $200,000 a year to rent space for the City Clerk's Offices in the Munroe Building.

As part of the project, the Municipal Finance Department will move from the second floor of the City Hall annex into the space being vacated by the Planning Department on the third floor, making way for the City Clerk's Offices. Walker said there is no timeline for when the Municipal Finance Department will make its move.

"There is work to be done as part of the old City Hall project that may impact the third floor," he explained, referring to the building of a new connector between old City Hall and the glass annex.

School Staffing, Curriculum, Tech Enhancements

from all grade levels participated in Summer Extended Educational programs, encompassing academic and enrichment opportunities and employment through the Summer YouthWorks Program.

Last spring, Mayor Koch and the School Committee collaborated with the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to fund additional academic classroom and academic program teacher positions to maintain average class sizes well below the School Committee guidelines. Full-time Kindergarten aides have been restored at all eleven elementary schools. New academic classroom and program teachers, academic support staff, and non-academic support staff have been hired across the school system to replace retired staff. In addition, professional positions were added at the middle school level to restore French language and technology instruction. New professional staff members will participate in a two-day orientation on August 27 and 28, meeting with members of the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to learn about their professional responsibilities, the Quincy Public Schools many programs and services, and the mentoring program for new staff.

Quincy Public Schools is pleased to be welcoming several new administrators this fall, including Health Services Coordinator Rita Bailey; Principal Rick DeCristofaro and Assistant Principal Susan Shea Connor at Central Middle School; Assistant Principal Aliza Schneller at Point Webster Middle School; and Rebecca McInnis, the new Department Chair of Career & Technical Education at Quincy High School. We look forward to the new ideas and perspectives that these talented educators will bring to their schools and the school system.

This year, Quincy Public Schools will continue to implement the Massachusetts Frameworks for Common Core State Standards for English Language Arts and Mathematics. In Spring 2015, Quincy Public Schools students will complete MCAS testing for English Language Arts, Mathematics, and Science, completing items designed to assess mastery of the Common Core State Standards. To assist with growing needs for educational technology, many upgrades have been completed this summer, including new labs at the Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, and Wollaston Elementary Schools. In addition, purchases of laptops, document cameras, projectors, educational software, operating system upgrades, and technology professional development are ongoing throughout the school system.

Along with staffing, curriculum, and technology enhancements, we are working on many initiatives across the school system. At North Quincy and Quincy High Schools, students in Grades 9-11 will make a difference in their schools and communities through volunteering in the third year of School Committee's Community Service initiative. Extended day opportunities will be available for students at all levels and include chorus, orchestra, theater, Robotics, and middle school athletics. Our partners in the Quincy School~Community Partnership continue to enhance our students' educational opportunities through providing backpacks and school supplies for a number of elementary school students, real-work experiences to high school Career and Technical Education students, and funding the Mentoring program for new professional educators.

Our school buildings will be ready for the new school year, with improvements such as newly retiled floors and new carpeting, repainted classrooms, and repairs to building mechanicals including addressing electrical, plumbing, and heating issues. Custodians across the school system have worked diligently all summer to prepare classrooms and offices for the new school year. We are also grateful for the support of the Park Department in maintaining and improving the landscaping at our school buildings. We are continuing to work with the Massachusetts School Building Authority and the Public Buildings department on the new Sterling Middle School project and window and door replacement projects for the Lincoln Hancock, Merrymount, Parker, and Wollaston Elementary Schools and North Quincy High Schools with anticipated completion in Summer 2015.

Through the City of Quincy's partnership with SolarCity, installations of solar arrays are underway at five school buildings, with the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, Wollaston and Clifford Marshall Elementary Schools scheduled to be online by September 1. Throughout the fall, fifteen additional school and city buildings will begin the solar array installation process with all buildings scheduled to be completed by the end of 2014.

This summer also saw the move of the Quincy Public Schools administrative offices to our new home at 34 Coddington Street. Under the direction of Public Buildings, the former Coddington School was restored and converted to office space for Quincy Public Schools and the City of Quincy's Information Technology and Planning Departments. In addition to state-of-the-art office space, Coddington Hall contains a School Committee room and conference room to host school system and public meetings.

The first School Committee meeting of the year will be held Sept. 3 and broadcast live on Channel 22 at 7 p.m.

As the new school year begins, please remember that the most meaningful factor in assisting students to have a successful school experience is the concern, participation, and involvement of their parents. In order to help your children attain their goals, we need your involvement, whether it be through attending parent-teacher conferences, volunteering in your child's school, and most importantly, reinforcing the importance of on-time school attendance, appropriate behavior and class participation, and completion of schoolwork. You can also stay informed about your child's school and all of Quincy Public Schools through our website www.quincypublicschools.com or by following us on Facebook or Twitter (@QuincyPS).

While you enjoy the last few days of summer vacation, please note the calendar for the opening days of school below. Your principal will be happy to answer any questions you might have related to the opening of school or feel free to contact my office at 617-984-8701.

The first day of school for Grades 1-9 is Wednesday, September 3.

Grades 10-12 will begin school on Thursday, September 4.

Pre-Kindergarten and Kindergarten students will attend an Orientation at their individual schools on Friday, Sept. 5; each family will receive a postcard with information on this event.

The first day of school for Kindergarten and Pre-Kindergarten is Monday, Sept. 8.

On behalf of all of the staff at the Quincy Public Schools, best wishes for a successful school year to you and your family.

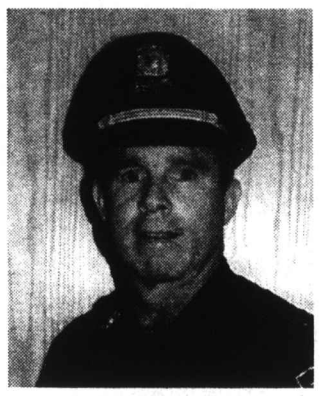
Back-To-School Safety

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer



LT. DAN MINTON

It's that time of year again. Time to send your children back to school. It can be a frightening time for parents, but if you prepare your child for the big world you may help save them from getting into trouble.

• Make sure your children are taking the safest route to school and friends' houses, one that avoids danger spots like alleys, new construction, and wooded areas.

• Encourage your children to walk and play with friends, not alone, and to stay in well-lit, open areas where others can see them.

• Don't hang a house key around your child's neck. It's a telltale sign that you won't be at home when they return from school. Put it inside a pocket or sock.

• Teach children to walk confidently and stay alert to what's going on around them.

• Encourage your children to look out for other kids' safety and report anything they see that doesn't seem right.

• Tell your children to stay away from strangers who hang around playgrounds, public rest rooms and empty buildings.

• Rehearse with children their full name, address, and phone number (including area code) and how to make emergency phone calls from home and public phones.

• Tell children never to accept gifts or rides from someone they don't know well.

• Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in wooded areas, overgrown shrubbery, abandoned buildings, bad lighting, vacant lots littered with debris, no sidewalks or bike paths next to busy streets.

• Teach children to go to a store clerk or security guard and ask for help if you become separated in a store or shopping mall. Tell them never to go into the parking lot alone. Accompany your children to public rest rooms.

• Teach children no one, not even someone they know, has the right to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable. Tell them that they have the right to say "No" to any adult in this situation.

If you teach the above tips to your children, they will be better prepared to survive in this great big, sometimes crazy, world.

QCAP Head Start Program Participating In New Android Tablet Pilot Program

Kids Ages 3, 4 & 5 To Use Fables For 5 Weeks

Isabella Products, a consumer device and services company, has launched a new pilot with Quincy Community Action Program's (QCAP) Head Start program where kids ages 3, 4 and 5 will use Isabella's Fable for 5 weeks.

Fable is a safe, secure, browser-free Android tablet designed for children ages 3 to 10 that puts parents' and teachers' minds at ease. By connecting to Isabella Products' secure cloud-based store, VizitMe, Fable offers thousands of specially curated educational and fun apps, e-books, games, and video options.

The Head Start program received 12 Fables for the children to use at technology tables to enrich their classroom experience and prepare them for kindergarten. This latest pilot follows a successful pilot in Everett's Summer Enrichment Program as well as one last summer in Boston Public Schools. Isabella is looking to expand its pilot program further by including other classrooms across Massachusetts. Isabella uses these pilots to get feedback from teachers and students about the role Fable can play in digital learning initiatives.

"We are excited to roll out these pilot programs. Seeing the success Fable has had in classrooms in both Everett and Boston is encouraging," said Matthew Growney, founder and CEO of Isabella Products. "Fable enables teachers to set up classroom and student profiles that provide a safe way for interaction and exploration of world-class educational content. They also have the ability to create personalized lesson plans for individual students through VizitMe's vast content catalog."

For information on how to get Fable into your classroom, contact https://vizitme.com/pilots or contact your local Congressman - http://house.gov/representatives/find/

"Head Start is an important part of the community, and the Fable pilot program helps us provide a unique educational technology experience for our children," said Keather Reichel, Educational Coordinator of QCAP. "We are thankful that Senator Keenan was able to facilitate our collaboration with Isabella Products."

Fable will be available to consumers in the fall of 2014.

He has more than 25 years working in management/leadership positions for leading regional, national and international organizations including the Stratagem Group, Adelphia Communications, Constar International, Stop & Shop, Halliburton/DRESSER and Interstate Brands.

Brennan holds a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from Providence College, a Master in Public Administration from Suffolk University and Master of Science in Applied Management from Lesley University. He also completed certification as a Senior Professional in Human Resources (SPHUR).

Captain van Joolen comes to Quincy College after a distinguished career as a naval officer and permanent military professor at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, MD.

A community college graduate himself, Captain van Joolen holds an Associate of Arts in Natural Sciences from Pasadena City College, a Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from the University of California, San Diego; a Master of Science in Strategic Planning from the Army War College, Carlisle, PA; a second Master of Science in applied Mathematics from the Navy Postgraduate School, Monterey, CA and a Ph.D. in Applied Mathematics also from the Navy Postgraduate School, Monterey, CA.

During his naval career, which included experience on surface warships as well as at the United States Naval Academy, Captain van Joolen served as Executive Officer on the USS JUNEAU and as Chief Engineer on the USS CAYUGA. He has received several academic and military awards including the W. Randolph Award for Excellence in Mathematics; the Meritorious Service Medal for excellence in training and retention of personnel while Officer on the USS JUNEAU; and a Navy Commendation Medal for excellence and safe plant operations under extreme environmental conditions while Chief Engineer on the USS CAYUGA. While at the U.S. Naval Academy, he was nominated three times for the Military Faculty Excellence in Teaching Award. The title of his doctoral dissertation was "Application of Higdon Non-Reflecting Boundary Conditions to Shallow Water Models."

Dr. Michael E. Marrapodi is the Dean of Inter-Institutional and Online Programs. Dr. Marrapodi has been an educator and senior leader in education for nearly 20 years. He has 10 years of online teaching and administrative experience working with new and established online programs.

Dr. Marrapodi holds a Bachelor of Sacred Music from Northeastern Bible College in Essex Falls, New Jersey; a Master's of Education in Music Education from The College of New Jersey in Ewing, New Jersey; and a Doctorate in Education in Education Leadership from Johnson & Wales University in Providence, R.I.

During his career, Dr. Marrapodi has served as headmaster, principal or director of development for several private Christian schools. He has been, or is presently, an online faculty member for Argosy University, The University of Phoenix (School of Advanced Studies) and Capella University. He has also been a faculty member at the New England College of Business, Dean College, Boston Baptist College and Northeastern Bible College. These experiences have led him to become familiar with many different types of instructional software prevalent in the higher education community today.

He presented at conferences and workshops on such topics as "Transformational Leadership," "Successful Teaching in a Technological World," "Understanding by Design/Concept Based Curriculum," "Shared Leadership," "'Who Moved My Cheese': Implications for Teaching and Learning," and "Professional Staff Development" and a number of other education related topics.

Survey: Students, Parents Concerned Over Rising College Costs

As students get ready to go back to school, a new study from Citizens Financial Group finds an overwhelming majority of young adults, college students and parents concerned with the rising cost of college, with many without a plan to manage and pay down student debt.

According to this research, 94 percent of parents with college students and 94 percent of college students are concerned about rising college costs. But only 55 percent of parents with college students and 63 percent of college students say they have a plan in place to manage the loans that they have taken on to help pay for school.

As they seek answers to the financial challenge posed by the rising cost of college, respondents to the Citizens survey indicated that they are aware of the consequences of not developing a plan to pay down their college costs:

- Seventy-one (71) percent of college students believe that the cost of college will impact their ability to buy a home.
- Fifty-four (54) percent of parents with kids in college say they worry that the cost of college for their children will impact their ability to retire when they had planned to.

"As the cost of college continues to rise, consumers are increasingly concerned about their ability to manage this cost," said Brendan Coughlin, President of Education Finance, Citizens Financial Group. "The findings of this study underscore how critical it is for students and their parents to work proactively to develop a plan to manage the cost of college and not allow it to detract from the incredible value of their education. Whether they manage this through private student loans and refinancing opportunities with banks or through federal loans or other means depends on their individual financial situation, but it's safe to say that the vast majority of families looking at the cost of college today find it to be very challenging."

Overall, the majority of college students surveyed are concerned about how their student loans will influence their futures. While 83 percent of current students feel college is a worthwhile investment, 41 percent are concerned that investing in college will negatively impact their overall financial stability in the future. Parents also expressed concerns for their own financial stability and for the financial stability of their children.

"College is one of the most significant investments in a student's lifetime," added Coughlin. "This study supports the importance of students having a strong understanding of the elements of the student loan process and how it will impact them once they enter repayment."

Citizens has created a number of resources including tips and tools to assist students in saving and budgeting for college, applying for financial aid and establishing and maintaining good credit. The company also has education finance specialists who work with students to make sure they are aware of their options.

Citizens' Education Finance products include the TruFit Student Loan for undergraduate and graduate students and the Education Refinance Loan for private lenders. The company's TruFit Student Loan Annual Summary provides student loan borrowers and their parents or co-signers with annual updates on loan amount and repayment, enabling students and their families to have more visibility into their total debt and estimated monthly payment well in advance of graduation.

The research, commissioned by Citizens Financial Group and conducted by TNS, a leading global research firm, fielded a survey to 5,000 American adults between the ages of 18 and 34 in July and August to gauge perceptions and sentiment around educational financing. Rita Bailey New School Health Services Coordinator

Back to School

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Rita Bailey will be overseeing a team of over 20 nurses and organizing outreach programs, substance abuse awareness events, and immunization clinics as the new Coordinator of Health Services for Quincy Public Schools following the recent retirement of Jane Kisielius who held the position for 11 years.

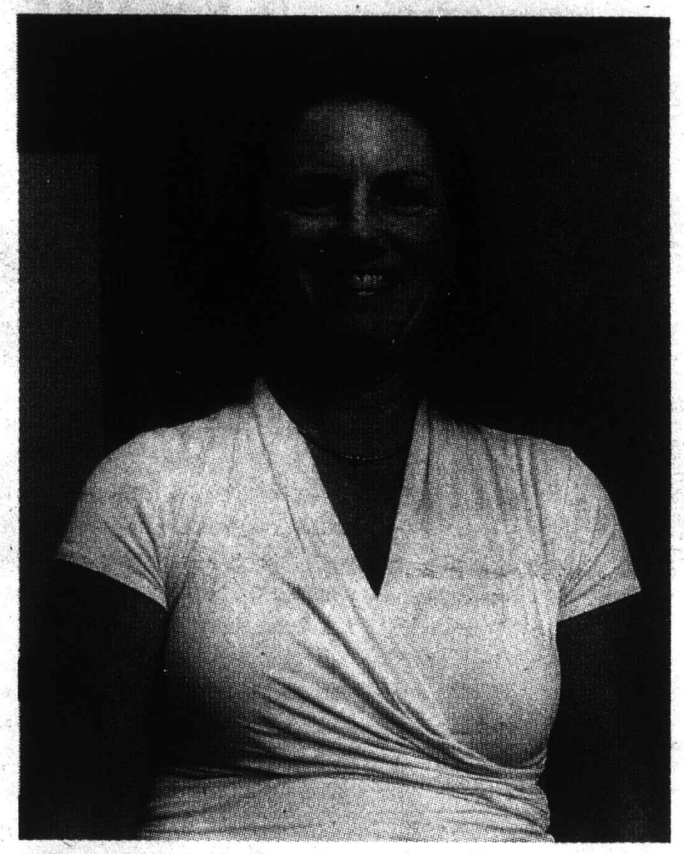
Born in Dorchester, Bailey moved to Quincy roughly 23 years ago after getting married.

She took night classes at Laboure College part-time from 1993 to 1997, then transferred to UMass Boston to continue her education. In 1999, her hard work paid off. She earned her bachelor's degree in nursing and began working not for any of Quincy's schools, but for Brigham and Women's Hospital and Quincy Medical Center as a surgical nurse.

She was also working one-on-one with patients as a private duty nurse with Centrus Home Care where one of her coworkers recommended she look into transitioning her career. "It was one of the people that I did private duty nursing with that suggested that I become a school nurse and…I looked into it and that's when I met [Jane Kisielius] and I started subbing probably 9-years-ago."

She ended up at the Snug Harbor Community School, catering to the health needs of preschool students in 2005. It was during this time that she passed the Massachusetts Tests for Educator Licensure exams and earned her master's degree in education from Cambridge College.

While her time as a surgical nurse offered her no clinical experience in pediatric health care, her time as a private duty nurse occasionally did. "When I was working both at Brigham and Quincy Medical Center, I was working with adults… but I did do private duty nursing so I did have some experience with that."



RITA BAILEY, a former surgical nurse, is the new coordinator of Health Services for Quincy Public Schools.

She. learned to care for school children with asthma, diabetes, seizure disorders, and food allergies.

"It is a lot different," she said "because obviously the children are much smaller and they have different needs."

She collaborated with students' doctors and other health providers to create individual care plans, ensuring that all their medical needs were met without disrupting the learning environment.

She had to assume greater responsibility in caring for students with serious illnesses and disorders requiring frequent hospital visits and long-term care. Administering medication at a certain time of day and monitoring their conditions was an essential part of performing her duties. This, she said, was due to a trend of shortened hospital stays and the release of patients before full recovery.

She had to take into consideration the recent surge in serious food allergies, making sure that proper procedure was followed in the event of anaphylaxis, and that EpiPens were readily available in case of emergency.

Over time, she grew accustomed to seeing students—sometimes as many as 40 a day—as they came in for minor issues such as bumps and bruises or runny noses, and for yearly scoliosis, vision, and hearing screenings. "You see them grow. You see them mature, and then the ones that do have medical issues, you see how they develop their own skills to deal with it," she said.

Bailey enjoyed the connections she made with the kids. Some, she said, relied on the school nurse as their only form of health care.

In those cases, she would do her best to find local clinics offering low to no-cost health solutions for needy families, and refer the children there. "If they don't have a doctor, we will try to help them find a doctor," she said.

Her masters in education served her well since the role of the school nurse was no longer limited to offering only clinical assistance. "There's a lot of teaching involved," said Bailey. "We do dental health, hygiene… at the high school they're more into substance abuse and being aware of safety and making the right decisions."

One program that Quincy Public Schools participates in, in partnership with South Shore Hospital, is "Hidden in Plain Sight," which offers parents the opportunity to walk through a mock-up of a teenager's bedroom which has objects hidden throughout indicating the possibility of drug use and other risky behaviors.

As the new Coordinator of Health Services, she'll continue educating not only students, but parents with the outreach programs aimed at preventing obesity or destructive decision making put in place by Kisielius.

Her duties will include running the CPR and AED (automated external defibrillator) certification program for Quincy Public School staff members, coaches, and bus drivers.

She'll be offering information to parents on Quincy's concussion policy which must be revised every two years.

She'll be the chairperson of the Health, Wellness, and Nutrition Advisory Team which reviews school nutrition, opportunities for physical education, and provides health education.

The task of creating an emergency preparedness and medical response plan which addresses what to do in the event of an intruder entering a school's campus also falls to the Coordinator of Health Services as does creating measures to prevent the spread of highly contagious diseases such as influenza.

An emergency preparedness plan was put into place when the H1N1 virus pandemic occurred in 2009, said Bailey. A flu and immunization clinic was set up to prevent the illness from overtaking schools.

While she will be spending less time performing the more hands-on duties of a nurse, she will be available to fill in, in the event of an absence.

Bailey said she's "ready for a new challenge" and that she plans to eventually create a database that would make accessing information easier for school nurses across the city. "I know that as a school nurse down at Snug Harbor, I did things my way," she said. "You don't want to reinvent the wheel. You just want to share the information which we do all the time but I think probably the thing is to access that information [through a database] would be a lot easier."

"If I wanted to do something that the nurse up at Clifford Marshall had done on wellness, I would be able to just access her information."

Working with children, particularly students, is more rewarding because of the long-term bonds formed between practitioners and their patients that aren't possible in a hospital setting where a person can be admitted one day and discharged the next, she said. "When you work on a surgical unit, those patients are in and out… whereas here, you get to actually see them through preschool, kindergarten; some of them you might know for six or seven years."

After caring for thousands of children in Quincy, Bailey said she never forgets their names.

"I remember names more than I do faces and then when I see a student I remember his name and then I see them and I say 'oh my gosh' because you remember them as seven or eight-years-old, not 17 or 18-years-old."

Allure Spa Hosts Event For Paradas Of Quincy

Cut-A-Thon Benefits Family Volunteering In South Africa

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Sandra Ishmael, owner of Allure Spa, opened her salon from 12-4 p.m. on Sunday for a fundraising cut-a-thon event to benefit the Parada family of Quincy who will be leaving for a mission with the Christian volunteer organization Youth With A Mission (YWAM) to South Africa on Sept. 7.

Ishmael, a member of First Presbyterian Church, said that she connected with the Parada family through their Christian faith. "She was actually in my church and they were sharing what they were doing," she said. "I just kind of heard the Lord calling and said this is amazing. I want to be able to help."

Allure Spa offered haircuts for $25 — 50 percent off of their normal price — and mini facials for $30 during the event with 100 percent of the proceeds going towards the family's outgoing expenses such as travel, and monthly living costs. Four stylists were on hand to trim, layer, and blow dry hair.

Cosmetics and other beauty-related products donated by local businesses were raffled off.

Small items such as travel size shampoos and conditioners were also on sale to benefit the family.

The salon hosts cut-a-thons every year with all proceeds going towards a different cause. Last year, Allure's cut-a-thon event raised funds to benefit Quincy's Interfaith Social Services. The year prior, they raised money to send several stylists to Bangladesh through the Quincy-based organization Friends of the World Charitable Trust, which provides vocational cosmetology training to orphans in developing countries.

The cut-a-thons draw large crowds every year according to Ishmael, who said that at times a line forms outside her door as people wait eagerly for a stylist's seat to open up.

On a busy Saturday, she can expect to see 80 clients. During Sunday's cut-a-thon, stylists saw 40 clients and raised almost $1,000.

Ishmael promoted the event through e-mail and old-fashioned word of mouth. "I just wanted to be able to reach out and help them," she said.

Joanna Parada, the daughter of South African parents who currently live in Weymouth, and her husband Alberto along with their children, are being sent out by the Park Street Church in Boston to work with poor and underserved youth, and children with HIV/AIDS.

They will be staying for a minimum of five years but hope to to remain longer.

Team CHUCKLE Raises Over $400,000 For Dana-Farber

Ray Waldron's Cycling Helps Us Cure Kids' LivEs Completes Another Pan-Mass Bicycle Challenge

The 35th annual Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC), a two-day, 190-mile fundraising bike ride that takes participants from Sturbridge to Provincetown, took place Aug. 2-3. Over 5,700 riders participated and 3,000 volunteers oversaw the event which collected money to benefit cancer research for the Jimmy Fund at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Ray Waldron, a lifelong resident of Squantum and 12-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, has participated in 10 PMC rides and was among 28 Quincy residents pedaling in the event this year.

Along with Quincy resident Tracy Cristiani, who is the wife of Quincy Fire Department veteran and cancer survivor John Cristiani, Waldron completed the ride through rain and unseasonably chilly temperatures. "It was wet and it was cold, but it is still an incredible weekend," he said.

In 1989, at 18-years-old, Waldron participated in his first PMC. After riding in 6 of the 7 following rides, he formed Team CHUCKLE (Cycling Helps Us Cure Kids' LivEs) with high school friend Rob Brennan in 2010. Team CHUCKLE ranges from four to 37 riders annually and has raised over $400,000 to date.

This year, Team CHUCKLE was comprised of 13 riders including James Conley of Quincy.

Riders hope their efforts have raised at least $80,000.

Waldron began riding in the PMC not only for the physical challenge but in dedication to his mother, a 24-year survivor of cancer, and in memory of his father-in-law who passed away less than a year ago due to a brain tumor.

He derives inspiration from the stories of children treated at Dana-Farber such as 5-year-old Jackie Mullen who went into remission in 2011 and 15-year-old Tatyana Abrams who has been in remission from Acute Myeloid Leukemia and had a successful double-lung transplant in 2012. Abrams recently finished her first complete year of school since fourth grade.

"Seeing these kids and everything they go through makes all of our aches, pains, frustrations, and exhaustion from riding seem pretty trivial," said Waldron. "Both Jackie and Tatyana proved to be special sources of inspiration for all of us."

Unfortunately, Dana Parker, sister of Team CHUCKLE teammate Rob Brennan and mother of two, lost her battle to a rare form of cancer this year. She was treated by doctors at Dana-Farber and, using treatment techniques made possible due to PMC donations, lived three years longer than expected.

"Dana was a special person who really lit up a room with her smile and her contagious optimism," said Waldron. "She really exuded positive energy throughout her battle and truly showed her children how to live and how to love."

Tracy Cristiani rode in her first PMC in 2009 in support of her husband John, who is a nine-year survivor of Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma. Following his treatment by doctors at Dana-Farber, he is back to work with the Quincy Fire Department. She also rides in team The Flying Henrys in memory of Henry Kashian who passed away in 2001 after being diagnosed with bile duct cancer. The team, which was formed in 2003, has raised over $700,000 to date. Among the team's 17 members this year were Robin Franceschini and Susan McGoldrick, both of Quincy.

Pedal partner Meghan McCarthy was matched with the team in 2009, however the teenager lost her battle with cancer in January 2010.

"It is people like this that make the PMC special," said John Cristiani. "It's incredible the number of good people who get involved in this ride and truly overwhelming the amount of people who so eagerly support the ride and donate."

The Flying Henrys are hopeful that they have raised $100,000 or more with this year's race.

"I can see personally how the money raised on the PMC goes directly into patient care at Dana-Farber; we're not there yet, but treatments keep changing and are getting better," he said.

The Quincy Fire Department's Local 792 has also raised over $10,500 with its participation in the Relay for Life for the American Cancer Society in June. Most recently, dozens of firefighters made donations and had their heads buzzed or shaved in a show of support for 4-year-old Tommy "TK" Kelly, who is the son of Boston firefighter Eddie Kelly.

Team CHUCKLE will host one final fundraising event this year at Brine Oyster Bar in Newburyport. The second annual Cancer Shucks event will take place Tues., Sept. 23. Tickets are $60 each. For more information contact Ray Waldron at raywaldron@comcast.net.

CHEERLEADING AS A COMPETITIVE SPORT

They may not put on helmets and pads, but cheerleading is a sport that has every bit the potential to leave participants as seriously injured as football playing does. In fact, cheerleading carries the highest rate of catastrophic injury in sports and accounts for fully two-thirds of all catastrophic injuries in female athletes. Unlike other sports in which more players are injured in games than in practice, far more injuries (84%) occur during cheerleading practice than during games of competition. Concussions, skull fractures, cerebral edema, and other very serious injuries occur as cheerleaders practice and perform stunts, and hone their spotting skills. It is time that all involved took this sport seriously, in a concerted effort to prevent serious injury.

This week's informative column is dedicated to providing some information as to why cheerleading can cause innumerable injuries. Research supports chiropractic care - it works, it's safe, it saves time and money. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we treat the causes of physical problems rather than just the symptoms. North Quincy Football Shows Depth, Experience

Red Raiders Kick Off Season Sept. 5 At Home Vs. Medford

By BILL GRIFFIN

When Mark Nutley took the head coaching job at North Quincy, there was no question he would bring enthusiasm and his love of football to his work.

He knew the city from his years working in youth recreation programs. He knew the kids from his time at North as a lacrosse coach and an assistant to Ken McPhee and Jim Connor. He could talk to athletes, sell them on football, and create excitement about the sport that faced two main challenges at North: numbers and depth.

Turnout was low. Most players went both ways. He needed to build and sell his program. As he enters his second year, the early returns are good. North isn't turning out Brockton-like numbers, but there is promise and a future.

Over 40 kids were in the weight room three times a week over the summer. Players participated and showed well in a pass-and-catch league. The numbers from the incoming freshman class are good. More than 20 will join the program. Three seniors are out for the first time. Two transfers will help. Do the math. If the trend continues, Nutley is starting to build something good at North.

This is the time of year when every team is fresh with optimism, but, still, there is a nice buzz which surrounds this North club.

"We're excited. We had a great summer. The kids worked hard," said Nutley. "We played a lot of young kids last year and we took our lumps. We want to build on that experience. We have more depth this year, more kids who can play which can only help. We shouldn't have as many kids going both ways."

There is legitimate depth at wide receiver, linebacker, running back and in the secondary. Nutley has more than one weapon from which to choose and support people who can play when then inevitable injuries occur.

"We have three good wide receivers and five or six kids who can play in the secondary. We didn't have that last year," said Nutley whose team finished 3-8 last fall.

North's biggest challenge will be replacing two of the finest players in the school's history: running back Antoine Allen and two-way lineman Vinny Tran. Allen broke the school record by rushing for over 1700 yards last year, including a 440-yard, five-touchdown epic against Milford. He was also a gifted defensive player who had a big game at cornerback in the Shriners All Star Game.

Senior Dayvon Jones will step in at tailback. He is an excellent all-around back who runs hard, catches the ball, and blocks well. He played out of the wingback slot last year, had over 800 yards in total offense and scored seven touchdowns.

"Dayvon should have a good year for us. He was our leading receiver last year. He does everything well as a running back," said Nutley.

Bryan Turner, who is coming back from a torn ACL suffered against Scituate last year, and Liam O'Connor, a transfer from Xaverian, give North depth at the position. Zack Dangora and Alex Chen are top candidates to block and fill the fullback role.

Tran ruled the Patriot League at guard and defensive end for four years. He will play on scholarship at Hamilton College. Chen played well, especially over the second half of the season, at defensive end last year and Nutley is looking for good things from senior Fred Flynn who missed most of last season with an elbow injury. Nick Manning and Derek Huynh will step in at guard.

"Before Fred got hurt, he and Vinny had some great battles in practice," said Nutley. "Nick and Derek are two of the kids who played a lot last year and picked up experience. Our offensive line should be improved."

If the line can provide protection, Nutley would like to throw a little more this season. Senior Andrew Kiley returns and when North gave him time last year, he threw the ball well. He has a strong arm and a year's experience as a varsity quarterback.

He also has three fine targets at wide receiver. Eric Cohane-Jones and Aiden Brown played wideout last year. Solomon Umoren, who was a key player on the last year's championship basketball team, is out for football for the first time as a senior. He is an exceptional athlete.

"My only wish is that he didn't wait until senior year," smiled Nutley. "If we can protect Andrew, he can throw well. We're looking for him to be a real leader for us. I like our depth at wide receiver."

Seamus Broughton, Connor Pound and Fred Barsamian are three players who gained varsity seasoning as starters last year and should give North a solid offensive line.

Huynh and Manning will join Flynn and Chen on the defensive line. Dangora was terrific last year and is a potential all-league linebacker. Jacob Grady, Marcelo Toscanini, Tom Koch, Jones and O'Connor give North depth and quality at the position. Sean Curran-Cross, a transfer from Quincy High, can help at linebacker and in the secondary.

"It's another spot where we built some depth by using so many young players last year," said Nutley.

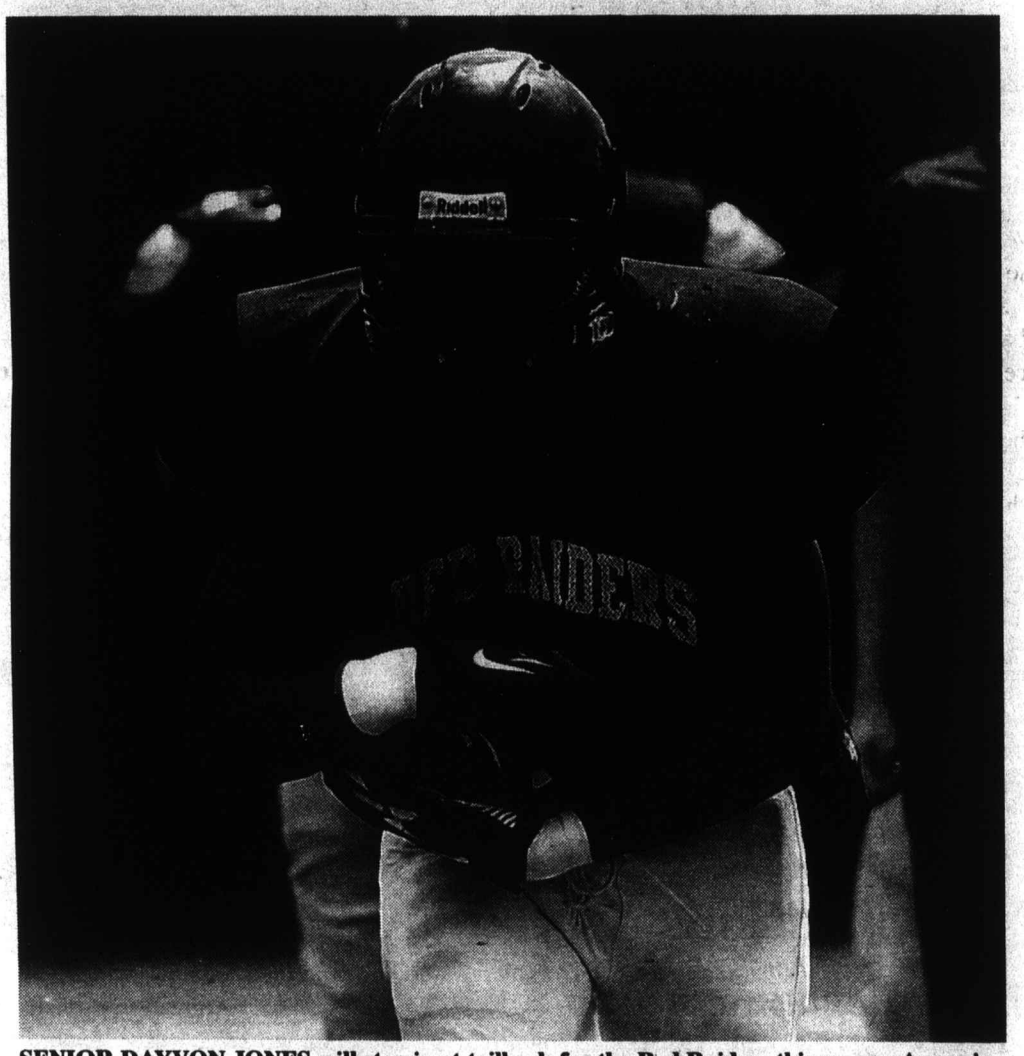
Brown, Solomon, Jones, Cohane-Jones, Joe Fallon and Joel Lawless are all good athletes in the secondary which is important in a league which loves to throw.

"Again, it's a position where we can move people in and out. We couldn't do that last year," said Nutley.

Plymouth South, who is coming off two straight Super Bowl appearances, will join the Fisher Division of the Patriot League for the first year. Defending champ Scituate is always tough, but Nutley is not thinking about the division or the playoffs. He is thinking about one game, the opener against Medford.

"That's all we're looking at. Our focus is on the Medford game. We played them last year, and it was one game we thought we should have won, but it slipped away from us," said Nutley.

North will host the opener against Medford at Veterans' Stadium Friday, Sept. 5 at 7 p.m.



SENIOR DAYVON JONES will step in at tailback for the Red Raiders this season. As a wingback last year, Jones had more than 800 yards in total offense and scored seven touchdowns.

Quincy High Football Aiming For Playoffs

Presidents At Malden Catholic In Season Opener Sept. 5; Host Braintree Sept. 12

By BILL GRIFFIN

Baseball is played at a leisurely pace. It allows empty patches of time for conversation. Much of the conversation at games in the city this summer was about Quincy High's football team. The talk was full of great expectations.

Coach Bill Reardon has wise words of caution.

"They were having the same conversations at baseball games in Duxbury, Hingham and Plymouth. And the expectations are just as high," he said.

Quincy returns a veteran team from last year's club which went 7-4 and lost three games by one point. There is explosive skill at quarterback and tailback. There are seasoned veterans on both sides of the ball who know well how to play in big games.

"Our overall experience is probably our biggest strength," said Reardon. "We have a lot of seniors who played full-time as juniors. The whole secondary is back and we have experience on the offensive line."

However, there are issues to be settled. Matt Hines and Matt Kozlowski, who were both two-way starters on the line for two years, have graduated. The Presidents lost their leading tackler in Dan Guarente. There are holes to fill at tight end, blocking back, tackle, and most importantly, at linebacker. Guarente, Jalen Chase, Alex Alexandre and Jake Bergonzi were the core of the defense last year at linebacker. Only Bergonzi returns.

"We have to replace our outside linebackers," said Reardon.

The main reason for all the happy talk about this team is that fans love skilled players, players who run and throw and catch the football. Quincy has two of the best in senior quarterback James Lam and junior tailback Jahvae Handsom-Fields.

Lam was an all-league player at quarterback as a junior. He is a frightening dual threat who can score by throwing or running from any point in the field. He ran for 16 touchdowns and threw for five last year. He ran for 1024 yards and threw for 1700 yards.

He can throw the ball 60 yards and drop it on a dime. When he runs, he runs, not like a quarterback, but like a tailback. He moves in the open field like someone who was born to run the ball. Take a look at list of all the high school football teams in the state. Lam could start at running back for three-quarters of them.

This will be his third season as a full-time starter. When Quincy plays the Duxburys, Hinghams, and Plymouth Norths, Lam will bring not only skill, he will bring wisdom and experience.

"If there is one position you want stability, it's at quarterback. James gives us that," said Reardon.

Despite sharing the tailback touches with Alexandre as a sophomore, Handsom-Fields ran for 943 yards and 12 touchdowns. In a three-game stretch when Alexandre was hurt, Handsom-Fields ran for 195, 229 and 177 yards.

He brought back a kick-off for a touchdown against Braintree. He brought a punt back for a touchdown against Whitman-Hanson. If he breaks through a crease in the open field, he is gone. Forget it. The race is over. He also plays in the secondary and is one of Quincy's best defensive players.

"It's going to be a challenge as a coach to monitor his playing time and make sure he gets enough rest," said Reardon.

Kenny Garcia and Tyrian Leonard will also see spot duty at tailback. Aramani Cardoso and Garrett Cronin are in the mix to replace Chase who did a terrific job blocking out of the fullback slot last year.

Senior J.T. Bain, Lam's favorite receiver last year, returns as a wideout. Reda Laftih will also see action at receiver. Guards Steve Scolaro and William Young return. Mike Munroe is a veteran at center and Abraham Hoti is a proven performer at tackle.

"We need to find a tackle and a tight end. We also have to replace Rob Munroe who did a good job at wide receiver for us last year," said Reardon.

The strength of the defense will be in the secondary, which in a league that loves to throw, is just where it should be. Cardoso and Handsom-Fields are exceptional at corner. Ryan Turpin, Garcia and Laftih all have experience at safety.

"They've played together, they should know their coverages and where they should be," said Reardon.

Young, Munroe, and Hoti have experience on the defensive line. Reardon would like to see good things from senior Curtis Calley and create depth up front to eliminate too much two-way duty.

"Calley transferred from Weymouth last year and he had good moments for us. I'd like to see him have a big year," said Reardon

Bergonzi is a potential all-league performer at middle linebacker, but Reardon needs to find at least two replacements for Guarente and Alexandre to play on the outside.

"Defensively, that's our biggest question mark," said Reardon.

How good can they be? First, before the Presidents think of Duxbury, Hingham and Plymouth North, they need to win the games they should win. Reardon preaches three things before every game. Avoid penalties, fumbles and missed tackles, and Quincy will be in a good position to win. If the Presidents do this, they will avoid early losses like Braintree and Silver Lake last year which damaged their playoff chances.

"We have to look at every game as a big game and understand we have to win them all," said Reardon.

The goal is, of course, the playoffs. Playoff teams are determined after seven games. League champions also automatically qualify. The Patriot League Keenan Division will be brutal. Duxbury has won the division since dinosaurs roamed the earth. Hingham is always tough. Plymouth North, a first-year member of the league, is a traditional power. It will not be an easy road.

"Somebody has to prove they can beat Duxbury, and Plymouth North just makes the division more difficult," said Reardon.

Last year's winning record was Quincy's second straight. It was first time in 10 years the Presidents posted consecutive winning seasons. They have proven they belong with the best in the league. The question is whether this is the year they take the next step into the playoffs and contention for the division title.

"The playoffs are attainable," said Reardon. "The first thing a team wants to do is prove they can be competitive and stay in every game. I think we've done that. I think this year we're ready to take the next step."

Quincy opens at Malden Catholic Friday, Sept. 5 at 7 p.m.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, August 16, 2014, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Officer Mark Millane was dispatched to the area of the Fore River Bridge on Washington Street to meet a female victim of domestic assault. Upon arrival, the Officer did not find anyone there. A short time later, a female driver pulled up and told Officer Millane that she was the victim. She said that she was at a function with her boyfriend of eight months in Braintree and after several drinks, the couple began arguing and then left the function.

She described her boyfriend as very possessive and accused her of cheating on him. She said that her boyfriend got behind the wheel and they drove into Quincy. The boyfriend grew angrier as they drove and began punching the roof above the driver's side with his fist, telling her, "I am going to f@#$%^% kill you - I am going to f@#$%%^& kill you." She described her boyfriend as looking very angry and enraged. She said she was scared and concerned for her safety at this point. He continued to yell and swear at her.

As they rode down South Street, near Pete's Grille, the boyfriend made a sudden U-turn and pulled over by the side of the road, where he jumped out of the car and approached the passenger side door. The victim, recognizing that her boyfriend was about to get at her, locked the passenger door, which only enraged him even more as he violently banged on the passenger side window. She said her boyfriend then used the keys to her vehicle and opened her door, then grabbed her by the throat and started to choke her to the point she was losing her breath. He then began to smash her head into the center console numerous times. He climbed inside the vehicle and moved on top of her, putting his right arm around her neck and throat to choke her. She started to scream, "Help –help" and two males just happened to come out of Pete's Grille, which startled the boyfriend causing him to stop choking her and get out of the vehicle. Once he was out of the vehicle, the victim saw the keys so she slid over to the driver seat and drove off, leaving him behind.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Millane asked the victim where her boyfriend may be and she said he is probably at the function hall in Braintree, so the Braintree Police were notified. Braintree Police Sergeant Phil Yee, Officers Meredith Golden, Tim White, Bill Cushing and Mike Arki located the boyfriend there and placed him under arrest for domestic assault. He was transported to Officer Millane and then Officer O'Rourke transported the boyfriend to the Quincy Police station. Officer Millane recommended that the victim seek an emergency restraining order and she agreed.

The boyfriend, a 45 year old Mansfield resident, was charged with "Strangulation, Assault & Battery with a Dangerous Weapon and Assault & Battery." Nice Work!

Interior Decorating Tips With Barbara Graceffa

Dear Secretary of the Interior:

From my small foyer (approximately 6'x6'), there is a step up into the kitchen and, if I do not warn my guests, many trip. Any suggestions for emphasizing the difference in the floor heights? Priyanka

Dear Priyanka,

You mean you don't want to put down black and yellow diagonal tape on the kitchen floor? As I have mentioned before, your eyes notice where colors stop and start. Since it is a smaller space, you could install new flooring in the foyer–perhaps the same pattern of the material you use in the kitchen but a different color or the same color with a different coordinating pattern.

If you have woodwork surrounding a door frame as you move into the kitchen, try stenciling something on the woodwork near the floor level with maybe two or three repeats of the pattern or get a sheet of those very popular and inexpensive rub-on wall stickers from the craft store and do the same.

One more idea, if they do not interfere with a door opening or a person's physical passage into each area, consider adding one or two large urns of flowers or something similar in the kitchen on one or both sides of the entrance space to draw your eyes toward the floor, and thus, to the different floor heights.

BARBARA GRACEFFA

I'm getting ready to sell my house and I see a lot of HGTV shows where someone comes in with new furniture to "stage" the home for sale. It is possible to stage it with my own belongings? Edwin

Dear Edwin,

Absolutely, I do it for my clients all the time. It typically means taking out excess furniture and depersonalizing your décor. Should you move before your house sells (and don't want to pay for a professional stager to bring in furniture), I suggest you leave pictures of each staged room and/or a detailed floor plan drawn to scale of where you placed your furnishings because most potential buyers cannot envision their own furniture placement in an empty room. One more reason to do this–an empty room actually looks smaller than a furnished one.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior. Barbara Graceffa owns and operates Secretary of the Interior, an interior decoration company.

Hang Curtains With Ease

Q: The windows in my new apartment have curtain brackets installed on either side of all the windows, but they are either warped or broken. I'm not very confident that I can put up new brackets. Any tips? -- Sarah, via email

A: Sure. Tip one: don't be nervous about placing new brackets. Tip two: measure twice, cut (or drill) once.

Putting up outside-mounted curtains can seem difficult, but it's a great home-improvement project for beginners that can boost confidence while making your apartment considerably more awesome.

You'll need a few simple tools: a tape measure (one of the big locking ones is ideal) and a level (very inexpensive, but indispensible for getting the brackets set up in line). Buy a corded power drill, or borrow one from a friend, along with a set of drill bits. And keep one flat-head and one Phillips-head screwdriver on hand, too. You'll also need a small ladder or stepladder to work safely.

Measure the height that the curtains must reach. If you want floor-length curtains, measure from the floor to the top of the window molding (the wooden "frame" around the window opening). Add about 4-6 inches to that measurement to get the correct height of curtains you need. (Most ready-made curtains come in standard sizes, with 84 inches the norm for floor-length.)

Measure the width of the window from one side of the molding to the other.

Next, buy new brackets and curtain rods (and curtains, if you don't have them already). The rods should be long enough to extend 3-6 inches past the window on each side. The brackets need to be tough enough to hold up heavy curtains (that's part of the reason why your old brackets are partially torn out of the wall). You also may want to buy plastic wall anchors; bracket screws go through these to better hold the brackets in place.

Really long curtain rods often come with an additional bracket placed at the center of the rod to keep it from warping downward. Take the hint and install this center bracket if it's included.

To set up the new brackets, measure and mark a point 6 inches above the window molding and another one 3-6 inches past the molding, on both sides of the window. Use the level to ensure that the points are in line with each other. Make sure the new brackets aren't placed in the same spot as the old ones.

Place the new bracket so the top part touches the outer mark you just made. Use a pencil and mark the drill holes for the bracket. Do the same on the other side. Re-measure and level the two points. Then, pre-drill guide holes for the bracket, using a drill bit one size smaller than the bracket's screws.

Hold the bracket in place over the pre-drilled holes, and place the screws, using the screwdriver to hand-tighten. If using a screw anchor, screw that into the wall first, then hold the bracket in place and thread the screw into the plastic anchor. (The anchor will pop open on the backside of the wallboard.)

Double-check the placement of the second bracket one last time, then screw it into the wall. If a center bracket is needed, add that as well.

Now, all that's left is to put the curtains onto the rod, and lift the rod into place on the brackets. An easy task!

HOME TIP: Floor-length curtains should just touch the floor or crease slightly; shorter curtains should reach at least 6 inches below the window frame.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Changing your mind doesn't come easily for Lambs, who place a high value on commitment. But new facts could emerge that might persuade you to rethink your situation.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a good time to put that fine Bovine's eye for beauty to work in redecorating your home or workplace. And don't forget to indulge yourself in some personal time as well.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your sense of loyalty to someone who asks for your help is commendable. But make sure there are no information gaps that should be filled in before you move too far too quickly.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't let difficult people raise the Crab's ire levels this week. Avoid them if you can. If not, resist telling them off, even if you think they deserve it. Things improve by week's end.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your suspicions about a colleague might be on the mark. But you also could be misreading the signals you believe you're getting. Do some discreet checking before jumping to conclusions.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Take some time out from your many tasks and see if someone might be trying to reach out to you. You could be surprised to learn who it is and why you might want to reciprocate.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You still might want to do more investigating before taking on a new commitment. Later would not be the time to try to fill in any crucial gaps in what you need to know about it.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new opportunity should be carefully studied. It might offer some of the things you've been looking for. Or it could contain new possibilities you never considered. Check it out.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have to work harder this week to get people to listen to what you have to say. But if you stay with it, you could start to get your message out to many by the week's end.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although family matters again take up a big chunk of the Goat's time, the week also offers a chance to explore a new career move you'd been contemplating for a while.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Applying your practicality (what does it offer me?) and your creativity (how can I improve on it?) could provide sound reasons for seriously considering that new offer.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The single set will find that keeping their romantic aspirations on high gives Cupid a better target to aim at. Paired Pisces will find that this week helps reinforce their relationships.
BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in encouraging others to demand the best from themselves. You would be a fine sports coach, as well as an enlightened teacher.

The Church of Scientology Opens At 1515 Hancock St.

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Church of Scientology opened their temporary, 14,400 square foot location at 1515 Hancock St. to the public on Aug. 22.

"We looked at several temporary properties around and in Boston," said executive director of the church's evening and weekend services Heather Landrey.

The church will be occupying the space on Hancock Street for at least two years as restoration gets underway for their future home at the historic Alexandra Hotel in Boston's South End which they acquired in 2008 for $4.5 million.

"In the end, we felt that Quincy's vibrant community, its parking facilities, and accessibility by train and commuter rail would best serve our parishioners while we restore our future church," said Landrey.

The Church of Scientology promotes a body of beliefs created by church founder L. Ron Hubbard in 1955. Hubbard published the best-selling book "Dianetics: The Modern Science of Mental Health," just five years prior.

"Scientology is a vast study designed to give practical solutions to everyday problems in life and to help individuals reach their full potential," said church spokesman Kevin Hall. "The church also has several programs designed to enhance society such as drug awareness, literacy, human rights, disaster relief, and many more."

In addition to their new, third-floor location, the church will be soon opening a first-floor life improvement center. "Anyone can stop by and find out more about their personality, IQ scores, and more," said Landrey. "We also plan to work with the community, as we have done in Boston for years, in order to help make the area an even safer and better place to live."

Joseph W. Koch

A funeral Mass for Joseph W. "Joe" Koch of Randolph and formerly Quincy was celebrated Monday at Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Koch died unexpectedly Aug. 20.

Husband of Laura "Lynn" (Hanby). Father of Barrie Davidian and her husband John of Rockland. Cherished Papa to Sophie and Harper. Son of Simone and the late Richard J. Koch of Quincy. Devoted brother to Linda J. Bowes and her husband Tom of Quincy, Richard J. Koch, Jr. and his wife Nancy of Brewster, Susan A. Larsen of Centerville, Debra Eaton and her husband Bill, Mayor Thomas P. Koch and his wife Christine, and Simone J. Leary and her husband Ed, all of Quincy. Favorite uncle to many nieces and nephews.

Mr. Koch graduated from North Quincy High School, Class of 1974. Upon graduation, he entered the U.S. Army, serving from 1974-1976, honorably discharged at the rank of E-4. During his service to our country, Mr. Koch completed training in the U.S. Army Heavy Equipment Operating School and would eventually become a member of Operating Engineers Local #4 upon discharge.

He took the Civil Service exam and was hired by the city of Quincy in 1977 with the Park Department where he would spend most of his career as a heavy equipment operator, foreman, and ISA-certified arborist. He most recently was a general foreman at the Department of Public Works where he supervised the operation and managing of the rear yard waste, recycling, and composting program and oversaw the city's snow and ice removal efforts.

JOSEPH W. KOCH

Perhaps his greatest asset was his ability to operate a host of heavy equipment and machinery with flawless precision and an unrivaled level of professionalism. Mr. Koch was instrumental and served as the main equipment operator in countless park improvement and renovation projects including Adams Field, Veterans' Memorial Stadium, Mitchell/McCoy Field, Adams Walk in Merrymount Park, the Faxon Field track facility and Cavanagh Stadium. His present projects included the renovation of O'Neil Field behind Atlantic Middle School and the new greenspace on Coddington Street situated between Quincy High School and the Coddington Building.

He was proudest of a quiet legacy, in the spirit of his father – without fanfare, visible throughout the city that will continue to benefit immeasurable enjoyers of the city's park system and prided himself on his strong, dedicated work ethic.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment was at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Koch Club Scholarship Fund, c/o City of Quincy Treasurer, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169.

God saw you getting tired
And a cure was not to be,
So He put His arms around you

JOSEPH W. KOCH enlisted in the U.S. Army at the age of 17 shortly after graduating from North Quincy High School in 1974. It was during his service years that Joe learned how to operate heavy equipment including excavators - an expertise that served the city well during his 35 years with the Park and Public Works Departments (photo right).

Joe Koch: A Good Man

just a kid.

"He could do five routes to somebody else's one route. He came up with the idea to use brine to treat icy roads. He ran the snow-fighting efforts around-the-clock. He was old-school. When the city needed it, he was there. Joe was there even on Christmas morning, plowing.

"Your work comes first," he used to say. "The city depends on you."

At the DPW yard on Sea Street, it was Joe Koch who helped remedy environmental concerns at the site.

Joe was asked to help public works and he switched departments. He completely reorganized the yard and the materials, doing the recycling effort, saving the city all kinds of money while making the city conform to all the environmental issues that were problematic.

He was also a fun-loving guy who was loyal to his family.

"He loved to skate, play softball, weightlifting. Any time any family member needed anything – if they were putting in a new walkway in –he was there. If they were moving, he was there."

In 1989 when Tom and his bride-to-be, Christine Keenan, were planning a spring wedding in 1990, a house on Newbury Avenue a few doors down from where the Koch family grew up went up for sale.

"That's the house I always wanted. But money was tight because we were planning a wedding and a honeymoon. Joe came to me with a substantial amount of money and said, 'I want you to buy that house. Here's your down payment. You pay me when you can.'

"He never asked me. He never pushed me. We paid him back but if I had never paid him back it wouldn't have mattered to him. He was that type – money meant nothing to him.

"There are a million of those stories with family members."

Joe took a particular shine with his nieces and nephews, too. "He always showed an interest in what they were doing. Some of my nephews and my son Tom are into weightlifting and he was inspiration to them."

Joe Koch was laid to rest Monday in the city he loved.

Those who knew him best will remember a loving soul who was tough as nails who feared nothing but beneath that gruff exterior lay a heart of gold.

"He'd do anything for anybody," Tom said. "I've heard dozens of stories of how quietly he helped people who were in a pinch financially. He'd give me an envelope and say 'get this to so and so and don't tell them it's from me.'

"He was always helping people who were down on their luck or supporting some charitable cause.

"That's just the way he was."

Joe Koch.

A good man who did a lot of good.

'Puppy Doe' Bill Signed Into Law

throughout Massachusetts to address the issue on a more local level.

"The essential need for this type of law stems from the horrid, unsanitary conditions that encompass the puppy and kitten mills and their commercial breeding methods that churn out puppies and kittens for resale through pet shops," he said.

He went on add that large sums of money are being spent on unknowingly sick animals bought at pet stores, requiring costly veterinarian visits and care. "This vicious cycle sometimes causes consumers to neglect and desert these animals. Animal shelters then become congested with these puppies and kittens. This is a vicious cycle that needs to be fixed in our state."

"The fact of the matter is that the current laws in Massachusetts are not tough enough to protect our animals," he said. "Animal abuse is inhumane and it is an issue that needs to be taken more seriously."

Ayers said he hopes the passage of the bill will send a clear message.

"Animal abuse will not be tolerated and...violators will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law."

Cut-A-Thon Benefits Family Volunteering In South Africa

YWAM will provide housing opportunities for the family as well as connections to local doctors for their daughter, 7-year-old Phoebe, who has Down Syndrome, autism, and type 1 diabetes.

The Paradas have three other children: Ana, 17; Isaac, 14 and 10-year-old Margaret. Schooling opportunities have also been made available to the family through YWAM.

"They are excited!" said Joanna. "We have been talking about this trip for five years now, so they are really looking forward to finally getting there. Of course, they will miss all their friends here though. It helps that we did similar missions work in Paraguay for four years when they were little, so they have very happy memories from that."

That happiness ultimately led to disappointment as the family was forced to move back to the United States due to a lack of funding. They had planned to stay in Paraguay, where youngest daughter Phoebe was born, permanently.

"We wanted to do missions work so our church sent us to Paraguay and paid for everything and a couple of years into our time there, they changed their policies and cut our funding so we had to come back," she said.

After returning home, Phoebe was diagnosed with autism, which made traveling overseas even more difficult and caused the Paradas to rethink their life plans. "This is the best place to receive all therapies," said Joanna. "Some people get to live out their dreams and some people don't. This is our reality."

After several years of successful treatments for Phoebe, Joanna and Alberto felt that living outside of the United States for an extended period of time was becoming a more plausible idea.

Because their church could not support them financially, the family opted to fundraise to realize their vision. Initially, Joanna was intimidated by the thought. "At first I was like wow, that's intense. I mean, who is going to give to us?" she said.

As time went on, the family presented their mission to churches throughout the area to gain more support.

It was during one of these presentations where Joanna asked if anybody had experience with special needs children. She soon received a message from a man who also had a young child with Down Syndrome and has since been corresponding with his wife about therapies and treatment options. That connection eased some of her fears and solidified her decision to go to South Africa.

STYLIST MOLLY FOLLETT cuts 10-year-old Emma Crosby's hair during Allure Spa's cut-a-thon event Sunday to benefit the Parada family of Quincy. Some 40 clients came to get their hair done or for mini facials from one of Allure's licensed aestheticians. The event raised $1,000 for the Paradas and will help in covering some of their travel and living expenses during their mission in South Africa.

ALLURE SPA opened its doors last Sunday for a cut-a-thon event to benefit the Parada family of Quincy who will be leaving for a mission to South Africa on Sept. 7. The Paradas are being sent out by the Park Street Church in Boston. From left: aesthetician Kathleen Kelly, aesthetician Keleigh Coyle, licensed stylist and aesthetician Molly Follett, Alberto Parada, Ana Parada, Allure Spa owner Sandra Ishmael, Joanna Parada, and Margaret Parada.

The family announced their plans a year ago. Joanna said she received support from her congregation almost immediately. "We just started seeing the percentages going up bit by bit," she said.

So far, they have raised 87 percent of the $70,000 needed to move and live overseas.

Leaving the U.S. is not easy, said Alberto who worked in construction until recently. He's sold one of the family's cars and is preparing to rent out his home. He has no plans to sell it. "It's good to have something for the kids someday," he said. "Sometimes you go on these trips and you don't want to come back but after time it's good to have a place to call home."

He will spend his first year overseas taking Bible and counseling classes.

Daughter Ana said she's ready for the move but will need some time to adjust. "It's going to be very hard because I have to leave all of my friends," she said.

Getting her hair cut and styled by Molly Follett, who is one of the trustees of Friends of the World Charitable Trust, was 10-year-old Emma Crosby. Her grandmother, Kathy Lydon, brought her to Allure for her back-to-school cut specifically to help the Paradas.

Lydon is a frequent customer at Allure and changed the date of her granddaughter's appointment to make it to the event. "We thought it was a good cause," she said. "I think it's wonderful."

Joanna has always felt connected to South Africa. It was during her trips there to visit her grandparents as a child that she took notice of the tensions still present due to apartheid. "I've wanted to go for 20 years," she said. "In a country torn apart from racial injustices... there is much need for a voice of hope and reconciliation."

Even though the Paradas haven't yet reached their fundraising goal, they're optimistic that eventually the donations will come in.

"We shared our vision," said Alberto. "God has been paving the way and confirming step by step...it's been wonderful."

24% Turnout Seen Here For State Primary

Contested Races Tuesday For Gubernatorial Nominations, Other Statewide Offices

By SCOTT JACKSON

A turnout of 24 percent of Quincy's electorate – or 14,704 of the city's 61,285 registered voters – is expected here next Tuesday, Sept. 9, as voters across the Bay State chose their party's nominee for several statewide offices.

Tuesday's election is headlined by contested races in both the Democratic and Republican primaries for governor. The candidates are vying to replace Gov. Deval Patrick, a Milton Democrat who opted not to seek a third term in office.

Gutro, Croall Seek Update On Housing Authority

By SCOTT JACKSON

Two councillors introduced a resolution at Tuesday night's meeting seeking an update on the Quincy Housing Authority in the wake of state and federal reports that identified widespread maintence and financial problems at the agency.

The resolution – introduced by Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, chairman of the council's senior citizens committee, and Councillor Doug Gutro – asks representatives of the state's Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) to come before the council. A DHCD report issued this spring found numerous maintenance problems in QHA properties; the state agency eventually took over maintenance operations for the housing authority after the report's release.

In a phone interview prior to Tuesday's meeting, which occurred after The Sun went to press, Gutro said he wants DHCD representatives to explain why the state decided to take over maintence operations and what steps DHCD feels the housing authority needs to take moving forward.

"One [piece] is to hear from the state relative to the nature of the report relative to the unsafe, unsanitary conditions and the impetus to take over maintenance, actions they've taken to date, and the nature and

More than 3,000 names were added to Quincy's voter rolls over the past calendar year, bringing the new total of registered voters in the city to 61,285.

Nearly half of the registered voters in the city – 30,381 – are unenrolled. Those voters are eligible to cast ballots in either the Democratic or Republican primary Tuesday. Democrats continue to outnumber Republicans in Quincy, 24,956 to 5,581. Some 369 voters are enrolled in 15 other parties, including 187 registered Libertarians and 96 residents enrolled in the Green Rainbow Party.

At the end of August 2013, 58,008 people were registered to vote in Quincy. At the time, 28,589 voters were unenrolled and there were 23,782 Democrats and 5,285 Republicans in the city. Some 352 residents were enrolled in third parties then.

Ward 4 continues to have the most registered voters of the city's six wards, with a total of 11,079 registered to vote in Tuesday's primary. Ward 1 has the second most registered voters with 10,648, followed by Ward 6 with 10,148, Ward 5 with 9,981, Ward 2 with 9,809, and Ward 3 with 9,620.

Window, Door Replacements At Three Schools Delayed

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Window and door replacements at North Quincy High School, Wollaston Elementary School, and the Merrymount Elementary School will most likely be delayed until the spring, according to Walter MacDonald of the Building Department, who said architects assigned to Quincy Public Schools miscalculated project cost estimates by roughly $700,000.

"We went out to bid in April and our estimates came in higher than our architect had estimated," MacDonald told School Committee members at a Facilities and Security Subcommittee meeting Aug. 27. He said he had initially hoped to have windows produced and delivered by Sept. 1.

"Unfortunately, our architect-engineer who was provided to us by [The Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA)] underestimated so we had to suffer with it on our end," MacDonald said.

North Quincy High School ended up over budget by $430,000, Wollaston Elementary by $87,200, and Merrymount Elementary by $185,000.

The district's initial projected budget was $5,338,930.

All three schools were accepted into the Accelerated Repair Program offered by the MSBA, which provides funds to schools for the repair or replacement of roofs, windows, and boilers resulting in operational savings, on June 5, 2013. Project funding was agreed upon Jan. 29, 2014.

The overages were not eligible for the MSBA's reimbursement rate of 69.74 percent so cost-cutting measure had to be implemented through value engineering, said MacDonald.

• Attorney General Martha Coakley, 61, of Medford. Coakley was elected attorney general in 2006 and re-elected to that position again in 2010. During her time as attorney general, she unsuccessfully ran for U.S. Senate in a 2010 special election, losing to Republican Scott Brown.

Prior to serving as the state's attorney general, she was Middlesex County's district attorney for eight years. Coakley worked as a prosecutor in Middlesex County for a decade before being elected district attorney; she also spent two years with the U.S. Justice Department's Boston Organized Crime Strike Force as a special attorney. Coakley attended Williams College and Boston University Law School.

• Treasurer Steven Grossman, 68, of Newton. Grossman was elected treasurer in 2010. He previously served as the chairman of the Democratic National Committee from January 1997 to January 1999. He was head of the Bay State's Democratic Party from 1991-93. Additionally, Grossman served as chairman of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee from 1992 to 1997.

This is Grossman's second bid for governor; he ran in 2002 but withdrew before the primary. A graduate of Princeton and the Harvard Business School, Grossman previously served as CEO of Grossman Marketing, a firm founded by his grandfather.

The two Republicans competing in Tuesday's primary are:

• Charlie Baker, 57, of Swampscott. Baker, who ran against Patrick in 2010, is the state's former secretary of administration and finance. He served in that capacity from 1994-98 under Govs. Bill Weld and Paul Cellucci. Previously, he worked as Weld's secretary of health and human services from 1992-94.

In 1998, Baker became CEO of Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates. Three Democrats are vying to serve as lieutenant governor, a position that has remained vacant since the resignation of Tim Murray in June 2013. They are:

• Leland Cheung of Cambridge. Cheung is a member of the Cambridge City Council, a position he was first elected to in 2009. He is a member of the board of the National League of Cities and the board of the National Organization of Democratic Officials. Candlelight Vigil To Raise Substance Abuse Awareness

Sept. 17 From 7 To 9 P.M. On Crane Library Lawn

The City of Quincy will host a candlelight vigil Wednesday, Sept. 17 to bring attention to the issue of substance abuse.

The vigil will take place on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Prior to the program - from 6:30 to 7 p.m. - a list of names will be gathered of those who have died.

Candles will be provided and lit when the names are read aloud during the program.

Participants are also encouraged to bring a photo of their loved ones.

The public is welcome to join in a remembrance of those lost to drug overdose and give hope to others still struggling with addiction.

"Let us stand together as a community to bring a face to these individuals, support each other, and make our voices heard to fight this devastating problem," said Arlene Goldstein of Impact Quincy-Bay State Community Services.

There will be no seating on site during the vigil but participants are invited to bring a lawn chair.

Opioid addiction is a serious medical problem; the brain "rewires" because of the addiction. Statistics show that more people die of drug poisonings than car accidents in Massachusetts.

The City of Quincy and the surrounding communities of Weymouth, Braintree and Randolph are experiencing this issue along with many other towns along the South Shore. Since 2010, Quincy Police, when first to the scene, have reversed overdose in 292 individuals with Naloxone (Narcan).

Other statistics show, in FY 2011, there were 102,789 admissions of substance abuse treatment services in Massachusetts. Of that number, 2,233 were under 18 years of age.

"The reason for the vigil is to bring light, education, and truth to the issue," Goldstein said.

Laforest Files Resolutions On Blight, Flood Maps

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest filed two resolutions Tuesday night – one seeking an update on Quincy's appeal of new federal flood plain maps and the other an update on blighted properties in the city.

The new flood plain maps, drafted by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), went into effect June 9. The new maps added 1,400 into floodplains and remapped another 2,700 properties into higher risk zones. Property owners with federally backed mortgages are required to purchase flood insurance if their building is in a flood plain.

The city submitted its appeal of the new maps on June 10, and FEMA had 90 days to approve the appeal, deny it, or seek additional information. Prior to Tuesday's meeting, Laforest said FEMA sought additional information from the city. She expects Woodward & Curran Senior Vice President Joseph D. Shea to provide an update on the appeal within the coming weeks.

"Woodward & Curran does have an update for the council," Laforest told The Sun. "We'll be scheduling it for late September."

The flood map resolution was co-sponsored by Councillors Kevin Coughlin, Brian Palmucci, and Doug Gutro.

The second resolution Laforest filed, also co-sponsored by Coughlin, seeks an update on the status of blighted and abandoned properties in Quincy.

In 2007, the council

length of their role moving forward," Gutro said.

"As well as what DHCD sees the housing authority needs to do moving forward to have a strong maintenance program."

The resolution also asks Jim Lydon, the housing authority's executive director, to brief the council on the agency's response to an audit by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which found QHA could not account for nearly $500,000 in reimbursements.

"The second piece was to get an update on the housing authority's financial position," Gutro said. "We're hoping the executive director of the housing authority could come before the senior citizens committee."

Croall said his intent in introducing the resolution was to learn about what will happen with agency in the future.

"First off, I'm not interested in reliving the past," he explained. "I'm interested in learning about the new standard of living in public housing and the vision going forward."

While the Quincy Housing Authority operates independent of the city, Gutro said the council should play a role in ensuring the safety and quality of life of the residents living in the 1,500 units the agency manages.

"You've got 1,500 residents who want assurances moving forward that their voice will be heard and there will be a system in place for their voices to be heard," he explained. "We have to help ensure the Housing Authority will be in a position in the future to maintain properties they have."

Croall helped organized a series of meetings for residents at each Quincy Housing Authority property over the summer following the release of the DHCD report. Gutro attended two of those meetings – ones at Pagnano Towers in Quincy Point and O'Brien Towers in Germantown. He credited Croall for providing QHA tenants a chance to publicly voice their concerns.

"There was a chorus of concerns. People were united in concern over the conditions and a need for transparency," Gutro said.

"I really felt like Councillor Croall gave those folks a chance to be heard in an atmosphere without fear of retribution...the forum he advocated for gave them a public forum to air their grievances."

ALWAYS IN STYLE

Have you noticed that diamonds never seem to go out of style? Instead, designers of fine jewelry come up with new ways to wear diamonds, or manufacturers may develop new cuts or shapes, but the core ingredient always stays the same. Most recently, jewelry designers have been using the sparkling gemstone to celebrate the beauty of nature. Diamond jewelry with floral motifs ranging from discrete buds to open blooms is currently very much in fashion. Yellow diamond roses seem to be particularly popular in the jewelry garden, accompanied by bejeweled insects, glittery butterfly wings, and lucky four-leaf clovers. The emphasis is on whimsical nature-inspired designs that celebrate the gemstone that is always in style.

During the 17th century, craftsmen made important technical improvements in gemstone cutting, which enhanced the popularity of gemstone jewelry. With beautiful floral art at its peak during that period, flower designing influenced and became a dominant theme for fine jewelry. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches and earrings. Recevies Scouting's Highest Honor For Helping To Restore HN Church Fellowship Hall

Jared Lyons Awarded Eagle Scout

By SCOTT JACKSON

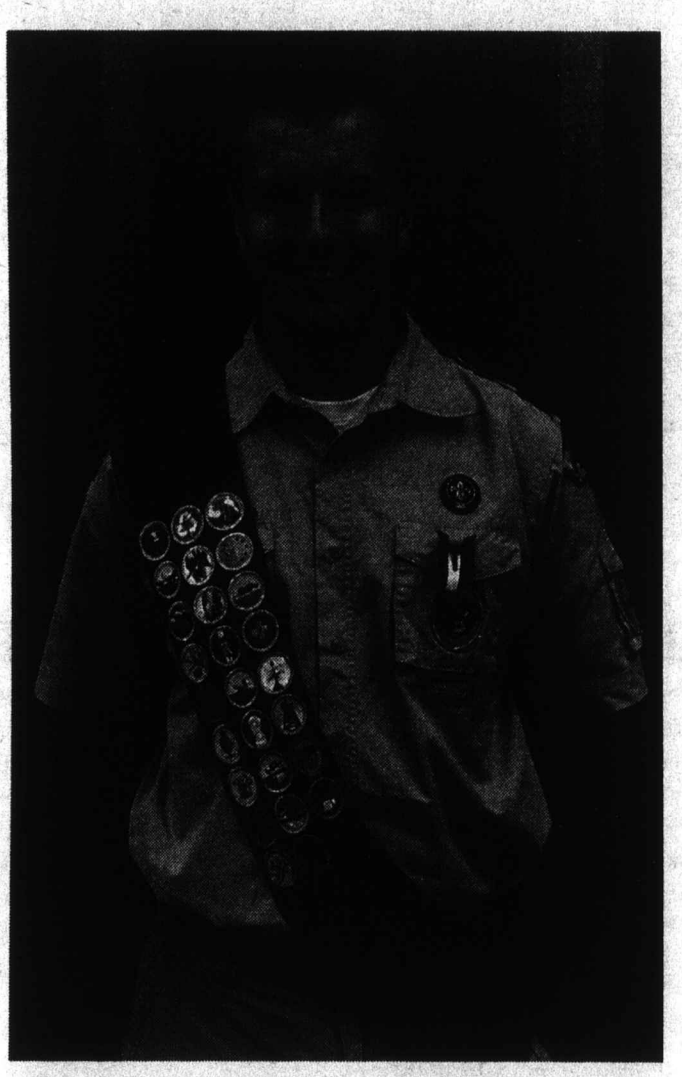
Jared Lyons recently received scouting's highest honor for helping restore the fellowship hall at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

A member of Troop 6 – one of the many community groups that uses the church's hall, which is formally known as the M. Alicia Corea Fellowship Hall in honor of HNCC's late, longtime pastor – Lyons oversaw the renovation effort as part of his Eagle Scout project.

"It had fallen into a state of disrepair and I felt like it was a responsibility, since it was dedicated, that I had to renovate it," he explained recently. "Plus, it's been a part of my life throughout my entire life growing up in Houghs Neck. So I decided to renovate it – paint the whole big hall."

Though he was presented the award this spring, Lyons completed the project over February break in 2013, while he was a senior at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree. Renovating the church hall was intensive project, which Lyons' fellow scouts and scoutmasters assisted with, and involved much planning and prep work.

"It was intensive planning wise because I had to get measurements for every part of the building to know how much paint I was going to need so I wouldn't go over. Then I needed to fundraise to get all of the materials and to know how much of each material I would need to get the project done," Lyons said.



JARED LYONS, a member of Troop 6, recently received scouting's highest honor - Eagle Scout - for helping to restore Fellowship Hall at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

"Then there were actually a lot of surprises that happened. I thought I was just going to go in and just paint. I actually needed caulk to get the holes filled in. I needed to fix a few wiring issues. I had to fix a few plumbing and heating issues as well. It ended up being really intense."

Lyons now attends Stonehill College in Easton, where he will be a sophomore in the fall. Lyons is a math major and minors in secondary education; he aspires to teach math after graduation.

"I always loved math and I always loved teaching and helping people," he explained. "Boy Scouts was a way to help me with the leadership and teaching people."

Lyons joined the Boy Scouts program while in elementary school at Atherton Hough. He was initially hesitant to join because he didn't think he would enjoy the program.

"Every year they had a few representatives from the troop come across the street and just explain what the Boy Scout program was," Lyons said. "For the first few years – kindergarten and first grade – I was like 'I wouldn't be involved in that. I wouldn't like it.'

"But then one year I was like, 'why not? I'll just go down to the meeting and try it.' "

Soon after he joined the organization, Lyons started to enjoy it because of the sense of community and the friendship it gave him. He enjoyed it even more as he progressed through the ranks from Cub Scouts to Boy Scouts.

"It just kind of took off," Lyons said. "We did all this really high adventure stuff and brought me out of my comfort zone. I don't like to stay in my comfort zone so anything that pushes me is something I absolutely love. Boy Scouts was a way for me to do that."

In college Lyons continues to volunteer, serving as a peer mentor.

"It's basically a group of 70 students who go in and orientate the new freshmen in," he explained. "Along with that, during the fall orientation program we have a day of service we go out into the community and help the people of Brockton."

THIS 1913 postcard is a view of Moore's Summer Ball Room near the end of Sea Street in Hough's Neck. Peterson's Grocery Store was on the left and the roof of the old hotel on what is now Fensmere Street can be seen in the background, to the left of the ballroom sign. Cottages on Great Hill can be seen on the right. The soft drink company Moxie helped businesses across America pay for their signs as long as the name Moxie was a prominent part of it. This large ballroom was a popular summer tourist attraction for many years; it later became known as Taylor's Ballroom and Bowling Alley and then it became DiMarzio's Roller Skating Rink. Today there are residential condominiums along here. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

(A copy of the following letter to Quiincy Asian residents and businesses was submitted for publication):

Dear Quincy Asian Residents and businesses;

To those who are involved in making their neighborhoods better, we are grateful for, and applaud and appreciate your efforts.

To those who aren't, please get involved and help out. If you want your neighborhoods to be or continue to be safe; if you want your schools to be or continue to be great places to learn; if you want your streets to be or continue to be clean, PARTICIPATE. If you want something done, you must raise your voice and let it be heard. DON"T depend on others to do everything for you. Safe neighborhoods, great schools, clean streets, etc. are the results of people participation and hard work.

We Asians have been stereotyped as being quiet, docile, selfish, only concerned about ourselves, and to a high degree, that's true. If you want to start changing this image....participate. Join a neighborhood committee. Get involved with your children's school. Read the local newspapers to find out what's going on in the city. Talk with your neighbors.

Donate money to local charities, like the Salvation Army - Quincy Chapter, DOVE (domestic violence prevention), Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., the local food pantries, etc." Vote.

Thank you.

87 Apply For 11 Quincy College Trustee Openings

Eighty-seven candidates have applied for the 11 positions on the new Quincy College Board of Trustees.

A five-man appointing council was scheduled to select the 11 board members. The board must be in place by Sept. 1.

Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a 13-member board of trustees as the new governing authority of the college was approved by the City Council, State Legislature and Governor William Weld earlier this year.

KINNEY TO RETURN AS PARKING MANAGER, ANNUAL PROFIT TO THE CITY OF $185,000 SEEN

Barring unforeseen complications, Kinney Systems, Inc. of Boston will become the new manager of Quincy's parking system, a deal that could mean an estimated $185,000 annual profit for the city.

City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon said that the city's parking operations recommendation committee voted to negotiate with Kinney, one of the three firms vying for the parking contract. The committee included Gillon, Richard Meade, David Colton and Bernice Mader.

Kinney held the five-year contract before Metropolitan Parking Systems, Inc. of Quincy, one of the two other companies that bid on the contract. The other was Fitz-Ann Auto Parts, Inc. of Boston.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Public Tours Saturday

Restored John Hancock Chariot On Display For First Time

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours on Saturday, Sept. 6, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. for Discover Quincy Days.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 10 a.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 328 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy.

During the pre-Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

John Hancock's revolutionary war era Chariot has recently undergone extensive conservation and restoration. Thanks to a $31,400 grant from the Quincy Community Preservation Committee, the Chariot has been transformed from a dull black sleigh or booby hut into a vibrant, elegant carriage body.

The beautiful historic Chariot will be on display for the first time this Saturday.

Quincy Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR). It will be open to the public one additional time this year on Saturday, Oct. 4.

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617-742-3190 or emailing nscda-ma@verizon.net. For more information, visit the Homestead's website: http://www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead.php

Lydia Martin Among Top Art Professors

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Wollaston resident who teaches at Boston's Suffolk University was recently ranked as one of the top 15 art professors in the region.

Lydia Martin, a drawing and painting professor at Suffolk University's New England School of Art and Design (NESAD) was named one of 15 notable art professors in Boston by the Art Career Project, an organization that helps prepare people who are interested in careers in art. The professors on the group's list instruct students in a wide variety of disciplines – including art history, film, journalism, and theater among others.

Martin, who lives in Wollaston with her husband Chris, a Boston University English professor, said she was both surprised and elated when the Art Career Project told her she made the list.

"I was very surprised. I wasn't even certain how they arrived at putting me on the list," Martin recalled in a phone interview. "But I was elated. I have been receiving many calls and emails congratulating me from students, friends, and colleagues."

LYDIA MARTIN of Wollaston was named one of the 15 Notable Art Professors in Boston by the Art Career Project. Martin teaches drawing and painting at Suffolk University. In 2013, Suffolk awarded her the Marion and Jasper Whiting Foundation Faculty Fellowship, which enabled her to study abroad in Paris.

Martin grew up in the Philadelphia area and earned a bachelor's degree in fine arts from West Chester University and a master of fine arts equivalent diploma from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. She and her husband moved to Greater Boston in 1987 when he began to work at BU.

At first Martin worked in local bakeries while also painting murals for homeowners. A designer she knew through her mural work recommended Martin look into a job opening at NESAD. The New England School of Art and Design, at the time a separate entity from Suffolk, was looking for someone who could teach painting and drawing as well as perspective. Martin had experience with the latter as she had taken architecture classes in college – several of her family members worked in the field.

Martin began working at NESAD in 1989. The school merged with Suffolk seven years later in 1996, the same year she and her husband moved to Wollaston.

"Since 1989 I've been teaching. It was just a lucky thing for me," Martin said. "It was a long road and a bumpy road, but it worked out quite nicely."

Martin continues to teach painting and drawing foundation classes, primarily to freshmen. She taught classes on perspective for 15 years, though she no longer does so.

"It's the basics of art and design," Martin said about the courses she teaches. "I enjoy it thoroughly. I enjoy teaching freshmen. They are impressionable and curious. You can mold their minds but let them go their own ways.

"I always stress they can go their own way."

Being named one of Boston's notable art professors is one of several honors Martin has received in recent years.

In 2013, she was awarded the Marion and Jasper Whiting Faculty Fellowship award, which allowed her to study abroad in Paris. While in Paris she studied the early 20th century artists who collaborated with Ballet Russes – a highly influential ballet company – and attended the centenary premiere performance of Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" ballet. From her time in Paris, Martin was able to put together projects for her students to complete during the 2013-2014 academic year.

In 2011, Suffolk's student government named Martin the Outstanding School of Art & Design Faculty of the Year.

Martin's work, which she describes as contemporary realism, has also been exhibited at various museums in New England. In 2012, a series of oil paintings inspired by the Mexican card game Loteria were exhibited at the Chabot Gallery in Providence. Four of the paintings from that series will be displayed at the Milton Museum of Art in Canton during October.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie
By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALÇO

Baked Eggplant, Cheese & Rigatoni

With the few cool days that we had recently, I made some entrees that I wouldn't ordinarily cook this time of year, but when eggplant and pasta are included in the recipe, I'm there.

This one is so easy, and can be made ahead of time and then just baked when ready to serve.

BAKED EGGPLANT & RIGATONI

1 medium sized eggplant cut into bite size pieces
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 clove of garlic (cut)
1 small onion (sliced)
3 cups tomato sauce
1/2 pound rigatoni
1/2 cup grated Romano or Parmesan Cheese
1 cup ricotta cheese
salt and pepper to taste
Basil, parsley, oregano (or any combo)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Cook the pasta according to directions-drain and set aside.

In a large skillet, heat the oil and sauté the garlic and onion, then add the eggplant. Add the tomato sauce and cook covered for about 20-25 minutes.

In a slightly greased casserole dish, stir the pasta, the grated cheese and the ricotta into the eggplant mixture topping it with some of the grated cheese. Bake for about 15-20 minutes until bubbly.

Tuscan Tuna Salad

By SUZIE

Have no time to cook? Too hot outside? Want something packed with protein and healthy vegetables that will keep you satisfied?

Well, this Tuscan Tuna Salad recipe is the answer! You can add in any other vegetable that you like, such as cucumbers or red peppers. Just make a bit more of the dressing! Enjoy!!!

TUSCAN TUNA SALAD

INGREDIENTS

2 (16-ounce) cans cannellini beans, rinsed and drained (I use EDEN brand since they have no BPA in the lining of the can and are easier to digest)
4 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 (12-ounce) can solid-pack white albacore tuna in water, drained and flaked (I like Wild Planet brand because they use low mercury tuna)
1/2 medium red onion, thinly sliced
1/4 cup chopped fresh basil
1 cup cherry tomatoes, cut in half
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon sea salt
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Directions:

Combine the beans and oil in a large bowl and mix well. Add the tuna, onions, basil, sea salt, tomatoes, lemon juice and pepper; mix well.

Ann's Hershey Chocolate Cake

By MARIE

HERSHEY CHOCOLATE CAKE

2 cups sugar
1 1/4 cups flour
3/4 cup Hershey's cocoa
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs (beaten)
1 cup milk
1/2 cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup very hot water

Mix the dry ingredients except the sugar all together. Mix the sugar, vegetable oil together. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk, vanilla and eggs. Beat for two minutes. Now add the hot water-batter will be thin.

Bake in two 9 inch pans for 35 minutes at 350 degrees. If using a large pan, bake for one hour.

Whipped Cream
1 quart of heavy cream
1/4 cup powdered sugar

Beat until fluffy and top the cake – what a treat!

'Discover Quincy' Day Saturday

Discover Quincy, the tourism agency for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, announces "Discover Quincy Days" will be held Saturday, Sept. 6 and Saturday, Oct. 4.

The special promotion features admission to an array of local historical sites for one price.

Residents and visitors to Quincy may purchase a Discover Quincy wristband for $5 that gives them admission for the day to the Adams National Historical Park which operates the birthplaces and summer White House of US Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, the Adams Crypt at the United First Parish Church, Quincy Historical Society Museum, Josiah Quincy House, and Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

"Many visitors to Quincy are familiar with the Adams story and the National Historical Park tour of the birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field," said Margaret Laforest, director of Tourism for the Quincy Chamber. "Fewer are familiar with the 'Quincy' story, one of Massachusetts' leading families, and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead and Josiah Quincy House. We wanted to bring that inclusive experience to all visitors and residents alike and make it easy and affordable for them to enjoy more of Quincy's rich history."

With the purchase of a wristband, visitors can visit one, two, three, four, or all five historic sites on Discover Quincy Days. They may use their own transportation and travel from location to location or they may take advantage of a shuttle that will depart from the Quincy Historical Society and run on a continuous loop between the sites from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In addition, participants can explore Quincy's history by walking in the footsteps of John Adams. A Walking Tour map provides a self-guided tour for visitors from the Adams Academy/Quincy Historical Society down Hancock Street. Along the way, a variety of statues and markers, such as the John Adams and Abigail Adams/John Quincy Adams statues and Granite Ball are highlighted. At the Hancock Cemetery, located across the street from the United First Parish Church, a historical interpreter will be on hand to guide visitors through the town's earliest cemetery.

Discover Quincy wristbands will be sold at all of the participating historic sites on Discover Quincy Days and in advance at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. or the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, 180 Old Colony Ave, Suite 300.

A "Discover Quincy Day" is also planned for Oct. 4.

For those unable to visit on the Discover Quincy Days, Discover Quincy offers a similar combined admission valid until Nov. 10, 2014. For $10, visitors will receive a ticket and can tour each attraction when convenient for them. Tickets can be purchased online at DiscoverQuincy.com or at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

For more information, visit DiscoverQuincy.com or call the Quincy Chamber of Commerce at (617) 471-1700.

and Tolman lost in the general election to Paul Cellucci and Jane Swift. In 2002, Tolman ran for governor, finishing fourth in a four-person Democratic primary.

John Miller of Winchester is running unopposed in the GOP primary for attorney general. Miller previously practiced construction and government contracts law for Gadsby & Hannah and later became the head of the international law practice for Patton Boggs, LLP. He is the author of several books on public infrastructure contracts and also taught at MIT, his alma mater.

Three Democrats are facing off in the primary for treasurer. They are:

• Rep. Tom Conroy of Wayland. Conroy has served in the state's House of Representatives since 2007. He is currently the chairman of the House's labor and workforce development committee and the House's appointee to Gov. Patrick's Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) Advisory Council. Conroy previously served as an aide to U.S. Sen. Gary Hart (D-CO) and later U.S. Sen. Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) before working for the U.S. State Department.

• Sen. Barry Finegold of Andover. Finegold was elected to the Senate in 2010 after serving seven terms in the House of Representatives. In 1996, one year prior to his election to the House, Finegold was elected to Andover's board of selectmen. In 2007, Finegold ran in the special election to fill the U.S. House seat vacated by Marty Meehan; Finegold finished fourth in the party primary.

• Deborah Goldberg of Brookline. Goldberg is a former member of Brookline's board of selectmen, a position she held from 1998-2004, including two terms as the board's chairwoman. She ran for lieutenant governor in 2006, losing in the party primary to Murray. Goldberg is a member of the family that founded Stop & Shop.

One Republican – Mike Heffernan – is running for treasurer. A Wellesley resident, he is a co-founder of Mobiquity, Inc., a Massachusetts-based tech company. Heffernan previously worked for several investment banks, including Citigroup.

The state's remaining two incumbent constitutional office holders – Secretary of State William Galvin and Auditor Suzanne Bump – are unopposed in the Democratic primary. Galvin will face Republican David D'Arcangelo, a Malden city councillor, in November. Republican Patricia Saint Aubin of Norfolk is challenging Bump.

November's election is also a midterm congressional election. U.S. Sen. Edward Markey (D-Malden) is unopposed in his party primary Tuesday. He will face

Squantum Man Agrees To Stop Running Home Lodging Facility

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A Squantum man has agreed to stop running a transient lodging facility out of his home following an appeal held last Thursday in front of Public Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele.

Roughly 40 Squantum residents attended the meeting in the Kennedy Center which houses the city's health department, said Director of Health Services Jay Duca. While the meeting was open to the public, those in attendance were not allowed to speak in favor of or against the bed-and-breakfast operation.

Richard Cope, who used the lodging website airbnb.com to advertise vacancies, was issued a $500 fine July 17 following his first offense. He continued to rent out rooms in his home despite increasing fines and pressure to cease operations from city officials which resulted in an additional fine of $1,000 in August.

According to Duca, Cope had had no lodgers after being slapped with his second fine.

Two building code tickets — one for $200 and one for $500 — were dismissed after Cope agreed to cease and desist. Duca said he is also considering dismissing a $300 zoning ticket that is being appealed in district court.

Running a transient lodging facility in a residential district is a use violation and failing to change occupancy is a building code violation said Duca.

According to the airbnb.com listing, which was taken down shortly after authorities were made aware of the operation, Cope was renting out rooms at $150 per night with a two night minimum stay for travelers. The listing indicated that the home could sleep six people.

August and September were almost completely booked before the listing was removed.

The hearing brought attention to the issue of permitting bed and breakfast facilities in Quincy according to Duca who said he was neither for or against the idea.

"There was good discussion about whether Quincy should allow B&Bs," he said. "[This bed and breakfast] certainly brought it to light. It should be discussed by [Mayor Thomas Koch] and the City Council."

Authorities will not visit Cope's home anytime soon since it is likely neighbors will tip off officials to any suspicious activity said Duca.

"Mr. Cope's bank account was the only beneficiary of his operation," said Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee who is opposed to having transient lodging facilities in residential neighborhoods. "It was a very selfish act."

McNamee went on that Cope's actions were "done so with a total disregard for his neighbors" who moved into their Squantum neighborhood to avoid traffic and a constant flow of unfamiliar faces.

Body Found On Avalon Beach; No Foul Play Suspected

By SCOTT JACKSON

The body of a 36-year-old man was found early Saturday morning on Avalon Beach in Quincy Point.

Investigators were called to the beach around 7:45 a.m. Saturday where the body was discovered, according to Peggy Krippendorf, a spokesman for Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey. The office of the medical examiner will perform an autopsy to determine the cause of death, but Krippendorf said Tuesday there was no foul play or anything suspicious.

Krippendorf said Tuesday the district attorney's office would not release the 36-year-old's name.

Steven W. Olson, 70

Visiting hours for Steven W. Olson, 70, of Pembroke and formerly Quincy were held Aug. 29 at Shepherd Funeral Home, Pembroke.

Mr. Olson died Aug. 23.

Born in Pasadena, Calif., he was raised in Quincy, Hingham, and Wollaston, graduating from North Quincy High School in 1962. He continued his education at Bridgewater State College, earning his bachelor's of science in 1966 and his masters of education in 1972. Mr. Olson began what would be a 43-year stay teaching mathematics at Hingham High School in 1967, following a yearlong fellowship in education at Boston College.

At the start of the new school year in 1970, Mr. Olson took the reins of the AP BC calculus program, not relinquishing them until his health demanded so in January 2010. In 1980, Mr. Olson began a fruitful relationship with the Educational Testing Service, at the annual reading where each year's AP calculus exams are corrected and graded. Over the next 30 years, he would serve in many capacities, as a reader, room leader, question leader, and assistant to the chief reader. From 1995-1997, he was also one of an extremely select few who actually wrote the questions for the AP calculus exam. Mr. Olson also taught at the college level at Bridgewater State from 1983-1988, UMass-Boston from 1986-1997, and Northeastern University from 1989-2010.

Some of his greatest educational contributions came through his work at the College Board's Summer Institutes at various locations around the country, primarily at St. Johnsbury Academy in Vermont, Hingham High School, and for the Bellevue, Wash., school district. At each of these one-week sessions he essentially taught prospective AP calculus teachers how to most effectively teach. In more than 25 years of teaching anywhere from three to eight of these around the U.S. he will have an impact on and shape how AP calculus will be taught for the next five decades and beyond.

Mr. Olson received numerous awards and accolades for his work over the course of his career, including four consecutive Presidential Awards for Excellence in Teaching Secondary Math - State Level, from 1990-1993, the Siemens Award for Excellence in Teaching AP Mathematics - one of six awardees nationally in the first offering of this award in 1998, and in 2001 he was selected as an outstanding AP calculus teacher in New England.

Loved by so many colleagues and students alike, he will be greatly missed. A devout Christian, Mr. Olson was a longtime member of First Baptist Church in Duxbury and then North River Community Church, Pembroke, each for more than 20 years.

Preceded in death by his parents, George Leonard Olson, Sr. and Miriam (Hamblin) Olson, and his son, Erik Olson. He is survived by his wife of 48 years, Jo Anne (Semino) Olson; and daughter, Kristen Olson, both of Pembroke; his sister, Drinda Olson of Quincy; his brother, George L. Olson Jr. and his wife Dang of Thailand; and his brother-in-law, Thomas J. Semino and his wife Paula of Winthrop. He also leaves behind three nieces and two nephews.

Memorial donations may be made to the Hingham High School Math Dept., for the Betterment of the AP Calculus Program, 17 Union St., Hingham, MA 02043.

George B. Cullen, 62

Funeral services and interment for George B. Cullen, 62, formerly of Quincy and Weymouth, were held in Jacksonville, Fla. by Eternity Funeral Home.

Mr. Cullen died suddenly July 19.

He attended Quincy and Weymouth schools and proudly served in the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Cullen leaves his wife of 37 years, Terri, and daughter, Kristan (fiancé Tony Harp). He was the son of the late Joseph and Elizabeth (West) Cullen; brother of Betty McLean, William and wife Leona of Quincy, Terry and wife Charlene of FL, Alice Ash and husband Richard, Pat DiLillo and husband Jerry of Weymouth, and the late Joseph and Eugene. Also survived by sister-in-law, Celina Cullen, and his may nieces, nephews and cousins.

24% Turnout Seen Here For State Primary Tuesday

Republican Brian Herr of Hopkinton in November.

U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch (D-South Boston) is unopposed in Tuesday's primary. No Republican is running for his seat.

Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill – Sen. John Keenan and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Tackey Chan, Ron Mariano and Dan Hunt – are running unopposed in Tuesday's Democratic primary. Keenan, whose district includes all of Quincy and extends to several other communities, will face Republican Les Gosule of Marina Drive, Quincy, in November. Mariano – who represents all of Ward 2 and Ward 4, Precinct 5 in Quincy as well as several precincts in Weymouth and Holbrook – is being opposed by Republican Patricia Kriegel of School Street in the general election.

Four incumbent Norfolk County officials – District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, Treasurer Joseph Connolly, and Commissioner Peter Collins – are unopposed in the Democratic primary. Only Collins will face a Republican challenger come November; Michael Soter of Bellingham is running for that seat.

Incumbent Governor's Councillor Christopher Ianella, Jr., is unopposed in both the Democratic primary and the general election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea predicted turnout of 24 percent or approximately 14,700 of Quincy's 61,285 registered voters.

In 2006 – the last time there was competitive race in the Democratic primary for governor – 15,399 of Quincy's 53,803 registered voters went to the polls, good for a turnout of 28.62 percent. In that election, 14,259 of the city's voters cast ballots in the Democratic primary and 1,140 did so in the GOP primary. Shea based his projection for Tuesday in part on the 2006 numbers, but noted the lack of competitive legislative primaries would keep the turnout down.

"The last time we had a Democratic primary we had 28 percent in 2008. There are no legislative local races this time and absentee ballots have been light," he explained.

Shea expects the turnout to rebound in November, in part because Keenan and Mariano are facing GOP challengers.

"I think it will pull together in November," he said. "There are a few local races for state representative and senate, but they're not in the primary."

Several contentious referendums will also appear on November's ballot, including one on the plan to license three casinos statewide.

Composite Primary Ballots - Pages 24-25

Polls open at 7 a.m. across Massachusetts on Tuesday and will close at 8 p.m. Absentee ballots can be cast in person until noon on Monday, Sept. 8, inside the city clerk's office at 1259 Hancock St.

Shea said the primary will cost Quincy $80,000. The state picks up the tab for printing the ballots. Other costs, such as advertising and police details, are borne by the city.

Courtesy Rides To Polls For Disabled Voters

State Rep. Bruce Ayers will be providing free transportation to the polls for the Primary Election Tuesday, Sept. 9th for disabled voters.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

To schedule a ride in a handicapped accessible wheelchair van, contact Bruce Ayers at 617-328-0102.

Residents who may be confined to a wheelchair are urged to contact Rep. Ayers to cast their vote for the Primary Election.

kill," has been eliminated from building plans. "The [original] architect really overkilled it so we've narrowed it down now on the flashing. We're just going to go with urethane," he said. "Typical waterproofing we use on windows. It's a building standard."

He described the installation of copper flashing as unnecessary, much like "wearing a belt and suspenders."

Previous plans to install heavy-duty security screens on all windows have been scaled back dramatically without sacrificing on safety.

"For the screening, we're going to use security screening on the first floor of all the buildings," he said. "But the other ones we'll use heavy duty screens which will cost much less."

Instead of fiberglass reinforced doors, plans now call for the installation of heavy duty aluminum doors and for existing door frames to be painted instead of replaced completely.

The door leading into the North Quincy High School gymnasium will have its glass replaced, however the original frame will remain and undergo a paint job. The doors leading to the gymnasium at the Wollaston Elementary School will undergo a similar treatment.

"[Mayor Thomas Koch] won't sacrifice quality," stressed MacDonald. "Quality is not going to be an issue."

Drawings based on all of the changes will be 100 percent complete by Sept. 8. The project will go online Sept. 24.

The window and door replacements will be split into three separate projects in the hopes that smaller construction firms—which tend to offer more competitive prices—will place bids which will be due Nov. 5.

Posting projects online for bidding will be staggered he said, so that companies who lose one bid can place another on a different project with a lower, more appealing price.

MacDonald could not clarify how much money value engineering would save the district but estimated that materials and construction costs would most likely not exceed the initial proposed budget.

Quincy officials adhered to MSBA protocol, Koch said at a School Committee meeting earlier this year. "We followed the process [MSBA] prescribed; it was their architect, it was their owner's rep, it was their rules."

School Solar Panels Seen Reducing Energy Costs

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The installation of solar panels on top of several of Quincy's public schools is well underway, according to Quincy Energy Manager Shelly Dein, who said she predicts the arrays will greatly cut down on energy costs over the city's 20-year contract period with solar power provider SolarCity.

"What the solar roof will do is generate electricity any day there's any kind of sunshine," she told School Committee members at a Facilities and Security Subcommittee meeting Aug. 27. "It doesn't have to be a warm day. There just has to be some sunshine. It will significantly, I think, reduce the electricity charges over the next 20 years."

Construction of the arrays is almost complete at the Wollaston Elementary School, the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, and significant progress has been made at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School.

North Quincy High School, Snug Harbor Elementary School, Lincoln-Hancock Community School, Central Middle School, Squantum Elementary School, Quincy High School, and the Bernazanni Elementary School began installing the arrays in August.

Construction will most likely begin at the F.W. Parker Elementary School, Atlantic Middle School, and Broad Meadows Middle School in early September.

The Montclair School will begin the installations between October and December. The Atherton Hough Elementary School and Point Webster Middle School will start construction in either November or December.

The Beechwood Knoll and Merrymount Elementary Schools will not begin installing the panels until some time in 2015.

Dein said the projects usually take four to five weeks to complete.

Once all of the panels are installed, they will generate roughly 1,781.360 kilowatts of energy per hour.

Under the 20-year contract, the city will pay SolarCity a 9.6 cent per hour rate for energy as opposed to its current rate which can reach 12 to 13 cents per hour.

SolarCity is placing the panels on the schools and nine of the city's municipal buildings free of charge.

"In exchange, what the city will get and what the school department will get is basically discounted electricity at a fixed price for the next 20 years," said Dein. She could not estimate the total amount in savings the city would see due to rising electricity costs and the unpredictability of future power consumption.

The panels are removable and can be disconnected from their racking system for storage if necessary.

The installation of the panels is part of a citywide initiative to reduce municipal energy consumption by 20 percent following Quincy's designation by the state as a "Green Community" in June of 2012. Through the program, Quincy is qualified for grants to finance energy efficiency and renewable energy projects. So far, the city has been awarded a grant of $370,325 to fund the installation of energy efficient LED streetlights.

The Beechwood Knoll and Merrymount schools must complete roof maintenance or replacement sometime next year before installation can begin.

"It is an old roof and it was not suitable to put the panels on because of its age," said Director of the Public Buildings Department Gary Cunniff of the Beechwood Knoll School. "However, we don't have any complaints of roof leaks so the roof is intact other than the fact that it is old."

John Hancock Chariot Restored, On Display Saturday

$31,400 Community Preservation Grant Funds 18th Century Artifact Renewal

By KRIS KALABOKAS

An 18th century chariot once owned by famed Patriot and President of the Second Continental Congress John Hancock has been restored and will be available for public viewing at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead during Discover Quincy Days on Saturday, Sept. 6 and Saturday, Oct. 4.

The 237-year-old chariot has been at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead — home to five generations of Quincys — since 1920, when the home's carriage house was built.

Restoration began in the fall of 2013 and concluded this spring.

The chariot began its journey on an unnamed British ship most likely headed for the Caribbean in 1777. With the permission of John Hancock, the captain of the ship The Civil Usage boarded the unnamed British ship and acquired the vehicle.

"[The Civil Usage captain] was given permission to have at it with British goods and British ships but to take very good care not to disabuse the captain and the prisoners," said Curator of the Quincy Homestead Mary Robinson.

The chariot, which is part of the Colonial Dames Collection, remained in Portland, Maine, through the 1800s following John Hancock's death. It stayed there until 1920 under the ownership of Mary Jane Emerson Clapp who bequeathed it to an, at the time, undetermined historical society. The executors of her estate chose The National Society of The Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, a preservation society founded in 1891.

The Colonial Dames manage the Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

"The Colonial Dames are so thrilled about this project," said Robinson, who applied for the $31,400 grant from the Quincy Community Preservation Committee which made the restoration possible.

After consulting with several firms that specialize in the restoration and preservation of historic artifacts, the Colonial Dames decided to entrust the work to Blackburn Building Conservation of Middleborough.

"We know that John Hancock and his wife Dorothy Quincy Hancock, who later became the first, First Lady of Massachusetts, both rode in this vehicle," she said.

Conservators began their work by meticulously and laboriously removing a layer of black paint covering the outside body of the chariot with cotton swabs, revealing its original tan color.

"They went through a tremendous amount of effort to explore the color scheme," said Robinson.

The paint was most likely applied in Maine in the early 1800s in an effort to cover the numerous shields on its sides. "The thought was perhaps not so much to make a statement but it might have had something to do with the shields and not wanting to look presumptuous," she said, noting that the shields were generic and decorative, and did not symbolize anything of importance to John Hancock.

Following the removal of the black paint, conservators carefully touched up the shields by hand to restore their vibrancy.

The inside of the chariot was refitted with beige broadcloth, a heavy material historically made of wool, as the original cloth had been eaten away by moths. The interior's decorative embellishments remained stable, escaping deterioration, and were carefully removed and sown back into place on the new broadcloth.

The interior seat, which was not original to the chariot, was in such poor condition that it could not be restored. It was instead completely removed and replaced.

The exterior driver's seat and footrest were not salvageable. The seat remains safely in storage.

"[The seat] is in terrible shape and it wasn't worth trying to restore," said Robinson. "And it was new, 19th century and didn't date back to the 18th century."

The chariot's leather top was replaced as were glass panes in its doors, front, and rear.

When in Maine, its wheels were removed, transforming the vehicle into a sleigh.

passed the Neighborhood Property Preservation Ordinance, which authorized the city to assess fines to property owners if their properties became blighted. The resolution introduced Tuesday seeks an update from Inspection Services Director Jay Duca on any actions being taken by the city against the owners of blighted properties.

"These properties are complete eyesores and are property values," Laforest said, noting the 2007 ordinance was targeted at properties that are chronic problems and not ones needing minor maintence, such as a new coat of paint.

"[Blight] is a bone of contention. It affects the abutters and the whole neighborhood."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
MISSING SOMETHING?
If you are missing one or more teeth and think that you can get along fine without them, keep in mind the old adage "nature abhors a vacuum." If missing teeth are not replaced with a bridge or implant, the teeth adjacent to the open space(s) will shift out of their normal positions and fill in the empty spaces on their own. Moreover, the corresponding teeth in the opposing jaw will begin to protrude, because there are no biting forces holding them down. As a result of all these unchecked movements, missing teeth can lead to chewing problems and looseness of remaining teeth. Instead, work with the dentist to develop a plan to replace missing teeth before further problems arise.
The management of missing teeth varies on a case-by-case basis. We can help you and your family experience dental excellence by trusted, caring professionals. Our approach to dentistry is comprehensive; we concentrate on the whole individual, not just teeth. Our ultimate goal is to ensure continued good health for you and your family. Let us help you make the decision that is right for those special dental needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com
P.S. While a bridge may cost less than a dental implant, implants provide greater value, have a more natural look and feel, and require no preparation of surrounding teeth.

Robinson said replacing the wheels was not an option as such an undertaking would be costly and could cause damage.

Instead, the chariot now sits atop 18-inch risers — provided by Blackburn — which bring it back to its original height.

"Now you look at it as if you would have seen it drawn by horses," she said.

It is unknown whether the chariot was drawn by two or four horses.

A bulge in the rear, used to store swords during travel, remains intact.

In the carriage house is a photo of the chariot prior to its restoration and a drawn representation of what it would have looked like in Colonial times.

Hancock owned two other chariots during his lifetime; one he commissioned and one he inherited from an uncle. They have been lost

"When you're restoring and conserving, there's kind of a fine line," said Robinson. "If you just conserved it, it would look pretty much the same as it did before."

A widely circulated story was that upon John Hancock's death on Oct. 8, 1793, his body was placed in the chariot and driven throughout Boston Common, however Robinson said that could not be conclusively proven.

"[John Hancock] liked nice stuff so I'm sure he'd be pleased to see it back in good shape," said Executive Director of the Quincy Historical Society Edward Fitzgerald, who was one of three people to lift the chariot onto its risers.

Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park Caroline Keinath said the chariot could be used as a tool to teach school children and that it is "a great connection" to the history of transportation in the 18th century.

Sheriff Opens Post-Release Center At 1120 Hancock St.

Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti announces the recent opening of a post-release center intended to prevent inmates from returning to old habits after completing their sentences in jail.

The new center is a collaboration between the Norfolk Sheriff's Office (NSO) and Bay State Community Services, and is located in Bay State's building at 1120 Hancock St., Quincy.

"This is another step in our efforts to create a smooth transition back to the community for inmates when they leave the jail," Bellotti said. "As with all our programs, our bottom-line goal is to make our communities safer by keeping offenders from reoffending."

Post-release center personnel work with ex-inmates to help them find housing, employment, health care, substance abuse centers and counseling on issues such as domestic violence and anger management.

The center's staff begins working with the inmates at the jail before their sentences end. If the inmates decide to make use of the center, an NSO staffer gives them a ride directly to Bay State Community Services upon their release from the Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham. Center staff members stay in contact with the inmates to make sure they don't slide back into their old negative ways, Bellotti said.

"The key is to keep them on the positive track that they've been moving along while inside our walls," Bellotti said. "We are especially grateful to Bay State Community Services for their participation in this project. We believe it is very important."

Linemen Key To Victory In Quincy Youth Football League

Varsity Preview - 64th Season Begins With JV, Freshman Games Saturday, Varsity Sunday

By SEAN HALPIN

Quincy Youth Football will kick off its 64th season this weekend.

Saturday morning, junior varsity and freshman teams will launch the season at 9 and 10:30 a.m. at various locations around the city.

Varsity action begins Sunday afternoon at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Milton Mustangs will host the North Quincy Apaches at 1 p.m. followed by a rematch of the 2013 title game at 2:30 p.m. between the West Quincy Elks and Quincy Point Panthers.

Later in the afternoon, the Hough Neck Manets will battle the Squantum Storm at 4 p.m.

This season, as we commemorate the 100th anniversary of World War I, Veterans' Stadium will look quite similar to Western Front of Europe in 1914, as this exceptional crop of QYFL lineman will engage in a "Battle of the Trenches" each week. Speedy running backs and strong armed quarterbacks hope to break the stalemate on the line and lead their teams to victory.

Here is a preview of each team this season:

The 2013 champion, West Quincy Elks, look to defend their title this season with a young group of talented 7th grade players. Quarterback Franco Calabro leads the Offense for the Elks which features RB Stuart Dozier, WR Franck Yhomby, TE Patrick Devoy WR Brian Goncalves and returning QYFL All-Star, RB J.J. Camara. Lineman Axel Rodriquez, Terrence Lafauret and Bryan Reilly will do the work in the trenches for Coach Justin Thorley this season.

The North Quincy Apaches lost their starting QB Ryan Kelson to an injury in the preseason. Newcomer Danny Ferrara steps in the QB role to lead the Apache offensive attack that features RB Win Tran, FB Ryan Cefalo, TE Andrew Rooney and WR Eric Hellmuth. The Apaches offensive line, nicknamed the "Wall O' Stone" will be led by Center David Olcott, OT Mark Danna, OT Tom McCormack and OG Al J. Ortiz.

On defense, the Apaches will be led by returning QYFL All-Star, SS Nate Sleiman, DE Bobby Stevenson, LB Dimitri Dimitrou and DT Thomas Le. Head Coach Ted Arnott looks to his strong group of 8th graders will help put the Apaches back on top.

Quincy School Committee member Noel DiBona will lead the Quincy Point Panthers in his 4th season as Head Coach of the program. The Panthers look to make it to their 3rd straight Championship game with help From QB Michael Lomanno, RB Nick Cedrone, RB Andy Ryan, TE Cameron MacNeil and Aiden O'Connell. Leading the way up front are Linemen Brian O'Connor, Andrew Grant, Mario Polanco, Jalen Varela, Sean Butts and Danny Rose.

The Houghs Neck Manets continue to improve under the leadership of 2nd year Head coach Michael Flavin. The Manet "Gold Rush" Line is led by returning QYFL All-Star, Center Pat Nazzaro, Kevin Ferent, Zac Carson, Genevieve Reardon, Robbie Hill and Mike Cugini. Quarterback John Early leads the Manets' offense which features RB Nate Steinberg, RB James Dutcher, WR James Keenan, WR Kendrick Peeples and TE Jake Zisk.

The Squantum Storm will feature a "thunder & lightning" attack on offense as fullback Josh Jackson will grind it between the tackles and tailbacks Andrew Airosus and Mikey Adamson will attack the edges to balance out the strong running game. Third year starter Tim Layden returns at QB and calls the offense behind an offensive line led by Anthony Gatturna, Josh Dangora, Nelson Walinjom and Michael Golden.

Leading the defense is returning QYFL All-Star CB Austin Currie, LB Jonathan Knowles, John Collins, Eamonn Mayo, Joey Sands and Michael Dyer. Head Coach Mike Kilillea's key to victory this year can be found in his experienced group of 8th graders that have been playing together since the 4th grade.

The Milton Mustangs look to bounce back from a tough 2013 campaign. Second year Head Coach Rile Rhodes looks to 7th grade QB Liam Reagan to lead the offense that features returning starter RB Smith Charles, who looks to be the fastest player in Quincy Youth Football this season. The Mustangs also return starters Will Hankard and Nick Griswold on the line. Rounding out the offense will be WR Diurmud Allen, Rile Rhodes, Chris Petrik, Stephen Joyce and Lineman Anthony Golden and Keith Savage.

The 2014 looks to be one of the most competitive years in QYFL history - there is no clear cut favorite to win the Championship this year but, every team looks to be in the hunt.

For more information on the QYFL, check them out on the web at www.QYFL.org. Many teams are still accepting new players.

Quincy Boys Soccer Returns Solid Group

By JOE REARDON

Last year the Quincy High boys soccer team was so close to clinching a bid in the tournament you just knew the team would be itching to get itself in the postseason this fall.

What was on the line was simple. The Presidents went into their final game against Bridgewater-Raynham needing a tie to qualify for the tournament. Quincy played well, but wound up on the bitter side of a 1-0 loss. The Presidents return a "good solid group" this season and are ready to play hard in the notoriously tough Patriot League. Head coach Mark Spendlove knows the roster will pick up a wealth of experience this season and expects the team to be even stronger in 2015.

"I think this year we've got a little more depth than in previous years," said Spendlove, now in his sixth season. "We're looking to close teams down quickly. We're going to be a pretty young team. The juniors will be a big part of it. It (Patriot League) is what it is.

"If we're focused and the kids work hard it's (tournament) possible. Who knows? Anything is possible. I look at it as a two year thing. The majority kids are going to be here next year too."

Quincy looks especially strong at midfield with co-captains Ciaran McDevitt and Enes Ekren on the field and is solid at center back with co-captains Aidain Smyth and Padro Caliari. The team's fifth captain, goalkeeper Robert Smith, is very sound technically and makes the big stops that will keep the Presidents in games.

Up front, look for Yuri Mascarenha to fuel Quincy's offensive attack. The talented forward joined the team four games into its schedule last year and answered the call with 10 goals the rest of the way. The Presidents most dynamic player should be finding the back of the net even more this fall with a full preseason and scrimmages under his belt. Tristan McCormick will also be expected to produce on offense when he holding down his post at midfield.

As is the case most every season, Quincy will struggle with its numbers. The Presidents simply don't have the huge numbers that the Duxburys, Hinghams and Scituates of the world put up year in and year out. Those soccer powers are able to substitute early and often, almost guaranteeing fresh legs well into the fourth quarter. The Presidents will have to find a way to slow the game down as much as possible to keep pace.

"Duxbury is a small school, but every kid plays a sport," Spendlove explained. "These teams can bring on another 10 players who are nearly as good as our best players."

Spendlove saw lots of things he liked in the Presidents' scrimmages against Mansfield and Cardinal Spellman, but there were also lapses and breakdowns that Quincy will have to reduce, or even better, eliminate altogether, against the iron of the Patriot League.

The 4-0 loss to Mansfield didn't nearly reflect how well the Presidents played. The team was coming off two hard practices and went into the game tired, but still was able to generate plenty of scoring opportunities. In their 4-3 win over Cardinal Spellman, Quincy was very inconsistent early, falling behind 3-1, before rallying for the victory.

Spendlove would rather see Quincy get its bad habits out of its system in the preseason than struggling with them in the early part of the schedule. "It's a learning process," he said. "We got some young kids and we're going to make mistakes."

The Presidents opened the varsity soccer season yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. vs. Stoughton at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Other games this week: Friday, Sept. 5 at 3:45 p.m. vs. Pembroke at the stadium and Monday, Sept. 8 at 4 p.m. vs. Plymouth North Hgh School also at the stadium.

NQ Girls Soccer In Postseason Picture

By JOE REARDON

Paul Bregoli-coached soccer teams have a knack for earning postseason berths on a regular basis and he knows how to give his teams the best chance to win when they take the field. In his 19 years as head coach at North Quincy, Bregoli's Red Raider girls have reached the promised land an impressive 14 times.

And with the talent on this season's roster, the team should be playoff-bound once again and make Veterans' Memorial Stadium the place to be this autumn if you're a fan of futbol or ever had the inclination to possibly become one.

Now in his 20th season, Bregoli returns a plethora of players who were a part of the team that lost a thrilling 2-1 overtime match to Milford in 2013 and they're not afraid or intimidated playing on a big postseason stage. The goal is to put up a strong showing in the postseason and go as deep as possible.

North Quincy has plenty of offensive weapons that netted 34 goals last fall playing a very tough Patriot League schedule and Bregoli would like to see a bigger offensive output this season against the likes of powerhouse Scituate, Pembroke, Hanover and Plymouth South.

"We have to put the ball in the back of the net because we defend pretty well," said Bregoli.

Co-captain Courtney Campo is already one of North Quincy's all-time greats and the Patriot League All-Star is the school's sixth highest scorer ever with 15 goals and 24 assists through three years and a four-goal, seven-assist campaign last season. The numbers aren't gaudy to be sure, but the speedy Campo does the little things so well her offensive output is a bonus. Look for the enormous talent to add to those numbers this year and pace the Red Raiders on offense in the process.

Ciara Forde is another of the team's co-captains and has all-time stats that are close to Campo's with 15 goals and nine assists. Forde should complement Campo well up front and force opposing defenses to keep them well marked or play the price. Midfielder/forward Marissa McGue is smart and skilled and is on her way to becoming one of the finest players to come out of North Quincy after putting up 15 goals and nine assists in two seasons on the the field. Forward Hailey Houlihan had the tally against Milford and can shoot equally hard with her left or right foot. Ali Coleman gives North Quincy another strong presence at the forward position. Kara Carchedi, Charlotte Chretian and Emily Angleheart are young, hungry and talented and very anxious to make a difference on the field.

The Red Raiders were extremely sound on defense a year ago and that should continue in 2014.

Co-captain Sydney Chang is a hot commodity on defense and talented goalkeeper Rachel O'Driscoll played very well in a 2-2 scrimmage against North Attleboro and is hoping for a healthy 2014 after missing all of last year with an ACL injury. O'Driscoll's replacement in 2013, Shannon Kennedy, was terrific in net with her nine shutouts and could help out the Red Raiders once again when she recovers from a current injury.

Molly Kate Cannon is the team's best defender and has the job of shadowing opposing teams' biggest offensive threats. Cannon is versatile as well and is a strong outside back and sweeper. "She rarely makes a mistake in the back," said Bregoli.

Julia O'Donnell gives the opposition fits with her in-your-face style of play on defense and makes the offense work for everything it gets. "She's a very tenacious defender," said Bregoli. "She's like a gnat. She won't leave you alone."

The Red Raiders visit Whitman-Hanson today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. in their season opener. North Quincy hosts Plymouth South Tuesday, Sept. 9 at 6:30 p.m.

Visit the North Quincy High School website for up-to-date scheduling information.

TAKING A STAND AGAINST HEADACHES

Poor posture can lead to tension headaches, particularly when the head juts forward or bends downward. The muscles at the back of the neck then become stressed and strained as they work to move the head into correct alignment. In time, these overworked muscles become fatigued and begin to spasm. This results in constriction of the blood vessels that supply the scalp, causing other muscles of the scalp to tighten and constrict. Additionally, the neck vertebrae become restricted in terms of both function and movement, resulting in the classic tension headache that starts at the base of the skull, rides over the head, and settles behind the eyes. Relief often comes with a combination of vertebral adjustments and muscle work.

NQ Boys Aiming For Tournament

By JOE REARDON

Rich Hanlon has seen a lot during his 35 years of coaching, but he'd be hard pressed to find a team that was more snakebitten than last year's North Quincy High boys' soccer squad.

For example, when your talented, starting goalie, Joey England, pops out his hip just 15 minutes into the first game of the season and is lost for 10 games, it's easy to see the team is in for a long and difficult autumn between the white lines. England has had zero luck the last two years after breaking his leg as a sophomore and missing the entire season.

North Quincy struggled through a tough fall and finished with two wins and a tie in the very tough Patriot League, but Hanlon, who co founded Quincy Youth Soccer in 1980 and has been at the Red Raider helm for six years, is confident his roster can open some eyes this time around.

The turnout for North Quincy soccer has been solid this year with a combined 38 players between varsity and JV and some experienced talent coming back. North Quincy will be led by senior captains Tom Henry, John Lopes and Dennis Calero and 11 seniors overall. A.K. Nguyen returns as the Red Raiders' top offensive player after a solid season last year when he scored eight goals and assisted on six others. The supporting cast is a strong one and proven tough with seniors Mike Ring, Paolo Filippi, Miquel Jaspe, Rob Hines, Quan Ho, Mussa Mussa and Mastafa Elhashash. Juniors Franco Tuda, Angelo Taho and Jake Monteiro should contribute, as should sophomores Abdel Elhashash and Stephen Cobble.

"We certainly have experience and age," said Hanlon. "We're an older team for sure and we're shooting for the tournament. It's (Patriot League) considered to be the second toughest league in the state behind the Bay State League."

Coming into camp, Hanlon was concerned that North Quincy may be a little soft on defense, but he has been pleasantly surprised by the the Red Raiders' play in their own end and is confident defense could be the team's calling card this season, especially with a healthy England in net.

Hanlon is also waiting on three of his best players to touch down in North Quincy - exchange students from Vietnam, Argentina and Brazil. He knows they've been playing in their respective country, but is concerned they'll have missed out on about 30 hours of preseason practice with the team. "It's a killer as far as double sessions go," said Hanlon. "They're missing a huge amount of practice time. It's difficult from a coaching perspective."

The big question of course is whether or not the Red Raiders can stay healthy enough to keep pressure on some tough squads that include Plymouth North and South, Whitman-Hanson, Scituate, Pembroke and Hanover. North Quincy looks to have its best bench in years, which should give Hanlon the luxury of substituting players more often and keeping his players' legs fresh.

"We'd like to have a strong bench and substitute with not much of a drop off for five to ten minutes at a time," said Hanlon.

The questions surrounding the roster will begin to be answered today (Thursday) at 5:30 p.m. when North Quincy opens its march to a possible tournament berth against Whitman-Hanson at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The Red Raiders travel to Plymouth South Tuesday, Sept. 9 for a 4 p.m. game.

Visit the North Quincy High School website for up-to-date scheduling information.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

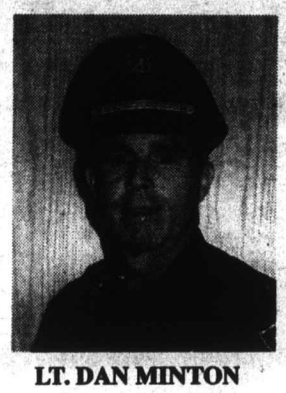
On Tuesday, August 26, 2014, at approximately 12; 15 A.M., Officers Patrick Folan and Matt Hockney were dispatched to the area of Moffat Road on a report of a male breaking into motor vehicles. The caller said the male was wearing a white T-Shirt and carrying a tool bag.

Upon arrival, Officer Folan spotted a male standing next to a parked car in the driveway of a residence on nearby Barbour Terrace. When the male saw the Officer, he immediately fled into the rear yard. Officer Folan gave chase as he radioed that the male suspect was now fleeing through yards in a southbound direction.

Officer Hockney swung around and spotted the suspect, who then reversed direction and ran in a northbound direction. At this time, additional Officers converged on the area to assist. Officer Folan listened to hear the sound of wood breaking, so he headed in that direction. Officer Hockney then reported that the suspect was attempting to climb a wooden picket fence and was breaking the pickets in the process.

Officer Folan proceeded to the rear yard of 71 Barbour Terrace and again observed the suspect flee to the opposite side of the residence. The suspect ignored the orders to stop and continued over a fence towards Moffat Road. As more Officers arrived on scene, they were able to corner the suspect. Officer Ken Wood stopped the suspect and then handcuffed and pat frisked him. There was a large amount of coin currency in the suspect's pants pocket. Officer Wood then retrieved his Police Dog K-9 partner "Major" to search the area for possible evidence.

Officer Wood discovered a tool bag in a rear yard where the suspect was observed fleeing. There were also earphones for a vehicle entertainment system. Inside the tool bag were tools and a keyless motor vehicle fob which Officer Wood activated. The motor vehicle where the suspect was first observed responded to the activation of the fob. Officer Wood also discovered a motor vehicle key which had markings identifying it to a Ford F 150 type vehicle. The vehicle was parked in the driveway on Barbour Terrace. Officer Folan examined the vehicle and found the glove compartment in the open position and items were thrown on the seats and the floor of the vehicle. The owner was contacted and he confirmed that the fob device and the motor vehicle key was his property. He said that the tool bag was not his. Officers noted that a wooden fence had been damaged (the sound the Officers heard) and the owner was notified. The suspect was transported to Police Headquarters by Officer Jay Grazioso.



LT. DAN MINTON

Quincy Police Communications then received a call from a citizen on nearby Calvin Road who reported that his vehicle was broken into. He said that he heard noises in his backyard and thought it was an animal. With all the Police activity occurring, he went out to his driveway and discovered that his vehicle was broken into. He reported that he had a small tool bag in the cab of his truck which was now missing. His also noticed that his glove compartment was open and the contents removed. This victim was shown the tool bag which he confirmed as his. There was a set of keys that did not belong to him. Two additional vehicles in the area were discovered by Officers to have been entered.

A search of the suspect at the station showed that he had in his possession another motor vehicle fob device and a wallet which contained the identification and other personal cards of a Taunton resident. Quincy Police Communications contacted the Taunton Police Department and inquired if this victim had reported his wallet missing or being the victim of any type of crime.

Taunton Police had no record and attempts to contact him were unsuccessful. A new report came in of a motor vehicle theft that occurred on Calvin Road during the time frame of this incident. Officer Wood soon after discovered the missing vehicle approximately one block away on the property of Broad Meadows School located on Calvin Road. The vehicle had a flat rear tire and appeared to have suffered some type of mechanical failure and was abandoned at that location. Although it was likely that the suspect was involved in the theft of the motor vehicle, there was insufficient evidence at the time to charge him. The suspect, a 24 year old Dorchester resident, was charged with, "Willful/Malicious Destruction of Personal Property and Four (4) counts of Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle in the Night Time. Nice Work!

What To Do When Squirrels Set Up Residence In Attic

This Is A Hammer

By SAMANTHA MAZZOTTA

Q: While putting some stuff in the attic, I heard some scratching and squeaking sounds. I know we don't have mice in the house, but I couldn't see any nests or fur around the attic. Sitting outside the next day though, I saw a squirrel climb under the eaves and disappear. Do you think I have a squirrel infestation? How do I get rid of them? -- Wigged Out in Washington

A: You may very well have a squirrel infestation. Like other rodents, squirrels can damage insulation and electrical wiring, so getting rid of them is a priority.

Take a closer look at your home's eaves and soffits to find out all the points of entry. It's likely that some small damage occurred underneath the eaves, and the squirrels exploited it. They will still be using this new "front door" they created.

Head back into the attic and hunt for nests or other signs of squirrels. Nests often are built using insulation -- sometimes in the insulation -- along the outer edges of the attic. Also, locate the entry point and other points of entry and mark them with chalk or tape.

Block up all entry points except one.

From this point, you have a choice to make: Do you want to trap and release the squirrels, or do you want to kill them? If it's the latter, you can place poison bait for rodents (including squirrels) near entry points and nests, or use kill traps.

If that's not your thing, purchase a live trap with a one-way door. Set it in the attic at the one remaining entry point. Do this at midday, when the squirrels are more likely to be out looking for food. If you're not sure that they're outside, set a live trap near the nesting spot, with a little bait inside (like peanut butter). Once trapped, take the squirrel(s) to a new area, away from other houses but not too far from their original roaming area.

Once done, block the remaining entry point and then repair all damaged areas. Additionally, have an electrician go over the attic wiring to make sure it hasn't been damaged.

HOME TIP: Don't block attic vents to prevent squirrel infestation; instead, install a sturdy mesh cover to keep rodents out while allowing crucial airflow in.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be careful not to allow the backers of a new financial "deal" to pull the wool over the Lamb's eyes. It could hold fewer plusses and more negatives than you were first led to believe.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good idea to finish all incomplete tasks so that you can devote your attention to next week's projects. The weekend could hold surprises for romantic Fernandas and Ferdinands.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A workplace suggestion you made a while ago that you might have forgotten could come back with a request to turn it from idea to reality. Your social life picks up considerably this weekend.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Someone from the past could return with an intriguing opportunity for a future project. Check into it, by all means. But don't neglect your current responsibilities in the meantime.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Keeping your claws sheathed and using good humor instead to counter someone who's bad-mouthing the Big Cat isn't easy. But it's the best way to avoid more problems down the line.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A workplace situation could improve if you're less critical and more supportive of those who are, after all, trying to do their best. Let them know you're there to help when necessary.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new job offer might not carry all the benefits you're seeking. Make sure you know what you're entitled to, what is off the table and what is negotiable before you make a decision.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A social obligation you would rather get out of could hold some surprisingly positive aspects. Why not go and see for yourself? A family member makes a curious request.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Before tackling that new project awaiting you at home or on the job, take time out for some much-deserved pampering to help lift your spirits and restore your energy levels.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your social calendar begins to fill up more quickly than you expected. And that's great. You deserve to enjoy some good fun after so much time spent on serious matters.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A domestic situation continues to improve, thanks to all the tender, loving concern you've shown. A colleague makes a questionable move that you might want to check out sooner rather than later.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A sudden turn in a romantic relationship calls for both a rational and passionate response. Keep the love level high, but also find out why the problem arose in the first place.
BORN THIS WEEK: You often set high standards for others. But to your credit, you set the same expectations for yourself.

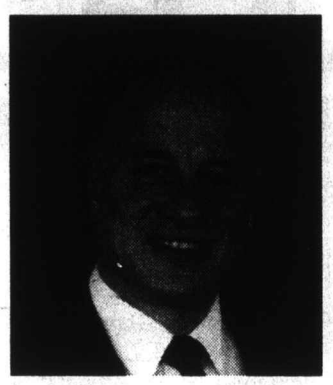
The Board of Directors of Manet Community Health Center has named experienced health care leader John J. Holiver as its new Chief Executive Officer.

Holiver, who will be the fifth Chief Executive Officer in Manet's 35-year history, assumes the role at a time when Manet has grown to six practice locations in Quincy, Hull and Taunton, expanded and upgraded facilities, earned Level 3 Recognition as a Patient Centered Medical Home, and offers additional services including behavioral health, Affordable Care Act navigation, vision care, pharmacy services, geriatric programs, and innovative health and wellness offerings.

"This is an exceptional day for Manet, for our patients, and for the communities we serve," said Manet Board President Hank Rittal. "The Manet Board could not be more excited or encouraged to see John assume the reins, given his extraordinary and superior qualifications as a respected and tested top executive in both the healthcare and hospitality industries.



JOHN HOLIVER

"We are abundantly confident that in John we have found a chief executive officer who will help lead our organization through the next phase of significant growth and vitality," Rittal said.

Holiver brings 23 years of experience to the task, most recently as president of Norwood Hospital, a Steward Family Hospital, Norwood. "I look for the health landscape to be in constant change over the next decade and Manet will be nimble in action to continue to bring much needed services to its patients moving forward," he added.

Holiver lives locally and is a graduate of Cornell University, the College of the Holy Cross, and Xaverian Brothers High School. An active community leader and volunteer, he is a member of American College of Healthcare Executives and the Conference of Boston Teaching Hospitals.

18 Inducted Into Interfaith Social Services' Matti Lang Volunteer Hall Of Fame

Eighteen area volunteers including 12 from Quincy were recently inducted into Interfaith Social Services' Matti Lang Volunteer Hall of Fame. Over the past few years Interfaith has become a magnet for volunteering on the South Shore with local residents providing over 19,000 hours of service at the center last year.

Linden Ponds in Hingham, an Erickson Living community, hosted this year's Volunteer Appreciation Event. Over 100 volunteers turned out to enjoy a BBQ dinner donated by Linden Ponds.

Since 1947 Interfaith Social Services has served as a multiservice center for families and individuals from the South Shore. Interfaith's food pantry served over 18,000 people last year. Their volunteer-run thrift shop sorted over 8,000 bags of clothing and household goods. They outfitted low income job seekers with professional clothing and prevented homelessness for hundreds of families. All of this was accomplished because Interfaith has an army of volunteers helping to get it all done.

From answering telephones to stocking shelves, Interfaith's programs are staffed by over 100 volunteers who fulfill weekly assignments.

"We are very proud of our community based service model," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "Interfaith has been serving this region for over six decades, it would be impossible to carry out our programs without an amazing team of people. Volunteers make it happen; they are the heart and soul of our organization."

Hundreds of additional volunteers from various community groups, schools, houses of worship and local businesses also volunteer each year. Some businesses like Arbella Insurance, State Street, Signet Electrical and Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts regularly send groups of volunteers to assist within Interfaith's various programs.

The Matti Lang Volunteer Hall of Fame is named after one of Interfaith's most dedicated volunteers who gave decades of his life selflessly serving Interfaith's clients. The honor of being inducted into the Hall of Fame is bestowed upon those volunteers who have been serving within the organization regularly for at least one year.

Individuals from the following towns were honored at this year's induction ceremony:

Braintree: Chris Cho, Roe Salama and Stephanie Schwartz; Hingham: Thomas Dinneen and Ralph Palmieri. Quincy: Maureen Argento, Rita Buckmann, Susan Flaherty, Jim Grant, Corinne Kennedy, Maura McDonough, Anne McNeil, Maureen Mills, Patricia Norton, Susan Sullivan, Marcel Williams, Donna Chapman. Weymouth: Bettyanne Lang.

Anyone interested in volunteering with Interfaith Social Services are encouraged to contact volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels at 617-773-6203 ext. 28.

Granite Links 'Goes Goats'

By ALLY GRAF

Granite Links Golf Course at Quarry Hills in Quincy has enlisted four-legged friends to help eliminate poison ivy, thorns and other weeds along the course: goats.

Quint, Chief, Daisy and Dandelion are all Alpine goats from the Goatscaping Company located in Duxbury and Plymouth. They can chomp down a full acre in about four weeks.

"By going goat you can avoid putting chemicals in your land and ground water," the company says. The goats also avoid equipment from being damaged on rocky ground.

The goats are protected by an electric solar powered fence so no predators can get in, and they can't get out. Using goats reduces pesticides and protects golfers and employees from poison ivy.

MUNCH BUNCH – Goats Chief and Daisy doing what they do best - eating some vines at the Granite Links Golf Course. The two goats and two others are feeding on the poison ivy, thorns and other weeds at the Quincy golf course - an environmentally safer method of removing unwanted vegetation than using harmful pesticides.

The goat business is growing as more golf clubs, homeowners, businesses, utilities and municipalities realize that this is an easy nature friendly way to get rid of unwanted weeds. The goats get breakfast and dinner consisting of mineral-rich sweet grain and hay every day, and have a small hut they will go in during the rain.

This is definitely an eco-friendly way to get rid of unwanted vines and poison ivy. If you happen to be golfing cheer these goats on for their hard work!

Coakley, Baker Nominated

- Grossman Tops Democratic Gubernatorial Primary Here
- Voter Turnout 16 Percent
- City In Step With State In Other Contested Races

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

State Attorney General Martha Coakley – despite a distant second-place finish in Quincy in the Democratic primary for governor Tuesday – captured her party's nomination and will square off against two-time Republican gubernatorial nominee Charlie Baker Nov. 4.

Coakley finished 879 votes behind State Treasurer Steven Grossman in Quincy. Grossman – who was endorsed by a string of local public officials including Mayor Thomas Koch – finished first with 3,764 votes or 48.81 percent. Coakley polled 2,885 votes or 35.88 percent and political newcomer Donald Berwick received 1,349 votes or 16.78 percent.

In the Republican primary for governor, Baker – a former CEO of Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates - bested Mark Fisher of Shrewsbury. Baker, his party's nominee in the 2010 governor's race, received 1,399 votes in Quincy. Fisher polled 464 votes.

Quincy appeared in step with other state-wide results Tuesday in an election that drew a disappointing 16% voter turnout here. Only one of the city's 30 precincts reached 30 percent turnout. That was Ward 6 Precinct 5 in Squantum where 733 voters or 30.92 percent cast ballots. Second highest turnout occurred in Ward 1 Precinct 4 – upper Houghs Neck – with 494 voters or 25 percent turnout.

Rounding out the Democratic gubernatorial ticket will be Stephen J. Kerrigan who won his party's nomination for lieutenant gov-

City Closes On Three North Quincy Homes

Solicitor: More Agreements May Be Finalized This Week

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city has purchased three of the nine homes needed to make way for renovations at Teel Field and a new parking area for North Quincy High School. More agreements could be finalized this week.

The city closed on the first three houses Aug. 29. The property at 22 Hunt St. was purchased for $425,000, according to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. The city paid $480,000 for 38-40 Hunt St. and $450,000 for 125 Newbury Ave. According to the city assessor's online database, 22 Hunt St. has an assessed value of $276,800, 38-40 Hunt St. has an assessed value of $354,900, and 125 Newbury Ave. is assessed at $288,700.

Before purchasing the properties, the city had them appraised and also offered to pay the homeowners to have an expert review the appraisal. On Tuesday, City Solicitor Jim Timmins said the closing price for the homes was within the amount budgeted by the city based off those appraisals.

"We had appraisals done and worked off those to build a budget," he explained. "We discussed that very openly with the homeowners."

A relocation consultant appointed by the state, Timmins noted, has also been in contact with the homeowners during the process.

"They've been interviewed by a relocation consultant from the state – someone appointed by the state to review everything," Timmins said. "Everything has gone well."

The city will soon close on three more properties, according to Timmins, and two of those closings are

Smooth Start For New Online School Enrollment Procedure

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A new, online, open enrollment procedure was successfully rolled out last week on the Quincy Public Schools website for the 2015-2016 school year, according to Assistant to the Superintendent for Communications and Operations Laura Owens.

Beginning Sept. 3 at noon, parents and guardians could log on and send in requests to place their children in schools outside of their residential districts. On Wednesday alone, 139 requests were received.

"We spread the word on the [QPS] website, through social media," said Owens at last Wednesday's meeting of the School Committee, adding that the process will be done completely online from now on.

Prior to the the online launch, parents had to hand in their requests, in person, at the old headquarters of QPS in the NAGE Building on Burgin Parkway.

Last year, 100 people applied for open enrollment, some waiting in line for hours. "Hopefully, this made it a little bit less stressful," said Owens.

3 Downtown Meetings Set

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's downtown and economic growth committee will meet three times this fall to review aspects of the Quincy Center redevelopment plan.

The first meeting is slated for Monday, Sept. 29 at 6:30 p.m. Councillor Doug Gutro, the committee's chairman, said the first meeting will include an update on the city's attempt to secure up to $30 million from the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) program to finance construction of the Adams Green park.

In addition, Gutro said the Sept. 29 meeting would include a review of money paid out of an account paid for by Street-Works that went towards various consultants who advised the city on the downtown project. The committee will also address the city's plan to use $850,000 in an escrow account forfeited by Street-Works to pay a new downtown consultant, without seeking authorization from the council.

The second and third meetings – slated for Oct. 27 and Nov. 5 – will both be devoted to an audit of the $30 million district improvement financing (DIF) bond the city used to pay for various improvements in Quincy Center, including land takings for the Walter J. Hannon Parkway. Street-Works, as part of its agreement with Quincy, was to be responsible for paying back the bond. With Street-Works out of the picture, the city must now find a new way to pay it off.

Assessments Replacing School Ability Test

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public School students will no longer be taking the Otis-Lennon School Ability Test (OLSAT) which assesses abstract thinking and the reasoning ability of those in grades K-12, nor the Group Reading Assessment and Diagnostic Evaluation (GRADE) which measures the developmental skills of students PreK-12.

Instead, two national assessments will be reintroduced to the school calendar: The National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) for seniors at North Quincy High School, and the Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study (TIMSS) for seniors at Quincy High School and grade 8 students at Central Middle School.

The NAEP is scheduled for January 28, 2015. Senior students taking mathematics, reading, or science will be randomly selected to take the technology-based exam on Microsoft Surface Pro tablets.

"As a district...we are required to participate in the National Assessment of Educational Progress, which is the NAEP," said Director of Assessment and Analysis for School and Extended Day Programs Mary Fredrickson at the Sept. 3 meeting of the School Committee.

The TIMSS occurs generally every four years. Classrooms at Central Middle School will be selected at random to take mathematics and science assessments on April 17, 2015. Quincy High School will participate in the Advanced TIMSS, which will be administered to grade 12 students at random who are taking calculus, advanced physics, or both. The Advanced TIMSS is scheduled for April 15, 2015.

The NAEP tests proficiency in mathematics, reading, science, writing, civics, economics, geography, U.S. history, and the arts. In 2014, technology and engineering literacy were added. The NAEP is administered nationally.

The NAEP does not provide student-specific scores however it can report the overall score of a large district. TIMSS results are not made available to districts.

"We always look at the age of an assessment and we look to see, is it continuing to assess the common core content? What's also true is we're taking a hard look at the time that assessments are taking...we're administering these several times a year, so we have taken the GRADE off the assessment calendar," said Fredrickson, noting that assessments currently in place provide the same information to teachers and administrators as the GRADE.

The OLSAT was being used as a tool to determine acceptance into the Ele-

Friends Remember 'Officer Bill' Draicchio

By SCOTT JACKSON

William P. Draicchio, a longtime Quincy police officer known to many as "Officer Bill" and "The Dancing Cop," died Sept. 1 at the age of 89.

Mr. Draicchio joined the Quincy Police Department in 1951 and served until his retirement in 1989. A 1943 Quincy High School graduate, he served 23 months in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II in the Pacific and again during the early stages of the Korean War.

For 33 years of his 38 years in the Police Department, Mr. Draicchio directed traffic at the intersection of Washington Street and Southern Artery. The Quincy Point intersection – where Massachusetts Routes 3A and 53 meet – is one of the busiest in the city. It was even busier during Mr. Draicchio's tenure, when the nearby Fore River Shipyard was open.

Underground Cable Causes Two-Hour Power Outage

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Approximately 155 customers in Quincy Center lost power for nearly two hours Monday following an underground cable issue, according to a spokesman for National Grid.

Jake Navarro said that at just after 3 p.m., customers on Hancock Street, Chestnut Street, Maple Street, and Granite Street lost power due to an "underground issue at a substation on Field Street."

He could not elaborate on the issue further but said that a cable fault was to blame.

Power was restored just before 5 p.m. Monday.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST
BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

FOR PURPLE AND GOLD FANS

Minnesota Vikings fans are bound to love "ametrine," along with anyone who appreciates a gemstone that combines the purple of amethyst and the sunny gold of citrine. This bi-colored quartz comes from only one mine in the world. Bolivia's Anahi Mine first became famous in the 17th century when a Spanish conquistador received it as a dowry on marrying a princess named Anahi from the Ayoreos tribe. Ametrine became established in Europe through the conquistador's gifts to the Spanish queen. The unusual gemstone is often faceted in a rectangular shape with equal amounts of amethyst and citrine. Ametrine can also be cut to blend the two colors in a mixture of yellow, purple, and peach tones throughout the stone.

Ametrine is thought to have some healing qualities that include getting rid of depression while producing inner peace and tranquility. Jewelry stores may have nice selections of different colored stone jewelry may include a few pieces of ametrine for sale. The price is reasonable when compared to other stones of similar size and beauty. Jennifer Manning Clerk Of Committees

By SCOTT JACKSON

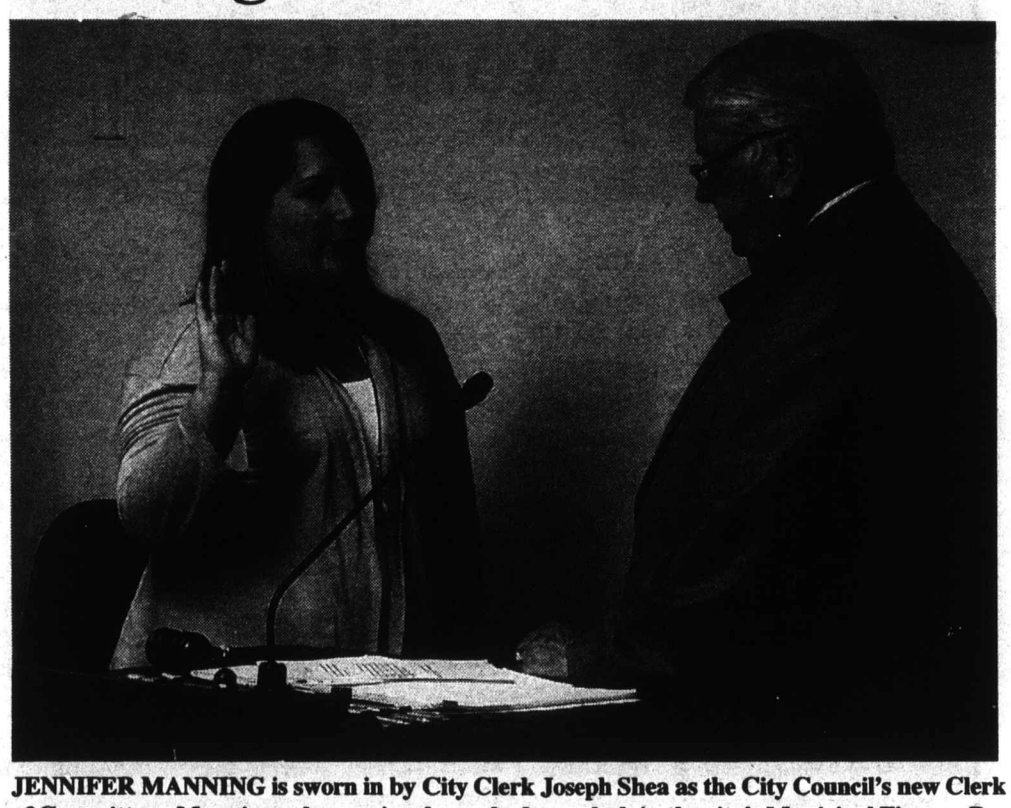
The City Council has tabbed a City Hall employee as the council's new clerk of committees.

Jennifer Manning was appointed clerk of committees in a unanimous vote during the council's Sept. 2 meeting and was subsequently sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea. She replaces Jeanne Reardon, who served as the council's clerk of committees from 1980 until her retirement in June.

Manning, 40, is a lifelong Quincy resident currently living in Wollaston. She spent the last four years working in the Municipal Finance Department as a clerk, where she was responsible for processing payments. Manning previously worked part time for two years with the Council on Aging and at a Boston bank prior to that.

In an interview following her appointment to the clerk of committees position, Manning said she decided to apply for the role because of a longstanding interest in how government works, particularly behind the scenes.

"It's always been interesting to me. I always watch the meetings," she explained. "I'm not sure people realize how much work goes into things like putting up handicapped signs."



JENNIFER MANNING is sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea as the City Council's new Clerk of Committees. Manning, who previously worked as a clerk in the city's Municipal Finance Department, succeeds Jeanne Reardon who retired earlier this year after nearly 34 years.

Manning was interviewed over the summer by a committee that included members of the council, Shea, and Auditor Susan O'Connor. Manning was excited to be appointed to the position.

"I'm so excited – it's a great opportunity," she said.

In her new role Manning will be responsible for helping to draft the agenda for each council meeting, assisting with scheduling of council and committee meetings, and recording each vote or other action taken by the council. She said the transition into her now role has been "excellent."

"Everyone has been really helpful," Manning noted. "They've been showing me the ropes."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest nominated Manning for the position at the Sept. 2 meeting. Laforest praised Manning for her skill set and noted her family has a long track record of serving the city; Manning's mother, Cindy, works in the city clerk's office.

"It is really a privilege to nominate Jen this evening," Laforest said. "I served on the interview committee with City Clerk Shea and Auditor Susan O'Connor. Jen brings a great depth of experience in municipal government. She has a lot of the skill set we were looking for – the technological skill set we really had a need for.

"Her self and her family have had a great commitment toward the city of Quincy. I'm honored to present her nomination this evening."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Sept. 28, 1542, Portuguese explorer Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo sails into present-day San Diego Bay during his explorations on behalf of Spain. Despite his reports of the appealing California coastline, the first Spanish settlement was not established in California for more than 200 years, when Father Junipero Serra founded his mission at San Diego in 1769.

• On Sept. 26, 1820, the great pioneering frontiersman Daniel Boone dies in Missouri. The indefatigable voyager was 86. Boone was a symbol of the western pioneering spirit for many Americans. Ironically, though, he lost his Kentucky land holdings by failing to properly register them.

• On Sept. 22, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issues a preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, which sets a date (Jan. 1, 1863) for the freedom of more than 3 million black slaves in the United States and recasts the Civil War as a fight against slavery.

• On Sept. 23, 1908, a game between the New York Giants and Chicago Cubs ends in 1-1 tie after a controversial call at second base. The officials ruled that Giants first baseman Fred Merkle was out because he failed to touch second base, a call that has been disputed ever since.

• On Sept. 27, 1930, Atlanta golfer Bobby Jones wins his fourth major tournament of the year, making him the first person ever to win the "Grand Slam" of golf. Jones had the picture-perfect swing of every golfer's dreams, despite never having taken a lesson.

• On Sept. 25, 1959, mob assassins shoot and kill Anthony Carfano, known as Little Augie Pisano, in New York City on the orders of crime figure Meyer Lansky. Lansky was estimated to have accumulated as much as $300 million in ill-gotten gains by the 1970s. He had an eighth-grade education, which put him far ahead of many other criminals.

• On Sept. 24, 1975, "Three Days of the Condor," a political thriller starring Robert Redford, opens in theaters. Redford played a low-level C.I.A. employee being stalked by an assassin. The film was based on the novel "Six Days of the Condor" by James Grady.

Council OKs $1.1M In Appropriations

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously appropriated more than $1.1 for two public works project when it returned from its summer recess.

The larger of the two appropriations – $648,600 – will go towards repaving Rice Road and is being tapped from the city's water and sewer stabilization funds. The repaving of Rice Road follows years of work on the street – National Grid installed a new gas main and the city paid for new water and sewer mains. The sewer project, the last of the major projects, was slated for completion on Sept. 5, according to city engineer Shawn Hardy.

"The contractor is wrapping up. They did, I think, the last sewer service today," Hardy said at the council's Sept. 2 meeting. "They intend to be substantially complete by Friday (Sept. 5) for the sewer portion of the work."

The Rice Road projects began in 2011 when the gas and water mains were replaced. The Department of Public Works hopes to complete repaving the road by the end of this year's construction season.

"The intent is to have the roadway done and buttoned up by the end of the construction season and be out of there," Hardy said.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, who represents the neighborhood around Rice Road, urged her colleagues to approve the money for repaving.

"This is something this neighborhood has been looking forward to and dealing with for several years now," Hughes said. "Getting this money is extremely important."

Councillor Doug Gutro questioned the use of water and sewer stabilization funds to pay for the resurfacing, instead of using Chapter 90 money the state doles out for street work annually. He asked Janet Petkun, an assistant city solicitor, whether or not using the water and sewer stabilization funds for the paving was legally permissible.

Petkun said it was legal – Mayor Thomas Koch had already vetted the use of the funds with City Solicitor Jim Timmons.

"It is something the mayor vetted Jim Timmins," Petkun said. "Jim did research it and he also contacted the Division of Local Services on it and got clearance for it. Because the underlying project was the sewer and water, they said that this fund could be used for the repaving."

Hardy added the city always intended to use the water and sewer funds to pay for the roadwork.

"The intent was to use water and sewer stabilization," he said. "Before we started planning we asked 'could we do that?' It's a way to maximize and a way to get things done."

In a second vote, the council allocated $460,600 – charged to the sewer rehabilitation fund – for the design of needed upgrades to the Quincy Point pump station. The current pump station, Hardy explained, is nearing the end of its useful life.

"The Quincy Point pump station is our largest pump station. Over the last few years we've done regular maintenance on it. Similar to Fort Square, which is now under construction, it's getting close to being at the end of its useful life," Hardy said.

"We evaluated the Quincy Point pump station as well as the substantial force main from there that pumps it up to the high level sewer. Fortunately the force main was in a little better shape than we thought, but unfortunately the pump station was worse than we thought.

"This appropriation is to have a design put in place so we can go to bid and construct repairs and rehabilitation to this pump station."

The city hopes to receive state funds to cover the cost of the repairs. That work could begin as soon as next summer.

"They're trying to fast track it. We did apply for money through the state for construction – hopefully that could happen as early as next summer," Hardy said. "We're trying to hit two paths at the same time – asking for an outside spending source to fund the construction as well as getting the designs."

Scenes From Yesterday

ONE HUNDRED FOUR YEARS AGO this week the Harvard Boston Aero Meet was held at the Harvard Aero Field in Atlantic. The aero-field was located in the area behind the Kennedy Senior Center on the Squantum Causeway. The Harvard Aeronautical Society and others offered large cash prizes for record-breaking contests to lure the most daring aviators and the most advanced aviation equipment from the U.S. and Europe to this meet. Over 50,000 observers came to Quincy that week including President William Howard Taft, Boston Mayor John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald and New York State Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt. This postcard shows a French-built Bleroit monoplane on its record-breaking flight to Boston Light. It was the first single-wing aero plane seen in Boston. At the controls was Englishman Claude Graham-White, the only pilot who dared to fly the 10 miles from the Atlantic airfield out to the lighthouse and then back. For this daring feat, The Boston Globe awarded him $10,000. America's oldest lighthouse, Boston Light, is currently undergoing $1.2 million in repairs in preparation for its 300th anniversary in 2016. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Fallon Ambulance Adds Narcan To Basic Life Vehicles

Fallon Ambulance Service announces that 82 of their Basic Life Support (BLS) ambulances have added Narcan, a drug used to counter the effects of drug overdose, to their treatment protocols.

Previously, the administration of Narcan was restricted to only the Advanced Life Support (ALS) vehicles and two municipal BLS units. This recently completed training extends the service to the company's BLS vehicles, staffed by Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs).

In effect, as of Sept. 8, all of Fallon Ambulance Service's in-the-field ambulances will be equipped to deploy Narcan when needed. The recent training was completed by an additional 350 Fallon personnel, who are Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs), bringing the total number of medical personnel trained to administer Narcan to 500.

The company's ambulances and medical personnel will be ready to deploy Narcan when needed throughout the Fallon Ambulance Service territory: the municipalities including Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Dedham and Brookline, and the Metro West region as well.

Fallon's EMTs have recently completed an intensive training program completed at the Fallon Training Center. The training includes both classroom and lectures components as well as in-the-field training per state protocols.

Narcan is used to combat overdose from drugs such as heroin or morphine, which can lead to a life-threatening depression of the central nervous system, respiratory system, and hypotension secondary to opiate overdose.

Peter Racicot, Senior Vice President at Fallon Ambulance, said, "We believe that having 500 EMTs and Paramedics trained in understanding the signs and symptoms of narcotic overdose and in how to administer Narcan when and if needed is a huge advantage for our staff in responding to these medical emergencies

"We all believe that one drug overdose is one too many, but this tool allows us to be as prepared as we can be to treat all of the the medical emergencies that we encounter."

War Of 1812 Bicentennial Program At Adams Park

Adams National Historical Park will present "Privateers in the Park" Saturday as part of the park's celebration of the Bicentennial of the War of 1812 and the anniversary of its successful conclusion in 1814.

Two sessions of "Privateers in the War" will take place in the Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy on Saturday, Sept. 13 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Session One will be held from 10 a.m. to noon; session two from 1 to 3 p.m.

National Park Ranger Alan Denton will introduce participants to the War of 1812 and the role that privateers played in the conduct of the war. Following each discussion, participants are invited to try their hands and test their skills as rope-makers, an occupation that engaged the seafaring men who roamed the oceans for glory and gain during the War of 1812.

Ranger Denton will conduct ropemaking workshops for rope makers of all skill levels. He will provide step-by-step instruction; participants will twist fibers into rope and take home a length of rope and a piece of history.

The War of 1812 saw the rise of the "privateeer." A privateer was a private person or ship authorized by the government by letters of marque to attack foreign vessels during wartime. Privateering was a way of mobilizing armed ships and sailors without having to spend treasury resources or commit naval officers.

They were of great benefit to a smaller naval power or one facing an enemy dependent on trade: they disrupted commerce and pressured the enemy to deploy warships to protect merchant trade against commerce raiders. The cost was borne by investors hoping to profit from prize money earned from captured cargo and vessels. The proceeds would be distributed among the privateer's investors, officers, and crew.

Privateering on the high seas ended, for the most part, with the end of the War of 1812. The war officially ended on Christmas Eve, 1814, when John Quincy Adams signed the Treaty of Ghent, bringing the War of 1812 and the heyday of the privateer to an end.

The program is free and open to the public. Kids and families are encouraged to attend. For more information about tours, programs, special events, and family activities at Adams National Historical Park, call the Visitor Center at 617.770.1175 or visit www.nps.gov/adam.

Fish Burgers With Panko Breadcrumbs

By MARIE

One day while we were at the Cape, and after many hamburgers, hot dogs were enjoyed, I decided to make fish burgers. The fish seems so fresh at the Cape, and since most of the kids like fish, it was an easy call.

I used cod fish for the sandwiches, but any favorite fish will do.

FISH BURGERS

4 fish filets
1/2 cup flour (for coating)
1 1/2 cups Panko breadcrumbs
2 eggs
vegetable oil for sautéing
2 tablespoons finely chopped scallions (optional)

Mix the scallions in with the breadcrumbs.

Season the fish with salt and pepper Coat the fish first in the flour, then the beaten eggs, then the breadcrumbs. I used paper plates for the flour and breadcrumbs for easy cleaning.

After the fish is coated, sauté in the oil until golden brown on each side, and drain on paper towel.

I served it with lemon slices, lettuce, tomatoes, or whatever was preferred. It was a nice change.

Garden Pea Soup

By SUZIE

"This tastes nothing like split pea soup for those of you who are not fans of traditional pea soup. Here is a quick and very basic Garden Pea Soup recipe. Super duper easy if you have a hand held blender!! If you do not just wait until cooled and place in batches in your traditional blender.

This freezes very well also, but I doubt there will be any left. I love to serve my soups with a salad, that way you are having your raw vegetables along with your cooked vegetables (which aids in digestion). Enjoy!

6 cups of chicken or vegetable broth
4-5 small potatoes quartered
2 cups frozen sweet peas
1/2 shallot or small sweet onion minced..
1 clove garlic, minced
1-2 tablespoons of olive oil teaspoon of lemon juice
Sea salt and pepper to taste

Saute' onion and garlic in sauce pan with olive oil until fragrant. All you have to do now is place remaining ingredients (except the lemon juice) in the pot and cook until potatoes are tender. Take the soup off the stove and use hand held blender to puree Add the lemon and season to taste with sea salt and pepper. Serve hot.

Corn Flakes, Nut Meringue Cookies

By MARIE

I know many times I say the recipe is easy, but when I saw today's recipe in a cook book my mother had made for us, I thought something was missing, it seems to simple.

When I first made them I was so surprised at how delicious something with so few ingredients could taste.

Everyone that tried them, loved them as I hope you will if you make them.

Corn Flakes, Nut Meringue Cookies
1 egg white (beaten)
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup chopped walnuts or pecans
1 cup corn flakes

Preheat oven to 300 degrees,

Beat the egg whites and add the sugar salt and vanilla and beat until smooth. Fold in the cornflakes and the nuts until well mixed.

Fill with heaping teaspoon full on a greased cookie sheet or parchment paper and bake for 20 minutes until done (not brown) Remove with spatula while still warm onto a cake rack. They are so light and delicious.

School Committee Meeting Notebook

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Highlights from the Sept. 3rd meeting of the Quincy School Committee:

• Superintendent's report: According to Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro, Quincy Public Schools summer programs serviced 900 Quincy students. Summer professional development programs for teachers—made possible by the Department of Education—serviced over 100 members of the QPS staff.

• DeCristofaro said it was too early to determine preliminary enrollments but that he estimates the total to be 9,500 students—100 more than last year.

• A vote regarding a revised student discipline policy will take place at the Sept. 17 meeting of the School Committee. Deputy Superintendent Kevin Mulvey briefly explained the new guidelines which restrict options regarding student discipline. The goal of the restrictions is to limit the number of days that students are out of school due to disciplinary matters. In the event that a student is suspended, the school district must create an alternative education plan to ensure that the student doesn't fall behind on his or her school work. A suggested alternative was a Saturday school program.

• Discussion on a national background check for volunteers was referred to the Policy Subcommittee meeting scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 16, 5 p.m. at Coddington Hall.

• Coordinator of the Quincy Public School — Community Partnership John Fagerlund updated the committee on upcoming partnership calendar events including a Professional Educators Status Reception on Oct. 2, 3-6 p.m. in the Quincy High Presidents Cafe, a Teacher Mini-Grant Reception on Oct. 28, 3-4:30 p.m. in the North Quincy High School Atrium of Honor, the 14th Annual Fall Gathering Event on Nov. 20, 3-6 p.m. at the Tirrell Room, and the 'Tis the Season Symphony and Song concert on Dec. 9, 7-9:30 p.m. in the Quincy High School Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center. Prior events include Quincy Public Schools New Professional Staff Orientation which took place Wednesday, Aug. 27 and Thursday, Aug. 28 with complimentary breakfast, remarks from DeCristofaro, a trolley tour of Quincy, and an overview of the Aspen Student Information System. The Backpack and School Supplies Distribution Event took place on Sept. 4 at the Snug Harbor and Clifford Marshall schools. Fagerlund estimated that 600 backpacks were distributed.

• Deputy Superintendent Kevin Mulvey presented the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education's Coordinated Program Review (CPR). The CPR is a part of the department's accountability system and ensures that school districts are compliant with requirements in special education, civil rights, English Learner Education, and Career/ Vocational Technical Education. These reviews take place every six years. A site review by CPR officials will occur Oct. 20-24.

A gift of office furniture valued at $22,800 for the new QPS office headquarters at Coddington Hall was donated by General Dynamics.

A gift of office furniture valued at $8,500 for QPS offices at Coddington Hall was donated by the Arbella Insurance Group.

National Assessments Replacing School Ability Test

mentary Laboratory Center (ELC) program at Central Middle School which provides gifted students with a more advanced academic curriculum. It was a part of the initial screening but was "not a complete decision-making factor," she said

"When we looked at the Otis-Lennon…what we found was when we looked at other criterion, like the MCAS results and teacher recommendations, we found that it was only 12 percent of students who were coming to our attention exclusively by the Otis-Lennon and we were finding that 88 percent of the students we were identifying, we were seeing their potential ability through other achievement results like the MCAS," said Fredrickson, adding that the OLSAT doesn't provide enough "new information" to administrators.

The OLSAT was administered in October of last year.

"I think we have to be very clear when we spell it out what the procedures are, what the expectations are, and what the criteria is because every year…there are kids that come very close and when they don't [get accepted to ELC] it needs to be understood so that everybody can be treated fairly, so that it's not cloaked and we understand what the process is," said School Committee member Anne Mahoney.

"We need to have it be as transparent as possible," said Committee Member Barbara Isola. "I just want to know what the benefit to Quincy Public Schools participating in [the TIMSS] is because again, that's going to be more time from learning, more testing of our students in such a test-driven environment."

Fredrickson said the benefit of the TIMSS assessment was in showing academic ability and college preparedness nationwide. The test would also be beneficial to tax payers, she said, because it illustrates how American students stack up against students in other countries "in a global economy."

"The assessment calendar, very similar to curriculum, is ever evolving, changing, and growing," said Senior Curriculum Coordinator for Grades K-8 Madeline Roy, who called the OLSAT an "outdated form."

BID-Milton Health Walk, Fair Sept. 27

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) will hold its fifth annual Community Health Walk and Health Fair on Saturday, Sept. 27, from 10 am – 2 pm, at the hospital located at 199 Reedsdale Road, Milton.

The family-oriented, health and wellness event will kick off at 10 am with a 5-kilometer (3.1 mile) walk through Milton, beginning and ending at the hospital's Highland Street entrance. A shorter 1-mile walk around the hospital's campus will also be offered.

The walk will be followed by a community health fair in the hospital's main lobby at 11 am. Blood pressure checks as well as body mass index, glucose and vision tests will be provided.

A limited number of flu shots will also be available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Family-oriented events following the walk include face painting, moon walk and obstacle course, tours of several emergency response vehicles and DJ entertainment. A free barbeque lunch will be available starting at noon and lasting until 2 pm.

A new event for teenagers this year is the nationally noted Arrive Alive texting and distracted driving prevention simulation program from Unite. This interactive program uses a car and virtual reality goggles to show young drivers the dangers of texting while driving.

The hospital will also formally award its Community Health Mini-Grants to eight local organizations whose programs address the primary health needs identified in the hospital's Community Health Needs Assessment undertaken in 2013.

Funds raised at the event will go towards facility improvements and new equipment for the hospital's outpatient Cardiac Rehabilitation Program. This multidisciplinary program provides monitored physical exercise, stretching and stress management as well as vital education for individuals recovering from a heart attack, heart surgery, angioplasty or angina. Since its inception, the hospital's Cardiac Rehab has helped hundreds of local men and women lead new, heart-healthy lifestyles.

Visit the hospital's website at www.bidmilton.org/walk to download registration forms. Registration is $5 per walker, and children 12 and under are free.

No Damage To School Roof After Fire

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A small fire that broke out on the roof of the gymnasium wing of the Lincoln-Hancock Community School on Tuesday afternoon was quickly put out with fire extinguishers by workers at the school who were installing solar arrays according to Assistant to the Superintendent for Communications and Operations Laura Owens.

"The fire was caused by a malfunctioning tool which was confined to the materials being used by construction workers installing a solar array," she said in a statement. "The Quincy Fire and Police Departments responded immediately and the building was quickly cleared of all school staff and the students of the Quincy Afterschool Childcare program."

There was no damage to the school she said and the incident is under investigation by the Public Buildings department and by the contractor hired to install the arrays.

School was expected to be in session Wednesday.

An instant alert message was sent by the school's principal, Ruth Witmer, to students' parents and families informing them of the fire.

"I am so proud of the quick actions of my staff, the Quincy Fire and Police Departments, Mr. [Michael] Draicchio, and the staff and children of Quincy Afterschool Childcare," read the alert. "Everyone did exactly what they were trained to do and Lincoln-Hancock is ready for tomorrow!"

Police Searching For Purse Snatches

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A woman's purse was stolen Monday night in North Quincy by two unidentified men according to Quincy Police Lt. Jack Sullivan.

The woman, in her early 20s, was walking alone near the intersection of Billings Road and Tyler Street at 9:50 p.m. when two white males in their late teens or early 20s grabbed her purse and ran.

"No threats were made and no words were exchanged," he said.

The woman was unharmed.

One man was described as between 5-foot-7 and 5-foot-8 and wearing a red hooded sweatshirt while the other was described as 5-foot-6 and wearing a white hooded sweatshirt.

The duo fled north on Billings Road and ran down a side street however the woman was unable to identify which one.

According to Sullivan, one of the victim's credit cards was later used at a gas station in Dorchester.

Sullivan said there have been no similar attacks in recent weeks but that he expects an increased police presence in the area.

Friends Remember 'Officer Bill' Draicchio

in the afternoon," City Clerk Joseph Shea said.

Mr. Draicchio earned the moniker "The Dancing Cop" for his unique, emphatic mannerisms he used while directing traffic at the intersection. He also assisted countless schoolchildren as they crossed the intersection on their way to or from three schools nearby – the Pollard, Point Junior High, and St. Joseph's Schools.

"Every young person in Quincy Point knew him for years and years," Shea said.

The intersection was named the "William P. Draicchio Square" in October 2001; signs with that name and the city, state, and U.S. Marine Corps seals mark the intersection to this day. Nearly 200 family and friends of Mr. Draicchio attended the dedication.

"Bill Draicchio is what this nation is all about," then-Mayor James Sheets said during the 2001 ceremony.

After his retirement from the Police Department, Mr. Draicchio went to work at City Hall. He began working in the Election Department under then-City Clerk John Gillis. Mr. Draicchio and Gillis were lifelong friends who grew up in Quincy Point together, Shea noted.

"He and John Gillis went to grammar school together, went to junior high together, went to high school together and then joined the Marines together," Shea said.

Shea began his tenure as city clerk as 1991. During that time, Mr. Draicchio served as the registrar of voters and remained active at City Hall until January of this year.

"I'd been working with him all the way from 1991 until now," Shea said. "Bill had been very involved in running the elections and doing outreach to different constituencies – he knew the city from his time as a police officer."

"He was a gatekeeper and an aide to the city clerk," Shea added. "He was a terrific guy, a loyal guy and a real Quincy person."

Mr. Draicchio earned another nickname, "Candy Man," during his tenure at City Hall. He kept dozens of jars of candy stocked for visitors – children, residents, and department heads all would stop by to grab some.

"He used to have jars of penny candy for all the kids and everyone who came in," Shea recalled.

In addition to his time at City Hall and in the Police Department, Mr. Draicchio had a 33-year career working at the former Remick's department store in Quincy.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall paid tribute to Mr. Draicchio at the start of the Sept. 9 City Council meeting.

"If you had ever seen him in action, it was just indescribable," Croall said, referring to Mr. Draicchio's style of directing traffic.

"He really enjoyed what he did. He gave everything he had. The city mourns the loss of a lifelong, solid Quincy resident."

Candlelight Vigil To Raise Substance Abuse Awareness

7 To 9 P.M. Sept. 17 On Crane Library Lawn

The City of Quincy will host a candlelight vigil Wednesday, Sept. 17 to bring attention to the issue of substance abuse.

The vigil will take place on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Prior to the program - from 6:30 to 7 p.m. - a list of names will be gathered of those who have died.

Candles will be provided and lit when the names are read aloud during the program.

Participants are also encouraged to bring a photo of their loved ones.

The public is welcome to join in a remembrance of those lost to drug overdose and give hope to others still struggling with addiction.

"Let us stand together as a community to bring a face to these individuals, support each other, and make our voices heard to fight this devastating problem," said Arlene Goldstein of Impact Quincy-Bay State Community Services.

There will be no seating on site during the vigil but participants are invited to bring a lawn chair.

Opioid addiction is a serious medical problem; the brain "rewires" because of the addiction. Statistics show that more people die of drug poisonings than car accidents in Massachusetts.

The City of Quincy and the surrounding communities of Weymouth, Braintree and Randolph are experiencing this issue along with many other towns along the South Shore. Since 2010, Quincy Police, when first to the scene, have reversed overdose in 292 individuals with Naloxone (Narcan).

Other statistics show, in FY 2011, there were 102,789 admissions of substance abuse treatment services in Massachusetts. Of that number, 2,233 were under 18 years of age.

"The reason for the vigil is to bring light, education, and truth to the issue," Goldstein said.

Best Western Adams Inn Changing Hands

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Principal at The Galvin Companies and Managing Partner at Best Western Adams Inn Sean Galvin is in the process of selling the Best Western Adams Inn located at 29 Hancock St. to Ashish Sangani of Quincy.

Sangani, who currently owns ten to eleven hotels in Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Maine, has been in the hotel business for over 20 years. "He's a very successful entrepreneur," said attorney Robert Fleming Jr., who is representing Sangani, at the Sept. 2nd License Board meeting.

"This is a sale of the entire hotel...from the Galvin brothers who have owned it for a few years and have done a commendable job in the operations and renovations and improvements they've made to the hotel," he said. "It's the perfect opportunity for both the Galvins and [Sangani]."

No major changes will take place and operations will continue as normal. The name and premise of the hotel will remain the same.

"It was very important to the Galvins to retain most of the staff at the hotel," said Fleming. "The initial intentions of Mr. Sangani is to do just that."

An All Alcohol Innholder License and Pledge of License to Kennebunk Savings Bank were transferred to Sangani at Tuesday's meeting of the Board of License Commissioners.

"This is a guy that's so committed to Quincy," said Fleming.

Sangani purchased the Presidents' City Inn on Hancock Street in 2004. Plans include renovating and reopening as a Howard Johnson's Hotel with 22 additional rooms. The renovations will cost $1 million.

Links leading to kindergarten, grade 6, and high school enrollment were created as a way to manage the anticipated high volume of requests. "We usually have the most traffic at those entry levels," she said.

Grades 1-5 and 7-8 were grouped together as less requests are seen there.

Of the 139 requests, 41 were for kindergarten and 17 were for grades 1-5. At the middle school level, 46 requests were received with the majority applying for grade 6 acceptance. At the high school level there were 33 requests.

"At the high school level we ask people that are interested in Quincy High School to specify whether they are in one of the career and technical education programs. That actually is a criteria for enrollment in Quincy High School," said Owens.

Elementary and middle school applicants could list three school options, in order of preference.

All of the information submitted was gathered and exported to a Microsoft Excel spreadsheet. "We have exact times down to the second that peoples' requests came in," she said. Because applicants are placed on a waiting list based on the order in which they send in their requests, keeping track of time so carefully streamlines the process.

Everything went smoothly aside from a handful of people who sent in identical requests twice. "It really went well," said Owens.

The online forms also allow applicants to specify whether they are applying because a child's sibling is already enrolled in a desired school. Those with siblings already enrolled are given preference for the target school.

"Under school committee policy, siblings have top priority," she said.

Applicants are notified immediately after clicking the "submit" button at the bottom of their electronic registration form that their application has been successfully transmitted.

Owens said that plans are in place to inform parents and guardians of the number of sibling-based applications received in confirmation emails sent our 24 hours following a submission.

Central Middle School, she said, already has a projection of 16 siblings for the next school year and at the elementary level there are typically 3-5 siblings yearly.

Open enrollment is granted on a space-available basis dependent on a school building's capacity in the upcoming year and near future according to district policy which is posted on the QPS website.

Owens said typically 300 requests are submitted in total and that she anticipates 200 more to be sent in over the the school year.

Committee member Anne Mahoney, while pleased with the web-based system, took issue with when letters notifying parents or guardians as to whether their child was accepted to their preferred school were being sent out.

The letters go out in mid-July.

"We should be capable of projecting open enrollment earlier in the year so that we're able to tell people before school ends," said Mahoney. "We should be able to give that enrollment projection in March, April, May, and be able to have people know before."

"This time last year, I stood in a long line outside of the NAGE Building," said father of three daughters Andrew Mauriello, who decided with his wife to buy a home in Quincy in 2010 to "take advantage of placing our child in the school of our choice because of the long-standing availability of open enrollment." While his family was lucky, others were left panic-stricken when their children were not accepted into their preferred school.

"Imagine the disappointment when families, who had camped out overnight in the front of the line, were informed a month before starting school that they had to make contingency plans," he said. "This sent many families scrambling to get their children into private schools and, I'd imagine in some cases, to move out of the city."

Mahoney said that confusing language in letters sent to parents implied that only siblings of currently enrolled students would be considered for open enrollment and that it "created a real disruption in trust."

"Part of the big problem we had was that letters came out to parents on a July 1 time frame suggesting only siblings," she said. "We need to do our work on our side to be able to communicate this to people and to come up with better processes to really put it in black and white."

While the online enrollment was "a giant step forward," said Mahoney, more discussion on open enrollment policies needed to take place during School Committee and subcommittee meetings to keep the public informed and to maintain trust and transparency in the selection process.

City Closes On Three North Quincy Homes

expected by the end of the week. A purchase and sale agreement with another homeowner should also be signed this week. City officials, Timmins said, have spoken to the remaining two homeowners and their attorneys, but no agreements have been reached.

"Seven of the nine have agreements," Timmins said. "The two others, we've talked with their attorneys but have no agreements at this point."

The solicitor remains optimistic the city will be able to reach agreements with the remaining two homeowners and avoid having to take them through eminent domain.

"I don't think it will come to that," Timmins said.

City Council approval is required before eminent domain proceedings could begin. If that process were used, the council's authorization would include a purchase price. The homeowner could either accept that figure or take the city to court, Timmins explained.

The city plans to purchase and raze the nine homes as part of a $12 million project to renovate Teel Field. The project calls for adding grandstands with seating for 600 to the field, the installation of a new synthetic playing surface, and a new sound system, lighting, and concession stands.

Once the renovations are completed, the field could accommodate North Quincy High's soccer and lacrosse games; the school's junior varsity football team may play there as well. Youth leagues would also have a chance to use the field.

The parking lot, to be located on Hunt Street opposite the high school, will be designed to accommodate 157 vehicles, providing a net gain of 127 spaces. Retaining ponds would also be created within the project site to alleviate flooding concerns.

Mayor Thomas Koch has said he would use the proceeds from the sale of the former Central Middle School to offset the cost of purchasing the nine homes. The city has reached the agreement to sell the building for $3 million. Officials are also probing the feasibility of using hotel/motel tax receipts and the water and sewer rehabilitation fund to offset the project's cost.

Planning Department Completes Move

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's Planning and Community Development Department has completed its move to new office space in the renovated Coddington School.

The department had previously called the third floor of the City Hall annex home for years, before moving into the new office space at 34 Coddington St. The Planning Department has the third floor of the Coddington School to itself – floors one and two are home to the School Department and the Information Technology (IT) Department is on the lower level.

The Planning Department is the last of the departments to move into the building. The other two departments moved in last month. The city renovated the 106-year-old Coddington School over the past year in concert with ongoing renovation work at old City Hall. The Municipal Finance Department will move into the City Hall space previously used by the Planning Department as part of the project.

The city's Planning Board will continue to meet at City Hall.

A Job Well Done

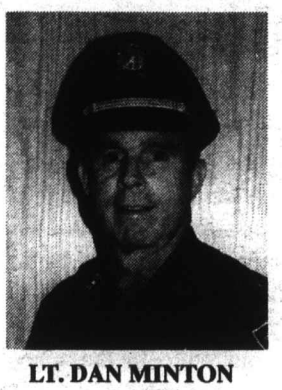
By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday September 3, 2014, at approximately 12:25 a.m., Officers Kevin DiMattio and John O'Donnell were dispatched to the area of Willard Street by West Street to assist the State Police in a hit & run accident. Officer O'Donnell met with the victim, who gave the Officer the license plate number of the suspect vehicle that fled the scene. Quincy Police Communications gave out the information to all Officers to be on the look-out.

Several minutes later, at approximately 12:36 a.m., multiple "911" calls came in reporting another hit & run accident on Beale Street by Adams Street involving the same license plate. One of the "911" calls came in from an off duty Boston Police who reported that his vehicle was just struck by the suspect vehicle. He stated that the suspect vehicle fled the scene after leaving its' front bumper at the intersection.

The Officer, along with two other witnesses, followed the suspect vehicle to Highland Avenue, where it stopped. At this time, the off duty Officer exited his vehicle, opened the driver's side door of the suspect vehicle and removed the key(s) from the ignition. The two other witnesses assisted the off duty Officer at the scene.

Officer DiMattio spoke with the off duty Officer and learned that the suspect vehicle was "all over the road and almost struck several vehicles along the way." As Officer DiMattio approached this vehicle, the off duty Officer told him he had removed the ignition key. When Officer DiMattio looked into the suspect's vehicle he saw the female operator attempting to start the vehicle with another ignition key. Officer DiMattio opened her door and instructed her to give him the ignition key. Instead, the suspect kept turning the key trying to start the car but the gear shifter was in reverse.



LT. DAN MINTON

At this time, Officer Chris Klier opened the passenger side door and removed the key. During this time, the suspect just sat there, oblivious to what was going on. Officer DiMattio then interviewed the suspect, asking her if she was injured and if she was a diabetic. Although her responses were slow, she answered no to both questions.

As a precaution, Fallon Ambulance was requested for an evaluation. When asked if she was aware that she was involved in multiple accidents, the suspect looked at the Officer with a blank stare but did not respond. When told that she was just involved in an accident where she lost her front bumper, the suspect said that the bumper had been off her vehicle for some time.

Officer DiMattio noticed that the suspect was not wearing any footwear and questioned her about it. She responded, "You took them." When asked if she had anything to drink, the suspect said, "Yes I agree." She was asked how much she had to drink but she didn't respond. Officer DiMattio detected a slight odor of an alcoholic beverage coming from her breath and her eyes were red and glassy.

At this time, the suspect was asked to perform field sobriety tests, but refused, then said, "I'm leaving now" and exited her vehicle. She was unsteady on her feet and the Officers had to grab hold of her arm to prevent her from falling. Officer DiMattio advised the suspect that she was under arrest for "Operating Under the Influence" Fallon Ambulance arrived and checked her blood sugar levels, which were at acceptable levels. Officer Klier transported the suspect to the station for booking. Massachusetts State Trooper Michael Fiorello arrived on scene to acquire suspect information for the first hit and run accident and then filed criminal complaints against her for "Leaving the Scene of an Accident with Property Damage."

The female suspect, a 53 year Mansfield resident, was charged with "OUI (ALCOHOL), Leaving the scene after property damage and Operating to Endanger." The suspect refused to take the breathalyzer so her license was immediately suspended for 180 days. Nice Work!

DRIVING WITH TWO FEET: (automatics) Many people are unaware that they are using two feet while driving, often inadvertently resting their left foot on the brake, or they may actually use their left foot to brake. Even the slightest pressure on the brake activates the brake lights and if the foot is resting on the brake, the lights stay on, so drivers behind you do not know if you are actually braking – and the brake lights don't get redder if you put more pressure on the pedal!

North Quincy Girls Soccer Rallies For 2-1 Win

By JOE REARDON

It may have been just two games into the season, but the North Quincy girls were in a must-win situation against Plymouth South on Monday evening.

The Red Raiders were coming off a tough 5-1 loss to nationally-ranked Whitman-Hanson in their season-opener Sept. 4 in a game where the score didn't begin to tell just how close a Patriot League contest it was. Paul Bregoli's squad played the Panthers tight the entire first half as the teams went into halftime scoreless - and North Quincy brimming with confidence.

It was still a 2-1 match with three minutes left to play when things began to unravel for the Red Raiders. North Quincy went through a patch where it had lapses on defense and it wound up costing the Red Raiders as Whitman-Hanson pumped home three tallies in the final three minutes to take the 5-1 victory.

The Red Raiders' first half against Plymouth South was equally frustrating as North Quincy outplayed the Panthers for 40 minutes and were still down 1-0, courtesy of a shot with 5:19 left that took a funny bounce and eluded keeper Danielle O'Driscoll.

"I thought we were the better team and outplayed them in the first half," said Bregoli.

The Red Raiders never stopped attacking the net in the second half and it paid off as Marissa McGue tied it with 4:58 left and Courtney Campo picked up a clearing kick and drilled it home with 2:47 remaining to give the Red Raiders the enormously satisfying 2-1 victory.

Bregoli stressed to the Red Raiders at the break that they had to keep the pressure on Plymouth South and eventually the breaks would come their way. "I told them it would be a shame to lose this one after outplaying them the way we were," said Bregoli. "Sometimes you have to be patient and let things play out. Those were two points we really needed. We're still playing with a lot of young kids and we're a little banged up. We want to get totally healthy."

North Quincy had several solid chances to get on the board in the first half, but weren't able to find the back of the net for the entire 40 minutes. One of the best scoring bids came 12:51 into the game when forward Hailey Houlihan unleashed a shot in front of Plymouth South goalkeeper Gloria Rinkus that rattled off the crossbar. Annie Doherty followed Houlihan's bid with one of her own just minutes later, racing down the left side and getting off a shot that Rinkus was able to handle. Rinkus also had big saves against Ali Coleman and Ciara Forde with 12 minutes left in the opening half.

Houlihan had the best bid of the game and was absolutely robbed by Rinkus after she deked her way past a pair of defenders giving her a clear shot at the Plymouth South net. Houlihan put a hard, low shot on the goal but Rinkus was just able to get a foot on the ball and knocked it wide. Freshman Cora Cluett followed that bid with one of her own that was headed over Rinkus' head. The talented keeper leaped and knocked the ball just over the crossbar to keep North Quincy off the board.

Houlihan, Sydney Chang and Ali Coleman continued to put shots on Rinkus in the second half, but it was beginning to look more and more like the Panthers were going to escape with the win and the Red Raiders were going to see another strong

Presidents Edged By Plymouth North

By JOE REARDON

Quincy hasn't been able to catch a break so far in this young season between the white lines and could use a shot of confidence desperately. Consider this: What the Presidents need after Monday afternoon's 3-2 loss against Plymouth North is a game against a comparable opponent where they can get some confidence back and hopefully build momentum going forward. So who do the 1-2 Presidents get in their next match? Patriot League power Hingham Thursday on the Harbormen's home field. That's not exactly the perfect storm of matchups for the struggling Presidents.

Quincy head coach Mark Spendlove knows the Presidents can't afford mistakes in their end against a team like Hingham, particularly with the Harbormen's potent offense.

"We have to get back behind the ball and pick our spots to go and take advantage of our opportunities when we can," said Spendlove. "We just have to develop that work ethic where we're working harder."

Quincy had its highlights in the first week of action.

Led by backup goalkeeper Pat Freeman, who replaced injured starter Rob Smith, the Presidents edged a talented Pembroke squad 1-0 last Friday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Freeman was nothing short of sensational between the posts, coming up with at least a half dozen saves on serious scoring bids.

Quincy only had three shots on goal, but only needed one to find its mark and it was a beauty. Ali Mokalled converted a pass from Yuri Mascarenhas and tapped it home for the game-winner.

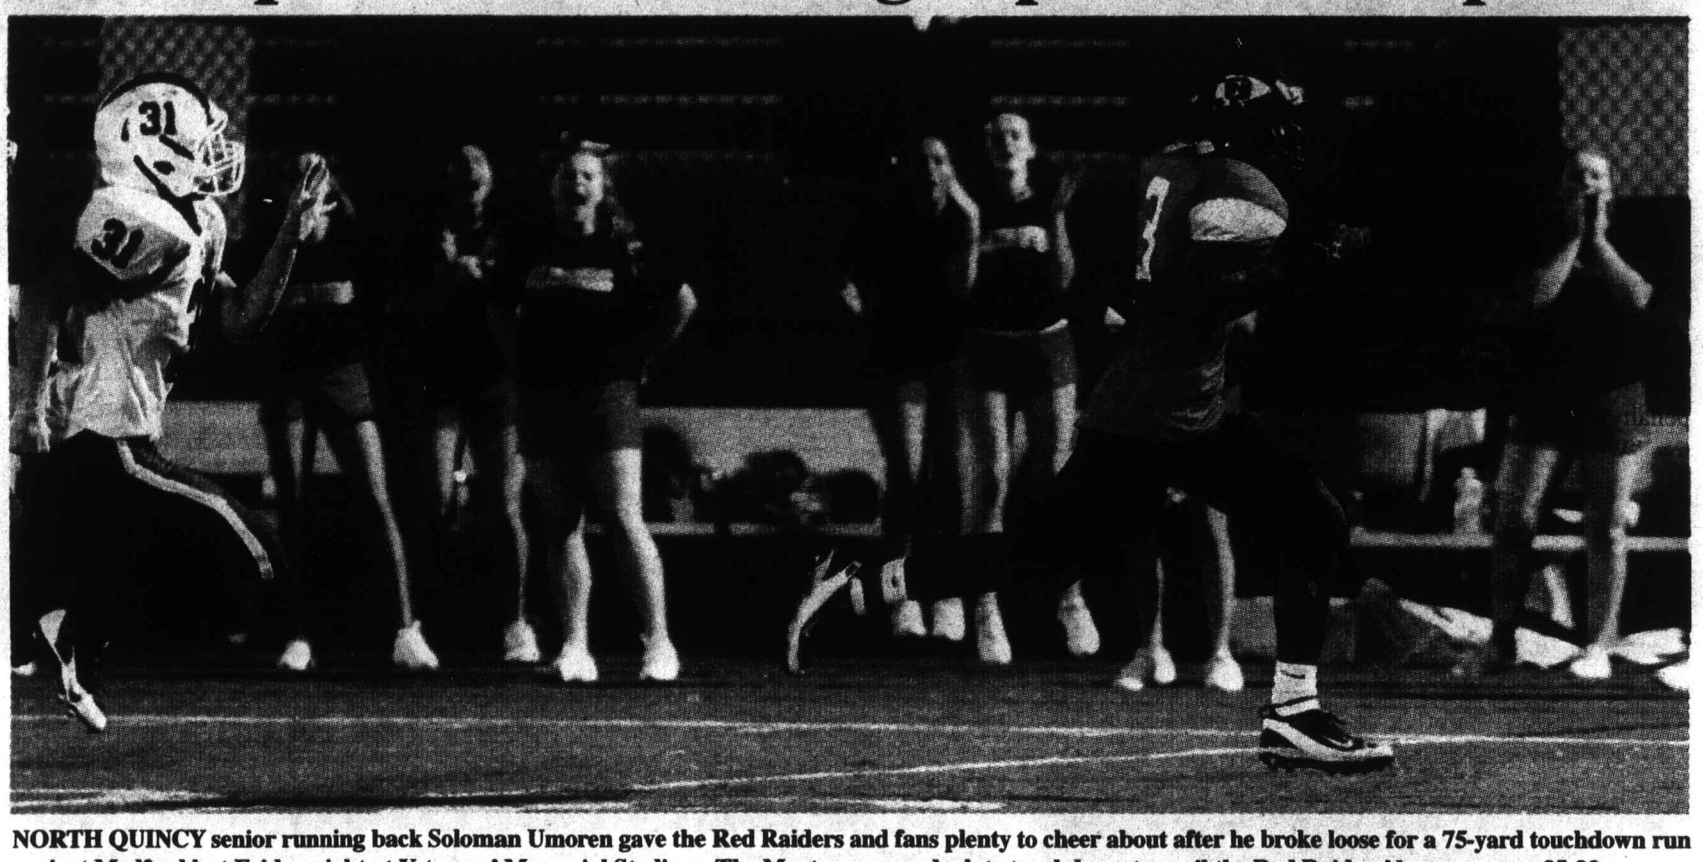
Red Raiders Impress But Mustangs Spoil Home Opener

By JOE REARDON

Mark Nutley and his coaching staff couldn't stress enough during the preseason that the Red Raiders would have to steer clear of penalties if they wanted to be successful between the lines this season.

North Quincy was listening and stayed away from costly penalties during its dress rehearsal scrimmages. The Red Raiders had more of their share of miscues and weren't able to follow through on Nutley's words of wisdom in last Friday night's season-opener. Still, North Quincy almost pulled out a victory despite amassing 13 penalties in a 35-30 loss to nonleague opponent Medford at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.



NORTH QUINCY senior running back Soloman Umoren gave the Red Raiders and fans plenty to cheer about after he broke loose for a 75-yard touchdown run against Medford last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Mustangs scored a late touchdown to spoil the Red Raiders' home opener, 35-30.

The Red Raiders did plenty of things right and came away knowing they can run the ball and move the chains consistently - the Medford defense will tell you that.

Running back Dayvon Jones put his head down and rushed for 91 yards on 20 carries and Solomon Umoren chalked up 93 yards on the ground, the biggest coming on a 75-yard score in the second quarter that put North Quincy up 14-13. Quarterback Andrew Kiley was equally effective running the ball, racing for three scores and 86 yards overall.

The success North Quincy had in moving the ball, though, couldn't make up for the costly penalties assessed against the Red Raiders and that's a part of the game the team will have to address and fix in a hurry before Friday's nonleague showdown against Boston Latin. "Every time we get a penalty it kills us," said Nutley. "We get a big play and it's called back because of an offsides or holding penalty. We had three or four scrimmages and we talk to the guys every day at practice about them. They're just going to happen with high school kids.

"This game's over and there's nothing we can do about it. We're just going to shake it off and get back to work. Both teams played a great game. We punched down and they punched right back. That's a great high school football game right there."

Medford came out swining on its first possession, driving down to the North Quincy 7-yard line before free safety Eric Cohane-Jones forced a fumble that the Red Raiders recovered. The Mustangs scored on their next possession to go up 7-0.

A Brendan Kingsbury 31-yard kickoff return gave the Red Raiders solid field possession at their own 46 and Kiley showed off his nifty running skills seven plays later when he scampered 16 yards for the TD on the first play of the second quarter. Freshman Dara Griffin split the uprights to make it a 7-7 contest.

Medford went ahead 13-7 on its next set of downs, but the North Quincy offense regrouped and Solomon Umoren sprinted through a huge hole off right tackle and outran the defense for a 75-yard score. Griffin made good on the PAT and the Red Raiders had their first lead of the game, 14-13.

The Mustangs put up another score for a 21-14 advantage, but the Red Raiders threatened in the closing minutes of the half, moving the ball all the way down to the Medford 3 before a Kiley pass into the end zone was intercepted.

After Medford went up two scores 5:24 in the third quarter for the 27-14 lead Aidan Brown had a huge 43-yard kick return to put the Red Raiders at the Medford 19-yard line. Kiley sprinted in from the 5 five plays later and went in again on the conversion play to cut it to 27-22 with 3:11 left in the third.

Nutley praised Kiley's strong running and poise in the pocket. "I was very impressed with him tonight," said Nutley. "He threw two picks but he ran the ball like a champion and made some great decisions.

"We were down a score at halftime and came back to take the lead. And we had a chance at the end, too. It's the little things that hurt us."

Kiley took over again on the Red Raiders' next possession, rushing for 37 yards and hitting Jhani Johnson with a 7-yard completion before rushing in from the 4 for the score. Kiley - behind some key blocks - scored a two-point conversion and North Quincy had the lead back, 30-27.

But Medford would get one last score and the Red Raiders weren't able to punch in another TD in the final minute of the game as Kiley was picked off in the end zone on a throw to the right corner.

Presidents March Past MC, 33-0

Host Braintree In Home Opener Kick-Off Friday At 7 P.M.

The Quincy High School Presidents opened their 2014 football campaign with an impressive 33-0 shutout over Malden Catholic Sept. 5.

Quincy scored on the first play of the game on a 92-yard run by senior fullback Armani Cardoso. The PAT missed the mark for a 6-0 lead.

Coach Bill Reardon said the game played a lot closer than the final score. And it took a while for the Presidents to settle into an offensive rhythm after the early TD.

Quincy scored on its third possession of the first half when Quarterback James Lam connected with Cardoso on a 12-yard TD pass. Lam threw a pass to Reda Laftih for the two-point conversion.

The Presidents swapped possessions with MC after that and then Quincy was forced to punt the ball back to the Lancers with about 2 minutes left in the first half. They drove the ball from inside their own 20 yard-line to the Presidents' two-yard line. MC's drive was kept alive after converting on a third and 15.

But at the 2-yard line, Quincy stuffed MC four times, capped off by a sack from junior linebacker Garrett Cronin who caught their own QB from behind on a bootleg.

"This was a big play because I knew we had to kick off to them to start the second half, so if they scored on those possessions we would have been locked in a 14-14 battle. Instead, we stuffed them, forced them to punt on their first possession of the second half and slowly took over the game from there," Reardon said.

Quincy scored on its first possession in the third quarter after Jahvae Handsom-Fields intercepted an MC pass over the middle and returned it back to the 21. The Presidents found the end zone two plays later on a 24-yard pass from Lam to senior Andrew Cook. The PAT missed the mark.

Quincy's fourth touchdown came in the fourth on a four-yard run by Cardoso up the middle. The score was set up by a 17-yard pass from Lam to Cook (2 receptions, 41 yards, TD).

The Presidents final score came late in the fourth quarter on a one-yarder by Handsom-Fields.

Cardoso rushed for 100 yards on three carries with two TDs and also had a 12-yard TD reception. Handsom-Fields rushed for 110 yards on 16 carries (1 TD) and Lam ran for 66 yards on 7 carries and was 4/6 in the air for 70 yards.

"It was a good, hard fought win, but we have to play much better moving forward if we want to win any more games," Reardon said. "We made a lot of mental mistakes and missed way more tackles than I am comfortable with so those things have to change."

The Presidents host Braintree Friday night at 7 p.m. in their home opener at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

JUST WINGING IT?

If you haul heavy baggage into the airport terminal and/or fill your overhead bin with heavy luggage, you may be setting yourself up for back problems. Travelers who hoist heavy suitcases into the overhead bin often swing their bags swiftly and away from their bodies. The farther a suitcase is from your body, whether you are carrying it or swinging it into the overhead bin, the greater the toll that lifting forces take on your body. When it comes to a stowing bag, be sure to hold it as close to your body as possible. Bend at the hips and knees, and lift without twisting. Let your large leg muscles do the work as you keep your back straight.

If you are experiencing pain when lifting heavy items and are seeking alternative medicine or looking for natural chiropractic therapy, call us today to see why we are the chiropractic clinic your friends and family recommend. Apaches, Panthers, Storm Win In QYFL Openers

By SEAN HALPIN

The Quincy Youth Football League kicked off its 64th season Sunday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. QYFL President Paul Doherty presided over the coin toss for the opening game of the afternoon between the North Quincy Apaches and the Milton Mustangs.

North Quincy Apache Andrew Rooney raced down on the kickoff and recovered a forced fumble on the Milton 27-yard line. Two plays later, RB Nate Sleiman raced through the line for a 27-yard touchdown to take and early 6-0 lead. On the next series, Mustang QB Liam Reagan hit WR Chris Petrik on a 31-yard TD pass to tie the game, 6-6. Mustang LB Stephen Joyce recovered and Apache fumble setting up a 15-yard TD run by RB Smith Charles. The conversion attempt failed but, the Mustangs went ahead, 12-6 over the Apaches at the end of the first quarter.

The Apaches opened the second quarter with a 44-yard TD run by RB Win Tran to tie the ballgame, 12-12. The Apaches' defense held back the Mustang stampede to set up a 36-yard TD run by North Quincy RB Ryan Cefalo on the next series. RB Nate Sleiman rushed in for the conversion as the Apaches took a 19-12 lead over the Mustangs. Milton immediately answered with a 68-yard TD run by Smith Charles as the Mustangs closed the Apaches lead to 19-18 at halftime.

In the second half, both defenses tightened. The Mustangs drove the ball deep into Apaches territory only to be stopped three times on goal-line stands by the Apache defense. On the last play of the ballgame, facing a 4th down and goal with 9 seconds left, LB Nate Sleiman stopped the Mustang ball carrier short just of the pylon to win the game.

Apaches head coach Ted Arnott praised the efforts of Sleiman, Cefalo, Tran, Andrew Rooney Tom McCormack, Tommy Le, David Olcott, Eric Helmuth and QB Danny Ferrara, Al J. Ortiz, Alan Leahy and JP Murphy. Mustangs head coach Rile Rhodes got strong performances from Will Hankard, Nick Griswold, Liam Reagan, Chris Petrik, Isaiah Woodley, Smith Charles, Stephen Joyce, Diurmud Allen and Abdur Hosein.

The second game of the afternoon was a rematch of the 2013 QYFL Championship game between the four-time defending champion West Quincy Elks and the Quincy Point Panthers. The Panthers got on the scoreboard first late in the opening quarter when QB Mike Lommano hit Andy Ryan on a 27-yard TD pass to take the lead 6-0 over the Elks. Late in the first half, Elks DB Brendan Keaveney halted the Panther drive with and interception to end the half.

After an injury to QB Franco Calabro, The Elks went to the ground game as Franck Yhomby and J.J. Camara combined for a strong running attack. Late in the third quarter, LB Cameron MacNeil recovered an Elks fumble setting up a 10-yard TD run by Lommano. Later in the fourth quarter, DB Andy Ryan intercepted an Elks pass and raced it back 41 yards for a TD and 18-0 win for the Elks.

The Elks were led by the play of Camara, Stuart Dozier, Calabro, Yhomby, Brian Goncalves, Sean Dolan, Colin Keaveney, Terrence Laufauret, Patrick Devoy Brendan Keaveney and Landon Pierron. Panther Head Coach, Noel Dibona praised the winning efforts of Lommano, Andrew Cudmore, Nick Cedrone, Mark McKenna, MacNeil, Danny Rose, Brian O'Connor, Mario Polanco and Andrew Grant.

The third and final game of the opening weekend featured a "Battle of Quincy Peninsulas" between the Squantum Storm and Hough Neck Manets. The Storm got on the scoreboard early in the first quarter as RB Mikey Adamson raced for a 56-yard TD run to take a 6-0 lead. The Manets answered immediately when RB Nate Steinberg ran for a 59-yard TD to tie the game at the end of the first quarter. Late in the second quarter, Storm RB Adamson bolted into the end zone on 16-yard score. Adamson also rushed for the conversion to take 13-6 lead over the Manets.

Both defenses held each other scoreless throughout the second half. Steinberg, James Dutcher and James Keenan combined for over a 100 second half rushing yards as Storm running backs Adamson and Josh Jackson did the same for the Squantum offense. The Storm walked away with a 13-6 victory over the Manets and first place in the Desmond Division.

Manets head coach Mike Flavin got some fine two way performances from Zac Carson, Robbie Hill, Steinberg, John Early, Keenan, Jake Zisk, Kendrick Peeples, Shane Murphy, Mike Cugini and Pat Nazzaro. Storm coach Mike Killilea was proud of the efforts of Andrew Airosus, Jackson, Adamson, John Collins, Tim Layden, Eamonn Mayo, Anthony Gatturna, Samantha Smith, Josh Dangora and Nelson Walinjom.

Next Sunday, the Houghs Neck Manets (0-1) will take on the West Quincy Elks (0-1) at 1 p.m. The North Quincy Apaches (1-0) host the Squantum Storm (1-0) at 2:30 p.m. followed by the Milton Mustangs (0-1) versus the Quincy Point Panthers (1-0).

North Quincy Girls Rally For 2-1 Win effort with nothing to come from it.

The tide began to turn with 4:58 left as North Quincy's relentless shooting began to pay off. Sprinting just in front of the Plymouth South defense, McCue took a pinpoint pass from Forde and deposited a hard, low shot to the left side to tie the contest at 1-1. Just two minutes later Campo settled things once and for all, alertly getting possession of the ball in traffic and putting a squib shot behind Rinkus for the lead with 2:47 remaining to put the contest at 2-1.

The win was especially satisfying after keeping the pressure on Whitman-Hanson for so long in the season debut. North Quincy overcame losing Rachel O'Driscoll in the opening minute when she twisted her knee awkwardly coming out for a ball. Her sister Danielle stepped in and the Red Raiders didn't miss a beat.

"Danielle was more than capable handling everything the hosts shot her way," said Bregoli.

Even Whitman-Hanson head coach Dave Floeck conceded that North Quincy should have been up 2-0 in the first half after Campo and McGue were robbed of tallies. The Panthers came out strong in the second half and finally put the ball in the Red Raider net.

"Whatever Floeck said at halftime fired up his squad," said Bregoli.

Bregoli called a time out to give his team a breather and help get the squad refocused. McGue made it a one-goal contest with 11 minutes remaining when she timed perfectly a free kick by Coleman and redirected it to the top corner to cut Whitman-Hanson's advantage to 2-1. The Red Raiders, though, let the Panthers back in the game with some defensive mistakes in their own end that cost them.

The Red Raiders have an intriguing matchup slated for tomorrow (Friday) against a strong Hanover team. If past games have shown anything it's that goals could be hard to come by between the two teams, having put up identical 0-0 scores in their past three games.

The Presidents rebounded nicely after dropping a back-and-forth affair 4-3 against Stoughton in the season-opener.

Quincy and Plymouth North traded shots for much of the first half with only a few that were in the serious-scoring-bid category. The speedy Mascarenhas threatened in the early going, breaking through the defense down the left side, but was denied on a shot on the short side.

The Eagles made it a 1-0 contest with 13 minutes left in the half when Andrew Serino took a wobbly pass and redirected it past Smith. Plymouth North added its second tally with just 39 seconds left off a corner to put the Eagles up 2-0.

The sense of frustration in Quincy head coach Mark Spendlove's voice was evident post game.

"Until we stop self destructing on the types of goals we're letting in it's going to be a long season if we keep going down those pathways," said Spendlove. "We're flying by the seat of our pants - lot of new kids with different styles we have to mesh together. It's going to take a lot of work. It's going to be a process. I look at it as not just this year, but next year as well. We're a young team and we're going to make mistakes. We don't want to make the same mistakes, but right now that's what we're doing.

"We're not clearing the ball when we need to. We're just gifting goals. I'm not sure we've had a good goal scored on us yet this season. It is what it is. I knew it was going to be this way because we're inexperienced. We have three or four guys where English isn't their first language and that makes it a difficult process. It's not an easy thing to do to get across your message so they can understand."

Quincy cut the lead to 2-1 9:48 into the second half when Kevin O'Shea got control of the ball in a crowd in front of the Eagles' net and jammed it home for the tally. Smith made a diving save to his left to thwart an Eliomar Dutra bid with 25:53 left in the game, but was unable to get a hand on Brock Periera's tap in on a corner shot that made it 3-1 just 33 seconds later.

The Presidents were very aggressive going to the net the rest of the way as Mascarenhas and Derek Andrade just missed on their chances. Quincy's hard work past mid field finally paid off with 10:29 left as Connor Porter blasted a shot from 15 yards out to cut the Eagles' advantage to 3-2.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An offer to help with a stalled project should reassure you that you have a workable plan in spite of the problems in getting it up and running. The week's end brings more positive news.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A past problem about a workplace situation re-emerges early in the week. Talking things out helps ease tensions by midweek, but some hurt feelings could linger a few more days.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Optimistic aspects dominate your efforts. However, expect to confront some criticism, some of which might be valid, so keep an open mind. But overall, it's your views that will count.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Social interaction with new people, especially on the job, could be a bit strained in the early part of the week. But the awkwardness passes as you get to know each other better.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Expect news about a follow-up to a workplace change that could make a difference in your career path. Meanwhile, new friends widen the circle for all you Social Lions who love to party.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Enjoy your well-earned plaudits for a job well done. But be aware that some people might not share your colleagues' admiration, and you might have to work harder to win them over.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good week to recheck your probably already overlong "to do" list and decide what to keep and what to discard. Lose the clutter and focus your energy on what's really important.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to take a new perspective on what you've been offered. Expanding your view could help to uncover any plusses or minuses that weren't apparent at first.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Applying the usual methods to this week's unique challenges might not work too well. Instead, use your creativity to find a way to resolve any impasse that develops.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) So what if fate throws some obstacles in your path this week? Just keep in mind that the sure-footed and resolute Goat can get past any barrier by focusing on the goals up ahead.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This week calls for better communication with people in both your private life and the workplace. Start by asking questions, and then pay close attention to the answers.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Potentially beneficial workplace changes could be closer than you realize. Make sure you know what's going on so that you're not left high and dry when the good things happen.
BORN THIS WEEK: You're not timid about pushing to have your aims realized once you've set your mind to accomplishing your goals.

Back to School Safety

Our children will be crossing in front of the bus. Pay close attention and obey all school bus traffic signals. When a school bus has its lights flashing, traffic in all directions must stop. Once flashing signals off, it is safe to proceed.

Operate your vehicle at or below the allowed speed limit. Be mindful of school zones. When entering school zones, be mindful that the speed limit is reduced to 20 miles per hour.

Always come to a complete stop at stop signs and signals. Look around your vehicle and allow any pedestrians to cross before proceeding. Proceed only when it is safe to do so. State law mandates that drivers are not allowed to proceed when there is a pedestrian in the crosswalk.

All children riding bicycles should wear a helmet. Children are inexperienced riders and do not always follow the rules of the road. When approaching a bicyclist maintain a safe distance of at least 3-5 feet.

Use caution when backing your vehicle. Every vehicle has blind spots and some children are not tall enough to be visible. Double check to ensure there are no pedestrians near or behind you before you back up.

Our children are tomorrow's leaders.
Please keep them safe today and everyday.

'Puppy Doe' Bench Dedicated

Over 100 Attend Ceremony For Granite Bench Memorial

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Over one hundred people gathered Saturday at the Whitwell Street Playground for a memorial bench dedication and unveiling in honor of Puppy Doe, the Pit Bull who was found last year on Aug. 31 at the playground so badly beaten and tortured that she needed to be put down.

The inscription on the black granite bench, which was unveiled by state Rep. Bruce Ayers and Chairman of the Puppy Doe Memorial Bench Committee Diane Holler O'Meara, reads, "This bench is dedicated in loving memory of Kiya known to the world as Puppy Doe, and to the victims of animal abuse everywhere. Cruelty in any form must not be tolerated. 'See something/ say something.'"

Also on the bench was a photo of Puppy Doe, who had been named Kiya by one of her original owners, and the date on which she was discovered and euthanized.

The dog's injuries included burns, stab wounds, dislocated joints, and evidence of starvation.

Koch Backs Baker In Gov.'s Race

Mayor - A Democrat - Crosses Party Lines: 'I Am Impressed With How He Wants To Partner With Our Cities'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch crossed party lines Tuesday, endorsing Republican Charlie Baker's bid for governor.

The mayor, a Democrat, backed Baker Tuesday during an event at the Quincy Center for Innovation in Wollaston. The afternoon began with Koch and Baker touring the center, joined by Karyn Polito, the GOP nominee for lieutenant governor. After touring the center, Koch said he has known Baker since putting together a group of business leaders after being elected mayor in 2007.

"I met with Charlie a number of years ago when I was first elected mayor. I put together a business roundtable – as many cities were facing a number of challenges economically, I tapped a number of people in the business community," Koch explained.

"Charlie was one of those willing takers and was very helpful to me in some of my decision making early on in my administration."

Weymouth Housing Director Tapped For QHA Board

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch will nominate the executive director of the Weymouth and Hull Housing Authorities for a spot on the Quincy Housing Authority's board of commissioners.

The mayor plans to nominate Michael Flaherty for the position during the Sept. 22 City Council meeting; the council would have to approve the nomination before Flaherty could be seated on the board. Flaherty is being appointed to fill the seat left vacant by the resignation of Leo Kelly earlier this year.

Flaherty, a Quincy resident, began working as a contractor laborer for the Boston Housing Authority in 1980. He rose through the ranks there, eventually serving as the assistant general manager of the elderly disabled program from 1994 to 1997. In 1997, he was named director of maintenance for Somerville's housing authority. He continued in that position until 2002, when he became director of operations there.

Entertainment Complex Proposed At Parkingway Site

Fitness Center Would Be Converted For Karaoke, Billiards

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents had a chance to hear details of a new entertainment complex – featuring private karaoke rooms, billiards, and food and alcohol service – being proposed for a site now home to a gym on the Parkingway in Quincy Center during a recent community meeting.

Tao Lin – a Quincy resident and Boston-area restaurateur – is proposing to convert 150 Parkingway into the new entertainment venue. The building is currently home to Super Fitness, which could move to the basement adjacent building at 152 Parkingway – where the Quincy Career Center and a military recruiting office are located – though that hasn't been determined yet.

A community meeting on the proposed new venue, organized by Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, was held Sept. 10 inside Quincy High School with about a dozen residents in attendance. Derrick Choi – met again Sept. 12 after Baker and Polito won the Republican Primary. The mayor said that meeting went well, adding he was impressed with Baker's plans for local aid and working with municipalities across the state.

"I had a good meeting last week. I am very impressed with how he wants to partner with our cities. I'm impressed with his program for local aid and Chapter 90 funding – those things that are important to cities and towns, particularly this city," Koch said.

"I think his program on the economic side – creating jobs – makes sense. So I'm thrilled to be endorsing his candidacy and look forward to working with him in the coming weeks to get him elected."

Baker, a Swampscott resident, served as the director of administration and finance under then Govs. William Weld and Paul Cellucci, both Republicans. He then went on to work as the CEO of Harvard Pilgrim; during that time period he also served on Swampscott's board of selectmen. Baker ran for governor in 2010, losing to incumbent Democrat Deval Patrick, who opted against running in this year's race.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH (second from left) shakes hands with Charlie Baker after endorsing the Republican's bid for Massachusetts governor during a campaign event Tuesday at the Quincy Center for Innovation and the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Koch, a registered Democrat, said he supports Baker because of the candidate's vistion to create jobs and boost local aid. At Tuesday's event, Baker said he was thrilled to earn Koch's endorsement.

"As the mayor pointed out, I've known him for a number of years. I was both a vendor to him when I was at Harvard Pilgrim as the supplier to health insurance to the city's workers and their families and I was also a constituent as an occupant of Crown Colony. I was happy to work with him for a number of years on a variety of issues," Baker said.

"I think he's a terrific guy and I'm thrilled to have his endorsement."

Throughout his campaign, Baker added, he and Polito have been meeting with local officials such as Koch to hear their concerns and re-iterate that a Baker-Polito administration would not cut local aid or approve more unfunded mandates.

"We have spent a lot of time with local officials across the Commonwealth talking to them about their issues and their concerns and making very clear to them, as two former local officials ourselves, we are going to work very hard to make sure our administration does everything it can to make sure every community in Massachusetts is a great place to make a living, build a life, and raise a family," Baker said.

"We are not going to cut local aid. Local aid is down by $500 or $600 million over the past six or seven years as state spending has gone up by $6 or $7 billion. You can't be a great state starving your cities and towns.

"Number two: We are not going to be in the business of supporting any more unfunded mandates. Cities and towns, in many cases, have had to deal with the consequences of the Commonwealth telling them to do something, but then leaving the price tag associated with how to pay for it on

New Apartments Project Moves On To City Council

Public Hearing Sept. 23 On Quarry Street Project

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Planning Board has recommended that the plans of AvalonBay Communities, Inc., for the construction of five, five to six-story apartment complexes containing 398 units off of Quarry Street, be reviewed by the City Council at a public hearing to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 23, 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Members of the public will be able to weigh in on the proposal.

Director of Transportation Planning Kristina Johnson offered her recommendation for the project at last Wednesday's meeting of the Planning Board but said she estimated there would be considerable turnout and discussion at the public hearing in September because drainage was "a huge concern to the abutters."

AvalonBay Communities, which also manages Eaves North Quincy at 95 W. Squantum St., applied for a special permit to develop on the vacant parcels of land on April 7.

The parcels were to be built upon as a continuation of the HighPoint Apartments, however the project was abandoned by the original developer who cited financial difficulties.

A CERTAIN RING TO IT

There has been a creative explosion recently in the ways that rings are designed and worn. While it remains popular to wear a stack of rings vertically on a single finger, rings are now going horizontal as well. This means that rings are now worn on all fingers (and thumbs) at various places. No longer reserved for wear just above the knuckles, "midi" rings adorn the upper half of the finger. These rings are so small that they physically will not go any further down the finger than half way. In addition, there are "brass knuckle" style rings that span across two or more fingers, as well as asymmetric-styled rings that seem to jump outward from the finger.

A variety of metals, stones and designs on rings give you the opportunity to be creative and make your own fashion statement on your hands. Consider a variety of textures and engravings, and settings for each ring. Quincy's Up For Grabs

It didn't take long for Quincy to take center stage in the governor's race.

BAKER

One week after capturing the Republican gubernatorial nomination in the Sept. 9th state primary, Charlie Baker returned to the City of Presidents Tuesday and received a public endorsement by Mayor Thomas Koch. The announcement came on the heels of a visit to Quincy and a tour of the downtown by Koch last Friday.

The mayor's endorsement is news for several reasons. First, Koch is a registered Democrat and despite being elected in non-partisan city elections, a mayor who crosses the aisle to back a gubernatorial candidate from another party is noteworthy. In the primary, Koch supported Steve Grossman who won Quincy by 879 votes but lost statewide to Democratic nominee Martha Coakley.

COAKLEY

Koch, as mayor, is the city's highest profiled elected official who will have to work with whomever is sworn in as governor in January. There may be other Democrats who will cross party lines to back Baker but they will be city councillors or school committee members.

Of course, endorsements may not wield as much influence as they once did. Consider Warren Tolman, the defeated Democratic primary candidate for attorney general whose endorsement list read like the phone book topped by Gov. Deval Patrick and Boston Mayor Marty Walsh. Perhaps Oprah Winfrey could have helped put Tolman over the top.

However, on a larger scale, Koch's endorsement of Baker underscores how important Quincy is perceived by candidates for statewide office - especially Republicans. The city – which has more registered unenrolled voters and Democrats are a close second - has essentially become a bellwether.

How Quincy goes, so goes Massachusetts.

Republican Scott Brown won Quincy and the special U.S. senate race in 2010. Patrick captured the city and the governor's office in 2006 and 2010. And Elizabeth Warren won here in unseating Brown for a full Senate term in 2012.

"Quincy is sort of like Ohio in Presidential elections," said former city councillor, state treasurer and gubernatorial candidate Tim Cahill. "I don't think there's any question that every consultant in every race in this year's election cycle will be looking first or second at Quincy because it's a Democratic city that generally votes the person. Who they feel is the best person for the seat.

"If it goes Republican, I think that spells trouble for Democrats" in November, Cahill added.

A Quincy win Nov. 4 for Baker could be the difference in a tight governor's race with Coakley. Quincy is the eighth populous city in Massachusetts and the biggest voting block in the South Shore – and one of the largest in the Bay State.

Putting Quincy in the win column would go a long way towards a statewide victory for Baker or Coakley Nov. 4.

Which brings us to Coakley.

She won the Democratic primary but lost Quincy. Some political observers note Grossman did a lot of work lining up support here and that may have been the difference in Tuesday's primary.

But is there another concern for Coakley and her quest for Quincy?

We call it the Cahill Factor.

Tuesday's primary was the first election for Coakley since she prosecuted Cahill and two of his aides a few years ago. The Cahill trial ended in a hung jury (some say the state treasurer was one or two jurors short from a full acquittal). One aide was acquitted at trial and all charges were dropped against the other.

Those who know Tim and his aides haven't forgotten about those cases and the anguish it caused their families. Some have indicated that they showed their loyalty by casting an anti-Coakley vote in the primary. At least one Quincy caller I heard on Boston talk radio after the primary said he purposefully took a Democratic ballot and voted for Grossman – and not Coakley – to show support for Cahill and the others.

Does Cahill think Coakley's actions have turned some voters off here?

"I think it had some but I can't say for sure. I don't know how people genuinely feel and whether or not it's transferable," Cahill said in a recent interview. "I think people have been tremendously supportive of me and my wife, Tina, especially when we went through it and since so I hear nothing but good things.

"I don't always hear good things about (Coakley) in my presence but it would be too much to speculate that it's transferable.

"I guess we'll see in November," he added.

Before last Tuesday, Coakley had fared quite well in Quincy at the ballot box.

Running unopposed for AG in the 2010 state primary, Coakley received 7,835 votes here (96.36 percent). Turnout was 28.43 percent or 15,499 votes.

In the 2010 final election, Coakley polled 19,985 votes or 66 percent. Her Republican challenger – James McKenna – received 10,234 votes or 33.82 percent. Turnout was 57.22 percent or 31,603 voters.

But last Tuesday, Coakley captured only 2,885 votes or 35.88 percent. Grossman garnered 3,764 votes or 46.81 percent and Don Berwick was third with 1,349 votes. Turnout was low – only 10,111 voters or 16.60 percent.

Did Coakley lose Quincy or did Grossman win Quincy?

"I think it's a combination of the two," Cahill said. "I think Steve worked hard in Quincy. He practically became a resident of Quincy based on the number of times I saw him here.

"He was heavily involved in the school building authority that we started back in 2004. That generates a lot of good will when you are building new schools and helping communities help themselves."

Since Grossman became treasurer, Quincy has built one middle school – Central – and is moving ahead with a second – a new Sterling.

What is the key to win Quincy Nov. 4th?

Cahill thinks it's the candidate who best addresses economic development and issues affecting the middle class like taxes and student loans.

"I think people are concerned about the downtown – who's going to help. They're concerned about taxes. Quincy is a middle class community. Who's going to talk about student loans? That's an issue that affects every parent who has kids – not just in Quincy but everywhere in the state. It's a huge issue that nobody seems to be talking about but as a parent I think that's a huge thing.

"It's a ticking time bomb going forward both nationally and here.

"I think Quincy cares about a lot of things middle class communities care about. So who's speaking about jobs, who's going to help (the Koch) administration solve the downtown issue, which again is about jobs and economic development. It's a great opportunity for the city.

"Whomever can be the best partner, that's who the city will support."

But in the end, Quincy may not determine the governor's race.

It could be the three other candidates who are on the ballot with Coakley and Baker. There are two independents and the third represents the United Independent Party.

Cahill says the independent vote – which will probably be miniscule percentage-wise – could be the real X-factor. He drew a parallel with the 2002 race between Democrat Shannon O'Brien and Republican Mitt Romney.

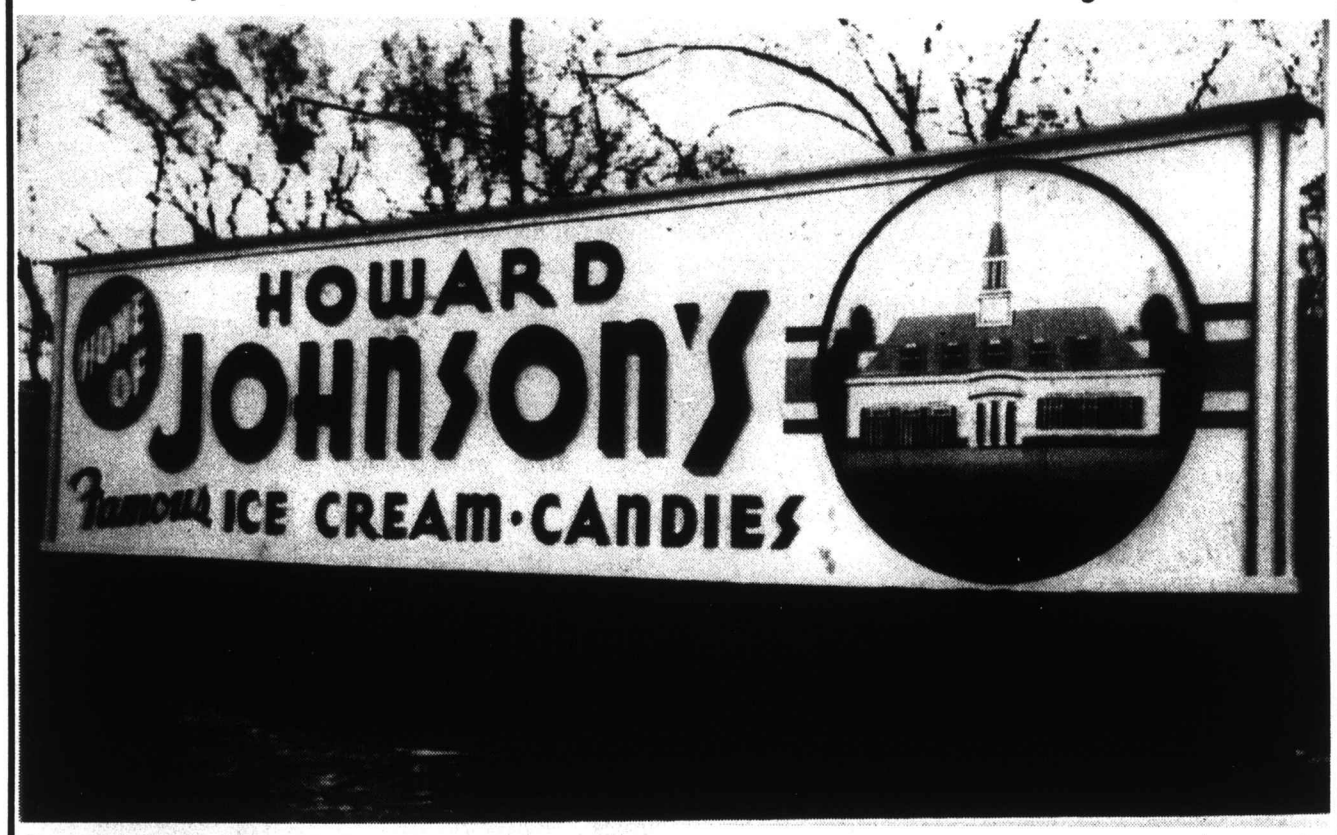
"There were two independents on the ballot and they garnered five percent of the vote. In this case, it came from Shannon O'Brien's vote. Romney won the election with only 50 percent of the vote. I don't see Baker getting more than 50 percent of the vote if he were to be successful. There's just not that many Republicans out there.

"The question is: where does the five percent come from? That's probably where it will be. It will probably be 50 to 45 percent. Will it be Baker at 50 percent or Coakley at 50 percent?

"The difference in 2002 is that the independents were women. In this case, (the other candidates) are men. I don't know if that's why Shannon O'Brien lost. She was favored to win and was way up in the polls with a few weeks to go and it just turned. Romney was able to pull out the vote.

"Independents made the deciding difference for Romney. As much as independents don't tend to vote for independents, they will decide this election," he said.

Scenes From Yesterday



PASSENGERS ON THE New Haven Railroad's Old Colony Line saw this new billboard as they traveled between the Wollaston and Quincy depots in 1939. The sign was erected across Old Colony Avenue from the new home of Howard Johnson's ice cream and candy factory in what was previously the four-story R.H. Stearns furniture building. The company had planned to move most of its scattered operations into the building but changed its plan when within a year they bought the facilities of the bankrupt Dutchland Farms Company in Brockton. Ice cream production was moved to what in time would become Howard Johnson's large Brockton commissary. But all sorts of candies were produced at this Wollaston location for many years until the company was sold. Today, the building is owned by The Eastern Nazarene College and the top floor is home to the Quiney Chamber of Commerce. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Free Medicine Disposal Day At Police Headquarters

In conjunction with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), Impact Quincy and the Quincy Police Department will host a free medicine disposal day in the parking lot next to Quincy Police Headquarters on Saturday, Sept. 27th between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Studies show that youth can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the home medicine cabinet. Plus, proper disposal of substances are vital to protect the water supply and the environment.

All residents are invited to bring unused or expired prescription and /or over -the -counter medications to the disposal event. The process is anonymous. Blacken out names on prescription bottles or place the containers in a plastic bag. Community members simply drive up to the event and give their substances to a police officer.

Needles (sharps) and aerosols cannot be disposed of at this event. However, Manet Community Health Center sponsors a sharp disposal kiosk at their 110 West Squantum St. location during regular business hours. In addition, the Quincy Police Department hosts a permanent drug disposal kiosk, available free, 24/7 for anonymous drop-off.

Quincy Marking 'PARK(ing) Day Friday In Wollaston

The City of Quincy will be participate in international PARK(ing) Day on Friday, Sept. 19th in front of historic Wollaston Theater.

Three parking spaces will be transformed into a small public park, like an extension of the public sidewalk.

The event is being sponsored by Ward 5 Councilor Kirsten Hughes, Mayor Thomas Koch, the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, and the Planning and Community Development Department.

Park(ing) Day is a worldwide annual open source event where citizens, artists, and community groups convert street parking spaces into 'PARK(ing)' spaces, or temporary public spaces.

This conversation-generating public intervention began in 2005 when design studio Rebar, of San Francisco, transformed a single street parking space into a tiny temporary public park. In the last nine years, Park(ing) Day has spread across the world and has generated discussion around how public space is created and allocated, with a mission to improve the quality of the urban human habitat.

The Quincy Planning Department has identified three spaces in front of the Wollaston Theater as the site for this year's project. Officials said the location was selected due to the area's high pedestrian traffic, proximity to the Wollaston MBTA station, and situation near one of the city's most notable historic landmarks. This site also falls within the bounds of the Re-Envisioning Wollaston planning area, allowing the Park(ing) Day project to also further the goals of the Re-Envisioning effort.

Plan To Borrow For Parking Areas Meets Snag

The plan to borrow money this year for the purchase of off-street parking areas for Wollaston and Norfolk Downs was stymied when Alexander Smith, city auditor, advised that such a borrowing was impossible because the city had provided no qualifying fee for such takings.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said he would discuss with councillors that possibility of using parking meter receipts and the possibility of other reserve funds to proceed with the proposal.

In a recent public hearing, North Quincy merchants and the Chamber of Commerce urged the council to make the takings.

NEWLYWEDS Margaret Milne and Leo Kelly kiss after the two longtime companions were married at a beach ceremony in Houghs Neck Aug. 9. Photo Courtesy Lynne McKeever

Longtime Companions Margaret Milne, Leo Kelly Wed

Leo J. Kelly married his longtime companion, Margaret Milne, in a beach ceremony in Houghs Neck. Aug. 9th.

The maid of honor was the bride's daughter, Lynne McKeever, and her niece Meghan Wilson served as bridesmaid.

The best man was Kenny Kelly, the groom's nephew, and the groomsman was the bride's nephew, Justin Wilson.

The ring bearer was Ben Parish, neighbor of the couple and who - years ago - began calling the bride "Mrs. Kelly."

Leo is a lifelong resident of Houghs Neck, a former Ward 1 city councillor and head of the beach commission. The bride, formerly of White St., West Quincy, is a secretary at the Quincy Housing Authority.

The couple was united in matrimony by state Rep. Tackey Chan, who officiated the ceremony and - after saying the traditional "You may kiss the bride" - was, in fact, embraced by the groom before the bride was kissed, much to the surprise of the many guests, the bride and Rep. Chan himself.

The couple walked from their Spring Street home down to Edgewater Drive Beach for the ceremony and then left in a limo for a tour of Houghs Neck, done "Leo style" - meaning ALL over the Neck and thoroughly confusing the many guests who were told to follow the limo to the reception. After finally making their way to the Adams Inn, a reception was held that could easily have been mistaken for a typical Leo Kelly campaign event, due to the number of city employees and politicians in attendance.

Among the many other guests were members of Leo's and Margaret's extended families and several close friends that the couple have known for years...and they wouldn't have had it any other way.

WHAT'S COOKING

with

Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Stove Top Mac & Cheese

By MARIE

Macaroni and cheese is so popular these days - and it can be found on the menu in almost all restaurants.

When I made it when the kids were growing up, I sometimes just made it on the stove instead of baking it. It comes out very moist where sometimes after baking, it would be dry. And the family always enjoyed it.

To this day, I cook it this way.

STOVE TOP MAC & CHEESE

1 pound large elbows (or favorite small pasta)
1 quart of milk (I use 1%)
1-2 tablespoons flour
salt and pepper to taste
1- 8 ounce package shredded cheese
2 tablespoons butter

Cook the pasta according to directions. Drain and put back in the pan adding the milk and sprinkling the flour in and cook until milk starts to boil.

Cook on low heat adding the cheese and cook until cheese melts and the pasta is creamy.

Serve hot and add butter if preferred.

Coleslaw

By SUZIE

When you think of Coleslaw you don't normally think of it as a "health food."

But you should. If it isn't soaked in low quality industrial-grade mayonnaise, it really shines.

Cabbage is a superstar in the vegetable kingdom loaded with cancer fighting properties, fiber, and vitamins. Carrots certainly shine as well, and when you add virgin olive oil which is considered a healthy fat, and apple cider vinegar and raw honey, which are great traditional healing foods, what's not to like?

Coleslaw is lovely served with fish of course, but equally delicious even on its own with a baked potato and some greens, or with some chicken or steak. Enjoy!

COLESLAW

12 ounce bag of prepared coleslaw mix OR if you really want to do it right, use ½ head of green organic cabbage
2 carrots, grated
1/4 cup sliced red onion
1/3 cup chopped fresh parsley

DRESSING

3 tablespoons virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons raw apple cider vinegar (I like using Braggs brand)
2 teaspoons raw honey
¼ teaspoon cumin

Salt and pepper to taste (about ½ teaspoon sea salt and ¼ teaspoon fresh ground pepper)

Slice the cabbage in half then in quarters. Now slice very thinly and combine with other ingredients except for dressing ingredients. Whisk together dressing ingredients in a small bowl and dress the veggies to taste. Adjust seasonings to your liking. Some like it sweeter so just add more honey! This tastes best when in the refrigerator for a bit, to let the flavors mingle.

Chicken & Potato Salad Combo

By MARIE

Have you noticed sometimes after a cook out, and you're cleaning up you find some food leftover?

Well, recently that happened when I had a couple of pieces of barbecued chicken and a couple of cups of potato salad.

CHICKEN, POTATO SALAD

2-3 pieces of chicken breast or thighs and 2 cups or so of the potato salad
1 stalk celery (cut in small pieces)
enough mayonnaise for mixing

Cut the chicken in small pieces.

Add the potato salad and the celery and any mayonnaise you might need and mix until done. The combination is delicious.

Quarry Street Apartment Project Moves On To City Council

phase, they are not equity partners," said Johnson, who clarified that since AvalonBay purchased the land following the abandonment of plans by the original developer, the current application is considered new.

Edward Fleming, representing attorney for AvalonBay, described the company as "a national real-estate investment trust which owns and operates real-estate communities throughout the country."

"What we envision is young professionals as a strong demographic market here in the Quincy market," said Development Director for AvalonBay Communities Lars Unhjem. "Also a strong market for...more and more empty nesters."

He added that "snowbirds" who leave Massachusetts during the colder months were a target demographic as they continue to pay rent, even during the months they are absent.

The first phase of construction for the HighPoint Apartments, made up of 520 units on 75-acres, was completed in 2006.

"Our proposal is to try and advance what was originally the second phase of the HighPoint development," he said.

Structural foundations already exist for four of the buildings with utilities including water, gas, and sewer drainage in place. A fifth foundation still needs to be created.

Three of the buildings will be six-stories of wood framework over a podium of covered parking while the remaining two will be five-stories with surface parking.

All parking areas were installed by the prior developer, creating a preexisting structure for expansion by AvalonBay.

"That's sort of the framework we step into with this project which is a partially started and neglected space," said Unhjem.

Plans call for 561 surface parking spots and 117 under-building spots.

Pulling some spaces off of the surface will allow for the expansion of landscaping elements such as footpaths and benches.

Developers have also taken into consideration the need to accommodate renters' bikes.

"In the three buildings that have the integral vehicle parking under the building, there will also be covered bike parking," said Unhjem. "Otherwise, there are bike racks distributed throughout the site."

It has not yet been determined whether the parcel will be open to nonresidents but future plans may include a dog park for public use.

Resident amenities, which developers called "the real heart of the project," will include an outdoor pool, internal fitness center, club room, outdoor kitchen, barbecue area, and possibly a dog run to create a secure, yet open outdoor area for pets to play.

Over 2,000 new plantings, shrubs, and flowers will be introduced. "One of our big objectives is to try and eliminate this feel of an endless sea of surface parking and really try and make it feel more lush, more residential, more friendly," said Unhjem.

The addition of tree islands will also soften the aesthetic of the area.

"A large percentage of the project is devoted to open space," said Architect Edward Bradford of The Architectural Team, Inc.

Of the units, 46 are proposed to be studios while 158 will be one bedroom and 194 will be two bedrooms.

The existing woods on the north end of the site will provide a natural buffer between AvalonBay and abutters. The gateway to the property will be on Quarry Street.

Snow removal plans call for excessive amounts of snow to be moved to a large, grassy, open space for long term storage. Smaller snow amounts will be pushed off to the sides of parking areas and walkways. Snow will not need to be hauled off-site.

Unhjem estimated rents would be comparable to what is currently being charged at the HighPoint Apartments: $1,800 to $2,000 for a studio, $2,000 to $2,200 for a one-bedroom unit, and unspecified, higher prices for two-bedroom and more desirable corner units which are made up of more glass, larger balconies, and views of the Boston skyline and Boston harbor.

"I would love to know what the rents would be and that's our biggest guessing game," he said.

"One of the major issues for growth in the region is the availability of affordable housing," said Planning Board Chairman William Geary. "Affordable housing that is affordable to...young professionals who have just recently gotten out of college or graduate school and are carrying student loans and they want to live in this community but they may not be able to afford the rents that are being required by the economics of these particular developments."

AvalonBay deals in moderate to luxury priced apartments.

Geary said the aesthetics of the proposal were a "welcome departure" from the buildings already in the area including the HighPoint Apartments, which he said were intrusive and resembled housing projects in the Bronx.

Committee Member Coleman Barry said that he welcomed public commentary as it was "evidence that we usually weigh and we listen and we work with the developers to make changes as needed...we don't know how the neighbors feel about this project."

There is currently no timeline or cost for the project as it is too early in the planning stage, however building permit fees are expected to reach $750 million or higher according to Unhjem.

"Our proposal is to try and advance what was originally the second phase of the HighPoint Apartments," he said. "We are actually quite very interested in trying to improve the overall aesthetics of the neighborhood and we're committed to doing a great job."

Welch Group Celebrates Assisted Living Week With Tribute To Rita Welch

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's Annual Assisted Living Luncheon celebrated the residents and staff of the family-owned company's five assisted living communities, located in Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Quincy and Weymouth.

With musician Tom Zak on guitar and Deanna Kidd on vocals providing the sweet sounds of the golden oldies in the background, keynote speaker and Welch Group President Richard Welch began a tribute to his mother and company founder, Rita M. Welch, saying that "Music brings back wonderful memories," of growing up in a family dedicated to the welfare of others.

Mrs. Welch, along with her husband Frank established Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group more than 65 years ago, with the mission of providing compassionate nursing care to frail elders. The company has grown to encompass six nursing and rehabilitation centers, two independent living communities, the only Continuing Care Retirement Community from Boston to Cape Cod offering Garden Homes, two memory care assisted living communities, an Alzheimer's Care Center, three adult day health centers, one of which specializes in memory care and a child care center.

WELCH HEALTHCARE & Retirement Group President Richard M. Welch, keynote speaker at the company's annual assisted living luncheon, greets guests and family friends Barbara Chase, resident at Allerton House in Duxbury and Nicholas Pepe, resident of Allerton House in Quincy. Both Chase and Pepe are graduates of Quincy High School class of 1939 and former classmates of Welch Group founder Thomas F. Welch.

The National Assisted Living Week theme, "The Magic of Music," is being celebrated by the Welch Group with a string of special events for residents and their families at all five Allerton House Assisted Living Communities. The luncheon, held this year at Indian Pond Country Club in Kingston, is a favorite annual outing among residents and staff.

As Welch walked the room and greeted friends, neighbors and guests he met two of his father's former classmates from Quincy High School. Nicholas Pepe, now a resident at Allerton House in Quincy, who was the president of the 1939 class at Quincy High School and Barbara Chase who lives at Allerton House in Duxbury served as vice president that same year. Richard Welch noted that both of his parents would be gratified to know that their contemporaries were enjoying life at a Welch Group assisted living residence.

Democrat Koch Endorses Republican Baker For Gov.

the doorstep of local officials and local communities. We're not going to play that game."

Koch said this was his first time endorsing a Republican, but noted he previously voted for Ronald Reagan at one point. The mayor did not seem concerned his endorsement of Baker would affect his standing if he chooses to seek re-election in 2015; city elections are non-partisan.

"I think perhaps some of the folks who are extreme left, who only vote Democrat all the time, perhaps that will have an impact. I do run for mayor not as a Democrat – I am a Democrat, I am proud to be a Democrat. But I vote the person and I think Charlie Baker – his credentials, his leadership abilities, and his management style will go a long way moving the Commonwealth forward," Koch said.

"If I lose a few people along the way, I guess there's not much I can do about that."

Baker is opposed in the Nov. 4th election by Democratic Attorney General Martha Coakley and three independents. In an emailed statement, Coakley campaign press secretary Bonnie McGilpin accused Koch of basing his endorsement on the attorney general's decision to prosecute former state Treasurer Timothy Cahill – a Quincy Democrat – and two of Cahill's top advisors in 2012.

"Martha Coakley prosecuted Tim Cahill, a big supporter of Mayor Koch, for campaign finance violations, so it's no surprise to see Koch stand with Charlie Baker," McGilpin stated.

"Sometimes when you take on the tough fights like Martha has, the establishment gets upset."

Koch refuted that statement Tuesday, saying the election is about the future.

"Absolutely not," the mayor replied when asked if the case played into his decision to endorse Baker.

"I will say I know Tim Cahill, I know Al Grazioso, and I know Scott Campbell. They are outstanding members of the community. They are great husbands. They are great fathers. I call them friends and I'm proud to say that. But this is about the future of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, not about Martha Coakley's cases in the past. This is about Charlie Baker leading our Commonwealth."

After their meeting Sept. 12, Koch, Baker and Polito toured Quincy Center. Along the 30-minute tour, the mayor took Baker inside old City Hall – currently undergoing renovations. The two also viewed the Merchants Row project site and the Hancock Parking area, where Koch highlighted the Quincy Farmers Market and the Hannon Parkway. The tour ended inside the Bank of America branch at 1400 Hancock St., where Baker snapped photographs of the elaborate paintings inside the bank.

After the tour, Baker said Koch had chosen the correct path for redeveloping Quincy Center by pursuing a mixed-use development. He also spoke favorably about the plan to create a new park between City Hall and the United First Parish Church.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH'S endorsement of Republican Charlie Baker in the 2014 gubernatorial election drew a throng of print, radio and TV media. Koch, a Democrat, announced his support for the GOP nominee at the Quincy Center for Innovation at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Koch supported Democrat Steven Grossman, the state treasurer, who was defeated by Attorney General Martha Coakley in the primary last Tuesday. Also on hand to show their support were members of the Chamber and business community.

"There is clearly a ton of thought that has been put in to every piece of this – the transportation piece, the infrastructure piece, the development opportunity," Baker told reporters Sept. 12. "It's built off of where I think the mayor believes correctly is the biggest opportunity, which is mixed-use…a combination of retail, restaurant, hospitality, and residential. It seems to me the exact right way to think about it.

"I think the plan to rethink the way the streetscape works here and to put a park in is exactly right. This, for all intents and purposes, has really just become a rotary."

Baker was asked at the time if administration would provide funding to cover some of the cost of redevelopment. He said that issue did not come up during his meeting with Koch.

"We didn't talk specifically about that today. It would depend, to some extent, on the nature of what he had in mind," Baker said.

"But I certainly believe, with respect to all the issues around getting the thing going and solving the permitting issues and making sure the state is moving quickly on a lot of the things the city needs to make it happen – the answer to those is yes.

"But we didn't talk specifically about state funding on this one, although this is the kind of thing we should want our midsized city to be doing because it will generate a tremendous amount of economic opportunity, which the state, in the long run, will benefit from."

Weymouth Housing Director Tapped For QHA Board

In September 2010, Flaherty was appointed executive director of the Weymouth Housing Authority, a position he holds to this day. He was later named executive director of the Hull Housing Authority in May 2013.

Koch said Flaherty's background in public housing – particularly in maintenance – would serve him well on the board.

"I have known Michael for a number of years. He has a very, very strong background with public housing and his strength was maintenance. He understands the HUD rules, the DHCD rules, and understands housing and the maintenance challenges," the mayor said.

"I think he will be a great addition to the board of commissioners. I think he will be a big help to Jim Lydon, the director. I'm looking forward to him serving."

Lydon, who has been QHA's executive director since 2013, said he was happy the mayor plans to appoint Flaherty as a housing authority commissioner.

"I am very, very happy the mayor selected someone as knowledgeable as Michael," Lydon said. "I've known Michael since my appointment here in Quincy. He does a fabulous job in Weymouth and he is a Quincy resident. It's a great appointment."

'Puppy Doe' Memorial Bench Dedicated

Lilly the Hero Pit Bull and Blueberry the Pit Bull Therapy Dog. Jeff Brandt the Pit Bull Poet was also in attendance and read aloud a tribute to Puppy Doe entitled "A Tail of Woe."

"I think it's awesome that this terrible tragedy turned into something really good," said O'Meara.

Gov. Deval Patrick recently signed a bill drafted by Ayers relative to the penalty for killing, maiming, or poisoning of animals that increases penalties involving animal abuse and neglect.

With the passage of the bill, the penalty for abusing animals has increased from $2,500 to up to $10,000 for repeat offenders and maximum jail time has increased from two and a half years to five years in a state prison. Veterinarians are also now required under law to report signs of abuse to authorities.

"We honor this memorial bench which symbolizes our support, strength, and compassion we, as a community and state, have for our animals in the Commonwealth," said Ayers. "From this incident, we received a tremendous amount of support that led to the passage of a new law in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts...that prevents animal abuse."

"The fact of the matter was that the previous law in Massachusetts was not strong enough to protect our animals and we had some of the weakest laws in the nation," he said. "We now have some of the strongest laws in the nation."

Funds for the memorial bench were raised by the Quincy Animal Shelter and a gofundme page which showed individual donations of $5 to $500.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin touchingly recalled to the audience—while barely holding back tears — growing up with his beloved pet. "I grew up in the 50s and 60s not too far from here, and I had a Boxer when I was a child. Her name was Duchess and it was the quintessential story of a boy and his dog. And so one day, when I came home from school, my mom told me that Duchess was gone."

Following the blessing of the bench performed by Father Robert Carr, O'Meara along with other event organizers closed the ceremony by lighting candles and singing "In the Arms of an Angel" by Sarah McLachlan in Puppy Doe's memory.

Quincy resident Ginny Hutchins said she attended the dedication because she has been a pet lover her entire life. "I'm a pet nanny for the last twenty years," she said. "I just can't stand the cruelty...it's just very sad. I can't imagine the pain [Puppy Doe] went through."

Entertainment Complex Proposed At Parkingway Site

architectural firm that designed Gillette Stadium in Foxborough, among other notable projects – provided details of planned renovations at the Parkingway venue to those in attendance.

"We will be doing, essentially, a complete gut of the facility, starting from the basement where we will be introducing some private karaoke rooms. We will also be introducing an [Americans with Disabilities Act] compliant lift to get universal access from the ground level down to the basement," Choi said.

"On the ground level... you're going to be entering the facilities where the current Super Fitness is. You'll be walking into a reception area where you'll be greeted with staff that will assign you to a room or grant access to the lounge."

The ground floor, he explained, would include a lounge area with billiard tables as well as private rooms. The larger private rooms would feature billiard tables, flat screen televisions, and private bathrooms among other amenities.

"In terms of some of the basic functions of these so-called VIP rooms, there will be a large, regulation billiards table," Choi noted.

"There will be some lounge seating for people participating in private parties. There will be multiple flat screen televisions. There will be media equipment in terms of sound systems and speakers. There will be tables for food to be served, and beverages. There will also be universal access restrooms.

"It's a pretty user-friendly facility."

Also planned on the ground floor are smaller private rooms – with no billiard tables or private bathrooms – and a café that could be accessed from the street. According to Choi, the larger rooms would have capacity for 25 people and the smaller rooms would fit 17 or 18. Overall, he said the building would accommodate several hundred patrons at a time, though the actual figure is not yet known.

Rob Fleming, an attorney representing Lin through the application process, said the new venue would be targeted at all age groups.

"Tao is incorporating these things because a lot of different generations can enjoy these things. This is a concept that is going to work for families," Fleming said, comparing it to a Dave and Buster's, a chain restaurant that offers full food service and games, as well as alcohol.

"It will include a full alcohol bar as well – that's for the other generation, younger professionals."

The building sits in the Quincy Center zoning district, meaning approval from the Planning Board is necessary before renovations take place. This means, according to Fleming, the city will pay close attention to the proposal.

"This particular property is within a relatively new district – the Quincy Center zoning district," he explained. So we're under a lot of guidelines. We're under a lot of city oversight. The city will have a lot of oversight on the aesthetics – the exterior – as well."

Fleming anticipates a formal proposal being submitted to the city in six or eight weeks, which would kick off the review process.

Mark Urrea, a senior architect at Populous, said the exterior design has yet to be finalized. The firm is working off of three concepts – one that primarily uses wood on the exterior, another using mostly masonry, and one featuring mainly metal.

"Right now we are at the stage where we are exploring the possibilities of playing our part in revitalizing downtown Quincy. To that end, we've prepared three different options of different directions we could take," Urrea explained.

"Each of these represents a very different way of thinking about how we can break down the street face and make it more accessible – make it more visually appealing – and mark this corner (the façade of the building facing Hannon Parkway) as a very important corner in the urban landscape.

"And also make sure we're contributing to the street life by introducing more glass on the ground floor."

One point of contention several residents spoke about at the community meeting is the parking lot that sits on top of 150 Parkingway, which has space for approximately 40 vehicles. The roof lot is only accessible via Hancock Court, a street that includes several residential buildings. In order to mitigate concerns about patrons leaving the venue at night's end and driving on Hancock Court, Fleming said the roof lot might be made available only for valet parking.

"We discussed with Councillor Croall potentially [having] a mandated valet," Fleming said. "A valet where employees of this new establishment would have to retrieve vehicles from the roof top, bring them down, and people would exit there."

Another resident voiced his concern over the amount of noise that could emanate from the building. In response, Choi said the building's concrete structure, which he said was strong enough to "take on a Sherman tank," and high quality glass windows would prevent noise pollution.

"The glass we're using is a pretty high-end storefront/curtain wall that is used for corporate office buildings. The noise containment, as well as the thermal resistance, is extremely, extremely high," Choi said.

"In terms of noise containment, the building is built for World War III. In terms of the glass, it will contain the noise levels. It won't bother the neighbors."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TO A BRIGHTER FUTURE

As we age, not only does our skin wrinkle, but our teeth also darken. As the outer layer of enamel begins to wear away, the naturally yellow dentin lying beneath it is revealed. Although we cannot prevent this sign of aging from occurring, we can take steps to minimize it. The first such step involves visiting the dentist at least twice a year for professional cleanings to remove stains caused by smoking, coffee, red wine, berries, and other highly pigmented foods. Beyond that, professional tooth whitening can help increase the wattage of your smile. This process works best on teeth that have become yellowed. Tooth whitening may not work as well to improve teeth with a grayish or brownish tinge.

Whitening your teeth is considered to be one of the safest cosmetic dental procedures available. We believe that making your smile the best it can be will go a long way in improving your quality of life. We are currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617 479-6220 to schedule your appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you will be pleased with our "personal touch" philosophy and our dedication to your complete dental health. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. If you use anti-wrinkle cream and/or have resorted to skin-rejuvenation procedures, you should have your teeth professionally whitened to match the youthful look of your skin.

'ChowdaFest' Draws 1,500

By SCOTT JACKSON

An estimated crowd of 1,500 flocked to the Houghs Neck Maritime Center Saturday to sample more than two-dozen different preparations of chowder.

The highlight of this year's ChowdaFest was the chowder competition featuring 28 different entrants – seven individuals and 21 restaurants. Louis of Houghs Neck claimed the top prize in the restaurant category, as voted on by the event's attendees. Wood Road Deli of Braintree finished runner-up and Coops Bar & Grille of Quincy Point took home third place. Wood Road Deli won the competition in 2013; Louis finished third.

In the individual category, John Carvello finished atop the balloting followed by Walter Hubley in second place and Jason Stranahan in third. Hubley was runner-up last year as well.

Kimberly Fallon was the other big winner Saturday, as she was crowned the honorary mayor of Houghs Neck. The distinction is bestowed annually on the resident who raises the most money for the Houghs Neck Community Council. Jim McCarthy, president of the council, said Fallon has helped raise thousands of dollars for the group over the past seven years.

Saturday's ChowdaFest was the tenth edition of the annual event. The Houghs Neck Community Council uses the day to raise money for programs it hosts throughout the year in the neighborhood. The Houghs Neck Congregational Church hosted a bake sale during ChowdaFest, raising $700 for Interfaith Social Services, according to McCarthy. Boy Scout Troop 6, based at the church, also raised money by selling food and beverages.

ChowdaFest also featured live performances from the Danny Gallagher Band. The Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit was on hand to provide boat rides to patrons.

McCarthy said he was pleased with how the event turned out, noting rainstorms forecast for the start of ChowdaFest held off until it ended.

"It was a successful day," he said, "especially since rain was supposed to hit us at 2 o'clock and it didn't until 6 o'clock."

Presidents Overwhelm Wamps, 29-8

By JOE REARDON

When you have a back who can run and run well and wants the ball, the decision is an easy one for any head coach - let him run wild.

Quincy has that back in Jahvae Handsom-Fields and head coach Bill Reardon gave him plenty of work Friday night in the Presidents' nonleague matchup against neighboring Braintree. The junior back rushed for 205 yards and a pair of scores as the Presidents improved to 2-0 in this very young season with a 29-8 shellacking of the Wamps in a boisterous Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We love what Jahvae can do for us," said Reardon. "He kept motioning that he wanted the ball so we gave it to him. He's a work horse who loves working."

The win was the second lopsided decision in a row for the Presidents after defeating Malden Catholic 33-0 in the season-opener. Reardon has been preaching to his club since preseason the importance of avoiding

Mullaney, Bryson Presidents 5K Road Race Winners

By JOE REARDON

Mike Mullaney and Emily Bryson have been rolling through their cross country and track races at North Quincy High since they were freshman and the talented pair showed Sunday at the City of Presidents 5K they're just as comfortable racing on the roads.

Mullaney, who is undefeated on the trails so far this fall, never made it close as he cruised through the opening mile in 5 minutes, 31 seconds and kept right on going to finish the picturesque layout in 17:30 for the win in the field of 283 runners. Mullaney's time and controlled effort, in absolutely perfect early fall conditions, put him well in front of second-place finisher Andrew Gardner of Braintree who crossed the finish line in 18:06.6. Matt Meyers was third overall in 18:30.3.

"We have a meet in two days so I was just trying to run it at a faster pace," said Mullaney, who clocked a personal best of 9:46 in the 2 mile last spring. "I wanted to get a good workout in. We do distance on Saturdays, but I missed that. I really hope to get in the top 10 at the state meet."

Bryson easily defended her title and used the race as a workout as well. She is looking to improve on her sterling fourth-place finish in the Div. 1 State cross country race last fall. Like Mullaney, Bryson is undefeated in dual-meet competition and made the 5K a one-girl race. She was alone through an opening 6:14 mile and was well ahead by 2 miles, which she passed in 12:15. Her time of 19:12.6 put her at sixth overall and more than a minute in front of runner-up Shannon Kelly of Quincy. Kelly had a strong race as well, nailing down 12th place in 20:45.8, just in front of Woburn's Katie Murray who was a step back in third with a 20:46.7.

Bryson feels she is in better shape than a year ago and is focused on running well in the championship races in November. The Presidents event is one of her favorites of the year.

penalties, making tackles and taking advantage of turnovers. Quincy was busy on defense all evening, forcing four turnovers and intercepting Wamps quarterback Mike Mahoney once in what was Braintree's season opener.

"Any time you win it's a good thing," said Reardon. "I give Braintree a lot of credit. They're a very good team, but the turnovers hurt them tonight. I thought we played good in all three areas."

With the win, Quincy goes into its bye week in good shape with no major injuries. The Presidents will travel to Whitman-Hanson for their next game to take on the Panthers Sep. 26.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Presidents struck for 22 points in the second and went into halftime with a hefty 22-0 lead. Defensive lineman Isaiah Uzamere recovered a Braintree fumble at the Wamps' 31-yard line with 1:51 left in the first quarter and quarterback James Lam scored on a keep five plays later on a 5-yard run for the 6-0 lead.

Another fumble recovery at the Braintree 46 resulted in Quincy's second score. Handsom-Fields ran for 38 yards on five carries, including a 10-yard scoring scamper with 6:17 left in the half. Lam connected with Reda Laftih on the conversion pass and the Presidents went up by two scores, 14-0.

Led by running back J.P. Salisbury, who wound up with 135 yards rushing, Braintree put together a strong drive on its next possession. Starting at their own 29, the Wamps rolled down to the Quincy 39-yard line, highlighted by runs of 11 and 12 yards by Salisbury. The drive was snuffed out when a Mahoney pass was deflected and hauled in by Presidents' lineman Abraham Hoti.

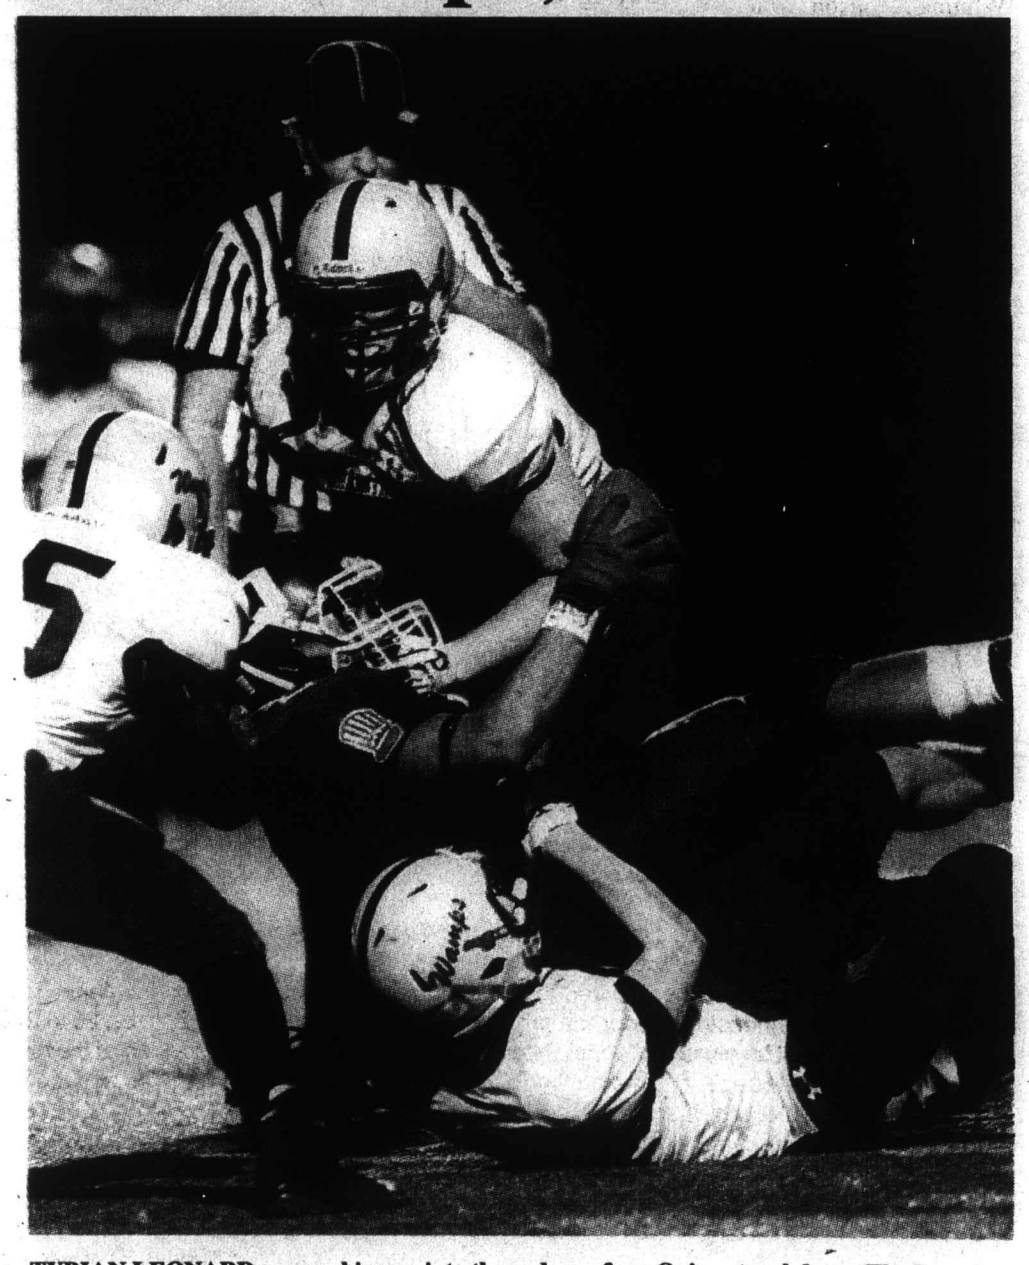
Quincy's play of the season came on the first play of the drive. Lam launched a pass down the left sideline to Andrew Cook, who was covered well. Cook bobbled the ball twice falling backwards and it looked as though it was going to be an incompletion. Cook did a great job of keeping his concentration and pulled the ball in for a 45-yard completion at the Wamps' 7-yard line. Running back Tyrian Leonard bulled through for the score on the next play and Lam rushed into the end zone on a conversion keep to push the Presidents' lead to 22-0 with 4:08 remaining in the half.

A Mahoney 21-yard pass to tight end Derk Anson and 25 rushing yards by Salisbury pushed Braintree to the Quincy 5-yard line with the clock ticking down to halftime. The Wamps' scoring bid was erased once again on a fumble that was recovered by the Presidents.

Handsom-Fields broke his biggest run of the game - a 45-yard scamper - as part of Quincy's 75-yard drive starting with 6:35 left in the third quarter. Handsom-Fields bolted in from the 7 and Laftih drilled the PAT to give the Presidents a 29-0 advantage with 3:37 still remaining in the third.

Braintree finally got on board with 5:04 remaining in the game. Salisbury had three runs for 39 yards, including a 2-yard touchdown score to make it 29-8. Drew Caruso had a 21-yard run during the drive and Chris Leonard broke a big 28-yard gain on the 95-yard march.

Reardon credited the hard-running Salisbury. "Salisbury can score any time he touches the ball," Reardon said.



TYRIAN LEONARD powers his way into the endzone for a Quincy touchdown. The 7-yard run pushed the Presidents' lead to 22-0 over Braintrees with 4:08 remaining in the second quarter. Quincy's bid for a second straight shutout was erased when the Wamps broke through for a touchdown with 5:04 left in the game.

Mullaney, Bryson Win City Of Presidents 5K Race

"I run it every year so it's kind of a tradition in my family," said Bryson. "I think I'm definitely ahead of where I was last year. I ran my home course (2.5 miles) last Tuesday in 15:22 which is only about seven seconds off my personal best. Last year I was running in the 16s. I'm way ahead and definitely happy about it. I'm really excited."

The race follows in the tradition of the iconic Jamie Cochrane and William H. Degan road races that were run over similar layouts in quiet Wollaston neighborhoods and along Quincy Shore Drive. And although it's the first year of the event, it mirrors the other two races.

"I've run this race for a long time so it's something nice to do every year," said Bryson's twin sister, Julia. "This is the first year of the City of Presidents, but Emily and I have been doing it since the first year of the Degan. It's pretty much the same route. It was our first road race so it has a special spot in our heart."

Julia, who was 13th last fall in the Div. 2 EMass Championships, is looking to break 19 minutes for 5K this season and place in the top 30 at the state meet. "You never know," she said. "Last year the course was harder than I thought, but it was nice that I just got there. This year the state meet is at Franklin Park and Emily and I are really familiar with that course."

Proceeds from the race are slated for improvements in parks throughout the city and health and wellness programs in Quincy's public schools. "What we're really trying to do is continue the tradition of the Degan and Cochrane races," said David Murphy, chairman of the Quincy Parks Conservancy. "What makes Quincy such a great place to live is community events like this. And for so many people to come out and support a great cause is what we're trying to accomplish today. The additional side of raising some funds is nice, but our real goal is to build on community and make people aware of our cause. This is a very strong tradition. I think we owe today's success to the folks who organized the Degan and Cochorane road races. We're really trying to build off the success that they've had and trying to raise money for some fantastic causes. It's a beautiful day for running."

Mayor Thomas Koch was on hand to greet the runners as they finished and commended the success of the race's predecessors, the Degan and Cochrane events. Koch said the race would also help fund the construction of walking trails through Merrymount Park.

"It was fifteen years under the Degan race and it helped a lot of charities in the city," said Koch. "They were ready to pass the baton on and unfortunately Jamie Cochrane was killed in a motorcyle accident. Everyone loved Jamie and that committee did it for a number of years in his honor. They ran their course and we thought it made sense to keep it as a city event. It's a gread day with a lot of volunteers and the weather is just perfect."

NQ Boys Soccer Bows To Scituate

By JOE REARDON

When a team like North Quincy is trying to find its identity on the field, it's an especially rough undertaking in the talent-laden Patriot League.

Playing against the likes of Hingham, Duxbury and a slew of other quality squads, there's little room to take a breath and relax. Plain and simple, the league will eat a team alive.

The only way out is to keep battling and avoid costly letdowns where the opponent can take advantage. North Quincy wasn't able to do that in Monday afternoon's showdown against Scituate at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Scituate was quick to the ball and capitalized on their opportunities enroute to a 4-0 win over North Quincy. The loss dropped the Red Raiders to 0-3-1 on the season after seeing games against Whitman-Hanson - a 1-0 loss - and Plymouth South - a 2-2 tie - slip away. North Quincy came out flat against Hanover and allowed two tallies in the first half. The Red Raiders played well in the second 40 minutes, but weren't able to put the ball in the net and fell 4-0.

The Whitman-Hanson loss was especially tough to swallow because the lone goal came on a shot that went off a North Quincy player into the net. "We deserved a 0-0 tie," said Red Raider head coach Rich Hanlon. "We played them tough."

North Quincy had trouble developing scoring opportunities against the Sailors and it cost them once again. Scituate scored twice in the first half and added a pair of tallies less than a minute apart late in the second to put the Red Raiders away. North Quincy has a stronger bench this year with 21 players and Hanlon didn't hesitate in substituting fresh legs in an attempt to muster more offense.

"We didn't have a lot of scoring opportunities and they had a lot," said Hanlon. "I thought in the first 28 minutes, before they scored their first goal, we were dead even. I thought we were outplaying them. A couple of mistakes, down 2-0, and I still thought we could come back. I think they had a little more in the tank at the end than we did. They had a lot more opportunities the last fifteen minutes or so.

"My guys have been playing hard like they've been all year. The Ws will come. They were just quicker to the ball today. It's quite obvious with eleven seniors that this is the year we're going to do something. I can just see us working like a machine at the end of the season, but it could be too much a little too late in this league."

Keeper Joey England continued to be a bright spot for the Red Raiders with several spot-on saves that kept North Quincy within striking distance of the quick Scituate team. England handled a booming Matt Logue bid just 2:01 in and regrouped fast enough to turn away the rebound shot. Defenders Franco Tuda and Mostafa El-Hashash were effective breaking plays up in the North Quincy end and helping out England, who was terrific all afternoon.

England was put in the box as a freshman when the starting goalkeeper went down and he wound up on the shelf last season with a hip injury. Now healthy, England has been solid in net for the Red Raiders.

Zach O'Neil gave Scituate a 1-0 lead with 15:08 left in the half when he handled a pass 15 yards out from Shane Granigan and quickly launched a left-footed shot to beat England. The Sailors extended their lead to 2-0 just under four minutes later as Kyle Medici redirected a kick that England had no chance at.

The defecit could have been worse for the Red Raiders if not for two huge saves by England in the final seven minutes of the first half on Medici shots. England knocked away a shot from the right side then stoned Medici on a point-blank bid from 10 yards out.

Scituate came out even stronger in the second half and registered at least half a dozen legitimate scoring chances on England. North Quincy had its chances as well with AK Nguyen just missing from 20 yards out and again on a shot that was headed for the short corner but was kicked away.

Scituate went up by three when Jack O'Connor drilled a low shot to the right side with 4:08 remaining in the game. The advantage went to 4-0 when Medici scored his second goal of the match, this one coming on an O'Connor cross that he timed perfectly and headed it in.

North Quincy was looking forward to Wednesday's game on the road against a very beatable Middleboro team before traveling to Duxbury on Friday to take on the perennially tough Dragons.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

CONSIDERING BACK SURGERY?

Spinal-fusion surgery may not relieve "non-specific" low back pain because it is often difficult to clearly trace the pain to a specific cause. When a surgeon joins two adjacent vertebrae together to form a single unit, it is supposed to prevent motion that can be the source of the pain. Fusion surgery is often used to correct a misalignment of the vertebrae (spondylolisthesis) by stabilizing the spine with metal screws and rods. However, there is no guarantee that this major operation will alleviate pain. In fact, there are concerns that joining the vertebrae will transfer the motion of the spine to adjacent joints, thereby accelerating wear. For these reasons, more conservative treatments should be considered before committing to surgery.

For both the chiropractor and the surgeon there is in basic terms no substitute for a careful, conscientious and painstakingly-thorough examination. Before surgery the treatment that is based on a wrong diagnosis is doomed to fail, be it back surgery or chiropractic adjustments. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are well trained to help you. You can trust our experience and expertise. For effective chiropractic care, call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and find the relief that natural health care can give you. We are located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. People who lift things improperly have double the risk of a herniated disc compared to those using the proper technique.

On the next series, Manets defensive tackle Pat Nazzaro blocked Milton's punt setting up a 17-yard TD run by Steinberg. Later in the second quarter, Steinberg raced down the sideline for a 77-yard TD run. James Dutcher rushed for the conversion to extend the Manets lead, 19-0 at the half.

The next game of the afternoon featured a battle for North Quincy bragging rights between the North Quincy Apaches (1-0) and Squantum Storm (1-0). A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

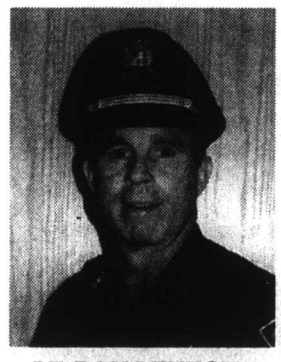
On Friday, September 5, 2014, at approximately 11:30 p.m., Community Police Officers Sean Glennon, Matt Miller, Greg Mar, Tim Simmons and Roger White were all assigned to the Mound Street Beach area of Quincy Point due to an increase in calls from area residents about public order offenses (public consumption of alcohol, drug offenses and disorderly behavior) as well as youths drinking and congregating in the Mound Street Beach/Hanlon Field area.

Officers Glennon and Simmons were dressed in plain clothes operating an unmarked police vehicle. The other officers were on bicycles. At this time, after checking out a suspicious car in the parking area to Mound Street Beach/Hanlon Field, another vehicle entered the lot. The driver was in violation of a city ordinance which prohibits persons or vehicles from being in city parks, beaches or playgrounds one hour after sunset until one hour prior to sunrise. The vehicle also had a defective headlight.

As the vehicle entered the lot, Officer White motioned for the vehicle to stop. Officer White made contact with the operator and requested a license and registration to which the operator replied, "I don't have one because it's after 8:00 p.m." Officer White asked the operator if his license to operate was restricted to which the operator replied, "Yes, I can only drive from 8:00 in the morning until 8:00 at night." The operator then identified himself and the Officers immediately recognized his name from information provided by the community as someone who was selling drugs.

Officer White then asked the passenger for identification and proceeded to the passenger's side. The passenger began fidgeting in his seat as if he was trying to stick something under him. Officer White looked into to the passenger's side window and observed the passenger to have some type of folded brochure in his crotch area. The brochure had a green herb inside it which was marijuana.

Officer White asked the driver what they were doing and the driver said, "I came here to smoke some weed with my friend." Officer White asked if there was more marijuana in the vehicle and the driver replied, "Yes, it's in the back," motioning with his hand towards the trunk. Officer Miller read the driver his Miranda warnings which he stated he understood. Officer White asked the driver to open the trunk which he did. Officers Mar and Glennon retrieved a backpack from the trunk which held a vacuum sealed bag of marijuana.



LT. DAN MINTON

The driver was placed in handcuffs by Officers Simmons and Miller. Officer Miller took out the driver's license from the driver's wallet and discovered a folded up $5 bill in front of the driver's license. Officer Miller opened the bill and discovered a white powder that he immediately recognized as cocaine.

Officer White contacted communications and verified that the driver's license was in fact revoked and that he had a hardship exception that allowed him to operate from 8:00 AM to 8:00 PM. The driver, a 26 year old Quincy resident, was charged with Operating a Motor Vehicle After Revocation, Possession of Class D With Intent to Distribute and Possession of Class B Drug.

A search of the vehicle produced a vacuum sealed bag of marijuana, along with a digital scale, several small plastic sandwich bags and a cell phone. Officer Glennon believed that these items were used to prepare and package marijuana while the cell phone was used to facilitate drug sales, so they were seized pending civil forfeiture. The passenger in the car was strongly advised and sent on the way. Nice Work!

IMPORTANT VEHICLE NOTICE: may come from a postcard, email or telephone solicitation. This is an offer to extend your auto warranty even if it has expired. This is a third party warranty and has no association with your original warranty when/where you bought your car. Historically, there have been problems with this type of offer. Even if it is a legitimate company, often times they do not pay for original parts and getting reimbursed is often difficult. In many cases, these companies are scammers, taking your money and then going out of business. The scammers try to scare you by listing the prices of major repairs, which most car owners do not encounter and secondly, may be covered by their manufacturer's warranty. There are so many exceptions in the contract, making it difficult to collect on a repair. Many of these companies have horrific records with the Better Business Bureau and the chances of recouping your losses are bleak. This is not to be confused with the manufacturer's extended warranty, which may cost more than the third party offer, but at least you know that the dealership is local and there is someone there to work with. If you are still considering a third party offer, as always, "Google" the company and put the word, "scam" after it – and then make your decision.

August Real Estate Activity 'Flat' In Norfolk County

Sales Volume Up 1%; Recorded Deeds Down 11%

Real estate activity in Norfolk County for the month of August, 2014 was flat with small growth in real estate sales volume offset by continuing challenges faced by the mortgage industry, reports Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

O'Donnell said one bright spot last month was the average sales price for commercial and residential property stood at $608,535, a healthy 13 percent increase year over year. He expressed continued confidence that the worst of the real estate slump has been surmounted and real estate activity, particularly in Norfolk County, would continue to show signs of improvement.

"The increased average real estate sales price is the clearest evidence that Norfolk County is an attractive place to live and conduct business," O'Donnell said. "Overall, the improving economy, evidenced by the reduced unemployment rate in Massachusetts, particularly east of Route 495, will in the near term result in increased real estate activity and improvements in the mortgage market."

Total dollar volume of real estate activity for the month of August increased 1 percent year over year. For the month of August, 2014, total sales volume was $699 million dollars compared to $693 million in August, 2013. The total number of recorded deeds fell 11 percent year over year with 1,149 recorded in August compared to 1,289 recorded in August, 2013.

Mortgage market continued to face challenges in August, 2013. Total number of mortgages recorded in August, 2014 fell 24 percent year over year.

Key factor in the reduced mortgage recording activity continued to be a slowdown in mortgage refinance activity. Total mortgage indebtedness did increase 49 percent year over year. The total mortgage indebtedness for August, 2014 was $1.9 billion compared to $1.3 billion in August, 2013.

Foreclosure deed recordings also remained flat. Twenty-one foreclosure deeds were recorded in August, 2014 compared to 20 in August, 2013. Monitoring of foreclosure deeds continues to be a top priority of Register O'Donnell and the staff of the Registry of Deeds. The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, working closely with its partners South Shore Home Consortium and Neighbor Works Southern Mass, continues to help identify services and counseling for those Norfolk County homeowners who have recently received a Notice of Foreclosure from a lender.

Homestead recording activity in August, 2014 decreased 13% year over year. A total of 1,138 Homesteads were recorded in August, 2014 compared to 1,315 in August, 2013. Information on the advantages of filing a Homestead Act can be found on the Registry website www.norfolkdeeds.org.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101 or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Travel plans could be interrupted by the re-emergence of a workplace problem that was never quite fully resolved. Deal with it at once, and then take off on that well-deserved trip.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Aspects favor cultural activities for sensuous Bovines. Attend a concert or an art show. Better yet, create something yourself (a poem, perhaps?), and dedicate it to someone special.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Respect any doubts you might now be feeling about a new situation. They could be reflecting your inner awareness that some essential information might be missing. Check it out.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's important to start the new month with as clean a slate as possible. Either complete all those unfinished tasks or pass them on to others who would be more than happy to take them on.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to cut down on expenses and tame that urge to splurge. Applying some financial discipline now could help the Big Cat ride out a possible monetary crunch later on.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Money matters are dominant this week. Recheck your accounts and make sure they're up-to-date. Also, pay more attention to personal issues before they become major problems.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might be tempted to employ the same tactics as your adversary, but that could backfire. Better to use the same balanced approach that has worked for you before and could again.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A changing workplace environment could stir up confusion as well as apprehension. Best to ignore the rumors and get the facts. You could find that the changes bring positive elements.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Communication is easier this week with people ready and eager to hear what you have to say. Also, check for possible technical problems before you start your new project.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Aspects favor change for the usually traditional Goat. Opening your mind to possibilities you had ignored could lead you to make decisions you once considered improbable.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Making personal as well as professional adjustments to changing conditions might be easier with more information explaining the "hows" and "whys" of the situations in question.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With a growing tide of positive reactions to buoy your confidence, this could be the right time to put the finishing touches to your new project and get it well and truly launched.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for setting an example of quiet, calm reasoning in the midst of chaotic conditions.

Cong. Beth Shalom Celebrating Holidays

As the fall Jewish holiday season approaches, Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills (formerly Temples Shalom of Milton and Beth El of Quincy) invites interested individuals and families in the surrounding area to join in observing and celebrating the various holidays.

High Holiday services begin with Erev Rosh Hashanah on Sept. 24th, under the direction of spiritual leader Rabbi Alfred Benjamin and Cantor Saralee Shrell-Fox. There will be separate children's services and activities, and a Community Family Service on Sept. 25th.

Tashlich, the symbolic casting away of sins on Rosh Hashanah, will also be on the 25th at 5 p.m. at Turner's Pond on Central Ave., Milton. After Yom Kippur on Sept. 27th, other holidays will follow during October, including special family-oriented holiday events, such as eating in the Sukkah and parading with the Torah scrolls on Simchat Torah.

All services and activities at Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills are open to the entire Jewish community. High Holiday Services this year will be held in the main sanctuary of First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton.

Other holiday observances will be at the church's Johnson Great Hall Sanctuary, with entry at the rear. For security reasons, non-members interested in attending High Holiday services or other events are encouraged to call the Temple office at 617-698-3394.

The Rabbi Jerome Weistrop Religious School, which provides small, twice-a-week classes, pre-school Story Hour, holiday family events, field trips and more, is accepting applications during the month of September, and will meet at the Pierce Middle School, 451 Central Ave., Milton. Jewish children of all grade levels are encouraged to enroll and participate in a quality Jewish education.

Families interested in the religious school or the synagogue are invited to attend our Open House at Pierce Middle School on Sunday, Sept. 21st from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. and meet Rabbi Benjamin and Education Director Nancy Mollitor. First-time visitors who call ahead to attend the Open House may receive complimentary seats for one High Holiday service.

Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills is an egalitarian synagogue and welcomes interfaith families. For further information about Temple services, events or membership, call the Temple office at 617-698-3394 or visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org.

THOMAS P. KOCH
MAYOR

10,000 Quincy students are walking and bicycling to class every day. Mayor Thomas P. Koch and the Department of Public Works remind you to be especially vigilant for pedestrians and bicyclists before and after school hours.

Back to School Safety

Our children will be crossing in front of the bus. Pay close attention and obey all school bus traffic signals.
When a school bus has its lights flashing, traffic in all directions must stop. Once flashing signals are off, it is safe to proceed.

Operate your vehicle at or below the allowed speed limit. Be mindful when entering school zones that the speed limit is reduced to 20 miles per hour.

Always come to a complete stop at stop signs and signals. Look around your vehicle and allow any pedestrians to cross. You must yield to pedestrians entering or using a crosswalk in your travel path. Proceed only when it is safe to do so.

All children riding bicycles should wear a helmet. Children are inexperienced riders and do not always follow the rules of the road. When approaching a bicyclist maintain a safe distance.

Use caution when backing your vehicle. Every vehicle has blind spots and some children are not tall enough to be visible. Double check to ensure there are no pedestrians near or behind you before you back up.

Our children are tomorrow's leaders.
Please keep them safe today and everyday.

New Facility To Treat Addiction

- Koch In Full Support
- Neighborhood Meeting Tonight At Central School

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Representatives from the Phoenix House New England say their new facility opening in December in Wollaston at 43 Old Colony Ave. will provide needed addiction treatment services, particularly for those abusing opioids, without taxing the community and hopefully will help remove some of the stigma attached to drug and alcohol dependence.

"There has been a 19 percent increase over a ten year period of people admitted for treatment for opiate addiction or heroin addiction in the city of Quincy alone," said President of the Gavin Foundation John McGahan who is working in partnership with the Phoenix House.

Adult clients, 18-years-old and older, will be provided with inpatient, short-term drug rehabilitation and detoxification services.

Patient care for up to 64 clients will be overseen by doctors, nurse practitioners, social workers, and alcohol and drug dependency counselors.

Currently, there are Phoenix House facilities in Dorchester, Holyoke, Springfield, and in over nine other states.

Vice President and Senior Program Director for Phoenix House New England Neil Gaer said the building, which used to be home to the Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts facility, happened to be on the market and was built to accommodate a medical or rehabilitation program,

QHA Commissioner Confirmed

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously confirmed the appointment of Michael Flaherty to the Quincy Housing Authority's board of commissioners Monday night.

Flaherty was nominated to the board by Mayor Thomas Koch. Flaherty is currently the executive director of both the Weymouth and Hull Housing Authorities. He previously worked as the director of maintenance and later the director of operations for the Somerville Housing Authority. Flaherty started at the Boston Housing Authority as a contract laborer, working his way up to assistant general manager of elderly and disabled program.

Before the council voted to confirm the appointment, Councillor Doug Gutro asked Flaherty if he would be able to act independently on the board of commissioners while at the same time being a peer of QHA Executive Director James Lydon as the head of two neighboring housing authorities.

"Your credentials, based on what I've read, sound terrific," Gutro stated. "I just want to have the confidence you're going to be able to act independently as a commissioner."

Flaherty, who grew up in Boston's public housing projects, responded by saying the relationship between him and Lydon would change with the appointment to the board of commissioners. He also said he has made public housing his life and will continue to do so.

"I just want to interject one thing: I am no longer his peer. I'm actually a commissioner of the Quincy Housing Authority and that changes the dynamic of the

Koch Proposes New Massage Parlor Rules

By SCOTT JACKSON

In an effort to clamp down on the illegal sex trade, Mayor Thomas Koch has proposed new regulations that would require massage parlors doing business in the city to receive licenses from Quincy's Health Department.

The new regulations – referred Monday night to the City Council's ordinance committee for further review – would apply to businesses offering reflexology or Asian bodywork, including acupressure, AMMA therapy, Chi Nei Tsang, five-element Shiatsu, integrative eclectic Shiatsu, Japanese Shiatsu, Jin Shin Do, Bodymind Acupressure, macrobiotic Shiatsu, traditional Thai massage, Tuina, Zen Shiatsu, and Ayurvedic medicine.

National Honor For Fallen FF John Austin

Name Added To Firefighters Memorial In Colorado Springs

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Fallen Quincy firefighter John T. Austin was honored, along with over 160 other firefighters who have lost their lives over the last year in the line of duty, during the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) Fallen Fire Fighter Memorial Service which took place Saturday in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Capt. John Gillan, along with about ten members of the Quincy Fire Department, arrived in Colorado Springs last Wednesday to begin preparing for the service which honors firefighters and emergency medical personnel throughout the U.S. and Canada who have lost their lives in the line of duty or as a result of illnesses — such as cancer — caused by the hazardous conditions they face while on the job.

A total of 168 names were etched onto the black granite of the Wall of Honor for this year's ceremony, joining the names of those lost going back to 1976.

Austin's mother Lillian Austin went out to Colorado on Wednesday along with her husband John, daughter Jane, and several other family members for the somber ceremony.

The 37-year-old, 11-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department suffered a fatal heart attack while at Engine 5 as he prepared to respond to a call July 8, 2013.

He left behind his then 2-year-old son John "John-John" W. Austin.

"I was very proud of him," said Lillian who estimated that 5,000 family members and firefighters were at the event.

Gillan said the ceremony began at 1 p.m. following a firefighter motorcycle procession. Afterwards, an Honor Guard of 500 men and women played the bagpipes and drums.

The names of the fallen were then read aloud, each followed by the ringing of a bell.

He said this was the first time the Quincy Fire Department, along with its color guard, had been out to Colorado for the memorial service.

"[The IAFF] really takes care of the families," said Gillan. "They pick them up at the airport and bring them to family meetings."

The IAFF also organized a reception dinner Friday night attended by 1,500 family members, said Lillian.

She recalled speaking to a woman who was also there to honor the memory of a lost family member. She was having a difficult time coming to terms with the death of her loved one. "I told her, she just has to move on. There's life afterwards," she said.

The two exchanged email addresses and plan on contacting each other for emotional support when things get difficult.

Lillian said she felt a sense of friendship and camaraderie with everyone there because they had all experienced such devastating, personal losses.

"They each had a story to tell," she said. "It was good to see people getting through it."

Gillan said that plans are in place to construct a new, larger memorial to be completed next year at a cost of $3 million. The existing portions of the granite wall will be incorporated into the new design which will accommodate more names.

There are currently 3,000 names etched onto the Wall of Honor.

FAMILY AND FRIENDS of fallen Quincy firefighter John T. Austin attended a memorial service in Colorado in honor of Austin and other firefighters who lost their lives over the past year. Austin's name has been added to the Fallen Firefighters Memorial in Colorado Springs. From left are: Jane Austin (sister), Ann Austin (aunt) William Austin (uncle and Boston Fire Lieutenant), John Austin (father) Lillian Austin (mother), Maggie Brown (cousin), Becky Brown (cousin), and Mariann Austin (aunt). John Austin is holding a framed IAFF (International Association of Fire Fighters) flag. The flags were presented to all recognized firefighters who have passed away this past year to a family member during the ceremony.

Retired Clerk Of Committees 'Represents The Best Of Quincy'

JEANNE REARDON (center) received a plaque in recognition of her 34 years of service as the City Council's clerk of committees Monday night. Each of the nine current councillors, and nine former councillors, lauded her during the ceremony. From left: Councillors Michael McFarland, Brian Palmucci, and Kirsten Hughes; former Councillor Peter Kolson; Council President Joseph Finn; Councillors Brian McNamee, Margaret Laforest, and Brad Croall; Jeanne's daughter-in-law, Michele, and grandchildren Brooke and Nicholas; Councillor Kevin Coughlin; former Councillors John Keenan, Pat McDermott, and Leo Kelly; Jeanne's son, Bill, the head coach of Quincy High's football team; former Councillors Bruce Ayers and Chuck Phelan, Councillor Doug Gutro; and former Councillors Dennis Harrington and Dan Raymondi.

City councillors past and present praised longtime Clerk of Committee Jeanne Reardon Monday night.

Reardon served as clerk of committees from 1980 until her retirement earlier this year. During her tenure, she worked with 41 councillors and five different mayoral administrations. After receiving a plaque at the start of Monday's meeting in recognition of her service, Reardon said it was a privilege to work with the council over the years.

"It was distinct privilege to work with all of you and those who came before you," she said. "I enjoyed seeing Quincy blend the old with the new and witness countless pieces of legislation pass. It was an honor to work with the public and it was an education in itself to hear two sides to almost every issue, and sometimes even more.

"As Quincy grew, my family grew and I have been blessed with six grandchildren – three girls and three boys – ages 5 to 15. I can see the best in life is yet to come."

"I fondly remember in the beginning," Reardon later added, "when most councillors respectively addressed me as 'young lady' whenever they wanted me to do something. They were like grandfathers to me then, then like fathers and finally more like sons and grandsons. That's when I knew it was time to retire."

Reardon also went around the rostrum, individually complimenting each sitting councillor as well as the council's staff and the administration officials who work with the council. She also recognized the many media members she worked with, including late Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth, late Sun reporter Tom Henshaw, and Nancy McLaughlin, who Reardon said remains her friend to this day.

Each of the current councillors took turns praising Reardon, as did nine former councillors – Bruce Ayers, Mike Cheney, Dennis Harrington, John Keenan, Leo Kelly, Peter Kolson, Pat McDermott, Chuck Phelan, and Dan Raymondi – who attended Monday's meeting.

"The person we are about to honor here this evening really deserves far more than a plaque, quite hon-

FIRE AND WATER

Opal, the birthstone for October, is an unusual mix of "fire and water" in that the gemstone is composed of a hardened silica gel that usually contains 2% to 6% (or more) water. Therefore, it actually benefits from exposure to water and humidity, as well as a light coat of oil. Its other unusual aspect is the flash of color (iridescence) that changes in accordance with the viewing angle. Precious opal occurs in a number of color varieties. The most popular is white opal, which provides a white backdrop for the dazzling play of blue, green, pink, and yellow colors. Black opals are a deep peacock blue or slate gray with flashing red, yellow, and green lights.

Until the beginning of the 19th century, opals were relatively rare. But then interest in them boomed making them one of the most popular gemstones. Because of their consistency, opal jewelry should be worn as often as possible so they can receive the needed humidity from the air and from the skin of its wearer. • On Oct. 11, 1809, explorer Meriwether Lewis dies under mysterious circumstances at Grinder's Tavern in Tennessee. Most historians have concluded that Lewis' death was a suicide brought on by depression over financial worries, but some believe he was murdered, possibly by the tavern owner.

• On Oct. 12, 1810, when Bavarian Crown Prince Louis marries, the citizens of Munich are invited to attend the festivities. The decision to repeat the festivities the next year gave rise to the tradition of the annual Oktoberfest. Today, more than 1 million gallons of beer are consumed annually at Oktoberfest.

• On Oct. 7, 1913, for the first time, Henry Ford's entire Michigan automobile factory is run on a continuously moving assembly line. A motor and rope pulled the chassis past workers and parts, cutting the man-hours required to complete one "Model T" from 12-1/2 hours to six.

Joe Brill: One Lucky Guy

Joe Brill – to put it mildly - is one lucky guy.

In June 2012, Joe shattered one of his vertebra after falling 15 feet from a ladder. While he was hospitalized, doctors found small spots of cancer in one of his kidneys. After he healed from his broken back, he was operated on to remove the spots. But that routine procedure became major surgery when surgeons discovered his entire left kidney was full of cancer and removed it.

"If I hadn't fallen off that ladder, I probably would have had three months to live," he says.

Joe, 59, a lifelong Quincy resident, made a full recovery and returned to work at the State Lottery in January, 2013.

Brill, considered the city's baseball ambassador and one of the biggest Red Sox fans you'll ever find, has attended hundreds of games since he was four or five years old.

One of those games was the Red Sox - New York Yankees match-up at Fenway on Sept. 15, 2013. It was Yankees' future Hall of Fame reliever Mariano Rivera's last appearance in Boston before retiring from the game.

Joe settled into his field box seat accompanied by the daughter of one of his classmates at Quincy High School. Her mother had passed away recently and wanted to go to a game at Fenway. One of her girlfriends also joined them.

Five minutes after taking his seat, Joe keeled over. Medical personnel were alerted and soon they were on scene. One man attempted the Heimlich maneuver because they thought he was choking. Or perhaps it was a seizure.

EMTs from Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital who are located at the ball park to respond to any medical emergency for every game found Joe in cardiac arrest. In the ambulance, they broke his ribs doing CPR and shocked him with a defibrillator. No response. A tube was inserted down his windpipe and air pumped into his lungs in a desperate attempt to resuscitate him as he was rushed to the hospital.

After 30 minutes without a heart beat – clinically deceased – Joe's heart started beating again. He was placed on life support and induced into a medical coma for eight days.

Joe's heart attack soon circled the city and beyond. His family updated his Facebook page and asked for continued prayers. Hundreds gathered at a Mass at Most Blessed Sacrament Church in a show of spiritual strength for Joe and the Brill family.

Weeks later – after making a full recovery – Joe read all the comments on his Facebook page. The prayers and words of concern overwhelmed him.

"I read the postings beginning with the day that I had my heart attack and over the next eight days and I was in tears. I thought 'this poor bastard is gong to die.'

"Then I realized this is me."

Doctors discovered Joe was born with a birth detect that narrowed two veins going to his heart. A stint was inserted in his main heart artery. Doctors told his family he would need a heart transplant. But Joe defied the odds and within weeks made a full recovery – without the need for a transplant.

He was back again at Fenway Park Oct. 30 when the Red Sox clinched their third World Series title in nine years defeating the Cardinals in six games. He rode along in one of the famous Duck Boats in the rolling rally that has come to symbolize and celebrate Boston sports championships.

Doctors have been hard pressed to pin point how Joe recovered so quickly and completely. He's heard the word miracle a few times.

But Joe and others close to him believe he has guardian angels watching over him.

His beloved brothers, John and Bob.

John Brill died in a tragic motorcycle accident on Wollaston Beach Sept. 4, 1982.

Bob Brill died 31 years ago today – Sept. 25, 1983 – after losing a courageous bout with cancer. Bob was a

One the lower left are the tracks of the Quincy Quarries Railroad winding their way down to meet the tracks of the Granite Branch of the Old Colony Railroad. The Old Colony tracks run across the bottom of the picture which is now the Southeast Expressway. Most of the houses in the lower foreground are still extant on California Avenue. Wollaston And Wishes

Last Friday while in Wollaston Center I walked by the old Wollaston Theatre and noticed a large sign reading, "Park-in Day at the Wolly!"

As I talked with the folks hosting this unique event, I found out both the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and the city's Planning and Community Development Department were jointly participating in this annual PARK(ing) DAY. Instead of a parking space on the street, there was popcorn, activities and a chance to share what the term community really means. Folks like myself stopped by or perhaps parked a moment in front of the old movie theatre to talk about what the City of Quincy, what the Wollaston neighborhood offers people.

Everyone was given an opportunity to hang a wish on the Chinese Wishing Tree. My wish as someone who called Quincy home for a quarter-century and who still loves the place today was that there continued to be good communications between the old and new Quincy residents. I also wished that something be done with the historic Wollaston Theatre. It seems a crime to see it abandoned for so long. I have many great memories of this old movie palace.

Squantum Fishing Pier

I note that a fishing pier will be built on Squaw Rocks in Squantum. Sometime ago, folks were able to fish off the wharf in the boat basin at Marina Bay. Eventually, that area was fenced off.

I became aware of the old ferry pier at Marina Bay. When I first went fishing, there were only a few people. Eventually, a forest of fishing lines appeared. Then trash barrels were placed. Finally, the pier was closed off.

I foresee that the fishing pier at Squantum will become just as popular and overcrowded. To the south, and adjacent to Squaw Rocks is a large beach. It is relatively inaccessible because of a steep drop off. A staircase could be built down to it. The beach could be apportioned for bathers and fisher folk as is the case at Avalon Beach in Quincy Point. This would be an adjunct to the Squaw Rock pier.

Negative Reaction To So. Quincy T Station

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of a team examining the environmental impact of a proposed South Quincy MBTA station received a distinctly negative reaction from a group of local residents during a public workshop.

About 100 people attended the meeting, 15 of whom spoke out. All who did speak at that meeting voice strong, and occasionally passionate, disapproval of the proposed project.

"I'll do everything in my power to keep this station from being built," said Robert A. Cerasoli, Democratic candidate for state rep. in the First Norfolk District. He pointed out he had obtained enough signatures for a referendum so voters from several districts in Quincy and Weymouth could express their approval or disapproval in November.

Rep. Joseph E. Brett said he backed the expansion of rapid transit, but suggested a new station be built at the dump site in South Braintree and not in South Quincy.

"We don't need a terminal station a half-mile from Quincy Center," he said.

After Jack Leary – an MBTA spokesman and project manager for the South Quincy study – said there was no plan to put a terminal station in South Quincy, Brett suggested a platform station – without the proposed 1,800-vehicle lot – could be built, if future need showed it was necessary.

The primary function of the station, which would include access ramps to Routes 3 and 128, would be to serve commuters from Quincy and other South Shore communities. The environmental impact analysis being conducted by engineer firm Parsons, Brinkerhoff, Quade and Douglas was to determine the impacts on both the physical and social aspects of the area and to decide what kind of station, if any, should be built.

"If we find a bad impact is indicated, we will try to develop means to minimize these impacts," Robert Joseph, the firm's project manager, said.

SHEETS: DISTRIBUTE AGENDA AT MEETINGS

In an effort to make City Council meetings more meaningful to audience members, Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets wants to distribute agenda copies before each meeting.

Sheets planned to introduce a resolution at an upcoming meeting requesting the distribution of agendas.

Noting council meetings may sometimes "appear cut and dried" to the listener in the audience, Sheets indicated that, with agenda in hand, the observer would experience more "educational and positive exposure" to the workings of city government.

Sheets said the purpose of the resolution was two-fold: Making council meetings more meaningful to regular attendees and encourage others to attend.

"One reason why people don't attend the meetings regularly is because they don't have a good understanding of what is happening," Sheets explained. "They need a road map to follow where we are going."

Sheets was optimistic his colleagues would approve the distribution of agendas.

"I see no reason why they shouldn't pass it," he said. "After all, it is the people's city and they should know what is going on."

Historic New England Hosting Wollaston Walking Tour Oct. 4

Historic New England invites the public for a Wollaston Walking Tour Saturday, Oct. 4, from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

The tour departs from the Moswetuset Hummock parking area, East Squantum Street, near junction with Quincy Shore Drive.

The tour is $5 for Quincy residents and Historic New England members, $10 for nonmembers. Registration is required.

In 1770, Edward Pierce, a Dorchester carpenter, built a mansion for Col. Josiah Quincy. Originally surrounded by fields and pasture, the estate's boundaries once encompassed several hundred acres and reached from what is now Hancock Street to Quincy Bay. When the house was built, the area around it, now a densely populated neighborhood known as Wollaston, was very rural.

The walking tour illustrates how the area evolved over a 300-year period. Explore Moswetuset Hummock, the seat of the ruling chief Chickatawbut; see Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor through the eyes of Col. Josiah Quincy and General George Washington; and witness the development of an early twentieth-century middle class neighborhood that reflects a range of architectural styles. Tour Historic New England's 1770 Josiah Quincy House following the walking tour.

QCAP Best Chef Challenge At Granite Links Oct. 9

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) invites guests to cook up some fun at its Third Annual Best Chef fundraising event Thursday, Oct. 9 at 6 p.m. at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

Some of the area's most celebrated chefs will compete against each other in a battle of culinary skills. The event, hosted by Dave Andelman of the Phantom Gourmet, features the talents of Chef Ming Cao of the Fuji Group; Chef Tony Derienzo of Abby Park; Chef Joel Hathaway of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy; and Chef Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove and Wahlburgers.

"We are so grateful to the chefs, their restaurants, judges, and our supporters for contributing their talent, time, and resources to this event," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's executive director. "Thanks to their efforts, we hope to have a fun and exciting night while also raising critical funds so that we can continue to deliver our core services."

The challenge: In a race against the clock, the chefs must use secret ingredients commonly provided by QCAP's Emergency Food Center – the organization's food pantry. Using only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, they must take these basic ingredients and create a gourmet dish for a panel of judges. The judges will score them based on taste, originality, use of secret ingredients, and plating. The chef with the most points will be crowned "Best Chef."

"These are ingredients that our clients use on a daily basis to create healthy and tasty meals for their families, all within a very limited budget," Strollo said. "Making a healthy meal is a challenge for any family and it's even harder when you have limited resources to buy food."

The judges won't be the only culinary connoisseurs that night. Guests can weigh in on their favorite chef in the "People's Choice" competition. The participating chefs will be providing dishes that reflect the flavors and styles of their own restaurants. Guests can sample their dishes and vote for their favorite chef.

"Each chef and restaurant brings a different perspective and flavor profile so our guests will certainly be in for a treat," Strollo said.

The night will also feature raffles and live and silent auctions, including a week vacation in Aruba; two sets of Putnam Club seats to the New England Patriots; a diamond necklace valued at $2,500; a family excursion package to the Great Wolf Lodge; autographed memorabilia; sporting and entertainment event tickets; fine art; and golf, restaurant, and spa gift certificates.

Tickets are $100 per person and $175 per couple. Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, which serve nearly 20,000 unduplicated people annually in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull, and surrounding Norfolk County, South Shore, and Metro Boston communities. Services also include adult education and workforce development, financial literacy education, Head Start early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, mortgage foreclosure counseling, and housing services.

Major sponsors include Bank of Canton, Stop & Shop, State Street, Woodard & Curran, Granite Links, the Law Office of George Burke, Eastern Bank, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane, Mutual of America, Loomis & Sayles, and Quincy Mutual, among others.

After escaping the clutches of a crafty cat, Ugly embarks on an adventure, meeting several colorful characters who teach him how to accept himself just the way he is.

The production features more than 50 cast members, including numerous children from the local community. Sets will loom larger than life, reminiscent of movies such as Honey, I Shrunk the Kids, to accentuate the characters' small size.

Tickets are $15 general admission, $10 students and seniors, $5 children 12 and under. For tickets or more information, call 617-745-3715.

De Castros Reunited On Second Anniversary

By SCOTT JACKSON

A couple originally from Quincy were recently reunited – on their second wedding anniversary – after the husband returned home from a seven-month tour of duty in Afghanistan.

Everton De Castro, a 2006 Quincy High School graduate, and his wife Kelly (Keefe) De Castro, a 2008 QHS graduate, were married on Aug. 28, 2012. About six months after they were married, he went to boot camp and then returned home.

"They got married, had about six months together, and he was off to boot camp," Kelly's mother, Tina Keefe, said.

Everton, who played football for Quincy High School and then for the Quincy Militia before enlisting in the U.S. Army, was deployed to Afghanistan in January of this year. While he was in Afghanistan, Kelly lived with her family in Quincy and worked as a receptionist at Gentle Dental.

After Everton spent 221 days overseas, the couple was reunited Aug. 28. They are currently living at Fort Bliss, a military base headquartered in El Paso, Texas. Kelly had travelled to Texas a few days prior, accompanied by her father, Jack, in anticipation of the reunion.

The De Castros now plan on heading to Jamaica for a vacation Oct. 3.

"They never really got a honeymoon so they figured they would go to Jamaica," Tina Keefe said.

The Keefes plan on visiting their daughter and son-in-law in January.

Meatloaf Made With Rice Krispies

By MARIE

I've made meatloaf dozens of times and as many ways, but I never made it with Rice Krispies from a recipe I found recently which turned out wonderful.

MEATLOAF WITH RICE KRISPIES
1/4 cup ketchup
2 cups Rice Krispies (instead of breadcrumbs)
1 medium onion (finely chopped)
2 pounds ground beef (or any favorite)
1 8-ounce package shredded mozzarella cheese
salt and pepper
1 egg sightly beaten
2 tablespoons sweet relish
1 small pepper, diced (optional

Mix the ketchup and relish together if you prefer this kind of seasoning. It can be mixed when the beef is added to the recipe.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

In a large bowl, combine the onion, Rice Krispies, cheese and egg and mix together. Add the beef and mix thoroughly.

Transfer onto a baking pan and shape like a log. Bake for one hour.

Pizza Omelet

By SUZIE

I don't know anyone who does not like pizza. LOVE is more like it. Here is a fun and healthy recipe that could be served for any meal along with a salad.

An estimated 94 % of Americans eat pizza regularly and the average American eats about 46 slices per year, with more than 3 billion pizzas sold per year. A funny statistic is that 36% of people consider pizza to be the "perfect breakfast." So here I am with my pizza omelet for you to try. The crust on this pizza is made with eggs which is a healthy twist and makes a great breakfast.

PIZZA OMELET

- 2 organic eggs, whisked with sea salt and pepper to taste along with a tablespoon of parmesan OR pecorino romano (made from sheep's milk) and ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon or so of olive oil to heat in the pan
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 2 tablespoons of minced red pepper (or mushrooms)
- ½ teaspoon dried basil
- ¼ teaspoon dried oregano
- 3 tablespoons or so of tomato sauce, or spaghetti sauce that is warmed

Coat a small skillet with olive oil and heat until very hot on medium heat. NOT high. Add herbs and onion/pepper/mushroom combo. Cook until fragrant. Now increase heat a bit and add in egg mixture.

Cook as you would a regular omelet by not disturbing it for about 30 seconds, then using your spatula lift edges of omelet up to allow the runny egg to go under and cook. Keep doing this until it is firm enough to flip over. Flip and cook a bit more until done and slide onto plate. Top with warm tomato sauce and serve with a little extra parmesan or romano cheese if you like. ENJOY!!!

New Legislation Gives Quincy College Greater Autonomy

New legislation signed into effect by Gov. Deval Patrick will provide Quincy College – the only municipally-owned college in the Bay State – with greater autonomy.

The legislation, known as 'An Act Relative to Quincy College,' was championed by Sen. John Keenan and Reps. Ron Mariano, Bruce Ayers, and Tackey Chan. The legislation gives Quincy College greater independence and flexibility. It allows the college to retain national accreditation.

Specifically, the act gives the college more authority to control its finances, own and operate auxiliary enterprises, oversee collective bargaining, and exempts the college from the city control of purchasing.

Additionally, it allows two board of governors members to be residents of Plymouth County. Nearly one-quarter of all Quincy College students are from Plymouth County, and the college has a campus in Plymouth. The legislation also removes restrictions that prevent governors from serving a full second term if they were appointed to fill out an unexpired term.

In a statement touting the legislation, Mayor Thomas Koch said the bill would allow Quincy College to continue its growth. The mayor also thanked the Beacon Hill delegation and college president Peter Tsaffaras for their work in getting the bill passed.

"The legislation is another major step forward for Quincy College that will provide it the flexibility it needs to continue to grow as one of the pre-eminent community colleges in the Commonwealth," Koch said.

"It is a great testament to the leadership and hard work of President Tsaffaras, Sen. Keenan, Leader Mariano, and Reps. Chan and Ayers."

In addition to the legislation relative to the college, a second piece of legislation will benefit the school's students.

A major economic development bill was also debated and passed by the legislature in the final days of its session. It includes the establishment of a "stackable credentials" program to help students advance their education through workforce training and apprenticeships while attending an institution of higher education. The program is designed to help lead students to a degree or industry specific skills certification, and is offered at public higher education institutions in the Commonwealth.

Because Quincy College is a municipally-owned college, and historically has been denied access to such state programs and funds, Keenan filed an amendment to the bill to secure Quincy College's full access to this program, thus ensuring equal footing for the College and opening up resources that would otherwise have been made available only to state schools.

Keenan's amendment was adopted in the Senate, and was included in the final legislation the governor signed earlier this summer.

"Participation in this economic development bill with our state funded public higher education partners allows Quincy College to provide opportunities to our students that would not otherwise be available to the College acting alone," Tsaffaras said in a statement.

"We are grateful to Sen. Keenan for sponsoring this amendment and to the legislative delegation for their continued support of the College and its mission, which is to provide access to affordable higher education."

Keenan added: "For the past 50 years, Quincy College has been providing students from Quincy and the South Shore region with first-rate education and professional opportunities, and I was proud to join with President Tsaffaras, Mayor Koch and my House colleagues to ensure that the college has the resources and opportunities it needs to continue to do so. These laws will go a long way in allowing Quincy College to continue on its path of offering excellent education to our community and beyond."

Flaherty Confirmed QHA Commissioner

relationship," Flaherty said.

"You can rest assured you have my trust that I will do everything that I can to improve the quality of life for residents of the Quincy Housing Authority. I've done it all my life. I've pledged my adult life to the residents of public housing and I continue to do so.

"I'm really pleased and quite honored, frankly, to be chosen for this position and I want to be an advocate of change."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, the chairman of the council's senior citizens committee, said Flaherty's background would benefit the Housing Authority as it responds to maintenance issues that came to light earlier this year.

"You have a wonderful opportunity to take what was viewed as a very challenging situation three or four months ago and turn it into a real positive experience," Croall said. "I trust that your institutional wisdom will certainly help the authority. Best of luck and we look forward to working with you."

Flaherty said he looked forward to the challenge.

"I do not accept this position lightly – I understand that it's a difficult undertaking," he said. "We have our work cut out for us but I look forward to the challenge. I look forward to communicating with all you guys because you guys represent the citizens of Quincy, as do I now."

Flaherty replaces Leo Kelly, who resigned earlier this year. The Quincy Housing Authority has five commissioners – four appointed by the mayor and one by the governor.

Housing Authority Making Progress, More Time Needed

Correcting Unsafe, Unsanitary Living Conditions

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Housing Authority has made significant progress in correcting unsafe and unsanitary living conditions discovered by state officials in March but still needs several months to complete inspections and repairs in four housing authority properties according to a Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) official.

Director of Facilities Management for the DHCD James Marathas presented an update on the status of inspections and repairs at last Wednesday's meeting of the housing authority.

"Over the last six or seven months…DHCD have parachuted into the Quincy Housing Authority and with their assistance and with the really, really hard work by the people that are in the maintenance department, we have really rectified hundreds and hundreds of problems that existed in Quincy Housing Authority residential units," said Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director Jim Lydon.

"I truly believe that the Quincy Housing Authority is on a path to restore all the conditions and again provide safe, decent, sanitary housing to all the residents here," said Marathas.

DHCD began by inspecting ten percent of Quincy's 930 state-aided public housing units in March. The conditions found were troubling enough to trigger an inspection of all state units.

Following the inspections, Snug Harbor was prioritized for repairs due to the large amount of life and safety deficiencies present.

"Those included inoperable smoke detectors, inoperable carbon monoxide detectors, exposed wiring, plumbing leaks, lack of lease enforcement, and poor workmanship from past repairs," said Marathas.

Mold was also found to be a significant safety hazard.

Following an inspection of all 400 units, the architectural and engineering department of DCHD created two modernization projects to be executed at Snug Harbor, one involving interior wall and ceiling painting and the other involving the installation of heating panels in all bathrooms at Snug Harbor.

"During the inspection, it was noted that there was no heat in the bathrooms at Snug Harbor," said Marathas. "We believe that the addition of a heating panel in the bathrooms will assist in keeping out the moisture and at the same time this project is going to have a phase two approach which is then going to be to replace all the bathroom ventilation fans and all the kitchen fans within Snug Harbor."

The plastering and boarding of 300 of Snug Harbor's ceilings will total $220,000. Fan replacements and the installation of bathroom heating panels will run about $1.5 million.

Both projects will be funded by DHCD and will go out to bid in one week.

Several projects were started on an emergency basis at Snug Harbor such as the replacement of all smoke and carbon monoxide detectors.

"During our inspection we found that virtually every smoke detector and every carbon monoxide detector was either out of date or was inoperable," he said.

Severe fire hazards were also identified. Basements were so packed with trash and debris that nine, 30-yard dumpsters were needed to empty the basements of garbage.

At Riverview, many of the same deficiencies were present. The majority of life and safety concerns were addressed in what Marathas described as a "two week blitz" by maintenance staff. "The amount of work that was taken on in that two week period was unmeasurable to anything I've ever seen at a housing authority," he said.

Six boilers identified as inoperable are currently undergoing repair or replacement.

Ceilings damaged by the faulty, leaking heating systems will also be repaired.

In every unit, smoke and carbon monoxide detectors were replaced as they were all deemed inoperable.

A majority of the basement's windows were either broken or inoperable. Marathas suggested the creation of a modernization project to replace the windows.

Exposed wiring, electrical modifications completed by tenants, combustibles stored in basements, and stoves covered with paper and aluminum foil were just some of the additional violations and safety hazards discovered.

In total, 28, 30-yard dumpsters were filled by tenants emptying out trash from their basements.

Marathas called it "a huge feat for both the tenants and the maintenance staff here at the Quincy Housing Authority."

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) notified the housing authority in early August that they would be conducting their own inspections of all properties containing federally-aided units including O'Brien Towers, the Drohan Apartments, the Riverview Apartments, and Pagnano Towers.

DHCD stepped in and assisted housing authority maintenance staff by conducting site inspections prior to HUD's arrival and prioritized repairs to be completed before the federal inspections.

O'Brien Towers, Drohan Apartments, and the Riverview Apartments all passed, however Pagnano Towers failed federal inspection.

Marathas said the housing authority will be filing an appeal because "very small, incidental items" caused them to earn the failing grade.

All life and safety issues were immediately identified and resolved at West Acres following inspections in August, however siding, roofing, doors, and windows are in desperate need of repair and replacement.

Signs of poor maintenance and poor workmanship were also discovered during inspections.

"This development is in desperate need of exactly what's happening to it," he said.

Inspections at Tobin Towers began Sept.17. Sawyer Towers will be inspected in October, Louis George Village in November, and Crowley Court in December.

"By the end of December, we will have inspected every unit of the Quincy Housing Authority and we will have addressed all the life and safety issues that exist within all of the units," said Marathas. "We will then be prioritizing repairs going forward, working on prioritizing the remainder of the repairs that exist and creating and implementing a plan going forward."

Hot water, which has been provided by a temporary water heater at O'Brien Towers since July, is set to be restored in roughly one week.

Elevators at O'Brien Towers that have been broken since February due to water damage are now almost completely operational. Incidental parts have been ordered and must be installed to complete the repair.

"Overall, the Quincy Housing Authority has made significant progress in addressing the operational

$226,500 For Emergency Sea Wall Repairs

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council appropriated $226,500 in sewer rehabilitation funds for emergency sea wall repairs in the vicinity of Sycamore Road and Sumac Road in Squantum.

Damage was done to a sea wall in that area leaving a sewer line exposed, according to David Murphy, a principal at engineering firm Tighe & Bond. Without repairs, he said it was very likely another storm could do additional damage and force the discharge of raw sewage into the ocean.

The emergency repairs, Murphy added, must be completed within 30 days of Sept. 15 or else they would be put off for up to 18 months due to a permitting process. The city already solicited bids for the work, but the low bidder was eventually disqualified. The second-lowest bidder was then chosen and residents were to receive notices of the pending work beginning Tuesday.

Nicholson's 'Lived, Breathed' Veterans Organizations

Vietnam Veteran New Director Of Quincy Veterans' Services

By SCOTT JACKSON

George Nicholson, Quincy's newly appointed director of veterans' services, has remained active in veterans' groups since he returned home from the Air Force more than four decades ago.

"It's what I've lived and breathed since I got out of the service," Nicholson said in a recent interview. "I found veterans – as a group of people, men and women – to be unique. I consider them to be very special among our citizens."

Nicholson, 65, served in the U.S. Air Force as an airplane mechanic during the Vietnam War. After leaving the Air Force, he began working with the American Legion before joining the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA).

"I started as a service officer for the American Legion back in the early '70s, right after I got out of the service. I did that for about seven years, and I'm not bragging but I had a reputation for being the best service officer on the floor – all the service officers in the Kennedy Building were on one floor – and I was considered by the VA staff to be the most knowledgeable and effective of those guys, and there were some outstanding examples to back it up," Nicholson explained.

"Then the VA asked me if I wanted to work for them. I started out as a claims examiner. Then I found sitting behind a desk was not my cup of tea after so many years, and I had the chance to take a job where I could be an out-based veterans benefits counselor, and I'd be working at the hospitals.

"I did that for about 12 years and then the opportunity came up to be a fiduciary field investigator, a job that up to that point had been held exclusively by attorneys. I took that because I'd be working with a lot of the people I knew from the hospitals, although now I'd be working with psychiatric cases. I did that right up until the time I retired."

When he retired from the VA in 2007, Nicholson was rated one of three experts in the field of fiduciary work nationwide. Additionally, he assisted with training and helped develop a set of uniform procedures for the department's field agents. Nicholson also spent a year as a paralegal after he retired from the Veterans Affairs Department, working for an attorney he previously worked with through the VA.

In retirement, he remained active in veterans' groups, including serving as the commander of the Quincy Veterans Council.

Nicholson started as the head of veterans' services in Quincy Aug. 25. The transition, he said, has gone well.

"So far I'm liking it. I had to hit the ground running and so far I've been effective," Nicholson said. "I've been able to solve a couple problems...my background makes it easy. I can handle the conversations with some of these people very well. My investigator background helps me as well."

There are approximately 5,000 veterans – who have served in World War II through to the present day – residing in Quincy. The Veterans' Services Department is tasked with helping veterans apply for federal benefits. Additionally, it provides benefits directly to qualifying veterans or their surviving spouses and children; roughly 220 veterans and their dependents receive such benefits. The department also helps honor late veterans.

"The Veterans' Services Departments in Massachusetts are supposed to be pretty much a one-stop shop in two components. One, to provide information, forms, and help for filing for VA benefits – the federal benefits. The other is to provide financial assistance to veterans and dependents who are in need," Nicholson said.

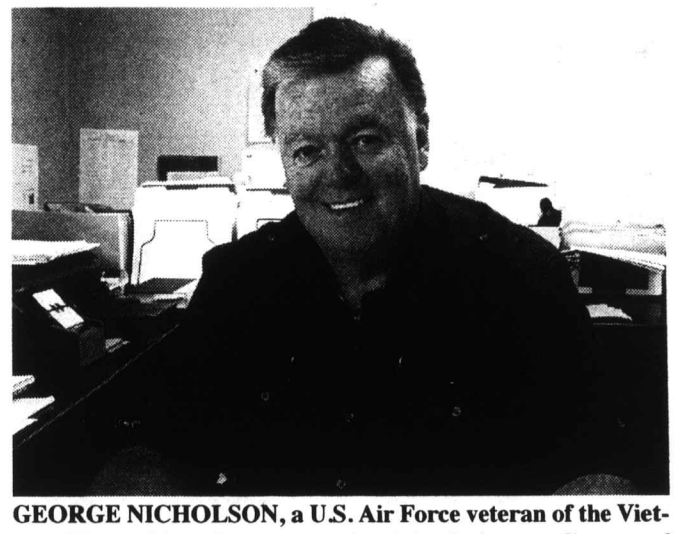
"The whole system was designed many years ago so veterans could get help they needed. There is a whole criteria you have to go through to get financial assistance for food, rent, payment of medical bills, things like that. We require those that are able to be job searching to stay on the rolls with us.

"All the signs, all the markers, all the flags in the city, all the corners that are dedicated to one veteran or another – we're responsible for all of that too. This is one of the biggest and busiest offices in the state."

One of the issues Nicholson is most concerned about is the ability of veterans to find work after leaving the military. He relayed the story of a former computer security specialist for the Army's Special Operations Command who has been unable to find work because he lacks a college degree.

"The amount of responsibility that is dumped on the backs of these kids right away, without question, is far more than most employees get until late in their career. And [companies] don't even think about them – they don't even give them any kind of consideration," Nicholson said.

"If a guy is lucky enough to run across a recruiter who is ex-military himself, it might be a different story. But they get overlooked in so many ways. It's sad to see that much talent is not jumped on."



GEORGE NICHOLSON, a U.S. Air Force veteran of the Vietnam War and longtime veterans' activist, is the new director of Quincy Veterans' Services Department.

To help get more veterans working, Nicholson said he also already reached out to the Quincy Career Center to see if they can help work with veterans. He may also do more community outreach to encourage business owners and recruiters to hire veterans.

Nicholson said he hopes to help streamline operations in the Veterans' Services Department. Nicholson has two employees working under him – a fourth position, a graves registration officer, was included in this fiscal year's budget but hasn't been filled yet. Nicholson hopes to train the person who takes over that position as his successor.

"The idea is we're trying to get some young, bright up and comer coming up through the city that can be here for a while," he explained.

"I'll train the individual and when the individual is ready, I'll let the mayor know it's time for me to go back out to pasture and let my younger successor take over and run the show.

"Hopefully I'll have a better and more streamlined operation than has been here so far. I've got a lot to do."

Alex Samsel Completes Eagle Scout Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

For as long as he has been a member of the Boy Scouts, Alex Samsel knew he wanted to reach the organization's top rank. This summer, he completed a community service project that should get him there.

"That's definitely been a life aspiration for myself – getting Eagle Scout," Samsel said recently. "It's probably one of the biggest achievements I've ever had."

For his project, Samsel oversaw the planting of a vegetable garden at Houghs Neck Congregational Church – the same church where his troop, Troop 6, meets weekly. He got the inspiration for the project from the troop's cubmaster and had help from more than a dozen fellow scouts, and his father.

"I had 14 or 15 members of my troop help me build it, which combined to about 120 man-hours," Samsel explained. "The project idea was originally suggested by the Troop 6 cubmaster, Mr. Ralph Jacobs. For general maintenance, my father, Stephen Samsel, helped a lot when I wasn't able to water the garden myself."

The vegetables that grow in the garden are being donated to Interfaith Social Services' food pantry on a weekly basis. And the garden contains of wide variety of vegetables.

"For the vegetables we have sweet peppers, celery, butternut squash, melon, pole beans, and tomatoes – varying from cherry tomatoes, grape tomatoes, and big boy tomatoes," Samsel said.

The garden was planted in late July. Samsel began planning the project this spring, sought out donations, and even organized a spaghetti dinner to raise money for the project.

"The planning took about one or two months. I had a lot of help from the committee treasurer of Troop 6 – Mr. Marty Gordon – he helped me with a lot of the planning," Samsel recalled.

"I got numerous donations from Mr. Marty Gordon and the Artery Garden Center, which is right next to the Goodwill store. For a project fundraiser, I also hosted a spaghetti dinner fundraiser in May. For that I raised about $250 for the project."

Before undertaking his Eagle Scout project, Samsel had to get the green light from a number of people, including his scoutmaster and the Boston Minuteman Council. After completing the project there was paperwork to fill out. Samsel will next have to explain his project to a board of review, which will likely happen this fall, before he can be awarded the Eagle Scout rank.

"The project was originally approved in April by the council executives. After the project there was lots of paperwork to do to send to the advancement committee. That's all being shipped of to Texas for verification," Samsel explained. "I have a board of review yet to do. That will probably be in October."

PROSPECTIVE EAGLE SCOUT Alex Samuel created a garden at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church to grow fresh produce for Harvest Helpers.

Samsel is optimistic the board will sign off on the award, and said he could formally receive it during a ceremony in December or January.

The vegetable garden at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church is the second community service project he has completed in the area. Before becoming a Life Scout – a rank topped only by Eagle Scout – he cleaned up LaBrecque Field a couple years ago.

"Before getting up to Eagle Scout, my Life Scout project was cleaning up LaBrecque Field – just the general trash around it," Samsel said. "There was always a very large collection of debris trash out in the woods area of the park."

Samsel graduated from Quincy High School this spring. This fall, he is attending Reading Area Community College in Pennsylvania, where he is studying information technology. Samsel plans to pursue a career in IT, and thanks a former teacher of his for getting him interested in the field.

"For that I definitely have to credit my information technology teacher from Quincy High School, Mr. Edward Holmes," Samsel noted. "He was probably one of the biggest inspirations for having that passion for IT."

Extra Produce From Backyard Gardens Sought To Help Families In Need

"What am I going to do with all of these tomatoes and cucumbers?'

Many backyard gardeners ask themselves this question every September. Some gardeners freeze them. Others offer a few to neighbors. Now there is another option – donate them to families in need through Harvest Helpers.

Harvest Helpers, a partnership between Interfaith Social Services, the Weymouth Food Pantry and Keohane Funeral Home is the first program of its kind in Massachusetts. In the spring, the program offered free plants to local residents who volunteered to grow them for Interfaith Social Services' and The Weymouth food pantry. Those vegetables they have grown and been delivered to families served by the food pantries. Harvest Helpers is now asking the wider community for help in providing fresh fruits and vegetables to hungry South Shore residents.

"Last year our food pantry volunteers distributed over 750,000 pounds of food to families in need throughout the South Shore, more than any other year in our organization's six decades of service," said Interfaith's Executive Director Rick Doane. "We want to do more than just feed our clients, we want to nourish them with healthful food like fresh fruits and vegetables. We rely on support from the community to keep up with the demand.

"Keohane Funeral Home, our Harvest Helpers partner, generously donated plants so that the community could grow a good supply of fresh produce for our clients. As the growing season winds down, we hope that all local gardeners will choose to participate in Harvest Helpers by donating some of their garden surplus to their neighbors who are struggling to make ends meet."

"We know from the gardens behind our funeral home and next to Interfaith Social Services offices that a surprising amount of vegetables can be grown in a small location," added funeral home Co-President John Keohane. "We hope that our neighbors with extra fruits and vegetables will put them to good use by donating them to local food pantries."

Cas Casados, Director of the Weymouth Food Pantry, said: "Families who seek out food pantries have much higher rates of diabetes and obesity than the general population, so in addition to alleviating hunger, we try to provide healthful foods. And for our Pantry, which has always been a neighbor-to-neighbor grassroots project, a donation of backyard produce through Harvest Helpers is one of the most potent ways to contribute to the health of your neighbors."

"Several people, including some of our clients have already come by with donations from their gardens," said Doane. "They know that it may otherwise go to waste and feel that giving it to the food pantry is helping to give back to the community."

Donations are accepted at Interfaith Social Services' food pantry at 105 Adams St. in Quincy from 9:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m. weekdays. At The Weymouth Food Pantry, located at 1189 Commercial St., Weymouth, between 8 a.m. and noon Tuesday through Friday; and at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St. in Quincy and the McDonald Keohane Funeral Home 809 Main St. in Weymouth from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Realtors: Flood Insurance Concerns Homeowners, Buyers

By SCOTT JACKSON

Four Quincy realtors recently appeared before the City Council's oversight committee, explaining how rising flood insurance premiums – and the fear of future increases – are causing concern among both homeowners and prospective buyers.

Jim Stamos, owner of Stamos & Stamos Realtors in Squantum, said he has spoken to many homeowners who feel the rising premiums may be pricing them out of their homes. That same concern is shared throughout the region.

"The flood insurance issue is one of great concern to us. Homeowners are being impacted by the new rates imposed by FEMA. I have spoken to many existing homeowners who feel they have to sell their homes due to the change in their flood zone status and the future cost of flood insurance premiums," Stamos told the committee Sept. 17.

"There is a growing concern in the New England market that sellers can't sells their homes, but with the new flood insurance burden they can't afford to stay either."

Stamos noted six properties in Squantum his firm has sold, or listed for sale, have seen an average drop of nearly 12 percent from the listing price because of the flood maps. Such a decrease is atypical for the neighborhood.

"Using six properties in the Squantum area, which are all in the flood zone and either for sale, under agreement, sold, or in one case taken off market, I have seen an average drop of 11.8 percent from the original asking price to the on the market or sold price," Stamos explained.

"Generally, most homes in Squantum sell relatively quick and within 98 or 99 percent of their asking price."

One property, for example, was initially listed on the market for $349,000. Two after it was listed, Stamos said a buyer reached an agreement to purchase it for $345,000 only to walk away after learning the property is in a flood plain. A new buyer was found, who agreed to pay $319,000 for the property. In response to an inquiry from Councillor Michael McFarland, Stamos noted that house still sold for more than its assessed value of $307,200.

The sale of high-end homes has not been hurt by the new premiums. Stamos said his company is currently marketing a house listed for $1.65 million. The potential buyers for that property, he explained, have not been concerned about paying for flood insurance because they can afford the premiums or could buy the house without a mortgage, meaning they wouldn't be required to purchase flood insurance.

Roseann Flavin of Flavin & Flavin noted the impact of the new flood insurance premiums is hitting first time homebuyers particularly hard.

"The cost of flood insurance and the uncertainty of the future and the rates make for very wary buyers. I do a lot of work with first time homebuyers," she said. "First time homebuyers are running scared. They're not afraid of the house being flooded. They're afraid of the premiums and the premiums are out of hand."

In response to a follow up question from Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, chairman of the oversight committee, Flavin explained that first time buyers are being affected for two reasons: They often need mortgages, which would force them to purchase flood insurance, and they have a limited amount of money saved with which they plan to purchase a home.

"Most of them will have a mortgage and if you have a mortgage you're going to have to have flood insurance. But it's what they can afford," Flavin said. "Most of them have only saved so much money to buy a house. They've saved everything they have to buy that house and then they get hit with a closing cost, homeowners insurance, and their flood insurance. They've very wary about it."

The concern about whether or not a property is in a flood zone has grown so much, Flavin added, that prospective buyers now ask that question first.

"When you get a call on a property that's for sale, the first question has always been 'can you tell me what school district it's in?'" Flavin said. "That doesn't happen anymore [It is] 'is it in a flood zone?'

"I think that's a little sad."

Sam Rounseville, an agent for Red Door Real Estate, said he is trying to sell a house in Germantown. A couple had offered to buy the house, but had to withdraw the offer when they found the property came with a $6,000 flood insurance premium. The house, with an assessed value of $451,000, recently was placed on the market with a list price of $319,000.

"That's quite a hit," Rounseville said. "It's crazy."

Helen Shiner, the manager of Jack Conway Realtor's Quincy office, told the committee the average selling price of a home in Quincy has increased six percent compared to 2013. Her numbers included all homes in the city, not just ones in flood plains.

From her experience, Shiner said homeowners aren't nervous about having to purchase flood insurance policies. The real fear is of the unknown – how fast will premiums continue to rise in the future.

"I think the majority of us that own properties in the flood zone have became accustomed to it. It's part of the privilege we have of living close to the ocean or tributaries or some of the other amenities we have in the city," Shiner said.

"What the real concern to me is in the city is the lack of information. The fear that's out there in the homebuyers – they're afraid of the unknown. They're not afraid of flood insurance.

Coakley: Expand Early Childhood Education

Gubernatorial Candidate Visits Wahlberg Early Learning Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

Attorney General Martha Coakley, the Democratic nominee in November's gubernatorial election, visited Quincy Monday to tout her proposal to expand early childhood education throughout the state.

Joined by Gov. Deval Patrick, a Milton Democrat, and House Majority Leader Ron Mariano of Quincy, Coakley toured the Rosemary and Archie Wahlberg Head Start Early Learning Center in Quincy Point Monday morning. Quincy Community Action Programs Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo led the three on the tour of the school, visiting two classrooms along the way.

As part of her platform on education, the attorney general has said she wants to expand access to early education for 3- and 4-year olds, beginning in gateway cities such as Quincy. Coakley said approximately 17,000 children are currently on wait lists for early education programs statewide, such as the Head Start program at the Wahlberg center. Her plan calls for eliminating those waiting lists over a four-year period by providing vouchers to families, which she stated would cost $150 million annually.

"All you have to do is visit this location to understand how important this work is and how important it is that we provide this to all of our kids. It's a priority for me and has been for a long time," Coakley said after touring the early learning center.

"When we invest in our kids, early education, and our families, we are going to get better outcomes. We are going to save money. And we are going to do what we should do in Massachusetts, which is make sure we turn this economy around for everybody and we give everybody an equal and a fair shot at doing well."

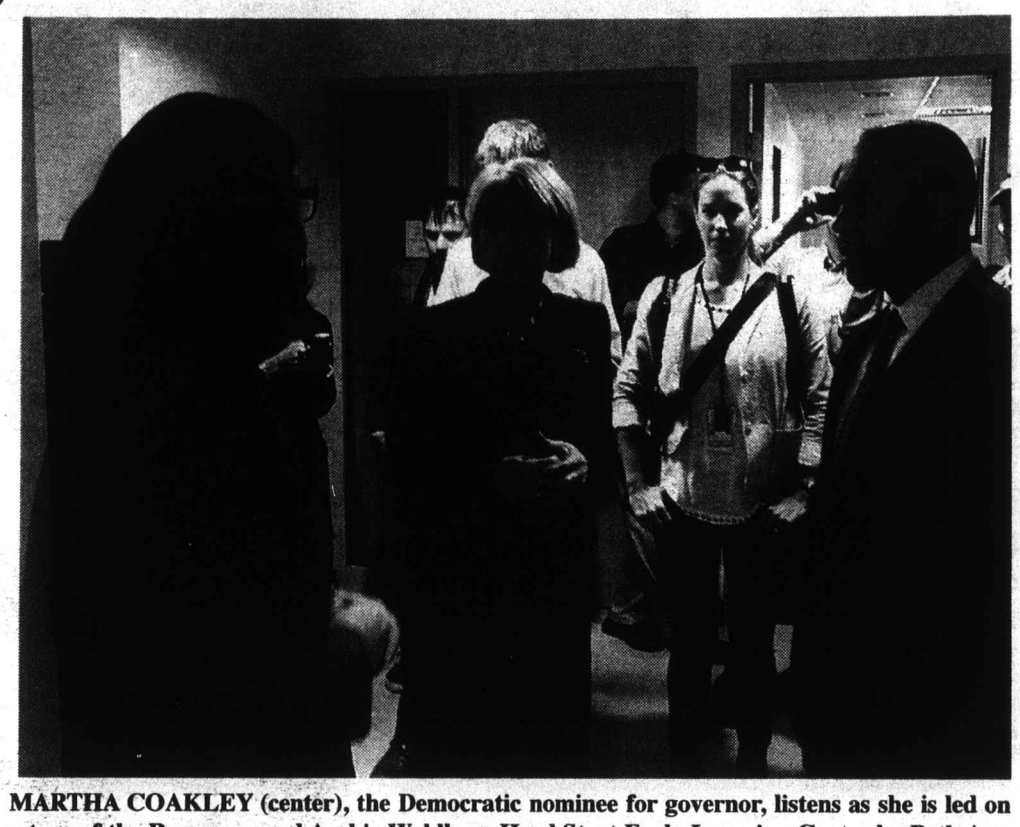
Mariano, a former teacher and member of the Quincy School Committee, said research has shown children from lower income families who attend Head Start programs fare better than their peers who do not attend such programs.

"Head Start is one of the biggest predictors of success," Mariano said. "As a former teacher, educational research shows that if you get a Head Start program, the likelihood of success from a lower income kid is astronomical compared to non-Head Start kids. That's what this program is about – getting kids to school, getting them acclimated to a school setting and working with others."

Patrick noted early education is being emphasized because reading proficiency in third grade has been shown to have an impact on future success. Investing in early education, he added, does not mean less investment in later grades or in higher education.

"There is an awful lot of emphasis on early education because, among other reasons, studies have shown reading proficiency by the third grade has a huge impact on future success in school," the governor said.

"Yes, it means we have to emphasize pre-K and make those opportunities available. Yes, it means we have to make sure grades K-3 are strong. But if a kid is proficient in grade three, it doesn't mean we stop investing in grade or in public higher education. It's all part of a whole."



MARTHA COAKLEY (center), the Democratic nominee for governor, listens as she is led on a tour of the Rosemary and Archie Wahlberg Head Start Early Learning Center by Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs. At right is Gov. Deval Patrick who also toured the center along with House Majority Leader and Quincy state representative Ron Mariano.

Coakley did not specify how she would finance it, but said it would be among her top priorities.

"This has to be the first priority – we will find the ways to invest in this," she said. "We know every dollar we invest in early education save us seven dollars down the road. This is just simple math and it's good business to invest in our kids."

Promoting education, the attorney general added, would lead to a more educated workforce, which would provide an incentive for businesses to stay in or move to Massachusetts.

"If we are going to keep them here – if we are going to get them to come here and stay here – we have to invest in those kids and that workforce that is going to be able to do those jobs," Coakley said.

"The idea that we're going to grow the economy and keep businesses here is also dependent on the fact that we can have early education, computer science – all of the kind of things we know will make us strong here."

Coakley's visit to Quincy came less than a week after Mayor Thomas Koch endorsed her opponent in the governor's race, Republican Charlie Baker. Mariano said he continues to back Coakley in the race.

"Tommy is an independent, free thinker and he had his reasons, whatever they might be, for supporting Charlie and I respect that. I support Martha," Mariano said. "We have a difference of opinion on who can lead the Commonwealth forward over the next four years. There isn't much you can do about it. We all make choices – he made his and I made mine."

phenomenal high school pitching prospect and signed his first professional contract a week after graduating Quincy High in 1972. He was in the Cardinals system when he became ill and Joe has made it his trademark tribute to wear his brother's baseball jersey at all the big games he attends.

He wore it underneath his Red Sox jersey when Boston defeated New York in the 2004 American League Championship Series. He wore it at Busch Stadium when the Sox defeated the Cardinals for their first World Series title in 86 years in 2004; and he had it on when Boston won again last fall.

"My mother says my two brothers pushed me off the ladder (and helped doctors discover and treat his kidney cancer.) My mother says they pushed me back when I had my heart attack.

"They weren't ready for me to be in Heaven with them."

The story doesn't end here.

Two weeks ago – on Sept. 10, Joe Brill returned to Fenway Park to throw out the ceremonial first pitch before the Red Sox – Orioles game. EMTs who had helped him after he was stricken a year ago joined him near the mound. Under a brilliant blue sky and an American Flag draped Green Monster as a stunning backdrop, Joe grooved a strike into the mitt of center fielder Jackie Bradley, Jr. as Fenway's faithful cheered.

Underneath his Red Sox jersey was Bob's Cardinals jersey.

"It was Bob's dream to play at Fenway and never did – until the other day when I threw out the first pitch. He was there with me," Joe said.

Joe kindly asked Bradley to sign the ball when he had a moment and soon the young ball player emerged from the dugout with his autograph. The ball is part of Joe's special collection of signed baseballs that include autographs from Red Sox legends Luis Tiant and Rico Petrocelli and Hall of Famer Brooks Robinson.

Interviewed by Boston television stations that emotional day, a teary-eyed Brill said the ceremony was the greatest day in his life.

ABC News picked up the story and anchor David Muir featured Joe the next night on the national broadcast. Among the viewers that evening was a woman from North Andover named Helena Wilder. She saw the spot, looked up Joe's number and called him.

"She told me 'you don't know me, we have never met, but I was sitting directly in front of you at the Red Sox game (last September) and I always wondered what had happened to you. I am sitting here watching the news and there you are.'"

Helena had quickly sprung into action when she saw Joe slumped over in his seat. She started screaming and got one of the security guards and within moments medical responders were on the scene.

"She just wanted to call and say hello and tell me she was glad I am all right."

Joe also got calls from people all over the country who he hasn't seen in years but had watched the segment on ABC.

Asked where does the first pitch at Fenway rank among his other cherished baseball memories, Joe notes World Series clinching-games he's been fortunate to see in person. Other thrills include attending Red Sox fantasy camps, sharing time with Babe Ruth's daughter and family and dining with Red Sox alumni.

But at the top of all of those is the night his brother Bob became a professional baseball player. He signed his first contract at 1 a.m. in the family home in Houghs Neck after Bob's longtime coach and mentor, Dave MacMillan, had arrived to witness the momentous occasion.

"You don't get any higher than that. But this is right there with it. I've am very, very blessed in my baseball life," Joe says.

Life sometimes works in mysterious ways.

Two months before his heart attack, Joe emceed a ceremony at Adams Field dedicating the first base dugout to Dave MacMillan. Dave – a youth baseball coach for 50 years in Quincy – was surrounded by many of his former players as he threw out the first pitch before a Morrisette Legion baseball game.

After Joe's heart attack, Dave MacMillan visited Joe's parents and assured them he would recover.

"I was in the hospital and he was at my house telling my parents – 'don't worry. If anyone can get through this, Joe will," Joe recalls.

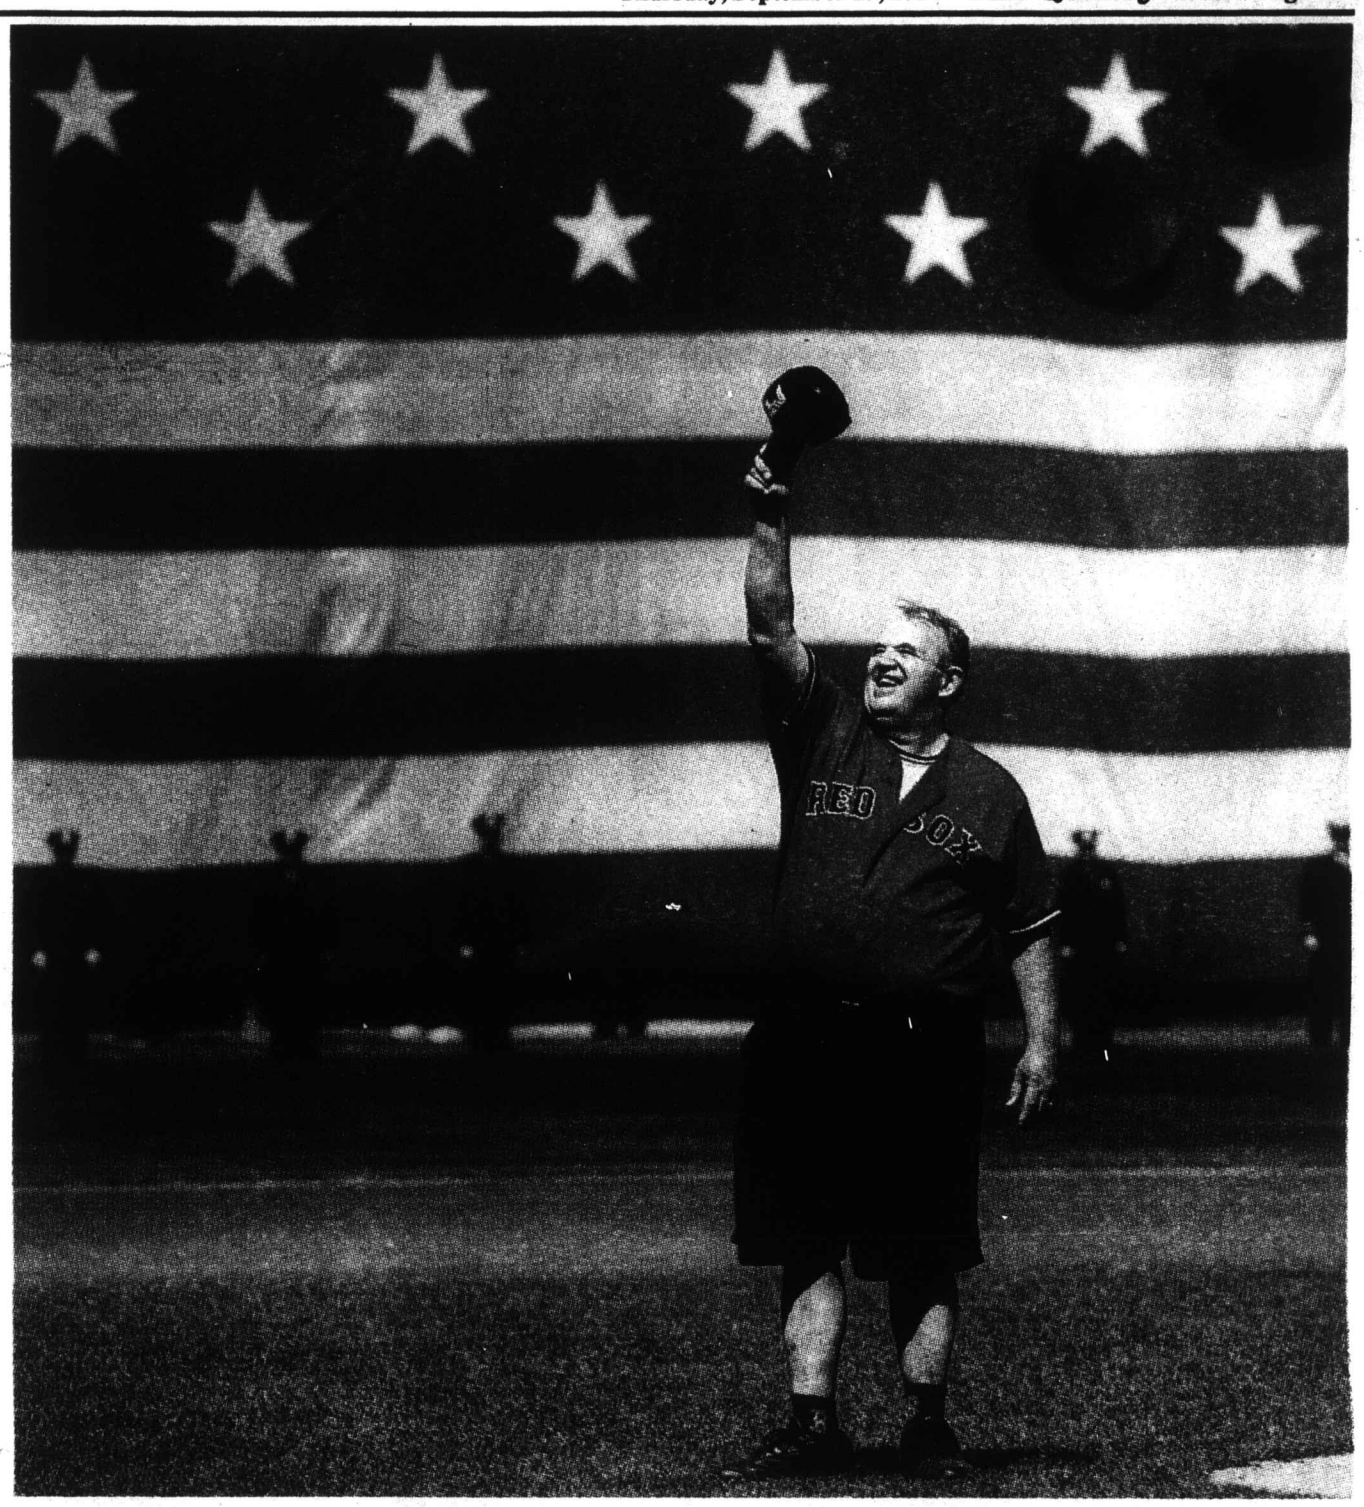
A short time later on Oct. 13, Dave passed away unexpectedly at the age of 75. The Brill family – knowing how Joe and Dave had become close over the years – decided to wait until Joe was out of the hospital before telling him the sad news.

On the day Joe was released from the hospital, the first thing he did was attend Dave's wake at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals. He also served as an honorary pallbearer at the funeral.

Joe says the first pitch ceremony is still surreal and hasn't really sunken in yet. But he's also had time to pause and reflect on all the events of the last couple of years.

"In the snap of a finger, you never know. Maybe not to you but to someone else you love. Life can be gone in an instant.

"Enjoy life."



A TIP OF THE CAP - Quincy's Joe Brill acknowledges the fans at Fenway Park after throwing out the ceremonial first pitch at the Boston Red Sox - Baltimore Orioles game Sept. 10. Brill - who nearly died after suffering a heart attack at Fenway last September before a Yankees game - also thanked the EMTs from Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital who rushed to his seat and provided emergency medical attention. The EMTs joined Joe on the field for what he called one of the greatest moments of his life.

NQ Girls Soccer Finding Their Groove

By JOE REARDON

Forget the record for just a moment because at this point in the season it's just not a big concern of North Quincy girls soccer coach Paul Bregoli. Holding a 2-3-1 mark in the Patriot League, the Red Raiders are playing hard and Bregoli believes - no, knows - that his squad will right the ship sooner than later and make a strong run for the tournament.

North Quincy had its scoring chances Friday evening at Veterans Memorial Stadium, but couldn't put any numbers on the scoreboard in a 3-0 loss to Duxbury. Like the Red Raiders, the Green Dragons are looking to find their groove. The victory moved them to .500 on the season at 3-3-1.

"We're a good team, we'll be fine," said Bregoli. "We've played three of the six teams in the first six games. I'm always happy with their effort. They never quit. That wasn't a 3-0 game. We saw them play against Whitman-Hanson and knew we could attack their right side, but we didn't attack it enough. We didn't get the ball deep enough on the right side. We played the ball a little too much down the middle and when you do that it comes right back at you.

"We have some great defenders back there, but you have to score. You can't put all the pressure on the defense. When you miss opportunities to score you put pressure on the defense. We pressed the attack all night and couldn't finish. That's been the story of our soccer lives."

Keeper Shannan Kennedy was sharp from the start and absolutely robbed Bri Fadden with a diving stop 1:08 into the contest and finished with 11 saves, several of them being true scoring threats.

Duxbury finally got to Kennedy and went up 1-0 on a Molly Tobin redirect that she put in the top corner with 23:13 left in the first half. Kennedy was unfazed and stopped a floater by Maggie Mahoney and another shot in close. The Green Dragons had two more strong bids in the first and Kennedy was there to turn away a Liz Weimer shot to the short side and a point-blank shot by Fadden in the final minute.

Weimer was able to beat Kennedy with 12:24 left to make it 2-0 after possessing a tap pass from Katherine Hargrave and drilled the ball into the right side of the net. North Quincy very nearly had its first goal when Courtney Campo's boot from 30 yards out went over Snelling's head, but rattled off the crossbar.

Julia O'Donnell had a huge game on defense for the Red Raiders, breaking up several Duxbury threats and quickly clearing the ball from the zone. The Green Dragons scored one more time to make it 3-0 on a shot to the far corner by Emma Gill that was just beyond the reach of Kennedy.

The feel-good highlight of the week came Monday against Scituate when junior Annie Doherty recorded her first-ever varsity goal when she blasted home a pass from Ciara Forde off an Ali Coleman pass to give the Red Raiders their lone tally in a 7-1 loss. Kennedy was solid in net and had no chance at stopping the pair of first-half goals by the Sailors. North Quincy's best scoring chance of the first 40 minutes came when Hailey Houlihan just missed on a cross pass in the box.

Danielle O'Driscoll took over keeper duties in the second half and she was met with a barrage of shots, leading to a 5-0 Scituate advantage. Bregoli was more than a little miffed when the Scituate coach kept his starters in the game, even after Bregoli pulled his starters halfway through the half.

As usual, the North Quincy effort was there as senior captain Sydney Chang, O'Donnell and junior defender Molly Kate Cannon all had strong games along with Coleman, Jillian Hallisey, Abbie Koch, Coourtney Campo and Marissa McGue.

The Scituate contest came after another defensive showdown against Hanover. The contest mirrored the three previous meetings between the two teams with yet another 0-0 ties.

Quincy North came out sluggish in the first half with Hanover controlling play at the middle of the field. An offsides call brought back a pretty Sinead Hanley goal and that was as close as the Red Raiders would come to getting on the board. Emily Anglehart had a chance, but her shot from 10 yards out went just high over the crossbar.

Kennedy, who had nine shutouts last fall, was rock solid in net and came up with several strong saves in her return to play after missing the first two games of the season with a concussion. Coleman, Koch, Ciara Viscione, O'Donnell and Hallisey all played well for the Red Raiders.

Quincy Girls Battle Scituate

By JOE REARDON

So when is a team that has no wins in six games actually better than its record? How about a squad that faced the iron of the Patriot League in one week and came away with close 2-0 losses - moral victories to be sure, but they don't show up in the standings.

The Quincy High girls soccer team held undefeated Scituate scoreless for 40 minutes and had the better scoring chances in the first half, but the Sailors kept the pressure on and Corey Murray put up a pair of second half goals for a 2-0 win last Friday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Head coach Seth Harmon believes the team is improving playing the high caliber squads and will reap the benefits down the line if the players stay focused and continue putting forth the efforts they have since game one.

"I'm definitely pleased with the way we played," said an upbeat Harmon. "Our intensity was there the whole game. We had some good chances early on, but we couldn't put any in. Going 0-0 at halftime against a quality team like Scituate is always a good thing. Our record doesn't reflect how we've played. We've lost 2-0 this whole week to Duxbury, Scituate and Silver Lake. They're Patriot League powerhouses. Losing 2-0 to them is usually nothing to be ashamed of. I definitely don't see us having the same results the rest of the year."

Emma Papile very nearly gave Quincy the early lead when she broke down the middle 3:30 in only to have the Scituate keeper just get a hand on the ball and knock it wide. Presidents' keeper Emmi Guarente continued her strong play between the posts, first clearing a corner kick that was headed for the far side and then covering up a shot that was curving away from her.

Quincy's Liana Cunningham was robbed when her shot was stopped at the top of the box with 13:08 left in the half. Ally MacPherson broke up a Scituate bid down the left side and the defense thwarted three other Sailor breaks going toward the net.

"There was definitely a formation change," said Harmon. "A team like Scituate scores a lot of goals. If you come out defensively and sit back, they'll kill you. You try to come out with an attacking formation to throw them off their game. You saw in the first half that they weren't adjusting and weren't able to get many quality shots."

Murray, Scituate's best offensive player, finally got to Guarente, letting loose a shot to the top far corner 5:11 into the second half for the 1-0 edge. The Presidents continued to go to the net and very nearly tied it with 31:52 left on a Kari Wismar shot that beat the Scituate keeper, but was just wide of the right post.

Quincy saw the lead stretch to 2-0 with 23:46 when Murray bounced a shot that eluded Guarente.

"It's a little frustrating for them, but they know they've put the effort in," said Harmon. "If we put in two shots in the first half we're up 2-0 and they're on the defensive. It's a pretty brutal schedule for a lot of us. It's good competition and we're playing up to our competition level. We should have started out the season a little stronger against teams we might have had a better chance against."

The Presidents play North Quincy Saturday at 5:30.

STANDING TALL MAY INSPIRE CONFIDENCE

While research involving the "mind-body connection" explores how mental processes can affect a person's physical state, researchers are also finding that the reverse may be true. "Body-mind" research (also known as "embodied cognition") suggests that various "power" poses involving open-posture positions (as opposed to closed-posture involving crossed arms and legs and a slouched posture) help people feel more powerful and "in charge." Moreover, open positions with the arms and elbows away from the body and the chin raised were found to be associated with an increase in testosterone and a decrease in the stress hormone cortisol. Simply put, proper posture may place the body in a better mental position to deal with difficult and stressful situations.

Bad posture can create chronic pain in nearly eighty percent of the people who appear with this type of pain as their chief complaint. The next time a health problem strikes someone in your family, think about chiropractic care. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe chiropractic is the most effective and widespread form of preventative health care. Cross Country Teams Showing Improvement

The beat goes on for the North Quincy and Quincy Cross country teams.

North runners dominate from the front but lack of depth has been a problem. Quincy has young talent but it has yet to translate into wins. Such was the case versus Hanover last week up at Pageant field.

The girls did manage to eke out a 27-30 win led by Emily Bryson's course record smashing 15:15 run over the challenging 2.5 mile Merrymount woods loop. Twin sister Julia was a close third yet again but this time an ever improving Marguerite Belcher and Devin Hiltunen grabbed 5th and 6th to clinch the victory.

Emily Zheng returned and the senior along with Grace Anderson took the 8th and 9th spots.

Mike Mullaney, battling shin splints, led wire to wire for a decisive win and sophomore Jimmy Cannon ran a personal best 14:10. The boys could close the deal as Hanover took the next six spots so secure the victory 25-34.

On the Quincy side, Hanover put three runners ahead of LaQueen Arias despite her season best 18:49. The Indians did the same to the boys putting three ahead of freshman star Kyle Cabezas for a 17-43 decision.

"The kids keep getting better, so we'll be patient and look forward to Middleboro next week," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We have a good staff of Carolyn Mullaney, Katie Volta and new addition Lucas Buckingham, a biology teacher at North. The folks interface with the kids well and Lucas runs with different groups daily.

"Our goal, as always is to peak at the big meets in late October, early November. We're on schedule," Hennessy added.

Quincy Volleyball Wins Thriller, 3-2

By JOE REARDON

Leadership comes in all forms and it's not always the best players who instill it. And while there are several players who hold up the leadership mantle on the Quincy High volleyball roster, it sometimes manifests in surprising ways.

It was apparent in Monday night's home showdown against tough nonleague opponent Fontbonne that the reserve players were picking up on facets of the game that the Presidents had to tighten up on on the court. And that makes head coach Jacqui Niosi's job that much more easier during timeouts.

"The nice part is that a few times (during the timeouts) I went over there and they already started talking about that stuff themselve," said Niosi. "It's so nice. And sometimes it's bench kids who are leading the huddle."

Nicole Jorgensen had a huge game up front as she paced the Presidents to a thrilling 3-2 win over the Ducks. The victory improved the Presidents' record to 6-1 with a big matchup against North Quincy slated for tomorrow on the Presidents' home court.

"Quincy/North Quincy is always a big rivalry," said Niosi. "I'm sure it'll be an exciting game. Hopefully the gym will be packed."

Jorgensen dominated portions of all five games and was at her best in the third game where she put up five points on a 6-0 Quincy surge that put the Presidents up for good on the way to a 25-16 win and a 2-1 game advantage. The junior finished with 16 kills up front, seven blocks and five digs.

The Presidents had plenty of quality performances with Alicia Walker connecting for nine kills and three blocks. Walker set up several Quincy points with her 26 assists and she also garnered 10 digs and a pair of aces. Emma Kelly dominated the mid-court position and dug out 25 balls. Sarah Gibbons pitched in with 10 kills and seven digs.

Niosi has always the relished the games against Fontbonne and has been impressed by how well the team is playing as an overall unit. "That's why we schedule them nonleague," Niosi said in admiration for the Fontbonne squad. "They're always pretty good. They serve really well and swing agressively. It's a really good test for us to play against a team like that. They've definitely gelled and have really good chemistry and that helps them play better no matter what. During the timeouts I'd tell them to stay focus and stick with the basics.

"We graduated six seniors last year. We have a mix of kids with varsity experience and kids playing varsity for the first time. They've done a great job adapting and being agressive. The speed is different. It's all basics it's just faster."

Both teams went back and forth in the first game until Fontbonne went on a 5-0 scoring spree, led by freshman phenom Annabelle Larnard, to squeeze out a 25-21 victory. The Ducks never recovered from a Quincy 11-1 spurt in the second game and the Presidents tied the contest 1-1 with a 25-21 victory. After Jorgensen's heroics in game three, Fontbonne fought back once again behind the play up front from Leah Simmons for a 27-25 victory to force a deciding game five. The Presidents weren't really challenged and took the contest 15-7 to clinch their sixth win this season.

Emma Kelly, who plays out of the libero position for Quincy and is arguably the team's most versatile player, believed it was crucial for the Red Raiders to keep their attention and focus on Fontbonne without any lapses.

"Fontbonne's a really good team so it was a good test for us mentally," said Kelly, who is undecided on what college she will attend. "A lot of times we play up and down and we play down to teams' levels. Fontbonne is at our level so it was a test. It If our energy got down they would pull ahead. They're a very good team."

Fall Automotive Care

More To Vehicle Maintenance Than What's Under The Hood

AAA reminds motorists there is more to vehicle maintenance than what is under the hood

When many motorists think of vehicle maintenance, the first things that comes to mind are oil changes and other engine upkeep. However, the steps to maintaining a vehicle, and its resale value, extend beyond what is under the hood.

"Motorists can extend the life of their vehicle's interior and exterior the same way they take care of its mechanical parts—through proper maintenance," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor Some forms of vehicle upkeep that are frequently thought of as cosmetic care can reduce wear and tear and help maintain a higher resale value."

AAA recommends motorists perform the following maintenance tasks:

Vehicle Interior

•Vacuum regularly and lightly shampoo the carpets as needed. Dirt remaining in the carpet greatly accelerates wear, but be careful not to soak carpets with too much moisture.

• Use floor mats to protect carpet. Carpeted floor mats will collect dust and dirt and are best for dry climates, while protective vinyl floor mats are recommended in wet and snowy areas.

• Wipe down dusty or soiled surfaces with a damp cloth. Follow with a UV-protective coating on vinyl and rubber surfaces. A solution with a matte or semi-gloss finish is preferred on the dashboard to reduce reflections in the windshield. Be careful not to apply petroleum-based products to plastic surfaces; especially clear ones. If the interior has leather, use products designed for cleaning and maintaining this material.

• Clean stains from seats and other interior surfaces promptly to prevent them from becoming set. Use a cleaner recommended by your vehicle's manufacturer to prevent fabric, vinyl or leather damage. Test any non-approved product in an inconspicuous spot before use to make sure it is safe.

• If you are a "snowbird" and head to hot and sunny climates, consider having the windows tinted to cut down on infrared rays that cause heat buildup and ultraviolet rays that fade and damage interior materials. Over-darkening windshields and front seat windows can compromise visibility and is frequently illegal, so use appropriate materials.

• Use protective flooring and seat covers when transporting pets or items with sharp edges that could gouge upholstery or carpeting.

Vehicle Exterior

• Wash the vehicle approximately every two weeks and wax it twice a year. More frequent washing and waxing could be advisable depending on climate and driving conditions. A good coat of wax looks great, protects the finish from contaminants it comes in contact with, and contains filtering chemicals that help reduce paint fading from the ultraviolet rays in sunlight.

• When washing the vehicle, be sure to rinse out the wheel wells and accessible areas of the undercarriage. This is especially important here in New England where salt is used on roads in the winter as it will help prevent rust.

• Use care when removing bugs and tar to avoid damaging the clear coat or paint. Auto parts stores carry specialty products that can ease removal without causing damage. AAA members qualify for discounts at all NAPA locations by showing their membership card.

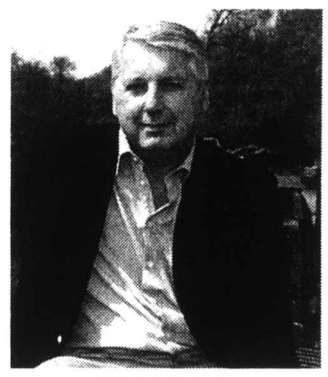
• Clean glass inside and out to ensure good vision. Use a product that does not leave streaks or cause glare.

• Have small windshield chips repaired to prevent them from becoming cracks that require complete windshield replacement. Most such repairs can be made easily by an auto glass technician coming to the vehicle's location. These small chips and cracks can turn into large cracks in cold weather when the hot air from the car's heater hits the cold windshield.

• Consider headlight restoration if the headlight lenses have developed a frosted yellow surface. This repair process restores a clear finish to the lens, which improves both vehicle appearance and nighttime vision. Do-it-yourselfers can purchase restoration kits at auto parts stores for approximately $20. Commercial services will typically do the job for between $50 and $100.

Another easy way to improve the resale value of a vehicle is by saving all of its maintenance records. Motorists can be as organized as keeping them in a file or just stuffing them the glove box. Either way, being able to produce a record of proper maintenance and repairs during ownership of the vehicle can add hundreds of dollars to a vehicle's sales price. Also, most repairs come with some form of warranty, and documentation of the repair will be needed to support any warranty claim that might arise.

Ask John Paul: AAA's Car Doctor



JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

Question: I have a 2006 Cadillac SRX with 140,252 miles on it. Within the past two years I have replaced the catalytic converters and since then, the car has been burning oil. Just this week I had an oil change, then hit the road and drove 175 miles and the check engine light came on. I checked it and found the engine had no oil. What could be the problem?

Answer: The catalytic converter failure is most likely a result of your Cadillac burning oil. The first and simplest check would be to ensure the positive crankcase ventilation (PCV) system is operating properly. If the PCV system is not working properly, this can result in increased oil use. Also, higher than normal engine temperatures, worn piston rings and damaged valve seals can all lead to increased oil use. At this point, I would have a repair shop perform a complete diagnostic check of the engine. This should also include cylinder leak down and compression tests.

Q: I am a 69 year old woman trying to locate a used sedan, large or mid-sized, with AWD and regular turn-key ignition. I would also prefer to have comfortable adjustable driver seating with lumbar support and a tilt/telescoping steering wheel without overly complicated electronics.

A: I would start with a later model Ford Taurus; these cars are dependable, have a great all-wheel-drive system and should satisfy all of your requirements. As with any used car purchase, you should have the car fully inspected by a reputable repair shop.

Q: My 2004 Hyundai XG350L with 78,000 miles has the air bag light on. I took it to the Hyundai garage and was quoted a price of $1,600 plus labor to have the car fixed. I love the car and would like to keep it but can't decide if I should fix it. I would appreciate your thoughts.

A: The Hyundai XG350 is a great car but does suffer from some rust issues. Before spending what could easily amount to $2000 on your car, I would want a technician to fully inspect the car to look for rust (some repairs were under a recall). If the car looks good, I don't see any reason not to perform the repair.

Q: I have an older Chevy truck with a 350 engine and spark plugs six and eight get oil fouled. What problems am I looking for?

A: It is not uncommon on this engine to see valve guide wear; as the valve guides wear, oil is sucked by the valve seals and ends up in the combustion chamber. I would perform a compression test on the engine; if the compression is low in those two cylinders, you may be faced with an engine overhaul. In the short term, you could put in a slightly hotter spark plug or even a spark plug anti-fouler. The anti-fouler would solve the oil consumption problem and will keep the plug clean and the engine from skipping.

Q: I have a 2010 F-150 and I have a problem keeping my interior windshield clean. Neither I nor my passengers smoke in my truck, but within a few days after washing my windshield, there is a film back on it similar to a smoke film. I've tried various cleaning solutions but none keep it clean any longer than a few days. This is the only vehicle I've owned that this happens with. Any suggestions would be appreciated.

A: This film on the inside of the windshield is from the outgassing of all the plastics and foam in your truck. I have found that there isn't much you can do other than clean the windshield periodically. My favorite glass cleaners (approved by my wife) are ZEP Glass cleaner, Invisible Glass and Sprayway. Once the window is clean, follow up with a microfiber cloth. This should get the windows nice and clean. Leaving the windows open just a bit will help too.

Q: I have a 2014 Subaru Crosstrek that I am having a problem with. The transmission is very slow to engage, especially from reverse to drive; it takes three to four seconds before the car moves. I am afraid that when I back out into traffic, I'll get rear ended because I can't get out of the way fast enough. The other day on the highway, the car in front of me slammed on their brakes, and when I went to move into the left lane, the car behind me almost hit me because my car just didn't move. The salesman said the car needed to be re-programmed, but then the service manager told me that there was nothing wrong with the car and did nothing. I believe this car is dangerous, what do I do? I called Subaru and opened up a claim. Clearly they know about this. I have two friends with 2013 Subaru's and their cars don't have this problem. Help!

A. I have driven several 2014 Subaru models and haven't experienced this problem but have heard from readers with similar concerns. One reader reports that it can take up to seven seconds for the transmission to shift from reverse to drive. Since not every 2014 Subaru has this problem, it seems to me that it can be fixed. I would continue to work with Subaru-Customer Service, not the dealership, to try to get the matter resolved.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, September 16, 2014, at approximately 1:27 AM, Officers Michael Flaherty and Christopher McDermott were dispatched to the area of the Hough's Neck Fire Station on a report of a suspicious incident.

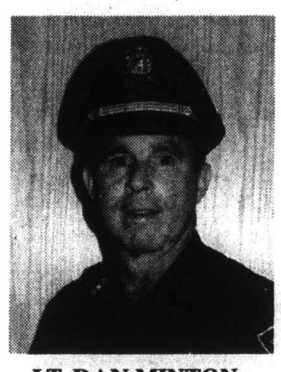
A female caller believed she was being followed by an unknown male. Officer Flaherty arrived and spoke with a Firefighter who said that a female came to the fire house asking for help because she was being followed. She appeared to be upset and frightened. The female was brought inside the station and a few moments later a drunk male started banging on the door to the station. The Firefighter told the Officer that he recognized the suspect from a prior incident at the station on Friday September 12, 2014.

The Firefighter asked the suspect what he wanted and he said that he was looking for a light for his cigarette. The suspect was told to leave, which he did, walking down Manet Avenue towards Darrow Street. Officer Flaherty interviewed the female, who was a resident of Hough's Neck. She said that she got off the bus at the Manet Bar & Grill and as she started walking home, a male with a gray hooded sweatshirt and red shorts started yelling at her, "Hey you, come over here." She said she ignored the suspect and started walking towards Babcock Street when she noticed that the male was following her, so she ran towards the fire station seeking help.

After gathering all information, the Officer offered to drive the female home but her husband was already on his way. A review of the past incident involving the suspect showed that the suspect was removed from a bus for harassing teenagers.

When the Police arrived, they determined that the suspect was drunk and placed him in protective custody. Now knowing who the suspect was and where he resided from his past booking sheet, the Officers went to the residence.

After knocking to no avail, the Officers checked the perimeter of the house and found the suspect under some blankets on the porch. The suspect was wearing the same clothes the victim reported. The suspect, who was intoxicated, said that this was his mother's house and he didn't want to wake her so he went to sleep on the porch. He said in a slurred manner that he did not have a key. When asked if he talked to a female on a bus tonight, the suspect said, "Look I only wanted a light for my cigarette."



LT. DAN MINTON

The Officers instructed the suspect to stand up and when he did, he appeared unsteady on his feet, which led the Officers to believe that the suspect would pose a danger to himself and the public if left outside the residence in his condition. The suspect, a 49 year old Quincy resident, was placed in handcuffs and taken into protective custody. A protective custody charge keeps the suspect in a jail cell from 4 to 12 hours to sober up and there is no criminal charge or fine. The suspect became combative and started yelling obscenities as he was being placed in the cruiser. Nice Work!

In this case, the female was observant and due to the time, knew that it was unlikely any immediate help was available if this suspect was to attack her. She opted for the fire station, which is manned around the clock. This was an excellent move, but what would you do if there was no business or public building available to get help from?

One option would be to get your cell phone out and call "911". Remember, the call will go to the State Police, so be sure to say, "Quincy Police" and the call will be transferred. Be ready to describe where you are and stay on the line with the Dispatcher because he/she will have many questions. The Dispatcher will forward the information to the responding Officers.

If you don't have a cell phone or the threat is imminent, look for a house with lights still on and bang on the door violently while ringing the bell. In most cases, the suspect will flee.

If you happen to be the neighbor that is abruptly involved in the situation, opening your door without much information at hand to a panicked unknown person puts you in a difficult position. This could be a domestic violence incident or it could be a ruse to get you to open the door. The first step for you is to call "911" to get the Police responding.

At this point, since there are so many variables in the situation, it is up to you as to whether you allow the person in. Are you capable of engaging the suspect? Are you risking your family? Can you get the victim inside your home safely without allowing the suspect access? Why is the suspect still there? These are just some of the questions you should be asking yourself. Again, calling "911" and staying on the line with the Dispatcher is the most important step because he/she will be able to advise you as to what you should do as you explain what is happening.

QUINCY POLICE SELF DEFENSE PROGRAM: the next class will be a two night program at Eastern Nazarene College's gym on October 20 and 21, a Monday and Tuesday night at 6:00 p.m. to about 8:30 p.m. It is important that you attend both nights! Dean E. Litchfield

A funeral Mass for Dean E. Litchfield of Middleborough, formerly of Weymouth, was celebrated Sept. 19 at St. Albert the Great Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Litchfield died Sept. 16, surrounded by his loving family.

He was dedicated to his family—his three children, six grandchildren, one great-grandchild, his wife, Marion, who he cherished, and numerous nieces and nephews. And he was dedicated to his work—spending a record 53 years at Keohane Funeral Home, first with founder Cornelius Keohane and then with current Chairman Ed Keohane. But mostly, Mr. Litchfield was dedicated to helping others, to doing the right things the right way, with an infectious sense of humor that attracted many dear friends and acquaintances along the way.

His sense of duty led him to serve in the Army and Marine Reserves after his graduation from Weymouth High School in 1951. Mr. Litchfield then graduated from the New England Institute for Anatomy & Embalming. His sense of community inspired him to join North Quincy Knights of Columbus, the Weymouth Elks, Massachusetts Funeral Director's Association and National Funeral Director's Association. And his compassion for people not only made him an extraordinary funeral director, and it also inspired decades of volunteer work with hospice as well as the American Red Cross.

DEAN E. LITCHFIELD

Amid all that, Mr. Litchfield found the time to travel the world with his wife, Marion, and nurture the second-longest-running relationship of his life –golf – which he played until the end, at Oak Point where he also shared his golf time playing pool. He will be remembered for his dedication, discipline, irreverence, optimism, sense of humor, and friendliness towards all.

Beloved husband of Marion R. (O'Hara) Litchfield of Middleborough. Loving father of Gail M. Georges and her husband Jeff of Hull, Paul E. Litchfield and his wife Mary of Westborough, and Dr. Brian J. Litchfield and his wife Sandra of CA. Cherished "Pa" to PJ Cunniff, Dennis Cunniff, Kellie Cunniff, Christopher Litchfield, Taylor M. Litchfield, Jennifer M. Litchfield and great-grandfather to Kinsley Belle Cunniff. Dedicated brother of Dale S. Litchfield and his wife Robin of KY, Dana B. Litchfield and his wife Louise of NH, the late C. Frances Cipullo and her husband Du of Marstons Mills, and the late Rea F. Litchfield. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Councillors Praise Jeanne Reardon

estly," Council President Joseph Finn said. "She really represents the best of Quincy in so many ways in terms of her commitment, in terms of her loyalty, and in terms of her willingness to help out.

"I'm finishing up now 13 years [on the council], and the one thing that always impressed me in relation to Jeanne is the wisdom she brought to this job. She represented in many regards the institutional memory of the City Council. You could think your idea was brilliant and the greatest thing since soft ice cream, and Jeanne could tell you how it had been tried and found wanting in the past. But that never stopped her from continuing to encourage."

Cheney, a former Ward 1 councillor and council president, said Reardon helped shape the city during her tenure.

"She was our counsel – she was the councillors' counselor. Many times she would give us advice and she was very cautious on how she did it. She never wanted to step on anyone's toes, but she wanted to help every one of us," Cheney said.

"It was not on one occasion, it was everyday. She was really the reason for many of our success stories at City Hall. She helped shape, indirectly and sometimes directly, this city for many, many years."

Kolson, also a former Ward 1 councillor and council president, praised Reardon for the effort she made when it came to writing council mailings and commendations.

"All you had to do was fill in the time, the date, and the where and she filled in the blanks. She made all of us look good. She made us look bright, intelligent," Kolson said. "Nobody wrote council presentations and recognitions like Jeanne. They were gorgeous, well written, and heartfelt. Every letter was heartfelt and you felt it when you read it."

Raymondi, a longtime Ward 2 councillor and former council president who continues to attend council meetings regularly as the city's public works commissioner, said Reardon left a legacy as a loving, kind, and helpful public servant.

"Throughout those 34 years there have been a number of personalities, but there was one consistent face of the City Council and that was Jeanne. Just a loving, kind, helpful public servant who did only what was best for her community and for the City Council. She leaves that legacy to each and every one of us. You can see [that] by the outpouring of those folks who work with her," Raymondi said.

"For the past 34 years this city has been blessed with her presence, with her wisdom, with her service, and you'll be missed."

McDermott, a former Ward 3 councillor who is now Norfolk County's register of probate, sang Barry Manilow's "Where Does the Time Go?" in honor of Reardon.

"Jeanne encouraged me always to sing," McDermott said. "We had so many wonderful memories over the years."

issues and the cooperation of the maintenance staff," said Marathas. "The entire maintenance staff has come together as a team and they've rallied to complete this work."

According to Lydon, work orders sent to the maintenance department dating back to 2008 have recently been found that were either ignored or flagged as low priority by former Maintenance Director David Ferris, who held the $75,000 per year position for over 10 years and managed roughly 50 maintenance workers. He was put on paid leave effective July 9 due to "serious wrongdoings." He resigned on Sept. 12.

New Facility To Treat Addiction; Neighborhood Meeting Thursday

making it a perfect option for their new location.

"We see this as a community effort and so when you talk about where our clients come from, they come from here," said Senior Vice President and Regional Director for Phoenix House New England Patrick B. McEneaney "You used to put people away…now we treat people in their community, and this community, among others, is experiencing an unprecedented epidemic."

"That is really the reason for this facility," said Gaer. "It's really in response to the opioid epidemic."

Mayor Thomas Koch said he fully supports the facility proposal.

"This is an absolutely critical need in our community, and we cannot in good conscience say we're doing everything possible to stop this tragedy and turn our backs on our families who are in desperate need of this kind of facility.

"I've seen the devastation wrought by substance abuse on too many of our own sons and daughters, and taken too many phone calls about the lack of availability of treatment for people who need it to feel any other way.

"I fully support the proposal, as these are two of the most well-run, most reputable treatment centers in the entire country. When everyone hears the full story of the Gavin House and Phoenix House, they will have their concerns addressed, questions answered and I hope understand that it's exactly this kind of facility that can have a positive impact on the entire City. This is not bringing more problems to Quincy - it's a addressing a problem that's already here and one that this community has not buried its head the sand on. And we're not going to start now.

"This is the missing link in all that we've been doing year," Koch said. "We've made substantial progress in both enforcement and education, but treatment is that third important piece and it has been desperately lacking.

"I understand some of the concerns shared so far - that this is going to create a criminal element in and around the neighborhood where the facility is proposed. This isn't that kind of facility - it's very tightly run, self-contained and patients are not allowed to come and go as they please or hang around outside the building. These are people seeking treatment for a terrible disease - they are college graduates, they had good jobs, and most importantly they are our neighbors, friends and family members. Because you need this treatment does not automatically make you a criminal or a threat.

"In fact," the mayor continued, "it's this kind of facility that will help us reduce those issues that we do have. There's a difference between being treated for addiction and hanging around all day on the street, drinking or getting high, and causing problems.

"We have those issues, and the Quincy Police Department does a tremendous job every day limiting those problems. That's not to say we can't do more.

"We can."

McEneaney, McGahan, and Gaer will be at a neighborhood meeting hosted by Ward 5 City Councillor Kirsten Hughes to answer questions and address concerns from the public on Sept. 25 at 6:30 p.m. in the Central Middle School auditorium.

McGahan said that neighborhood residents concerned about those dependent on drugs gathering around the facility should be aware that they are "already walking around the community," and that they need help battling their disease.

A security detail will be present at the unlocked facility to monitor clients and those entering and exiting the building.

McEneaney said that if he were approached by a neighbor concerned about safety, he would tell them the short and acute nature of the treatment means patients will be in and out of the facility quickly, giving them little time to leave the grounds in the first place.

"We want to be good neighbors, good community partners, and what we want to do is help people that are sick get well," said McGahan. "This is about treating the disease of addiction in the community where people live."

Most clients will be at the facility by choice, however some will be sectioned into treatment.

McEneaney noted that over the last ten years, there has been an increase in college educated and female clients seeking treatment.

This current demographic of heroin users undergo rehabilitation as many have established careers and require a shorter-term, acute treatment plan which then focuses heavily on providing long-term support. In the past, the majority of those addicted to heroin needed to be completely habilitated and slowly reintroduced to the community he said.

Once discharged, clients will be directed to long-term, supportive care programs to continue on with their recovery.

The cost for most clients at the nonprofit treatment agency founded in 1967 will be covered by either private or state-funded insurance said McEneaney.

Adequate parking is already available on site for staff eliminating any possibility of traffic congestion and clients enter and leave the facility infrequently enough to not impact traffic flow.

"Phoenix House and Gavin House did not identify the problem. That was identified by the state," said McEneaney. "The problem was here long before we got here."

The rate of heroin use in those admitted for treatment in Quincy has risen from 40 percent in 2002 to 59 percent in 2012 said McGahan. The statewide average is 43 percent.

Currently, those who are sectioned into treatment who are not able to find an available spot in a rehabilitation center are incarcerated and provided with care while in prison. McGahan hopes to alleviate some instances of this forced incarceration once operations are underway at Phoenix House.

McEneaney said he welcomed the public to tour any Phoenix House facility given a one hour notice.

"We take [the public's] concerns absolutely seriously," he said. "I don't see this as an issue where the community will be lessened at all."

Realtors Cite Flood Insurance Concerns

"They've been buying homes in Quincy with flood insurance for many, many years. I'm one of those people…The fear for myself and the buyers we work with is the unknown. Where do we go from here? How many more houses will be added? What are the projected costs? And what's going to happen in two years when potentially the maps will be looked at again?"

Palmucci, however, noted his ward contains many properties within flood plains, none of which are on the ocean.

"I can tell you in West Quincy there isn't a lot of privilege of living near the ocean," he said. "We live near the Furnace Brook. We have underground culverts coming off the Cunningham Brook out of Milton. That's the basis for why folks in West Quincy are in flood zones. We're not paying for any privilege there, I think, that perhaps folks in other parts of the city are."

The oversight committee meeting was held as the council weighs a resolution introduced earlier this year by Councillor Doug Gutro, which called on the Quincy's Board of Assessors to consider giving tax abatements to the property owners effected by new FEMA flood maps that went into effect in June. Those maps put 1,400 properties into flood plains; an additional 2,700 properties already in flood plains were mapped into higher risk areas. The city has filed a letter of map revision to appeal those maps.

At the conclusion of the Sept. 17 meeting, Gutro said the information provided by the four realtors show those new maps are causing an effect on the real estate market.

"My take is that the maps are having an impact and the jury is still out in terms of quantifying the impact," Gutro said. "But it's obviously creating a lot of hesitancy on the sales front and anxiety and uncertainty."

Massage Parlor Rules Proposed

physical and massage therapists would be exempt from the new regulations. Hospitals, long-term care facilities, and home health agencies licensed by the state would also be exempted.

If the ordinance were approved by the council, an individual looking to practice reflexology or Asian bodywork in Quincy would have to fill out an application and provide a passport type photo, a transcript from an education institution, verification of the successful completion of an applicable national certification exam; two letters of professional recommendation. Applicants must also undergo a Criminal Offenders Record Information (CORI) check and disclose any conviction for any sexual-related offense within the past 10 years, any revocation or denial of a license to practice bodywork in any state or municipality, and any loss or restriction of certification. All applicants would need to be at least 18 years old.

Applicants would pay a $75 application fee. The licenses would be valid for one year and could be renewed for a $75 fee.

A separate license process would be put in place for those wishing to operate a bodyworks establishment. The regulations require licensed establishments to only use licensed therapists for bodyworks; therapists would have to adhere to cleanliness standards and be prohibited from wearing clothes exposing any private part. All equipment used in the establishment must be kept clean; bodyworks would only be allowed in rooms with adequate lighting and ventilation. No sexual activity or alcoholic beverages would be allowed in a licensed establishment.

Applicants seeking to open an establishment would pay a $100 fee, renewable each year for $100.

Violations of the proposed new regulations could face a $1,000 fine for criminal penalties. Non-criminal penalties would be capped at a $50 civil fine.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An upcoming trip could create some problems with your schedule unless you tie up as many loose ends as possible before you head out the door. Ask a friend or colleague to help you.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Being eager to start a new project is fine. However, moving ahead without knowing what actually will be expected of you could cause a problem down the line. Ask some questions.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Getting through some recent challenges in good shape might give you a false sense of security. Don't relax your guard. You need to be prepared for what else could happen.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Caution is still advised, even though you think you're as prepared as you need to be. Keep in mind that change is in your aspect, and you should expect the unexpected.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Lion's gift of persuasion helps you get your points across, even to some of your most negative naysayers. An old friend might seek you out for some advice.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Being sure of your convictions is fine. But leave some room for dissenting opinions. You might learn something that could help you avoid a possible problem later on.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting good legal advice on what your rights actually are is the first step toward resolving that pesky problem so that it doesn't re-emerge at a later date. Good luck.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Longtime relationships work well this week, whether they're personal or professional. It's also a good time to invite new friends and colleagues into your life.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to do the research that will help you uncover those irrefutable facts that can back you up on your new venture when you most need it.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Change is an important factor in your aspect this week and could affect something you might have thought was immune to any sort of adjustment or "alteration."
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Being asked to share someone's deeply personal confidence might be flattering, but accepting could be unwise. Decline gracefully but firmly.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) As wise as you are, you could still be misled by someone who seems to be sincere but might not be. Take more time to assess the situation before making any commitments.
BORN THIS WEEK: You like to face challenges that others might try to avoid, and by so doing, you set an example of courage for all.

At the ovine amusement park, do you think every patron should have some sheep thrills?

8-Page Color Pamphlet

New Guide For Quincy School-Community Partnership

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy School — Community Partnership (QSCP) will soon be distributing its new partnership guide to local businesses in the hopes that more companies will invest in Quincy Public Schools.

Coordinator of the Quincy School — Community Partnership John Fagerlund said that this year he has secured roughly 100 partners — about 10 more than last year.

He hopes the new guide will attract even more partners by highlighting how their contributions will positively impact Quincy's schools.

Fagerlund, along with Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro, came up with the idea for the guide right before the beginning of the summer. Following its design, Quincy's The Ink Spot produced 200 copies of the 8 and a half by 11 inch, eight-page guide at a cost of almost $1,000.

More will be printed if the need arises, said Fagerlund.

Inside the guide is a message from Mayor Thomas Koch extending his gratitude to partners who "will once again make a remarkable commitment to our young people through their involvement in the Quincy School — Community Partnership."

The guide details how monetary donations can be used to benefit QPS and its children such as through funding Teacher Mini-Grants that allow teachers to pursue educational initiatives outside of their usual curriculum.

Over $237,000 in Mini-Grant funds have been awarded to date.

Monetary contributions can also go toward the purchase of classroom technology, hands-on materials, and the expansion of classroom libraries.

Partners may also choose to further student support by mentoring, tutoring, sponsoring field trips, sharing work experience with students, donating gift certificates or food items, volunteering for a school project, or by donating furniture.

A section of the guide focuses on "career connections" which offer high school students career focused opportunities such as internships, job shadowing, clinical placements, mock interviews, portfolio development, and college presentations.

"We're not just looking for that monetary contribution. There's so much more that can be done in student support, mentoring programs, going into the classrooms and reading to the kids," said Fagerlund.

Companies such as General Dynamics and Arbella Insurance Group are "a tremendous asset" to the partnership because of their donations of office furniture such as desks, meeting tables, and chairs to furnish the school department's new office location in Coddington Hall at 24 Coddington St.

Last year, partner contributions supported beautification projects at the Lincoln - Hancock Community School's Water Street entryway which included interior painting and the framing and hanging of prints of students' quotes.

Upcoming plans include student designed mosaics on the Granite Street side of the school.

At Montclair Elementary School, a classroom will be supplied with laptop computers and other devices thanks to partner contributions.

The guide includes a handy chart which lists all of the companies involved in the partnership, their donation level, and whether they provide student or site support, or Career Connections.

Fagerlund gave credit to the Quincy Chamber of Commerce for its printed membership directory that lists organizations and businesses that are Chamber members. He said he has about a ten percent response rate from the companies he contacts from the Chamber's list and is excited to set up all future interviews with possible contributors with the partnership guide in hand.

Fagerlund, who has been coordinator for two years, said this year the QSCP has raised in excess of $110,000 to benefit Quincy's public schools.

"Our growth has really taken place in what we call the Platinum Level which is a $5,000 financial contribution or above," he said. "We're very fortunate to have a company like Boston Scientific down in Squantum who have just gone above and beyond and contribute towards the purchase of technology and design a curriculum with the teachers."

Other Platinum Level Partners include Bluefin Robotics, Boston University, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, and Quirk Auto Dealers.

Gold Level Partners donate $2,500 or more in money, goods, or services. Silver level partners donate $1,000 or more and Bronze Level Partners donate $500 or more.

Contributions can be small but are still much appreciated, he said. Giving $250 can provide food for a new teacher orientation luncheon. A donation of pizzas can feed those participating in an afternoon school beautification project.

"We're not Fortune 500 focused. We will kindly accept a donation of any sort from anyone," said Fagerlund. "As I go out and solicit new partners, [the guide] is something they can utilize as a tool...as a visual of what the partnership is all about."

Torch Sparks City Hall Fire

• Security At Historic Building Stepped Up
• Renovation Project Set Back 6-8 Weeks

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Mayor Thomas Koch is vowing to step up security measures and to enact a "tighter plan" following a fire that was sparked by a copper thief using a torch that caused significant damage to the interior of Old City Hall early Tuesday morning.

Copper pipes were also discovered stolen from the building's attic on Monday - a day before the blaze.

Koch said changes must take place to more properly secure the building such as possibly bringing in an outside security company to monitor the area, having local police canvas the site, or installing additional security cameras "to keep an eye on things."

Downtown Escrow Funds Spent

Most Of $851,518 Forfeited By Street-Works Allocated By City

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nearly all the funds in an escrow account forfeited by Street-Works have been allocated by the city.

When Quincy's land disposition agreement (LDA) with the developer was terminated this March, the city took ownership of an escrow Street-Works had paid into in exchange for the extension of several deadlines. The account had $851,518 when the LDA was terminated; all but $103.84 has been spent or encumbered, according to officials at a meeting of the City Council's downtown committee Monday.

The lion's share of the money in the account – $551,414 – went to offset costs associated with demolishing the Ross Garage extension and related utility work, Planning Director Dennis Harrington stated. The demolition and utility work had been paid for by the city out a $5 million state grant received in 2007 for downtown redevelopment. Street-Works was supposed to reimburse the city for those costs when they finalized the purchase of the Ross Garage; the developer had agreed to pay $5.6 million for the garage to account for the reimbursement instead of the original $5 million agreed to in the LDA.

Additionally, $300,000 will be paid to Redgate Real Estate Advisors. The Boston-based firm was brought on by the city earlier this year to serve as a new consultant to the city on Quincy Center redevelopment.

Harrington and city Auditor Susan O'Connor also provided the committee with a detailed list of payments made to consultants who advised the city throughout the process with Street-Works.

The developer paid a total of $825,000 into an account used to pay the consultants hired by the city. An additional $47,045 in fees

I-Cubed Funding Extension Seen

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials are optimistic the city will receive an extension on a key deadline to receive state financing to construct Adams Green and a new bridge in Quincy Center.

The city planned to use Massachusetts' Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) program to finance construction of a new park between City Hall and the United First Parish Church, tentatively known as Adams Green as well as a new bridge over Burgin Parkway. Under the I-Cubed program, the state would provide funding for the project that would be paid off from new state revenue generated from commercial developments, in Quincy's case the planned redevelopment of the downtown.

Quincy received preliminary approval for $40 million in I-Cubed financing – $25 million to pay for the new park and $15 million for the bridge – but no funds

Household Hazardous Waste Drop-Off Saturday At DPW

The City of Quincy Department of Public Works will host the fall Hazardous Household Waste Drop-off Saturday, Oct. 4 in the rear of the DPW at 55 Sea St.

The drop-off event will begin at 8 a.m. and end at 10 a.m. Residents should arrive early as the line often wraps around Sea Street onto Southern Artery. Proof of residency is required. The City of Quincy provides this free service to assist residents in the proper disposal of hazardous waste and protect the environment. The next HHW drop-off event is in June of 2015.

Some of the eligible items for disposal are oil-based paints, thinners, strippers, oils and varnishes, all household cleaners including drain and plumbing cleaners, automotive fluids including oil and gasoline, chemical fertilizers and insecticides, polishes, ni-cad and lithium batteries, roofing tar and driveway sealants.

Of the utmost importance are all mercury-containing products such as thermostats, thermometers, fluorescent tubes, CFL (swirly) light bulbs, button batteries and mercurochrome. Once released into the environment, mercury persists for long periods of time and does not degrade into harmless chemicals. Mercury can damage the nervous system, brain, kidneys, liver and immune system. Developing brains and nervous systems of children are very sensitive to mercury.

When gathering products for the drop-off event leave materials in original containers and tighten all caps and lids. Sort and pack items separately in sturdy upright boxes. Never mix chemicals. Pack your car the morning of the event and drive directly to the DPW. Do not smoke while handling hazardous material and do not bring children in the car with you.

Items not accepted at the hazardous materials drop-off day are latex paint, tires, ammunition, fireworks and explosives, commercial/industrial/biological waste, prescription medicine, radioactive waste and smoke detectors.

For the proper disposal of these materials visit the City's website www.quincy-ma.gov/Government/PWD/Trash.cfm, and scroll down to "How can I get rid of...

Nearly 60 Years Later, Theodore Lavoot Receives Medal

Second-Highest Decoration The Navy Awards For Noncombat Heroism

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Theodore Lavoot unexpectedly received the Navy and Marine Corp Medal in late August, nearly 60 years after heroically rescuing a pilot who crashed his single-seat jet liner into the Mediterranean Sea in 1956.

Lavoot was born in 1936 and grew up in Quincy. A 1954 graduate of Quincy High School, he attended his 60th reunion at the Quincy Neighborhood Club last Thursday.

His mother, Evelyn Lavoot, was a maternity nurse at what was at the time the Quincy City Hospital and his sister, Diane McNiff worked for the Quincy School Administration.

In late August, an envelope from the Naval Support Activity Center/ Navy Personnel Command Center in Millington, Tennessee arrived at his Anaheim, California home.

In the envelope he found a "Transmittal of and/ or Entitlement to Awards" form that indicated a recent review revealed that he had been awarded an unspecified medal.

"When I got this package I had no idea what it was," he said.

As the envelope contained no further information on the medal's significance, Lavoot had to do a bit of online research to determine that he had just received the second most prestigious medal awarded by the Navy for noncombat heroism involving life-threatening risk.

Lavoot, 77, speculates he was awarded the medal due to an event which occurred in October of 1956 for which he was honored during a meritorious mast.

At the time, he thought that was as much recognition as he'd receive for his courageous act.

Lavoot served in the U.S. Navy from 1955 to 1959 as an officer on the aviation sea rescue team prior to starting his career as an electronics engineer for defense systems in the aerospace industry.

In October 1956 he was on tour aboard the aircraft carrier the USS Coral Sea CVA-43 in the Mediterranean Sea.

He was in an HU-2 helicopter with pilot Lt. Francis Cronin alongside the aircraft carrier as an F2H Banshee took off.

He noticed the single-seat jet liner plane wasn't gaining altitude a mile or two out to sea. It then crashed into the water.

By that point, Lavoot had executed several "standard" rescues utilizing a sling which was lowered from the aircraft, however he had not been involved in any precarious or dangerous rescues that involved him entering the water himself.

Nor was he properly outfitted to perform such a rescue. "We didn't wear all of the paraphernalia they have today," he said.

Several rescue attempts failed as Lavoot repeatedly lowered the sling from 20 feet above into the water to retrieve the motionless pilot.

He later learned that the pilot had hurt his back in the crash and was unable to move due to his injuries.

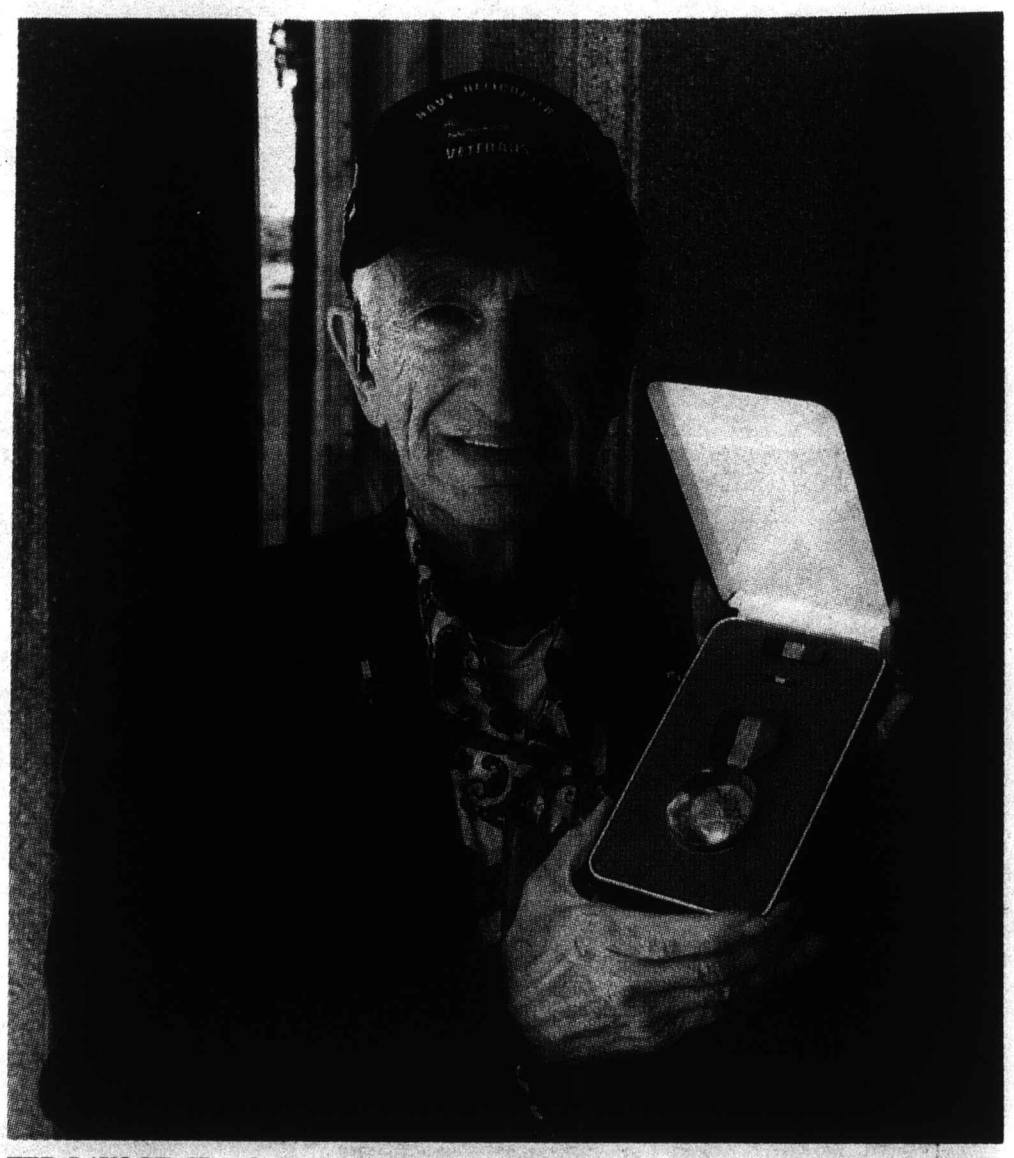
Lavoot dove in to rescue the pilot who still had his parachute attached which could have easily wrapped around both their bodies, pulling them under the surface of the water, he said.

He swam to the pilot and after cutting him free of his parachute swam the injured man over to the sling which was then lifted into the HU-2 helicopter by Cronin.

"I never got his name," said Lavoot, who said he believes that he received the medal after files were moved to the Naval Support Activity Center and were thoroughly sorted through for organizational purposes.

While Lavoot is now a resident of California, he still makes time to visit New England once every one to two years with his wife Terri who he met while he was a student at Northeastern University studying to be an engineer.

He has since written a letter to the U.S. Department of the Navy asking to have his friend, Abraham Specter, posthumously recognized for a similar water rescue attempt in which he lost his life.



TED LAVOOT, 77, a Quincy native who now lives in Anaheim, CA, holds the Navy-Marine Corps Medal of Heroism - the next to highest medal given by the Navy. Lavoot served in the U.S. Navy aboard the USS Coral Sea aircraft carrier during 1956-57. He was a aviation-sea rescue team member and was involved in rescues of downed pilots. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

3-Alarm Fire Strikes Historic Old City Hall

According to fire investigators, the cause of the fire was the open flame of an acetylene torch igniting common combustibles. Investigators believe that the fire was started by people attempting to remove copper pipes from the historical building, and is considered an intentional act.

Anyone with information is asked to confidentially call the state's Arson Hotline at 1-800-682-9229.

The fire is being jointly investigated by the Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department and the State Police assigned to the Office of the State Fire Marshal.

A cab driver called 911 around 1 a.m. to report the fire in the building which opened in 1844 and is currently undergoing $9 million in renovations and repairs which have been set back six to eight weeks as a result of the damage, Koch said.

It will take several days to determine whether the fire was deliberately set, according to Quincy Fire Chief Joseph Barron.

"[Police] believe it's suspicious and they are investigating all leads," said Police Capt. John Dougan.

"Once the building gets secured in the sense that the doors go in, the windows go in, it changes things drastically," said Koch, who added that he would be meeting with the building contractor, the police department, and representatives from the Public Buildings Department sometime Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday to discuss ways to more properly secure the building.

"It's hard to secure it but obviously we need to do a better job at that," he said. "There will be changes, for sure."

Because the building is attached to the new City Hall and was built atop differing elevations it is more difficult to keep completely secure he added.

Nearly 42 of the city's firefighters, eight engines, three ladders, and a rescue truck were called to the scene to fight back the flames which escalated to three alarms.

Boston, Braintree, and Weymouth firefighters stepped in to provide coverage for the city's fire stations.

The fire began in the back, left corner of the first floor, causing significant damage all the way up to the second floor, said Gary Cunniff of the city's Public Buildings Department who added that a welder's torch had been stolen from the scene.

The third floor and rafters remained largely untouched by the flames.

Koch said the fire was knocked down quickly.

"Thankfully, it was really just in a portion of the building that did not affect the entire building structurally," he said. "I'm pleased it was contained."

"The first fire crews did an outstanding job in preventing the building from being a total loss," said Barron.

While there was substantial damage, nothing historic was lost, said Koch.

No injuries to firefighters were reported.

There was no fire suppression system in place. That, along with old wiring and asbestos, may have made the building more susceptible to fire, according to Koch.

"It's been the seed of government for Quincy since 1844 and it's iconic to the people of Quincy, the face of that building," he said.

Dougan could not comment on whether the fire was in any way related to the theft of copper pipes from the building's attic discovered by construction workers on Monday morning, but confirmed that 54-year-old Darwin May turned himself in to authorities and confessed that he had taken the copper.

He is charged with receiving stolen goods worth more than $250 and was awaiting arraignment on Tuesday said Dougan.

May said he never entered the building to retrieve the copper but did admit to bringing the pipes to a friend's home at 185 Burgin Parkway to then sell to a salvage yard.

The friend's name has not been released as he has not been charged with any crime, nor is he considered a suspect in the theft or fire.

May was staying at the Father Bill's MainSpring emergency shelter on the night of the fire and is not a suspect, said Dougan.

The adjacent City Hall glass annex sustained no damage during the fire and opened for business on Tuesday.

State police investigators will be working with Quincy police, and the state fire marshal will be working with the Quincy fire department to determine the cause of the fire.

As of Tuesday morning, a damage assessment was still taking place, said Koch.

Insurance carried by the contractor will cover all damages.

No one was in the building during the fire, however a man who was found in the adjacent Hancock Cemetery at the time with a hip injury was taken to the hospital for treatment. He is being questioned by police, said Dougan.

The project to restore what is officially known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center will likely be completed sometime in the spring, said Koch.

MORE THAN 40 Quincy firefighters responded to Tuesday morning's three-alarm fire that damaged Old City Hall - the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

A TRANSFORMING EXPERIENCE

While many pieces of estate and heirloom jewelry have a great deal of character and carry much emotional appeal, they may be so outdated that they do not lend themselves to regular wear. If so, the jeweler can restyle the piece to better suit the wearer's tastes. After all, no matter how attached people may be to a piece of their mother's or father's jewelry, they are not going to wear it if it does not appeal to them aesthetically. However, if they were to take the diamond from their mother's ring, for example, and reset it in a pendant, they may appreciate it and wear it more often. Resetting heirloom gemstones is an art in itself.

When contemplating the best approach for you and your heirloom pieces, consider precious stone replacement, gemstone prong repair, clasp repair, a complete redesign, or cleaning and polishing as some of your options. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique diamond engagement rings, pendants, watches and earrings. Police Wives: The Strength Behind The Uniform

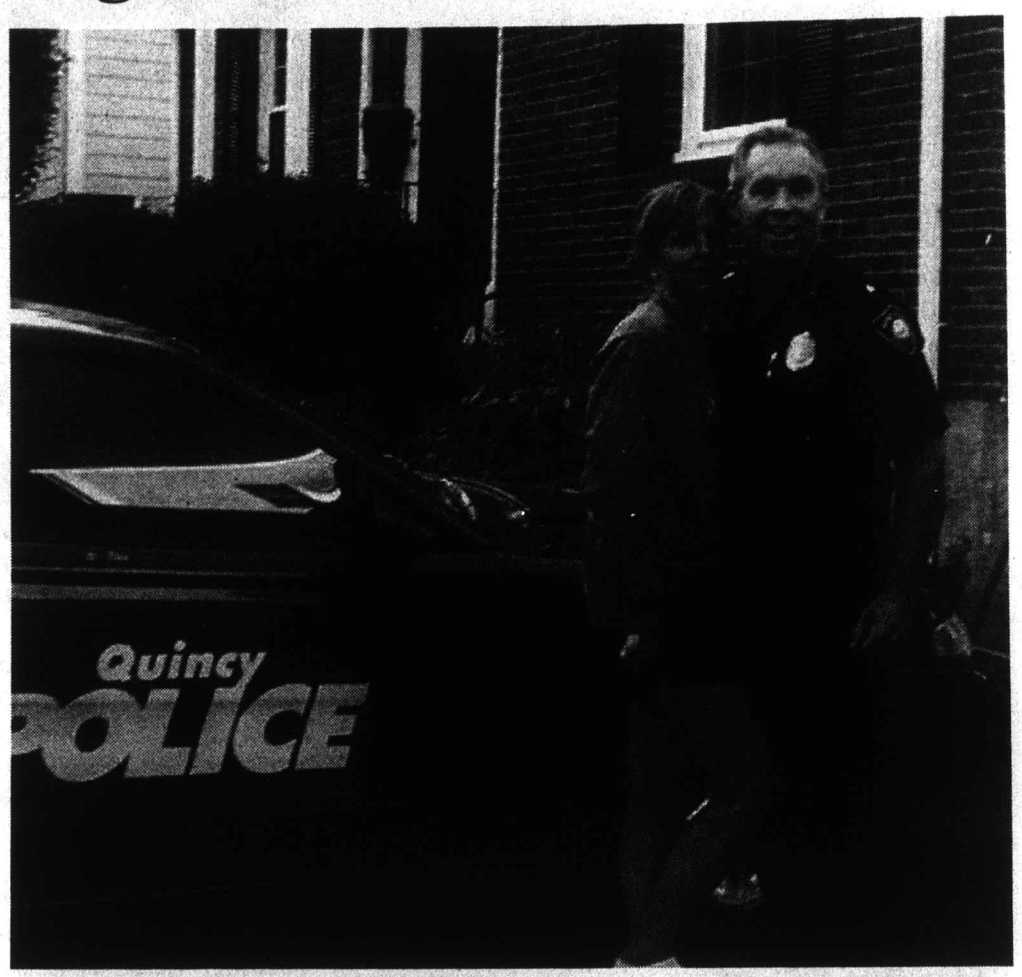
By LT. DANIEL MINTON
Quincy Police



QUINCY POLICE LT. Daniel Minton with his wife, Joanne. Mrs. Minton passed away Sept. 22 after a seven-year inspirational fight against cancer.

After being with me since 1980, my wife recently passed away. As a Police Officer, I wanted to take this opportunity to thank all those Police wives who stand by their Officer.

Being married to a Police Officer is different. We come home from work after seeing things that most people will never experience – and we see it over and over.

The wives are the ones who keep us sane. We work strange hours and most holidays. The wives keep the family together and learn to become very independent. Being the wife of a Police Officer is not for the weak, nor the self-centered, nor the needy, clingy, insecure or high-maintenance type of woman.

It is different. You will find yourself changing plans constantly due to the uncertain nature of police work. Making plans after work or on a day off are often disrupted by a serious call at the end of a shift or a sudden appearance in court.

It is different. Routine has no place in law enforcement or in Police families. Due to shift work, wives often sleep alone or are asleep when you come home. Your children often don't see you on a daily basis. Holidays, special occasions, anniversaries and birthdays are just days you must be prepared to work around – to celebrate that special day on another day. On most holidays, Officers are forced to work and miss out on valuable family moments.

It is different. At the park with your children, when others learn what your husband does, you may hear people say, "How can you do it, knowing that he may not come home alive or get shot?" It is always in the back of their minds. Everyone knows your husband is a Police Officer. Often times they will act differently around your family, making remarks such as, "Don't worry, I'm not driving" at a social gathering.

It is different. Wives often lose their long-time friends due to the rotating days off of their husband. With one weekend off every six weeks, your non-Police friends stop calling after awhile. Life is based on weekends off. Being out in public has its challenges. The Officer is always on guard, even off duty and when he sees someone he arrested, he wants to get you away from any confrontation with that person.

It is different. The sarcastic sense of humor that the Officer uses as a coping skill often permeates the family. When the wife needs to vent over a personal issue, she may have to put her needs on hold if the Officer experienced something horrific. There is a wide range of mood swings and they are often prompted by either the daily shift work or years of experiencing stressful incidents.

It is different. This job defines who your husband is and his commitment to those he serves. Hearing that a Police Officer was killed in the line of duty is a stark reminder to the wife, who knows that at any given time, she may have to "go it alone."

It is not an easy marriage - it demands flexibility, understanding and selfless commitment. The divorce rate is much higher for Police Officers. There are many health statistics that do not bode well for Police Officers.

For Police marriages, for those who focus on making it work, a very special family bond develops and the Police Wife is the strength behind the uniform.

Smegs Legs Run, Walk Oct. 11 At Broad Meadows School

The sixth annual Smegs Legs 5-Mile Road Race and 2-Mile Walk to benefit the Chris Smeglin Memorial Fund will be held Saturday, Oct. 11 at 9 a.m.

The event will be hosted by the Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy.

The run is held in memory of Chris Smeglin. Smeglin, who attended Atherton Hough, Broad Meadows and Boston College High School, graduated from the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, NY. Known for his unique sense of humor and zest for life, Chris high fived President Bush after receiving his diploma. He then enlisted in the U.S. Navy to fulfill a lifelong ambition to serve his country and become an aviator.

On Oct. 2, 2008, Navy LTJG Chris Smeglin was tragically killed while stationed in Kingsville, TX during a bike training session for a triathlon. The Houghs Neck resident was 24 years old.

The Smegs Legs Run memorializes Chris and his love and desire for fitness. Volunteers, runners and sponsors are invited to support this year's race. Proceeds benefit the Chris Smeglin Memorial Fund which raises monies for various local charities.

This year's beneficiaries are:

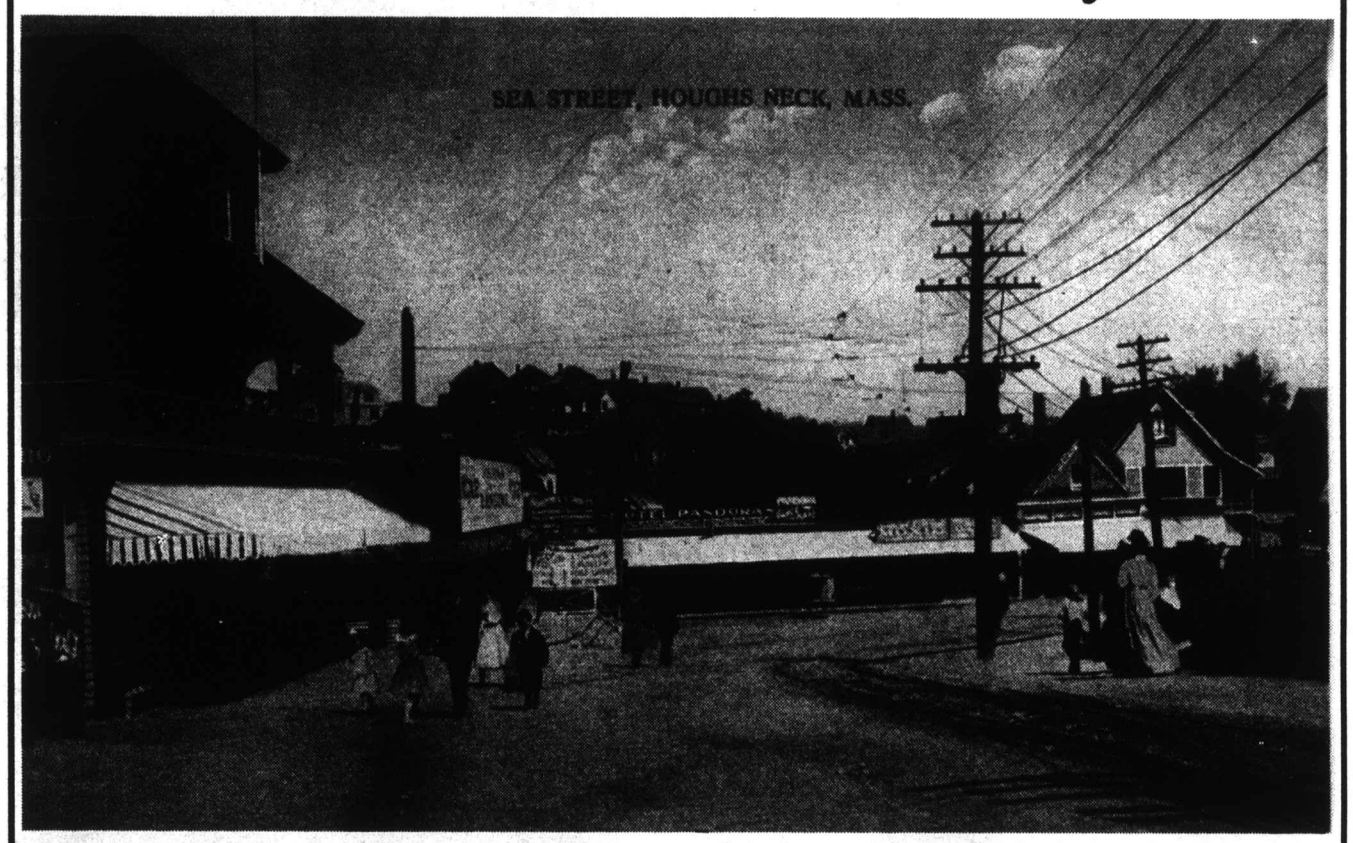
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS AN old postcard showing the end of Sea Street in Hough's Neck 100 years ago in 1914. This view is from the intersection of Bay View Avenue. The Quincy Yacht Club is just out of sight on the right where Sea Avenue begins its climb to the top of Great Hill in the distance. The trolley tracks curved around the corner on the right to end in a car barn behind Dunham's store which was also the post office. The Boston Candy Store advertised college ices under the Moxie sign on the right of the Hotel Pandora's dance hall. Peterson's on the left sold groceries and provisions including fresh milk; notice the milk cans on the sidewalk. The building just beyond Peterson's was Moore's Ballroom. All the commercial buildings in this pictured disappeared many years ago. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Take Pride In Your Property And Neighborhood

After my dog of 11 years passed away in April, I recently adopted a new dog and quickly got back into the routine of taking her out for walks. It was on our daily walks that I was immediately reminded of how filthy parts of Wollaston have become in the last few years. It is such a disgrace to see this once beautiful section of Quincy look the way it does now.

This letter has a two-part message. The first message is for those who are guilty of throwing the litter and trash onto the streets of Wollaston. Please stop.

The cigarette butts are the worst. Here is a little environmental information for all the cigarette smokers in Wollaston - cigarette butts are NOT biodegradable. They will continue to roll around in the gutter or on the sidewalk until someone picks them up and discards of them properly. To the people who purchase buckets of chicken wings from KFC and walk down Elm Avenue – please don't toss the remains of your eaten wings into the grass so my dog will find them and possible choke on a chicken bone. I can't possibly leave out those of you who buy your drink at Dunkin' Donuts and finish it before you get home and feel it is perfectly acceptable to toss it onto the ground as well. And last but not least, those losing lottery tickets. Just because you did not win does not mean you should take it out on the rest of the neighborhood. And by the way, those losing lottery tickets and the plastic drink cups are recyclable so let's save the taxpayers of Quincy some money and put them in a recycling bin.

My second message is for the homeowners and business owners who have to deal with the inconsiderate people who toss their trash in front of their homes and businesses. I empathize with you but if you don't clean the front of your own home and business, no one else will.

I hope more people will begin to take more pride in their property and their neighborhood.

Wollaston used to be such a beautiful area - please let's all do our part and keep our own walkways and sidewalks clean (and safe for our four-legged friends).

Stop Destroying Neighborhood

(A copy of the following letter to Councillor Kirsten Hughes was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

RE: 64 Bed Drug, Alcohol Detox.

My family has lived in Wollaston since 1925. My father and grandfather both gave plenty to their community by protecting and serving as Quincy policemen.

Fast forward...the neighborhood and areas close in proximity became the home for: Alcoholics and Narcotics Anonymous, Retarded Citizens, the homeless, half way transitional housing, DOVE, meth clinics.

Most recently Bay State Community Services started giving guidance to recently released convicts. The permanent benches at Central Middle school are magnets for teens in heat and the man with his hands down his pants, but not wrong because he wasn't exposed!!! The all hours skateboarding with the constant bang, bang, bang competes with the 3 a.m. drop and run of a bicycle, most likely stolen. The additional hotel level and multiple housing to be completed will bring more congestion to an area drowning in ignorant drivers.

I understand some people need help, but let the powers that be who dump them in this part of the city, take them to their front door and see how they like it!

This has become an unsettling and unsafe neighborhood. PLEASE don't continue to destroy it any more.

I would love to know who is behind these decisions so I can vote against them. Please share my comments with anyone. So very sad for the future of this city!

John Hancock's Chariot Featured At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

Open House Saturday From 10 AM To 4 PM

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for its final public tours of the season on Saturday, Oct. 4, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. for Discover Quincy Days.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 10 a.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested. The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 328 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the pre-Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

John Hancock's revolutionary war era Chariot has recently undergone extensive restoration and conservation. Thanks to a $31,400 grant from the Quincy Community Preservation Committee, the Chariot has been transformed from a dull black sleigh or booby hut into a vibrant, elegant carriage body. The beautiful historic Chariot will be on display for the second time this Saturday.

Quincy Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617-742-3190 or emailing nscda-ma@verizon.net. For more information, visit the Homestead's website: http://www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead.php

Wollaston Walking Tour Saturday

Historic New England invites the public for a Wollaston Walking Tour Saturday, Oct. 4, from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

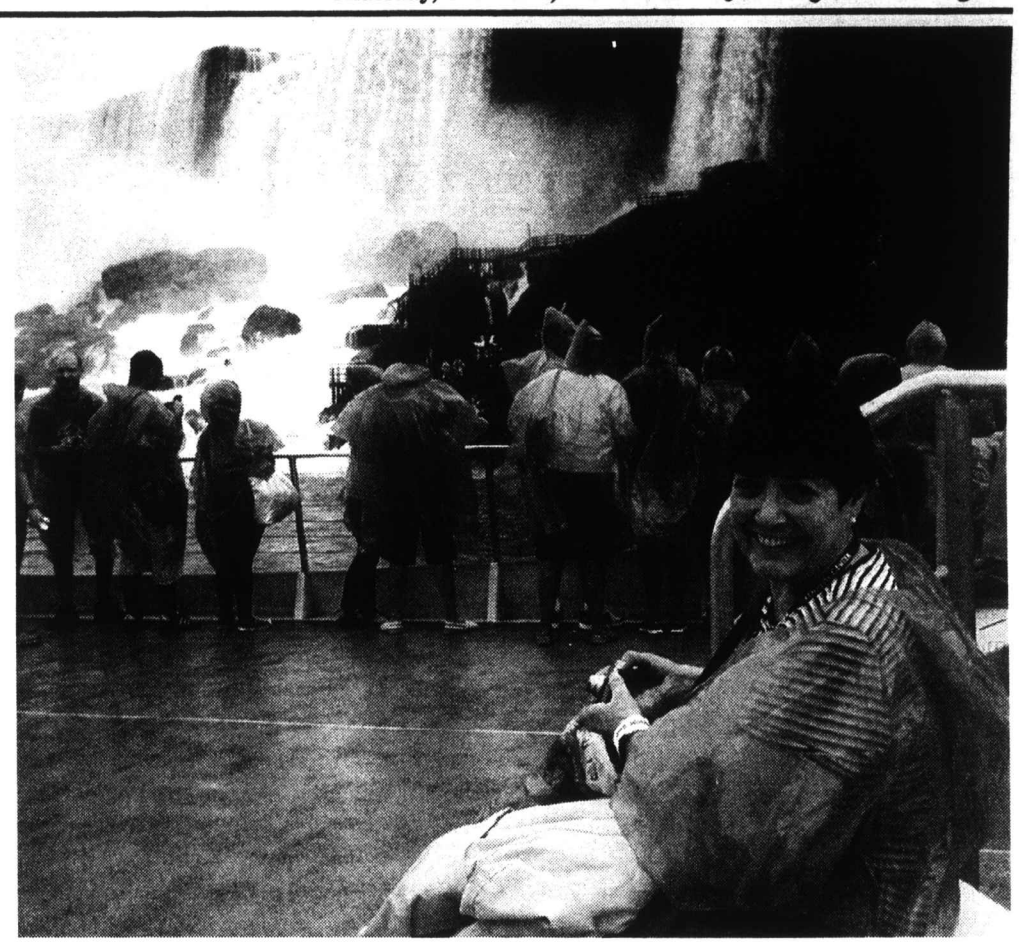
The tour departs from the Moswetuset Hummock parking area, East Squantum Street, near junction with Quincy Shore Drive.

The tour is $5 for Quincy residents and Historic New England members, $10 for nonmembers. Registration is required.

In 1770, Edward Pierce, a Dorchester carpenter, built a mansion for Col. Josiah Quincy. Originally surrounded by fields and pasture, the estate's boundaries once encompassed several hundred acres and reached from what is now Hancock Street to Quincy Bay. When the house was built, the area around it, now a densely populated neighborhood known as Wollaston, was very rural.

The walking tour illustrates how the area evolved over a 300-year period. Explore Moswetuset Hummock, the seat of the ruling chief Chickatawbut; see Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor through the eyes of Col. Josiah Quincy and General George Washington; and witness the development of an early twentieth-century middle class neighborhood that reflects a range of architectural styles. Tour Historic New England's 1770 Josiah Quincy House following the walking tour.

To register for the tour or for more information, call 617-994-5930 or visit HistoricNewEngland.org.



Marilyn Crehan (left) was one of 50 seniors from the Kennedy Center who recently returned from a three-day trip to Niagara Falls in Ontario, Canada. The trip included a spectacular tour of Niagara Falls including the Whirlpool, Table Rock and Floral Clock. The group also enjoyed a narrated cruise on the Erie Canal, one of the world's most famous waterways. A gourmet dinner was included at the Skylon Revolving Restaurant overlooking the Falls.

Stuffed Artichokes

By MARIE

There is one food that I have never found in any restaurant that my family enjoys so much and that is stuffed artichokes.

They are usually quite expensive, but recently they were on sale, and instead of the large ones, there were some that were smaller and so much easier to prepare.

STUFFED ARTICHOKES

4 artichokes
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2-3 tablespoons tomato sauce parsley, basil (as much as you like)
2-3 tablespoons grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Cut the end of the stems off so they will sit in the pan. Trim off the pointed tips on the top of each leave.

Boil for 15 minutes. Drain and cool.

In a bowl, mix the breadcrumbs, tomato sauce, cheese and herbs until well combined. Use a bit of water if too dry.

Spread open the leaves slightly and fill each space with the stuffing. Sprinkle the top with a little bit of olive oil.

They can be cooked on top of the stove covered by putting a little water on the bottom of the pan, a little oil, and place the artichokes evenly together, cover and cook until done. Depending on the size, they take about a half hour to cook until tender. Remove and garnish with left over sauce or just plain. Each leave should have a bit of stuffing when eaten. Enjoy!

P.S. If you prefer to bake them place them in a covered roasting pan and cook in a 350 degree oven for about half an hour.

Cauliflower Cream Sauce

By SUZIE

The health benefits of cauliflower are astounding, and it is unfortunate that this white vegetable does not get the attention that it truly deserves!

Cauliflower is rich in vitamins, antioxidants, fiber and minerals. It contains 77% of your daily requirements for vitamin C, choline for brain health and development, is an anti-inflammatory food, contains a compound called "sulforaphane" which has been shown to kill cancer cells and improve heart health, and is loaded with fiber as well, which helps with digestion.

Here is a simple recipe for a cream sauce that you can use to replace the usual sleep inducing tummy bloating Alfredo sauce for your pasta, pizza, or vegetables. Now it does not taste exactly like the real thing, but it certainly will get rid of your cravings for a creamy and rich sauce, for sure. Enjoy!

- 1 large size head cauliflower, washed and cut into small florets
- 5-6 cups water (to cook the cauliflower)
- 4 cloves minced garlic
- 2 tablespoons pasture butter (I use Kerrygold Irish butter)
- 1 teaspoon sea salt, ½ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup unsweetened almond milk or organic whole milk
- ¼ cup nutritional yeast flakes (Or you can use grated parmesan instead)
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard

Instructions

In a large saucepan, combine the cauliflower florets and water over high heat. When it reaches boiling, put a lid on the pan and drop the heat to medium low. Simmer for 5 minutes or until the cauliflower is tender.

While the cauliflower is simmering, melt the butter in saucepan and stir in the garlic and the salt until just fragrant. Do not let garlic brown. Drain cauliflower and add to pan with the milk. Use immersion blender to blend into a very smooth consistency. (You can also just put in blender.) Check for seasoning. Serve tossed with noodles or veggies. Great as a pizza topping as well!

Seafood, Broccoli Soup

By MARIE

Recently my niece Jean made a delicious seafood soup (her own recipe), and had me taste it. She called it a soup or it could be called a chowder, but whatever it's called, I called it delicious. She used almond milk as her liquid, but milk or cream can be used also.

SEAFOOD, BROCCOLI, SOUP

5-6 broccoli florets (cut in small pieces)
1/2 pound scallops (if large, cut in small pieces)
1/2 pound cod (other fish can also be used)
3 cups almond milk
1 small onion
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
salt and pepper to taste

In the hot oil and butter, sauté the sliced onion. Add the broccoli and cook until the broccoli is tender. Add the almond milk, the scallops and the cod and cook until the fish is cooked. Serve with oyster crackers.

Harry Potter Celebration Oct. 25 At United Methodist Church

On Saturday, Oct. 25, Quincy Community United Methodist Church will transform itself for a day into Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. The doors to this magical world will open promptly at 1 p.m.

"This year marks a decade of Quincy Community United Methodist Church offering the Harry Potter Extravaganza to our community," the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church, said.

Planning for the yearly event begins months ahead of time.

"We take our ideas from the various classes and adventures described in the books," Jarek-Glidden said. "For example, several years ago we held a Tri-Wizard Tournament based on The Goblet of Fire – we even built a maze! The year after that, it The Order of the Phoenix – complete with a Room of Requirement. Two years ago we built a volcano and featured an underwater adventure. We always try to top ourselves."

This year the event will once again include the things people most enjoy: there will be a representative from Ollivander's Wands, a Sorting Ceremony, Quidditch, and a Great Feast. Members and friends of the church portray some of the characters from the books. Returning this year will be Hagrid, Mad Eye Moody, Madame Maxime, and Professor McGonagall, among others.

"I can't emphasize enough how important it is for people to make their reservations soon," Jarek-Glidden noted. "We have sold out every year. Last year people called in early October and we had to turn them away – we had already sold out."

Reservations can be made by calling the "Harry Potter Hotline" at 617-773-6854. To help make the registration process faster, all tickets purchased by Oct. 15 are $6 per person and $20 for a family of four. For those paying at the door or for those who send in payment later than Oct. 15, the cost is $8 per person and $25 for a family of four. In either case, children under three are free. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Hogwarts style costumes are encouraged, but not required.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is located at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston, across from the Wollaston MBTA station. The building is handicapped accessible through the door nearest the flagpole.

have been allocated because commercial development has yet to start in Quincy Center. Currently, the state has set a June 2015 deadline for commercial development – including office and retail projects, but not residential – to begin for the city to receive the money.

Dennis Harrington, the city's planning director, told the City Council's downtown committee Monday the city should be able to receive an additional extension on that deadline, provided Quincy has a good redevelopment plan in place. New revenues generated in Quincy Center are able to pay off a district improvement financing (DIF) bond used to pay for assorted costs associated with the downtown project, but those revenues do not apply to I-Cubed financing.

"We have DIF revenue that more than satisfies our DIF accounts, but we do not have I-Cubed revenue, which is based upon commercial construction projects," Harrington explained. "I think that if the city has a good plan we would get another extension. We plan to go forward with I-Cubed, but until there is a couple major foundations in the ground we're not going to have I-Cubed funding."

Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the downtown committee, asked Harrington what would happen once the portion of Hancock Street between City Hall and the church closes if park construction doesn't start as the city awaits a funding source.

"We're going to eliminate the parking, do the utilities, and let it sit until there is I-Cubed funding?" Gutro stated.

Harrington countered that parking spots lost would be offset by new spaces added on Temple Street. The area of Hancock Street closed to traffic would then serve as an "open town common," as Harrington referred to it, in the interim. He added that the city should focus on getting a plan in place to tap the I-Cubed funds.

"I expect this administration will go forth and get funding to build a park," Harrington said. "There is a source: Someone has got to turn on the spigot. We should all be working towards that goal."

Jim Fatseas, chief of staff to Mayor Thomas Koch, said the administration has been in continual contact with state officials on the I-Cubed project. He too was optimistic about the deadline being extended.

"The mayor has and is continuously in conversation with the state government regarding I-Cubed and regarding alternative sources of funding for the park," Fatseas said. "We are assessing the situation as far as getting funding on the park. We're in discussions with the current administration and we look forward to working with a future administration as well.

"We are comfortable and confident we're going to be able to extend our I-Cubed application. Absent funding of this nature, this is not something we intend to put on the general fund. That's not the plan and it's never been the plan. So we're currently trying to get the timing down and we're in constant contact with the state to let them know where we are."

Fatseas added the city is also looking into other funding mechanisms to pay for the park project, but did not divulge which sources.

"There are other potential money sources. There isn't anything to tip my hand. I can just tell you we are currently in discussions with the state and pursuing all courses," he said. "There is a dialogue and we're comfortable with that dialogue."

In addition to the I-Cubed funding the city has applied for a $2.5 million gateway park grant from the state to pay for underground work associated with putting fountains in the new park, Harrington explained. A $1 million grant from the same state program was used to finance the design of the park. Harrington said the design is at the 90 percent stage and should be completed by the end of 2014.

Downtown Escrow Funds Spent

had been charged to Street-Works but was deemed ineligible under the LDA and was paid from district improvement financing (DIF) bond money instead, according to O'Connor.

The Delahunt Group, a consulting firm chaired by former U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, received $232,500 in fees. The Delahunt Group was retained by the city to help secure state and federal grants and state permits for the Quincy Center project. Harrington estimated the Delahunt Group brought in between $10 million and $20 million in grants the city received for downtown redevelopment.

More than $200,000 from the account went to attorneys. The firm of Cosgrove, Eisenberg & Kiley received $120,978; attorney Thomas Kiley acted as a legal advisor to Mayor Thomas Koch on downtown matters. Nutter, McLennan & Fish received $82,264; the firm's attorneys wrote the LDA with Street-Works.

Epsilon Associates, a company specializing in environmental consulting, received $65,905. They helped secure a Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) permit that cleared the way for the downtown project. Even though Street-Works is no longer involved, the permit remains in effect.

"It's good for a long period of time," Harrington said. "I've seen MEPA certificates from the '80s deemed to be too stale in 2014, but ours is good long term. It's valid for any developer who choses to [get] into our downtown."

Quincy-based Wessling Architects received $121,949. The firm served as a peer reviewer for Street-Works' Merchants Row project.

Some $60,806 in fees went to Woodard & Curran. The company consulted on a variety of matters, including traffic, MEPA permitting, utility work, and storm water drainage.

RKG Associates received $55,450 in fees. Quincy retained the company to assist with its application for $40 million in stated Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) funding to pay for the completion of Adams Green and a new bridge over Burgin Parkway.

Jacobs Engineering received $46,831 in fees. The company advised the city relative to Street-Works' plan to put a garage under Merchants Row. Additionally, Tighe & Bond received $32,898 to review the garage's planned slurry wall. Harrington said the city was concerned about the slurry wall because of leaks in slurry walls used in the Big Dig project.

More than $30,000 went to companies that assisted the city on the Town Brook relocation project. The Horsley Witten Group received $15,360 for their peer review of the project. Kleinschmidt received $7,866 to serve as an expert witness during a lawsuit over the brook and the Stephenson Design Group received $7,350 for testimony relative to wetlands claims associated with the project.

W-ZHA, a construction financial consultant, received $9,600 in fees. The company was to review Street-Works' financial submittal for the first phase of development. That submittal was never delivered.

The contracts with W-ZHA and RKG remain open. The companies are owed a total of $7,950, which will be paid out of the consultants account. A total of $4,350 in the account remains unencumbered.

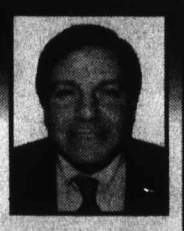
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century



by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
WHERE THERE'S NO SMOKE, THERE'S ALSO CANCER

If you think that smokeless tobacco is a healthier alternative to cigarettes, you should know that "snuff dippers" consume (on average) ten times the amount of cancer-causing substances (nitrosamines) that cigarette smokers do. While cigarette smokers are six times more likely than non-smokers to develop oral cancers, users of smokeless tobacco products are 50 times more likely to develop cancers of the cheek, gums, and lining of the lips. Moreover, smokeless tobacco users absorb nicotine at 2-3 times the rate that cigarette smokers do. When you put just these two facts together, you get a lethal combination. The 5- and 10-year survival rates for patients with all stages of oral cavity and pharynx cancers are 56% and 41%, respectively.

Smokeless tobacco is not safer to use than smoking cigarettes. Let us help you. The treatment we provide is warm and personal. We can provide you and your family with complete general dental services, from a professional cleaning (preventative) to full mouth reconstruction (repair), periodontal treatments, and cosmetic dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular professional dental health care. Call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Babe Ruth, who was one of a large number of baseball players who liked to "dip" smokeless tobacco, died at age 52 of an oropharyngeal tumor, a cancerous tumor in the back part of the throat.

QCARE Receives $10,000 Grant

Quincy After School Child Care programs recently received a $10,000 targeted grant from the Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation.

The focus of the targeted grant offered by Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation is to improve the quality of education for children in kindergarten through Grade 12. Grants were awarded to non-profit organizations across Eastern Massachusetts working to ensure all students have the opportunity to be successful in their academic careers. This includes after school academic enrichment supporting students after their school day ends.

QCARE serves children from kindergarten through age 13 at nine of Quincy's elementary schools, which embodies a large demographic of this targeted funding.

For low to moderate income families, finances are frequently a barrier to accessing quality after school programming. Research continues to provide ample evidence that participation in high quality after school programs, like Quincy After School Child Care, promotes student success.

Access to quality out-of-school time programs closes the achievement gap facing low to moderate income students, and tuition scholarships allows this access.

Quincy After School operates state-licensed programs throughout Quincy to support students to expand upon school day learning by providing homework assistance, promoting social development and physical activity, providing healthy snacks, offering academically enriching activities, and increasing participation in science, math and literacy activities.

According to QCARE, the goal of this funding is to continue to serve as many families as possible through the Tuition Scholarship Grant program, while continuing to secure donations, so that the agency will never have to refuse student access due to financial hardship.

DOVE: Helping Victims Of Domestic Violence

Quincy-Based Multi-Faceted Organization Has Served Thousands Of Men, Women, Children

By KRIS KALABOKAS

What began as a helpline operating out of the St. Boniface Church in Germantown in 1978 has evolved into a multi-faceted organization that has served thousands of men, women, and children from Quincy and throughout Norfolk County who are – or have been – victims of domestic abuse.

Executive Director of DOVE (DOmestic Violence Ended) Sue Chandler is planning to further expand the scope of available services by opening a larger emergency shelter and hopes that public dialogue on domestic abuse will eliminate some of the stigma felt by victims and their families.

History

DOVE was founded in 1977 and formally established in 1978 by a group of women under the Quincy Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women who then organized with the St. Boniface Church in Germantown to host a hotline for those seeking help or refuge from domestic abuse. The group also worked with what was, at the time, the Quincy City Hospital to open the first domestic violence shelter on the South Shore in the hospital's old nursing school building.

The shelter's first clients arrived Labor Day weekend of 1978.

Legal services were offered early in DOVE's history after restraining orders became a viable legal option that same year.

DOVE was then incorporated as a nonprofit in 1979.

The program expanded further in 2008 when the Civilian Domestic Violence Advocacy Program was established by the Quincy Police Department and DOVE with the help of Violence Against Women Act funding. The program connects a DOVE advocate with the Quincy, Randolph, and Holbrook Police Departments. Working a couple days a week, the advocate accesses and reviews reports related to domestic violence calls and then follows-up through mail or over the phone to check on a complainant's well-being and to inform them of DOVE's services.

The advocate also receives feedback from victims on police response so that he or she can work with the department to improve or strengthen their approach when dealing with domestic disputes.

Chandler brought her passion for women's health advocacy to DOVE in February of 2010. Prior to that she worked to support domestic violence shelters in Boston.

DOVE now serves Avon, Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Dedham, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwood, Quincy, Randolph, Sharon, Stoughton, Walpole, Westwood, and Weymouth, and is the only organization of its kind based in Norfolk County.

Funding comes from a combination of sources including state and federal support, foundation and corporate support, individual support, support from fundraising events, and churches.

What is abuse?

Domestic abuse can be physical, emotional, or sexual, but it can also manifest itself in other, less outwardly observable ways.

A partner can exert financial control by not allowing a victim to work or by restricting how much money they can keep from a paycheck. They can inspect receipts to see how their partner is spending their money. They can monitor a car's odometer or place a GPS device in a vehicle to track a victim's every move.

Monitoring cell phone usage is also a way for an abuser to control a victim.

Abusers can force their partner or spouse to be the sole money earner for the family or can harass their victim at work, threatening their job security.

Isolating someone over time from friends and family is also a commonly-used power tactic. An abuser may deliberately be so obnoxious and callous that friends, family, and coworkers distance themselves, eventually cutting all contact.

Other ways abusers may manipulate their partner is by threatening to disclose their HIV or AIDS status to family members or a work place.

Those who don't speak English fluently are vulnerable because abusers may confiscate their visas or threaten to have them deported to their country of origin said Chandler.

Domestic violence happens to people not just because they have low self-esteem, she said. Abusers look for someone they deem to be vulnerable or controllable and over time successfully chip away at their self-worth.

The process is slow but deliberate. An abuser may begin by offering backhanded compliments such as telling their partner they're attractive but not as attractive as other people. This slowly evolves into telling them they're ugly and that nobody else could ever possibly love or be with them.

The constant stress of being in a relationship with a batterer can alter the public's perception of a victim who may not be sleeping well or has turned to drugs or alcohol to cope with their situation.

"We know that over time the experience of stress and violence does eat away and chip away at victims," she said. "Wherever are the areas where they may be vulnerable is where the abuser will go with threats…what we often see is that people may use alcohol as a coping mechanism. They might drink or turn to drugs to just manage the stress of this and the abuser might say you know what, I'm going to call [the Department of Children and Families] and tell them you're a drunk and they're going to take your kids away."

People may accuse a victim of exaggerating his or her circumstances or imply that they've done something to warrant the abuse.

Victims fear being called liars, hypochondriacs, or histrionic.

"The abuser is often quite charming. How often do you hear 'I knew them forever next door. He's the nicest guy,'" said Chandler. "Every day, people come here for help and they'll say nobody will believe that he does this."

Over time, sweet texts concerning a partner's whereabouts may turn into demands of where they are or orders forcing them to come home. "All of us are capable of being lured in by the charm and what you imagine is turning out to be a great thing, and in time abusers change their tune," she said. "You can imagine that nobody goes on a first date and gets hit and goes back to the person. It's a process in what we call the cycle of violence."

"None of us wants to believe that something like this could happen to us… we stereotype as a way to be self-protective."

Statistics

Government-based statistics show that 25 to 33 percent of women in the United States will experience abuse at the hand of a partner in their lifetime.

The vast majority of abuse — 85 percent — is male on female abuse, however seven percent of men will be abused by a male or female partner.

The general dynamics of abuse towards men, said Chandler, are the same. The abuser exerts power over the victim or exploits an area of weakness.

Chandler said few resources exist on the South Shore to assist people seeking shelter from a batterer. "Domestic violence shelters, ours and everyone else in the state, are full every night of the year," she said.

The demand is so high that according to Chandler, two thirds of callers have to be turned away due to lack of room. "It's a really difficult part of our work," she said.

DOVE gets 2,600 calls a year on their 24-hour hotline; two thirds of those callers are looking for emergency shelter.

In the last year DOVE has provided services to almost 6,000 people, free-of-charge.

"The majority of victims that report and come ahead for services are between the ages of 16 and 24, and then the next highest age range is 24 to 35," said Chandler, noting that her statistics are consistent with what is seen nationwide.

Long-Term Support

For those they can't house, DOVE associates brainstorm ways for victims to safely escape. Options include staying with friends or family or — in critical situations — referring people to shelters outside of Massachusetts.

"They want to stay close to their job or if they're in school or if their kids are in school; you don't want to disrupt someone's life because that's going to make it worse," said Chandler.

DOVE staff may also offer long-term counseling and direction to help victims create a plan on how to safely leave their abuser.

Chandler said DOVE never tells a victim what to do, rather they offer supportive services to guide them in the right direction.

Their emergency shelter, which can house six families, is in a confidential and undisclosed location in Quincy.

Families can stay for as long as 12 months while they find a home or apartment. Finding permanent or semi-permanent housing has become more difficult due to what Chandler called "a crisis in this state around affordable housing."

DOVE's program was originally modeled to offer up to three months of emergency shelter, however long waiting times to enter transitional housing has stretched resources thin.

DOVE Director: 'We're Working To End Domestic Violence'

"That combined with how many people need to get into shelter is a huge problem," she said.

Why People Stay

Chandler said that many times, leaving an abuser can be as — or even more dangerous — as staying with them.

Victims often try to break ties multiple times, forming "points of separation." These points often increase a person's risk of injury or death.

Filing a restraining order, filing for divorce, telling a friend or confidant about the abuse, breaking up and dating other people, or even getting pregnant are all "points of separation" that may increase risk to victims.

The 18 months after a victim leaves their abuser are the most dangerous according to Chandler.

"What we like to say is that leaving is a process; not an event," she said. "We know from when people come in and talk to us that there is a series of complicated issues they're trying to figure out."

Victims, especially those with young children, may stay with an abuser because they simply have nowhere else to go.

Victims may also feel ashamed to admit that they're being abused which prevents them from reaching out for help.

The recent release of a video showing NFL Baltimore Ravens' running back Ray Rice assaulting his then-fiance and now wife, Janay Palmer, has opened a dialogue on domestic violence that never existed before said Chandler. Many on social media have been asking why Palmer stayed with Rice, despite the abuse.

"It's got us all talking in a way that is really eye opening for a lot of people," she said.

Many had similar questions following the murder of Jennifer Martel last year at the hands of Jared Remy, who had known violent tendencies and a criminal record.

Teen and Community Outreach

The Youthspeak Teen Healthy Relationships/Dating Violence Prevention Program, established by DOVE in 2006, trains high school juniors and seniors in the summer or fall to become peer educators by going through a three-day training program. There they learn about healthy relationships, boundaries, communication, respect, gender roles, and media analysis of domestic abuse.

Once they finish their training, they become peer educators and counselors.

They then teach fellow students how to spot the warning signs of abuse and how to approach a friend or family member who they suspect may be in an abusive relationship.

The Clothesline Project is another initiative aimed at teens that allows victims of abuse to express their feelings through art by decorating shirts that are then displayed on a clothesline in a school's library or auditorium. Discussion regarding violence against women is encouraged amongst the students and a DOVE representative is made available in case a student wants to privately disclose their own experiences with abuse.

The Yellow Dress — a one-woman play based on stories of women who experienced domestic violence — is performed for students by an actress portraying the beginning stages of a relationship which slowly turns abusive. A panel made up of experts from the local district attorney's office, the local police department, school social work department, and DOVE then encourage discussion about domestic violence following the performance.

The White Ribbon Campaign encourages high school-aged boys to take a pledge which states "I pledge to never commit, condone, or remain silent about violence against women."

"The way we see it is they're kind of launching into the world as young adults; they're about to graduate and we're encouraging them to take what they've learned over the years and be ambassadors in the world," said Chandler.

Along with educating teens, DOVE works with health care providers by teaching them nonconfrontational techniques on how to approach and speak to patients they suspect are victims of abuse.

Chandler is hoping to one day team up with local hair salons because they are one of the few places abusers allow their partners to go unattended she said. There, stylists can — in confidence — provide clients in distress with DOVE's hotline number or can direct them to DOVE's office in Wollaston.

Those who turn to Interfaith Social Services or Father Bill's and MainSpring for support and shelter are also informed of DOVE's services.

"We really, really do rely on community support to make sure that we can be available for those folks that need our help," said Chandler. "They're made aware and they can choose to call the anonymous hotline or check out the website or maybe call us for services when they're ready."

Progress and Hope

As a result of Martel's murder, a domestic violence bill was passed in August which closed some loopholes, requiring batterers to go through longer and more extensive counseling, batterer intervention programs, and longer-term monitoring, said Chandler.

"The catalyst for this was Jennifer Martel who was murdered by Jared Remy. She had been in contact with the police and the court system multiple times. He had been involved and he was still able to do this when he was a known offender," she said.

The shelter building, which has been occupied by DOVE since 1981, is run-down and worse for wear, said Chandler. Plans on relocating to a new building with "solid technology and security features" will hopefully move forward in the near future, she said.

This new location — which will house an additional six families — will also be made public "so that people can say 'I know where to go for help,'" she said.

Disclosing the location to the public will remove some of the stigma attached to seeking help in the first place said Chandler.

"We feel like involving the community in various actions to prevent domestic violence will help," she said. "We want everybody to feel like this is our community issue. We don't find this acceptable in our community. We're going to work to end it."

DOVE (DOmestic Violence Ended) provides emergency shelter and counseling services to women, men, and children who are victims of domestic abuse. DOVE's mission is to promote hope, healing, safety, and social change through their organization which was founded in 1978 by members of the Quincy Mayor's Commission on Women. DOVE operates a 24-hour hotline and has an 18-bed emergency shelter to safely house victims and their children who are fleeing from abuse. Ward One Beach Cleanup A Success

Volunteers from Ward One recently held a successful fall beach cleanup with 45 bags of trash collected from three beaches, said John McCone, organizer and chairman of The Quincy Committee for Cleaner Beaches.

After the beach cleanup, McCone hosted a cookout and thanked the 20 volunteers for helping with the cleanup project. "We played a part in a much larger picture. You are part of a statewide effort, a national effort, to clean our beaches." McCone said.

Each September and October, thousands of volunteers throughout Massachusetts turn out for COASTSWEEP—the statewide coastal cleanup sponsored by the Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management (CZM). COASTSWEEP is part of the "International Coastal Cleanup" organized by Ocean Conservancy in Washington, DC. Volunteers from all over the world collect marine debris.

"It took 14 years and $3.9 billion tax dollars to clean up our water it is in our best interest, as a community, to do our part to keep the beaches clean," McCone said. "It is my hope to make this an annual event."

Hancock Cemetery Restoration, Conservation Project Topic Oct. 22

Mayor Thomas P. Koch, the Planning Department, and the Cemetery Board of Managers invite the public to the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 22nd to learn about the recently completed first phase of the Hancock Cemetery Restoration and Conservation Project.

At the event, Ta Mara Conde, owner of Historic Gravestone Services and lead conservator on the Hancock Cemetery gravestone restoration project, will give a presentation of before and after images of select stones and discuss the methods she used to preserve them.

The Hancock Cemetery Gravestone Restoration Project carries out the first part of the 2011 Hancock Cemetery Master Conservation Plan, which called for the treatment and resetting of more than 260 stones. This project was made possible by an allocation of $80,000 from the Community Preservation Committee and a $33,000 grant award from the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

QATV recently completed a Quincy in Focus piece on the burial ground which interviews Conde, Cemetery Board Chairman Thomas Galvin, Historical Commission Chairman Anthony Ricci, and Project Manager Kara Chisholm. Go to www.qatv.org to view the segment.

New Drug Rehabilitation Facility Draws Concern, Support

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Central Middle School auditorium was almost filled to capacity during last Thursday's neighborhood meeting regarding the opening of a drug rehabilitation facility at 43 Old Colony Ave.

The Phoenix House will begin providing short-term detoxification and stabilization services to those with drug and alcohol dependency issues sometime in December, a fact that has some Wollaston residents concerned.

"I feel compassionate about these people. They need help, and yet again, I want to know what's going on. I want to know who they're going to have there and why and how they're going to treat them," said 40-year Quincy resident Phyllis Sullivan. "I know it's a terrible problem and they have to have help."

The most pressing concern to many neighbors was the location of the building, which is close to the Central Middle School and a liquor store.

"The fact is that this particular parcel is located in what's called a business C zoning district that's right on the periphery of what most of you know to be the Wollaston business district," said City Solicitor James Timmins. "There's nothing that we can do as far as regulating this. It's a private transaction that is within the zoning ordinance."

Over half of those in attendance quickly left the meeting after learning that the facility would be opening regardless of the public's opinion.

Vice President and Senior Program Director for Phoenix House New England Neil Gaer said that no other buildings were available throughout the city for their facility.

Inpatient care for up to 64 adult clients will be overseen by doctors, nurse practitioners, social workers, and alcohol and drug dependency counselors at the facility which will open up in what was the Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts facility.

Once discharged, clients will be directed to long-term, supportive care programs to continue on with their recovery.

The cost for most clients at the nonprofit treatment agency founded in 1967 will be covered by either private or state-funded insurance.

Quincy residents will receive preference for admissions.

Gavin Foundation President John McGahan said the need for treatment beds in Quincy is enormous.

Over the last two years, there have been over 4,300 admissions to department of Public Health programs from residents of Quincy he said. That number does not include those who choose to enter private, self-pay facilities. Almost 72 percent of those people had to leave Quincy to get treatment.

"We want to work with you. We want to work with the city leadership, the police department, we want to help fill that void and save lives," said McGahan. "This is a disease that does not discriminate."

"I know that there's a misnomer that there's plenty of services here but the data bears out differently," he said.

The rate of heroin use amongst those admitted for treatment in Quincy has risen from 40 percent in 2002 to 59 percent in 2012 said McGahan. The statewide average is 43 percent.

Quincy police and probation officer Sean Glennon said that while he understood the need for such a facility, he took issue with its location. "I've buried friends, I've buried a family member, and I am standing here in opposition of this project for no other reason than the location," he said. "My major and vital concern is this program being introduced into a residential neighborhood."

The building will not be locked down said Gaer, but a minimum of six staff members will be on hand at all times to monitor patients. All exterior doors will be alarmed and surveillance cameras will be placed inside and outside the building. Hallway doors will also be alarmed.

If a client chooses to leave, they will be free to do so. If the client is from Quincy, transportation will be provided to bring them to their home. Those from outside of Quincy will be brought to the Wollaston T Station.

Prior to leaving, patients will undergo discharge counseling to facilitate their departure.

"We can practically see the building from where we live," said Jane McNulty who lives on Old Colony Avenue. "When you live this close to a facility and know that it's not going to be locked...it is a concern for the people that live so close to the facility and I think it would be imperative to have continued conversations with the Quincy police to help allay the fears of the people in the neighborhood."

Senior Vice President and Regional Director for Phoenix House New England Patrick B. McEneaney said that beds are so difficult to get into that few people will leave the program unexpectedly.

"These beds are very valuable to the families and to the people who are in those beds," he said.

"One of the great things about the City of Quincy is that we have neighborhood schools," said Senator John Keenan. "You can't find many places in this city that's not within walking distance to a school and if you use that as a measure as to where one of these facilities should go, we wouldn't have one."

"The numbers clearly indicate we need it," he said.

A sticking point for many was the admission of Section 35 clients. McGahan said that Section 35 is a civil, not a criminal commitment and that the Phoenix House is not a jail but a medical facility.

"These are people that have been able to go into the court system — a loved one had them sectioned in — and then they get into treatment," he said. "Because there's a lack of beds, they walk into the court and want to section themselves as a way to get into treatment. We want to be there for those people and we want to prevent them from having to go through that whole process."

Those who are sectioned who can't find an available bed are incarcerated and provided with care while in prison, a fact that didn't sit right with Keenan.

"The people who go to these [treatment] facilities are not criminals," he said. "They've been put into jail because we have failed to make sure there are enough beds."

If a patient who is in the facility due to a civil commitment leaves the building prior to the completion of their treatment, Phoenix House staff are required to contact the police said Gaer.

Recovering addicts, those with children in recovery, and those who have lost loved ones because of addiction took to the microphone to express gratitude to Phoenix House representatives.

"We need this facility for our children," said one woman.

City Council President Joseph Finn said that opening the Phoenix House was "the fundamentally right thing to do" and that "treatment works."

Mayor Thomas Koch said that he was in full support of the facility because he felt it was a necessary step in combating Quincy's drug epidemic.

"I believe in my gut that this is the right thing for the City of Quincy," he said. "We're not going to solve this overnight, but we owe this to our families, we owe it to our young people to give it our best shot, and I believe the addition of this facility will help."

Keenan: Focus Local Issues Biggest Accomplishment

Democratic State Senator Seeks Third Term Representing Quincy And The Norfolk - Plymouth District

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sen. John Keenan is most proud of his work on local issues he has done since being elected to Beacon Hill in 2010.

Keenan, who resides on Hobomack Road in Quincy, is running for a third term in the state Senate in the Nov. 4 election. A 50-year-old Democrat, he previously served on the Quincy City Council from 2003 until 2012. In a recent interview, Keenan said he is most proud of the work he has done in the communities he represents – Quincy, Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, and Rockland – such as holding office hours and attending many community meetings.

"I think it has been focusing on local issues," he responded when asked what his biggest accomplish has been.

"I take a lot of pride in making sure we have office hours in every town in the district. We do morning office hours at senior centers and evening office hours at town halls and city halls. I regularly attend meetings in the communities, whether they have to do with schools or town meetings in the local communities.

"It's really, I think, being involved locally and being aware of what the local issues are and being responsive to those local issues. That is relative to an issue, but if a constituent may call from one of the communities with an issue with state government. I think we've done a good job responding to that as well."

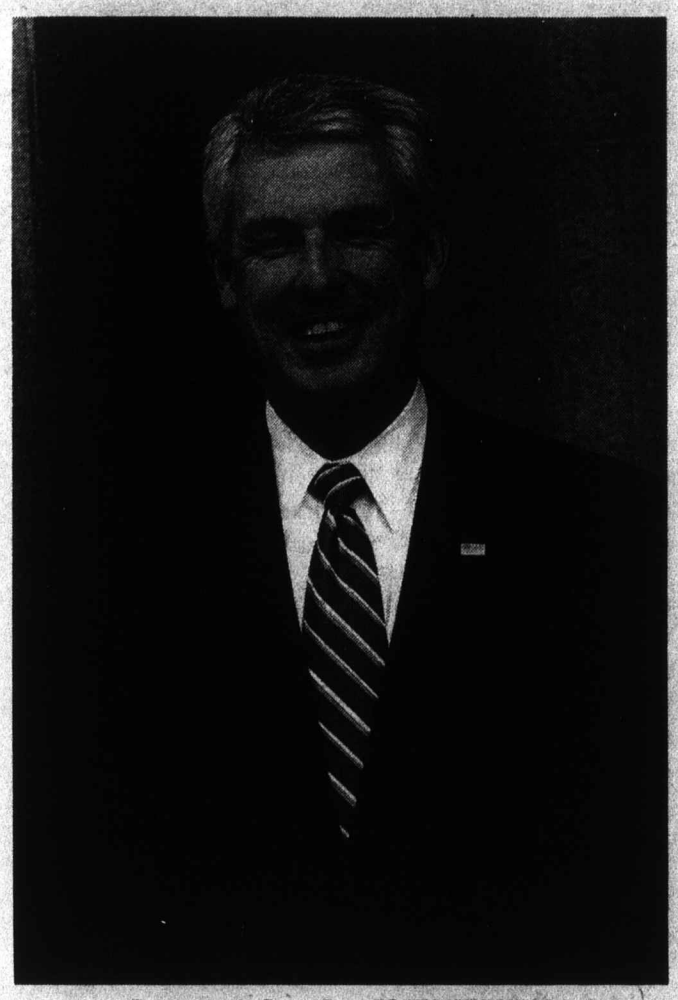
One local issue Keenan said he has focused on is securing state financing for new schools. During his tenure on Beacon Hill, Quincy completed the new Central Middle School and plans to replace Sterling Middle School are in the pipeline. School building projects are in the works in Rockland and Abington as well.

"There has been a lot of action in the communities relative to building schools," Keenan noted.

Another issuing facing the district is a rise of opiate abuse. While the issue has been problematic throughout the state and country, Keenan's district has been hit particularly hard. In each of Keenan's two terms on Beacon Hill, new legislation has been approved to help deal with the epidemic.

"I've been there for two sessions now and in both sessions we have passed major substance abuse legislation that is now being looked at as a national model," Keenan said. "My first session in the legislature I was very active in that. I was one of the main drafters of the legislation and we got it passed – at the last minute, but we got it passed, which, as freshman legislator, isn't something that normally would occur. We followed it up with legislation this session, a lot of which I authored, that addresses substance abuse."

Keenan spoke to The Sun Sept. 24, the day before a public meeting on plans to open a detox center at 143 Old Colony Ave. Keenan said there is a lack of such centers throughout the state, adding that the proponent, residents, and the city should be able to work through any concerns relative to the new center.



Democratic State Sen. JOHN KEENAN

"There is no doubt there is a need for these type of beds," he explained. "That being said, is the location being proposed the appropriate location? I think, as long as the Phoenix Group and the city and the residents that live in the area work together, they can address a great many of the concerns people have. And I share those concerns, but I think they can be addressed."

Keenan, the chairman of the Joint Committee on Public Health, also helped pass legislation setting new rules for compounding pharmacies in the wake of a fungal meningitis outbreak linked to the Framingham-based New England Compounding Center, which killed 64 people across the country and injured more than 750 others.

"We craft what I call bottom up legislation, meaning we create it," Keenan said. "It's not something we file on behalf of somebody. We research it. We create it. We meet with all the professionals, all the experts. And we manage to get it through pretty quickly. Those two – substance abuse and the NECC legislation – are examples of that. So I think I've shown I'm involved, I'm active, and I'm able to get things done."

Additionally, Keenan introduced language concerning suicide prevention into a recently approved gun control bill. He also co-sponsored Melissa's Law in the Senate during his first term in office when the bill was approved.

Keenan has stayed out of the gubernatorial election, focusing on his own campaign.

"I am focusing on my campaign for re-election. I am a Democrat. I am proud to be a Democrat. I am running as a Democrat. But at this stage, given everything, I am focusing on my campaign. I'm out knocking on doors. We've got volunteers holding signs and doing all types of things," Keenan said. "That's been the focus."

Voters will decide on four ballot questions in next month's election. Keenan is against Question 1, which would repeal a 2013 law indexing the state's gas tax to the consumer price index (CPI) – a measure of inflation. He supported the original legislation indexing the gas tax to inflation because, in part, of the number of roads and bridges throughout the state in need of repair, particularly in his district, which includes I-93 and other major roads as well as a branch of the Red Line.

"You look at the inventory of our roads and bridges across the commonwealth and it's clear that we have not been able to keep up with the demand for safe roads, safe bridges, and to ease some of the gridlock we're finding in different areas of the commonwealth. We haven't been able to keep up with that using the formula we have," Keenan said.

"The issue of taxation without representation, I look at it that the legislation was proposed. It went through the legislative process. I voted for it. It went through a roll call vote, which means it was a public vote. I represented the best interest of my district in that vote. I don't think it was taxation without representation."

Keenan supports Question 2, which would expand the state's bottle deposit bill to cover non-carbonated soft drinks. He recalled going to his children's youth basketball games and seeing numerous water and sports drink bottles left behind. Expanding the bottle bill, Keenan explained, would encourage more recycling.

"I think if we're going to encourage making sure that they are returned and properly discarded and recycled – that will work," he said. "People say, 'why don't you just put them in your single-stream recycling?' That doesn't account for the public areas where so many of these bottles are. You don't have a recycling bin in your car. You'd like to think everybody would bring them home and put them in a recycling bin, but they don't. They just discard them."

On Question 3, which would repeal the state's casino law if it passes, Keenan said he would favor repeal. He was opposed to the casino legislation when it passed on Beacon Hill, and would rather start with one casino in the state.

"I would be in favor of the repeal of casinos. I consistently voted no on casinos in the Senate. My sense was three casinos plus a slot parlor plus the possibility of an Indian casino were too much for Massachusetts. I was in favor, if we were going to have casinos, of doing one casino and seeing how it worked and taking it from there," Keenan said.

"If the ballot question succeeds and the legislation is repealed, I would look at the possibility of focusing on one casino and seeing how that goes before proceeding. That would be consistent with my position throughout the whole casino debate."

Keenan also favors passage of Question 4, which would require employers to provide up to 40 hours of paid sick time to employees.

"There is a public health component to this," Keenan explained. "Often times people feel they have to go to work if they don't have sick time. They don't want to miss work because they can't afford to miss a day's pay. They will go in while sick.

"If they're in the customer service business, the restaurant business, or even if they're in an office, they will spread that cold. There's a loss of productivity often times associated with that one person going in with a cold.

"If that person stays home because they've earned sick time – and it is earned sick time, not granted – then there is a public health benefit to that."

Keenan is a 1982 graduate of North Quincy High School and a 1986 Harvard University graduate. He earned a law degree from Suffolk University in 1989.

Keenan and his wife, Jeanne, have three sons – Chris, a junior engineering major at the University of New Hampshire; Tim, a sophomore studying business at Marquette University; and Kevin, who is in eighth grade. Keenan's brother, Paul, is the chief of the Quincy Police Department. He is also a brother-in-law of Mayor Thomas Koch.

Gosule: Bring Common Sense To State Government

Republican And Champion Of 'Melissa's Law' Running For State Senate In Norfolk-Plymouth District

By SCOTT JACKSON

Les Gosule, who helped champion the passage of a three strikes law in Massachusetts, said his experience getting the bill passed is one of the reasons why he is seeking elective office for the first time.

Gosule, age 68 of Marina Drive in Quincy, is running as a Republican for the Norfolk and Plymouth Senate seat, which includes all of Quincy, Holbrook, Rockland, and Abington as well as several precincts in Braintree.

In July 1999, one of Gosule's three daughters, Melissa, was raped and murdered after her car broke down. Her killer, Michael Gentile, had been previously been convicted of more than two-dozen felony counts, but he served only about two years for those convictions.

Les Gosule spent the next 13 years fighting to get the state to adopt Melissa's Law, which mandates life in prison without parole for any person convicted of three violent felonies. Melissa's Law was signed into effect in 2012. Gosule's experience getting the bill passed inspired him to enter politics. In a recent interview, he noted it took the legislature 13 years to approve Melissa's Bill, but only a few days to pass a new upskirting law after the Supreme Judicial Court struck down the old one.

"I decided to run because of my experience with Melissa's Bill," Gosule said. "I found the legislature to be exercising something less than common sense. By that, we can look to what happened recently. They passed the upskirting bill – which they should have, it's a good bill and I've got nothing against it – in two days. The bill related to rape, molesting a child, attempted murder, severe homicides took 13 years to pass.

"Therefore, I submit there is a lack of common sense up in the State House."

Gosule, who has been a certified public accountant for more than 40 years and owns his own firm in Milton, is also concerned about state spending and rising taxes.

"This is kind of a little late in life to get involved in politics by some standards – by most standards. I'm doing it because I feel this passion – we're not doing the best we can for our children and grandchildren. It's about time we do the best we can for them," Gosule explained.

"All CPAs, pretty much, have fiduciary obligation to their clients. CPAs as a group put their clients' interests before their own, which is the definition of fiduciary responsibility, to put somebody else's interest before your own. I think I represent that. I think I am the one who can do the best in the Senate for the people because I lived it and I reflect it. You work hard for your money. They should work just as hard for their money when they spend it and they don't do that."

On the local front, Gosule said he is concerned about local aid. He noted the state budget has grown by nearly $8 billion over the past several years, while the amount of money distributed to communities has remained flat.

"What we would have the most control of from the Senate point of view is local aid. Local aid is really a major issue going back to the local communities. Local aid has been flat –it's certainly been flat if you compare it as a percentage of the budget. Property taxes are going up. As you retire you're going to pay more for property taxes and expenses. That's not the best way to handle fiduciary responsibilities back to your constituents," Gosule said.

"Local aid would be a major issue for me. I think local aid should be increased. Promises were made and broken about that in the past."

The interview with Gosule took place Sept. 24, the day before a public meeting on a plan to open detox center at 143 Old Colony Ave. Gosule said he would like more information on the plan, but said he was concerned over the center's location.

"To open up a place like that to attract that kind of clientele near and between two schools strikes me as a total disservice to the community. I certainly wouldn't want my children going to school next to a detox center," he said. "That's taking place Thursday night and I would like to learn more about it, but just at the outset it would really bother me."

If he were elected Nov. 4, Gosule would find himself in the minority in the Senate, which currently has 36 Democrats and four Republicans. He feels working across party lines wouldn't be an issue, citing his experience running a business.

"I don't think that's really an issue because at the end of the day everybody wants what is best for the community," Gosule said. "I think my experience being a CPA and running a businesses – obviously I've had a lot of clients that have different opinions than I had, or I had different opinions than they had, and we've been able to talk, negotiate, compromise and see two sides of an argument."

In the race for governor, Gosule supports Republican Charlie Baker, and said he would make a better governor than Democrat Martha Coakley because of his belief in fiscal responsibility.

"I think he would be a better governor because he also believes in fiscal responsibility. I think he would stand up against some of the waste and fraud that has taken place in state government. I think he would respond faster to some of the issues that we've had," Gosule said, specifically citing ongoing problems at the Department of Children and Families (DCF) and the Sex Offender Registry Board.

"I think Charlie Baker would stand for a government that is transparent and accountable back to the people. I don't think we have a government that is transparent or accountable back to the people."

In addition to the gubernatorial and other races, voters will also decide on four ballot questions in November.

Question 1 concerns the state's gas tax. The questions asks voters whether or not to repeal a 2013 law that indexes future gas tax increases to inflation. Gosule said he intends to vote yes in favor of the repeal.

"The answer to that I think is really self evident for a whole bunch of reasons," he said. "People meet every year to pass a budget, so why should a gas tax be automatic? If you need the money for whatever reasons, you bring it up, you debate on it and you vote on it like every other part of the budget. Why should that be automatic? It makes no sense to me. If everything is on automatic, then don't elect any officials."

On Question 2, which would expand the state's bottle deposit law to include non-carbonated soft drinks, Gosule said he would vote no.

"We recycle right now. I think this is going to cost more. More money is going to go to the state that gets buried somewhere," he said. "Because pretty much everybody recycles today, I don't think we need it."

Gosule said he is against repealing the state's casino law – which Question 3 would do if approved by voters. While he supports allowing casinos in the Bay State, Gosule would prefer to start with just one rather than the three casinos and a slot parlor allowed under the current law.

"If I had the magic button, which I don't have, [I would] limit the number of casinos to one. Atlantic City has already closed four casinos. I hear Foxwoods and Mohegan Sun in Connecticut are having a tough time. I'm concerned – does it really make economic sense to have the casinos?" he explained.

"I would really like to have a better idea of the numbers in Atlantic City and Connecticut because if they are having a tough time, then why are we getting into it. If we do get into it, then we should limit the number of casinos we have because of these other issues."

Gosule said he intends to vote against Question 4, which would require most employers to provide up to 40 hours of paid sick time annually to certain eligible employees. He stated government mandates such as that would lead to lost jobs.

"I'm a CPA. I've seen the success of small businesses. I think it's unfair for government to interfere with business. You're a good employee, I'm going to do everything I can to retain you. I don't need the government to tell me how to do it," Gosule said.

"We want to create jobs in the state. If you keep putting mandates on employers you're going to lose jobs. We say we're going to create an environment for people to work here; by adding these mandates you're doing the opposite."

Gosule is a 1964 graduate of Boston Technical High School. He earned a bachelor's degree at Bentley University in 1969 and a master's degree from Northeastern University in 2000. In addition to being a CPA, he is also a licensed financial advisor.

Gosule, who is divorced, has two daughters and three grandchildren. His daughter Heidi works for the district attorney's office in Middlesex County and his daughter Jodi is a teacher.

Gov. Patrick Tours Quincy Career Center

Gov. Deval Patrick (seated, center) recently toured the Quincy Career Center to promote the range of programs and services offered by the Commonwealth's 32 one-stop career centers to job seekers across the state. Others on hand for the governor's visited included (standing behind Patrick) Mayor Thomas Koch, the CEO of the the South Shore Workforce Development System, and Don Uvanitte, Chairman of the South Shore Workforce Investment Board.

Gov. Deval Patrick recently toured the Quincy Career Center to promote the range of programs and services offered by the Commonwealth's 32 one-stop career centers to job seekers across the state. Since Governor Patrick took office, nearly half of the 1.6 million job seekers served by these 32 centers across the state have found gainful employment.

"Massachusetts' competitive edge lies in our highly-skilled workforce and our willingness to work together to connect workers with employment opportunities," Patrick said. "The Quincy Career Center, alongside centers from across the state, is an example of how we are choosing to invest in every one of our residents, for today and the future."

Career Centers deliver to job seekers the grants and programs put together by the Commonwealth's workforce development system. The Patrick Administration's strategy for creating jobs through targeted investments in education, innovation and infrastructure has paid off and resulted in the creation of more than 100,000 jobs, leading to the highest level of employment in Massachusetts in nearly 25 years. In June, the state's unemployment rate dropped to 5.5 percent, the lowest rate since 2008.

"Our career center programing really reflects the changes that today's job seekers face when they look for 21st century jobs," said Secretary of Labor and Workforce Development Rachel Kaprielian. "Our free seminars, workshops, personal counseling, job fairs and other services help job seekers translate their job skills into new career paths, leverage technology and social media to make personal connections to employers and overcome barriers that can lead to long-term unemployment."

During the tour of the Quincy Career Center, Patrick sat in on one of the seminars that connect the newly unemployed to services available for job seekers. Quincy is one of the many career centers that offers specialized services for veterans and job seekers with disabilities. The Quincy Career Center also serves a large Asian population by providing specialized translation services. Last year, more than 4,600 of the Center's job seekers found employment.

"Career center staff is trained to provide professional career counseling, but more importantly our service representatives know how to deal compassionately with someone who has just lost their job," said Alice Sweeney, Director of Career Center Services. "It can be the most devastating time in a person's working life and the first thing we need to do is help build up their confidence in their skills and experience."

"The Quincy Career Center makes a difference in people's lives. We welcome all employers and job seekers to use our services and programs," said Mayor Tom Koch, CEO of the South Shore Workforce Development System.

Among the resources provided by the Patrick Administration and made available to businesses and employers are workforce training grants. These grants enable large and small businesses to retrain their workers and create new jobs. Under Gov. Patrick, more than $89.1 million in general workforce training fund grants went to 1,149 projects and 1,217 businesses throughout the Commonwealth.

"One of the reasons our career centers can be so helpful to job seekers is because of the connections we make to local businesses in understanding their labor needs and matching them to people looking for work," said Don Uvanitte, Chairman of the South Shore Workforce Investment Board, which partners with the Commonwealth in running career centers on the South Shore. "We not only help businesses recruit and hire employees, but we also guide them to state resources that will help their businesses prosper."

Quincy College Designated Military Friendly School

For the fourth consecutive year, Quincy College has been named a 2015 Military Friendly® School by Victory Media, the leader in successfully connecting the military and civilian worlds.

The designation is awarded to the top 15 percent of colleges, universities and trade schools in the country that are doing the most to embrace military students, and to dedicate resources to ensure their success in the classroom and after graduation.

"This Award is yet another positive step in our commitment to make Quincy College an institution where we value the sacrifices made by our veterans in serving our country and provide an environment which is both receptive and accommodating to what are often the distinct needs of veterans," Quincy College President Peter Tsaffaras said.

Quincy College officials said the college is committed to continually improving the education experience provided to those students who have sacrificed in service to their country. In addition to the designation as a Military Friendly School, Quincy College was recently awarded the 2014-2015 Community Grant for their Empowering Veterans Enabling Success (EVES) Project. This grant was made possible by donations from South Shore Hospital and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Blue Hills Community Health Alliance (CHNA 20).

The focus of this year's CHNA 20 Community Grant Program was to fund projects that lead to positive, enduring and replicable outcomes in one or more of the core priority areas - Substance Abuse, Mental Health, Chronic Disease & Wellness and Access to Care & Services.

Quincy College's EVES Project looks to target the mental health issues that can be unique to military veterans who have been deployed to Afghanistan or Iraq. Veterans often have experienced traumatic events, with the residual effects of combat injury creating difficulties in an academic setting. Injuries impacting cognitive functioning are the most prevalent of the battlefield injuries suffered by the service men and women returning from deployment.

The goals of the program are to: create educational opportunities for faculty so that they will be better prepared to address the unique needs of student veterans and their families, empower the Quincy College Organization for Student Veterans to participate at the national level, and also, identify and develop resources related to social services and mental health within walking distance to the Quincy College campus to address urgent issues facing student veterans.

Quincy College also has a Veterans Discount Program. Through the Veterans Discount Program, veterans may enroll in either Liberal Arts or Professional Programs classes at a discounted rate. Veterans are eligible for this reduced rate regardless of the number of courses they take in a semester. The veteran discount program is not funded by the state or federal government; therefore veterans who are eligible for education benefits through the VA may also receive the Quincy College discounted rate.

In addition to being a Military Friendly School, Quincy College is a member of the Service Members Opportunity Colleges Consortium (SOC). Quincy College advisors review both military and college transcripts, as well as CLEP and DANTES exam scores, for transfer credit according to American Council of Education (ACE) recommendations.

Veterans, veteran dependents, and active duty service members are able to use their federal education benefits at Quincy College including: Post 9/11 GI Bill, Montgomery GI Bill, Vocational Rehabilitation, My CAA, VA Work Study and Tuition Assistance.

For more information about Quincy College's commitment to attracting and supporting military students, visit Quincy College's website at http://www.quincycollege.edu/departments/military-veteran-affairs.

Panthers Stymie Red Raiders, 28-7

By JOE REARDON

Mark Nutley may have to channel his inner Vince Lombardi after Plymouth South thoroughly dismantled the Red Raiders 28-7 Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The North Quincy head coach could see that his team was on its heels during warmups and it carried into the start of the Patriot League matchup. The Panthers scored on their first three possessions and had the Red Raiders in a deep hole heading into halftime down 19-0.

"I said it during warmups," said Nutley, whose squad fell to 1-2 on the season. "They came out flat. They looked flat. I yelled at them a bunch of times for it. I told them to start picking it up because they are ready to play. Sure enough, we have a good opening kickoff and we went three and out."

The Red Raiders had their chances through out this one. Twice strong-armed quarterback Andrew Kiley had receivers open in the end zone, but overthrew them. It was just the kind of night North Quincy had where nothing was working.

The Red Raiders did break Plymouth South's chance for a shutout in the fourth quarter. Kiley was very sharp on the series, completing five passes for 68 yards, the fifth being a 22-yard scoring strike to Dayvon Jones with 3:22 left. The pass capped a 12-play, 60-yard drive and Dara Griffin made it 28-7 by converting the PAT.

After going three and out, Plymouth South put together a 14-play, 80-yard drive that resulted in Anti Dylan rushing eight yards untouched up the middle for the 7-0 lead. The Panthers did the job in controling the clock, burning up 8:31 with their first score.

The Panthers put up two more scores and were driving on a third until defensive end Alex Chen broke through the line and dropped quarterback Andrew Shortall on the final play before the half.

North Quincy came out strong in the third quarter and marched to the Panthers' 25-yard line. The drive stalled out when a pass on fourth and seven fell incomplete. Plymouth South added a safety to go up 21-0. The Panthers added their final score on an eight-yard run by Justin Lamb to go up 28-0 before the Red Raiders' lone score.

"We couldn't move the ball," said Nutley. "They were tougher than us up front. We moved backwards on the first three series. Their three guys were tougher than my five up front.

"We have to watch the film tomorrow and make some changes from there. If we have to change personnel we'll change personnel. They woke up in the second half, but we were down 19-0. I told them we had to come out, go three and out down the field and then put a good drive together and that's what we did, but we stalled inside their 20. Once one thing happens to us it just snowballs."

The Red Raiders travel to Pembroke Saturday for a 1 p.m. kick-off against the Titans.

Blocked Punts Key For Quincy In 42-13 Win

Presidents Down W-H; Host Silver Lake Friday

The Quincy Presidents football team improved to 3-0 on the season with a convincing 42-13 road victory over Whitman-Hanson last Friday night.

The Presidents started quickly with a five-play, 70-yard drive to open the game capped off by a 4-yard TD pass from James Lam to Armani Cardoso. Reda Laftih missed the extra point.

Quincy and W-H exchanged punts and on their second possession of the game, junior Mike Munroe blocked the Panthers' punt, and senior John Crump fell on it at the 1-yard line. Jahvae Handsom-Fields then scored on the very next play, running off of left tackle behind Curtis Calley and Abraham Hoti. Quincy tried for two by rolling Lam out to the right, but W-H broke up the pass attempt to Jake Bergonzi.

On their next possession, Curtis Calley sacked the QB on third down which forced W-H to punt, and this time junior Garrett Cronin blocked it. Senior Bobby Salvucci then picked it up and ran it down to the 8-yard line. Quincy scored two plays later on a toss to Handsom-Fields around the left side and then he ran in the 2-point conversion behind a great double team block by Mike Munroe and Captain William Young.

On W-H's next possession, Quincy forced a three and out, and after a beautiful 32-yard pass from Lam to senior Andrew Cook down the left side line, the Presidents scored on a 10-yard bootleg left from Lam to senior TE Jake Bergonzi. Laftih kicked the extra point to make the score 27 – 0.

Quincy seemed to be in control of the game at that point, however Whitman-Hanson then went on a 65-yard scoring drive to end the first have making the score 27-6. Then, to start the second half, the Panthers came out and went on a 76-yard scoring drive to make the score 27-13.

"At that point if felt like they had all of the momentum," said Quincy head coach Bill Reardon. "To make matters worse, we got called for an illegal chop block on our first possession of the half which forced us to punt the ball back to them and put our defense back on the field.

"Our defense stepped up, however when Whitman decided to go for it on 4th and 1 at their own 33. At that point the momentum came back our way after a huge stop by our defense lead by Curtis Calley and Abraham Hoti at the point of attack. We then scored four plays later on a 14-yard run by Jahvae off of left tackle (Abraham Hoti) and we then converted the twi points on a scramble by James. We tried to run the same play that was broken up earlier on the attempt to Jake Bergonzi, but this time James (Lam) ran it in himself."

On Whitman-Hanson's next drive, Quincy forced them to punt. Laftih had a nice 16 yard return down to their 34 yard line, and Handsom-Fields scored on the first play on a 34-yard run up the middle behind William Young once again. Laftih kicked the extra point.

The Panthers' last drive of the game came to an end when Handsom-Fields intercepted the ball at Quincy's 10 yd line. The Presidents ran the clock out from there.

"The score looks great in print but it really was closer that it looks," Reardon said. "Whitman-Hanson played well, and without those two punt blocks who knows how it would have turned out. I was particularly happy with the play of Senior DB Kenny Garcia who broke up four long bomb pass attempts. We're aggressive up front which means teams are going to keep trying to take shots deep, so its nice to know that Kenny can handle that responsibility."

Lam passed 6 for 9 for 104 yards and 2 TDs, and Handsom-Fields had 13 carries for 128 yards, 4 TDs and a 2-point conversion.

Q, NQ X-Country Highlights

Both Quincy and North Quincy boys ran their best team efforts but still came up winless against Middleboro Sept. 23.

North Quincy put Mike Mullaney and Jimmy Cannon well ahead of the Middleboro pack but in the end were edged 27-29. Quincy put all five of its scorers in the top 10 but came up short on a 24-36 decision. Other North boys running well were Aidan Golden, Kevin White and Romel Malimban.

For the Presidents Kyle Cabezas, Max Hurley, Mark Hajjar, Nick Cheney and Shawn Daly ran well. Cabezas was 4th overall.

[illegible] girls' side, Emily and Julia Bryson continued to dominate finishing 1-2 and then Marguerite Belcher and Devin Hiltunen finished 4-5 to clinch a 22-33 win. Emily Zheng and Grace Anderson also ran well.

For Quincy, LaQueen Arias led Alyssa Camara, Katy Deng, Michelle Chen, Maryanne Ly and Kelly Zeng for the Presidents but were handed a 17-41 decision by the Sachems. A highlight of the meet was the appearance of Brandeis Head Coach Sinead Delahunty, a former Irish Olympian who was watching the Bryson twins.

"In my 30 years coaching I have never had a college coach visit us up at Pageant Field," said Head Coach Geoff Hennessy. "I tried to keep it a secret that she was coming, but it didn't stay a secret for long."

The Raider girls are cruising at 3-1 (3-0 Fisher Division) and are poised to take the division for the third straight year. They tied in 2012 and won it outright last year.

North faces Pembroke next week at home, then travels to Plymouth South and finishes at Scituate. "We're running the gauntlet with this schedule" said Hennessy. "One girl out, one bad day and we're out of it. We can't win it with depth - we don't have any, but the (Bryson) twins are a solid week in week out. As our other kids improve, it'll be interesting. And we finish at Scituate which is always a battle."

BONA FIDE CONCERNS

According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, 52 million Americans have osteoporosis, or low bone density. By 2020, half of all Americans over age 50 are expected to have osteoporosis. To translate these statistics into more personal terms, about one in two women and up to one in four men over age 50 will break a bone due to this bone-thinning disease. If left untreated, bone density will diminish to the point where fractures become inevitable, particularly of the hip, wrist, and spine. While any bone in the body can be affected, spinal fractures are particularly concerning because they can bring severe back pain and deformity, such as "dowager's hump." Regular chiropractic treatment and exams can help prevent these outcomes.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are a health care profession concerned with the diagnosis, treatment and prevention of disorders of the neuromusculoskeletal system and the effects of these disorders on general health. Have you suffered an injury? Are you in pain? You don't have to suffer needlessly. We practice safe and gentle chiropractic care for the entire family. Every chiropractic adjustment is tailored to each patient. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we utilize modern diagnostic procedures and specialized chiropractic techniques. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. There are some medications that can lead to bone loss, particularly if they are taken in high doses.

Forde's Two Goals Power North Quincy Over Quincy

By JOE REARDON

The shots weren't finding the back of the net early on for the North Quincy girls' soccer team, but Red Raider Co-Captain Ciara Forde wasn't worried or frustrated.

The senior forward, who plans on bringing her game to the collegiate level next fall, was confident that good things would happen if the Red Raiders just stayed the course, the way they've been so far this season, in Saturday night's showdown against the Presidents at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We really stay calm and maintain our focus," said Forde. "It's important to work as a team. That's been our main focus. We have confidence in all our players."

Forde practiced what she preached as she kept pounding the Quincy net with shots before pulling the trigger on a pair of goals to lead the Red Raiders to a 3-0 win over the Presidents in a Patriot League contest.

The win moved North Quincy to 3-2-2 on the season while Quincy dropped to 1-7 after chalking up their first win of the fall the previous afternoon against Fontbonne.

The game was delayed for more than 30 minutes with 11:04 left to play in the first half when North Quincy's Sinead Hanley got tangled up with a Quincy player and went down hard. She suffered a lower body injury and will likely miss the rest of the season. Hanley gave a wave to her teammates when she was being transported from the field to the ambulance. When play resumed it didn't take long for the Red Raiders to strike.

NORTH QUINCY'S goaltender Shannan Kennedy makes a leaping save in the first half of Saturday's matchup against Quincy. Kennedy went on to record a 3-0 shutout.

Forde broke the tie 40 seconds after the injury delay, picking up a loose ball and drilling it past Quincy goalkeeper Emmi Guarente for the 1-0 lead. Less than a minute later the Red Raiders were up 2-0, courtesy of a Hailey Houlihan tally on a seeing-eye shot that Guarente was able to get her hands on up high, but couldn't come down with.

North Quincy continued to attack the Presidents' net in the second half and Forde added her second tally, gaining control of a well-placed corner kick by Molly Donahue and chipping it home with 5:49 left to make it a 3-0 contest.

Quincy head coach Seth Harmon believed his team was still feeling the effects of the previous day's battle against Fontbonne and fell out of rhythm. "We played yesterday against Fontbonne and we were a little tired still," said Harmon.

Emma Papile and Kerry Phelan were solid on the field for the Presidents, working to get the ball pass mid field and into Red Raider territory, but Quincy was having its problems getting high-percentage scoring bids on goalkeeper Shannan Kennedy.

The Presidents very nearly took the early lead 9:03 into the game when Phelan got her foot on a rebound and lined a shot just over the crossbar. That turned out to be Quincy's best scoring chance of the evening.

North Quincy head coach Paul Bregoli credited the solid defense of his club, led by Julia O'Donnell, who has been terrific all season.

"Our defense was superb," said Bregoli. "Their strength is down the middle and we needed to go down the sides. We played hard and knew they would too. Courtney (Campo) and Ciara do so much for us and they did it again tonight."

Bregoli smiled when he talked about a dreadful practice on Friday where the team was completely out of synch. "I would tell them one thing and they would do the other," he said. "It was almost like talking to your kids. There was no energy out there."

Forde was around the Quincy net the entire game and had several chances before notching her tallies. After Houlihan just missed with a shot that went wide, Forde raced in and got off a low shot to the right of Guarente. The Quincy keeper never took her eyes off the ball and dove to her right to make the save. Marissa McGue just missed with 14:23 remaining in the half on a bid that was just over the crossbar and Forde was robbed again by Guarente on a laser from 10 yards out.

Donahue very nearly added to the 3-0 lead late when she almost beat Guarente to the short side with 3:38 remaining. Forde almost got her her third tally of the night in the final minute, heading a pass that was just over the crossbar.

Mascarenhas's Tally Lifts Presidents Past Red Raiders

By JOE REARDON

The matchup between the North Quincy and Quincy boys' soccer teams Saturday night had nothing to do with bragging rights. The squads meet again this season and the bragging will be on the backburner until the fall campaign draws to a close.

More importantly to both coaches, what the contest was really about was two teams who are still trying to establish an identity in the merciless confines of a talent-heavy Patriot League. In other leagues, two city schools would have their struggles, but still be able to come away with a handful of victories - maybe more - along the way.

The game was a power struggle the entire way with both teams trading the momentum.

It was North Quincy which controled the majority of the first half before the Presidents found their groove in the second 40 minutes at Veterans Memorial Stadium. It was Yuri Mascarenhas who put the outcome to rest with 24:39 left in the game. The Presidents' most explosive offensive threat parked a free kick in the far left corner to break a 1-1 tie and give Quincy the 2-1 victory. With the win, the Presidents moved to 2-5 on the season and earned a nice dose of momentum heading into this week of play. North Quincy had plenty of golden opportunities, but saw its frustrating year continue at 1-6-1.

"It was a tough one," said North Quincy head coach Rich Hanlon. "We controlled most of the game. The set pieces worked against us. Yuri's a hell of a player. We've been in every game and we've done everything, but score. In this league you can't make mistakes."

Mascarenhas displayed his skills early on, using some great footwork to elude the Red Raider defense with 18:34 remaining in the first half and just missing with a blistering shot that was just wide of the post. North Quincy goalkeeper Joey England played an agressive game between the posts and made a huge play with 14:50 left until halftime when he sprinted out high in the box and knocked the ball away from a charging Kevin O'Shea. England was right there again to turn away an Aidan Smyth shot from 30 yards out with 11:49 left.

Quincy finally beat England with 6:34 left as Mascarenhas ripped home a shot off of a corner kick for the 1-0 lead. The advantage was short-lived though as John Lopes headed a free kick that eluded Presidents' goalkeeper Robert Smith to make it a 1-1 contest just a minute later.

England then robbed Hahim Hamdi with 5:08 to go until the break, diving far to his right to smother a low shot that was headed insided the post.

Quincy coach Mark Spendlove predicted a chippy game against the Presidents' natural rivals and that's exactly what the fans got. "We really had to battle," he said. "We're a young team and not where we want to be yet. We knew it wasn't got a pretty game, but we worked hard got things done. I think we got outhustled in the first half. We needed to be a little bit quicker. I'm very proud of the boys."

England and Smith made huge saves early in the second half and it wasn't until just under 25:00 left that the Presidents were able to break the tie on Mascarenhas's shot. England robbed him of a hat trick, diving to his left to deny a blistering shot off a free kick.

Hanlon was extremely pleased with his squad's effort and is excited about the second-half of the season. "Hopefully we'll have a strong second half," he said. "We have 11 seniors and they want to go out on top. We'll do what we can. I couldn't have been prouder of them tonight. They played hard. When we play Quincy the records go right out the window."

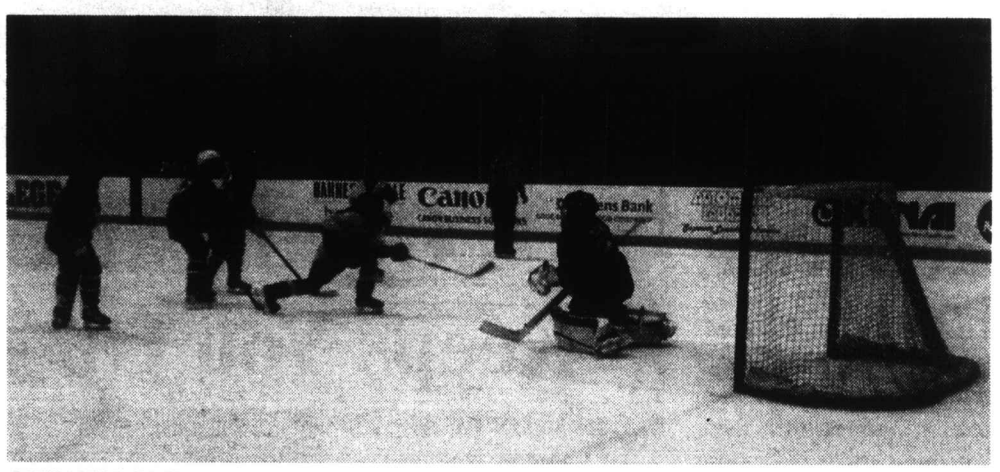
Pee Wee B's Rally On The Road

After a couple of roster moves and a season opening 5-5 tie with Hingham, the Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee B team may have found its identity on the road this past weekend.

In the second week of South Shore Conference (SSC) hockey action, the Quincy PW B team beat a strong Walpole club, who had yet to be scored upon. On Sunday, the host Westwood PW B team was unable to respond to a five goal flurry in the second period, which secured a 7-2 victory for the visiting Quincy PW B team.

In its home opener in front of a near capacity crowd at Quincy Youth Hockey Arena Sept. 20, the Quincy PW B overcame a 3-1 deficit in the first period to rally back for a come from behind tying effort against the Harbormen. QYH centerman Derek Little and line mates, Aidan White and Michael Collins accounted for four of the five Quincy goals.

QYH center Brodie Degust was able to spring his right wing loose, Chase Quigley, who tipped a loose puck by the Hingham netminder for his first goal of the season.



QUINCY YOUTH HOCKEY Pee Wee B Anthony Viera (white) got the hat trick in Quincy's 7-2 victory over Westwood at Babson College Skating Club last Sunday.

Last Saturday and with a short bench, the QYH PW B team travelled to Ulin Rink and faced off against a heavily favored Walpole team. First year PW goalie Dan Freeman was spectacular in the Quincy net, while the defensive tandem of John Bell and Chris Hussey negated several Rebel scoring chances. The outstanding two-way play of Quincy forwards, Riley O'Connor and Brian Silcox coupled with the gritty fore-checking of Paul Martin and Liam Foster, accounted for two early goals by Ryan Hester and Collins.

Both teams exchanged goals in the second period, as Brodie DeGust tallied to give Quincy a 3-1 lead after two periods. Following a Walpole power play goal midway thru the 3rd period, O'Connor found the back of the Rebel net to seal a well-earned 4-2 Quincy victory.

At the Babson College Skating Club in Wellesley, the Quincy lads were a little slow out of the gate for a 7 a.m. Sunday morning battle with Westwood, who peppered the Quincy goal early and took an 1-0 lead. QYH goalie Freeman gloved several Westwood snipes and again was strong between the pipes for Quincy. White and Silcox combined to even the score at one apiece late in the 1st period as the QYH PW B team began to find its legs.

The QYH defenders [Rhys Foster, Michael Gorman and John Bell] buckled down inside the QYH blue line and led several Quincy rushes, which ignited a five goal Quincy rally in the second period. The scoring for Quincy was spread across its three lines as White (2), Quigley, O'Connor, and Anthony Viera (3) tallied for Quincy.

Faced with a couple of unexpected roster changes after the Hingham game, "our kids have really embraced their team roles and played unselfish and gritty hockey", said Coach Bob Bell. Next Saturday, the QYH PW B team will again travel to the base of the Blue Hills reservation to play an undefeated Milton PW B team [11:40 a.m.] at the Ulin Rink.

Fall Automotive Care

Ask John Paul: AAA's Car Doctor

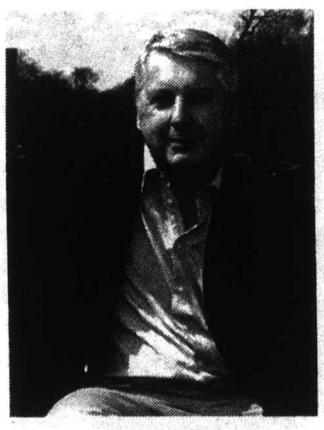
Question: I have a Dodge truck that from time to time I can't get the shifter from park to drive. Sometimes it works fine, other times I need to turn the key on and off and step on the brake several times. What do you think could be wrong?

Answer: The shift interlock system is engaged whenever the ignition switch is in the lock or accessory position. An additional feature will prevent shifting out of the park position unless the brake pedal is depressed approximately one-half an inch. The problem could be with the brake switch, solenoid or even a wiring issue.

Q. I am considering purchasing a work van and was thinking about the new Ford Transit and wondered what you think of this van?

A. I have not driven the Transit van but have talked with other auto writers recently and everyone comes away impressed. The Transit is built at one of the same plants that build the F-150 pick-up truck. There are several choices or engines and seating arrangements as well as various body lengths.

Q. I have seen three cylinder engines being offered. Ford has one in the Fiesta and Mitsubishi has one in their Mirage. I remember the Geo Metro with its three cylinder engine and it was terrible, what do you think of these new three cylinder engines?



JOHN PAUL:
AAA's Car Doctor

A. I have not driven the Mirage but recently have driven the Fiesta with the 1.0 liter Ecoboost engine and the five-speed manual transmission and found it to be a very useable combination. The performance as long as you took advantage of the power supplied by the turbocharger was more than adequate and made for a fun to drive car. Even more impressive was the fuel economy, I averaged 43 miles per gallon in a 50/50 mix of city and highway driving. This is mileage approaching that of a typical hybrid car.

Q. What do you think of the idea that cars will be safer in the future because people won't drive them? Are you in favor of self-driving cars?

A. I enjoy driving but there are certainly times that I would like to be in a car that drives without my help. I commute nearly 100 miles round trip to work and there are times that I would rather not drive such as being stuck in traffic or when that commuter time could be used for extra productivity. Then there are times that there is nothing more rewarding than driving a sporty car on a twisty two lane road. I had the opportunity to talk with Volvo's Anders Eugensson on my radio program and he predicts that by the year 2020 that no new Volvos will be involved in any fatal crashes due to some level of self-driving cars. The interview is on my podcast site if you want to give it a listen-http://johnfpaul.podomatic.com/

Q. I recently purchased a Mazda Miata with a six-speed transmission and a retractable hardtop. This is my only car and I plan to drive it year round and I have a couple of questions. I have heard that you shouldn't use the parking brake in the winter and what about snow tires, two or four?

A. In general if the weather is below freezing and wet try to avoid using the parking brake. The parking brake cables can become coated with slush and freeze and you will be stuck. In this case you would be better leaving the car in first or reverse gears. Regarding snow tires: using four is the best option. You will not just get better traction to get moving but also to stop. I drove a Miata during a winter storm and it did remarkably well with it biggest limitation being the lack of ground clearance.

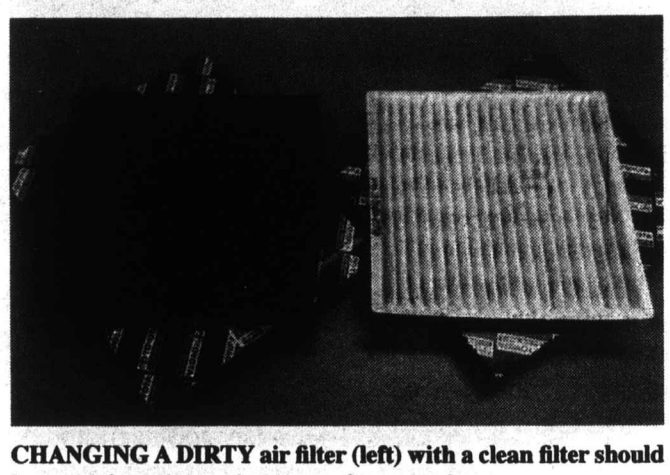
Good Car Care Keeps You On The Go

By JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

Well-maintained vehicles deliver stronger and more efficient performance. Proper maintenance also helps avoid breakdowns and costly repairs, which can save you money. And when it comes time to replace your vehicle, a documented maintenance history will contribute to a higher resale value.

How do you know when your vehicle needs routine service? With older vehicles, motorists had to study the owner's manual or maintenance booklet and decide if they drove in "normal" or "severe" conditions. Then, they consulted a time/mileage chart that indicated when the car should be taken to the shop – and hopefully they remembered to do so. Most cars today are equipped with computerized maintenance reminder systems that remove much of the hassle from car care.

In a recent AAA survey, six out of ten motorists said their cars have a built-in maintenance reminder system that alerts them when it's time to change the oil or perform other services. More importantly, the survey also found that the reminders are actually driving many owners' service decisions, with 51 percent of respondents saying they follow the computer's recommendations.



CHANGING A DIRTY air filter (left) with a clean filter should be part of routine maintenance for motorists.

Confusion Still Reigns

Still, many motorists are not maintaining their vehicles adequately. Based on 2012 Car Care Council vehicle inspections, 77 percent of vehicles had overlooked maintenance items – the majority of which involved low or dirty engine oil. But many also had other service needs that are not routinely prompted by in-vehicle maintenance reminders, things such as low engine coolant, dirty air filters, or burned-out headlamps.

Oil changes are another point of confusion. Advances in modern engines and improved oil formulas have made the 3,000-mile oil change obsolete. Based on in-vehicle computer monitoring of engine operation and oil condition, today's average oil-change interval is around 7,800 miles, with some models that use full-synthetic oils able to travel up to 15,000 miles between oil changes!

What's Right For Your Vehicle?

Whether you personally perform vehicle maintenance or rely on a trusted technician, the key is to follow the schedule set by the vehicle manufacturer. If your car has a reminder system, trust it to schedule your oil changes, but also be sure to review your owner's manual or maintenance booklet to learn what other services are due at the same time. Never ignore a maintenance reminder. Doing so will increase engine wear and potentially cause long-term damage. Proper car care is the best way to keep your vehicle running reliably and avoid costly repairs.

Gas Prices Down One Penny

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are down a penny from last week, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA's Sept. 29th survey of prices in Massachusetts found self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $3.38 per gallon, down one cent from last week. Prices locally are six cents lower than a month ago.

The current price is four cents more than the national average for self serve unleaded of $3.34. A year ago at this time the Massachusetts average price was nine cents higher at $3.47.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is 48 cents, from a low of $3.21 to a high of $3.69. AAA advises motorists to shop around for the best prices in their area, and to make sure they and their passengers buckle up — every trip, every time.

Find the most up-to-date local gas prices with the AAA Fuel Finder by logging onto AAA.com and clicking on Gas Saving Tips & Tools. AAA members can also obtain a copy of the Gas Watcher's Guide at their local AAA Southern New England office.

AAA Fuel Saving Tip of the Week

Lighten the load. Don't haul unnecessary weight in the passenger compartment, trunk, or cargo area of your vehicle. A heavier vehicle uses more gas.

Fire Safety! Spread the Word!

Fire Prevention Week
Oct. 5 to 11, 2014

In the days of horse-drawn fire carts, Dalmatians did the job of running in front of the horses to clear the path and to guide them to the fire!

Today Dalmatians are mascots of firehouses. Sometimes we help to locate people in fires. We also make good guard dogs, watching over the firehouse and the equipment.

Family Fire Safety Checklist

Share this checklist with your family.

- ☐ Only cook in the kitchen when an adult is helping you.
- ☐ Don't touch matches, lighters or candles. They are for adult use only.
- ☐ Do you have smoke detectors on every level of your home? Test them monthly and change the batteries at least once a year.
- ☐ Do you know two or more ways out of the house?
- ☐ Never use elevators if there is a fire (stairs are much safer).
- ☐ Smoke rises. If there is a fire, stay low: crawl under the smoke.
- ☐ Have you picked a place to meet the rest of your family once you are all out of the house?
- ☐ Once you are out of the house, stay out of the house.

Firefighters rush to the rescue when there is a fire. Did you know that they also work hard to spread the word about fire prevention and safety?

Here are 6 ways that we learn about fire safety:

1. Programs are being developed on _____ that will show fake flames and fire situations to help kids learn how to react if they are ever stuck in a fire.
2. Cartoon _____ like Smokey Bear or Marty, the fire explorer, and Jett, his pet turtle (part of the USFA for kids) teach safety.
3. They are mascots at fire houses; some dogs or other _____ are trained to alert people when there is smoke, or to help find people in fires.
4. Firefighters can send _____ by remote control into dangerous fires to fight them.
5. Firehouses have _____ in which firefighters will visit classrooms to speak
6. _____ travel the country in buses; are set up at schools, malls or fairs.

National Grid Tips For Emergency Preparedness

National Grid offers the following tips to help customers prepare for emergencies:

Build an emergency supply kit. Water, nonperishable food, first aid materials, prescriptions, a flashlight and a battery-powered radio are a few of the items that are critical to include in an emergency supply toolkit. A fully stocked toolkit and well-thought-out emergency plan could mean the difference between life and death. Emergency supply kits should include basic tools and survival items. For a complete list of recommended Emergency Supply Toolkit items, visit www.ready.gov.

Plan for locations. Emergencies and disasters occur without warning which is why it's important to have a plan and necessary supplies for the different locations you and your family frequent. These locations include home, work, school, vehicles, places of worship, shopping areas and entertainment/sports locations like theaters and arenas. How will you get to a safe place? How will you contact one another? How will you get back together? These are all important questions to consider when creating your plan. Visit www.ready.gov to download the Family Emergency Plan and send it to your family and friends.

Plan for risks. Think about where you live and identify the hazards that have happened or could happen in your area. Residents living in areas where there is usually significant snowfall may need to plan more for snowstorms, but residents who live along the coast may be more affected by hurricanes. Depending upon the nature of the emergency and your circumstances, one of the first important decisions is whether to stay where you are or evacuate. You should understand and plan for both possibilities. No matter where you live, make sure you plan accordingly. For more information on risk planning, visit www.ready.gov/make-a-plan.

Know your community's plan. Find out from local government how it communicates with residents in an emergency. This could be in the form of radio/TV broadcasts, telephone, door-to-door notifications or a community siren. Get informed now so you can stay informed when it counts.

Stay connected to National Grid. Customers who access nationalgrid.com on their mobile devices can stay connected during service interruptions and learn safety information by going to www.ngrid.com/connectma or by downloading the National Grid mobile app. Once on the mobile site or app, customers will be able to view outage maps, report an outage, check the status of an outage and view restoration information by area. The mobile site also features a section with important storm safety tips and frequently asked questions along with contact information for National Grid's customer service team. Customers also can stay tuned to storm information in the following ways:

Broadcast Text Alerts

Customers can opt-in to receive broadcast text alerts by texting the word STORM to NGRID (64743). Once customers text the number, NGRID will ask them to verify the state they are located in. After choosing their state, they will be registered to receive updates for that state.

Email Alerts

Once customers sign up they will be able to enjoy several self-service options, including easy access to outage reporting, e-billing and more. Customers can always opt out of email alerts by clicking the "unsubscribe" link at the bottom of all National Grid emails.

Social Media

Customers can follow National Grid on Twitter @nationalgridus and search for National Grid on Facebook for news specific to your service area or National Grid in general.

Outage Central

National Grid also provides customers with multiple ways to receive up-to-date information on restoration details, safety tips, important phone numbers, and more through its Outage Central webpage. Here, customers can sign up to receive text and email alerts, stay informed through Facebook and Twitter and report or check on power outages. Customers can also visit the Outage Central webpage to view "Power Outages: Preparation and Restoration," a video that provides a comprehensive look at the steps National Grid takes to prepare for and prevent outages.

Use new technologies: The American Red Cross and the Federal Emergency Management Association offer downloadable mobile apps for first aid, finding shelter and disaster assistance to help the public. Strong Opposition To Avalon Quincy Proposal

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents and labor groups strongly opposed a plan to build 398 residential units on Quarry Street during a recent public hearing in front of a standing-room-only crowd at City Hall.

The proposed development, known as Avalon Quincy, would be located on Quarry Street right next to the HighPoint apartment complex. A settlement reached in 2000 between HighPoint's developer, Congress Group Ventures, the city, and a group of residents living nearby allowed Congress Group to build 1,040 units on the site; only half of those were ultimately built. The settlement set a 2007 deadline for construction on site, including the portion AvalonBay is now hoping to develop. The developer later received a five-year extension on that deadline, which passed in 2012.

At the Sept. 23rd public hearing, the three residents who took part in the original settlement and their attorney urged the City Council, acting as Quincy's special permit granting authority (SPGA), to reject the new proposal by AvalonBay. They said the proposal amounts to a continuation of the HighPoint project; the plan incorporates utilities, roads, and building pads installed as part of the HighPoint project.

"I hope the council, sitting as the SPGA, will realize we entered into an agreement 14 years ago. We're still living up to our agreement; I wish you guys would live up to yours," Churchill Road resident Joe Coyne, one of the three residents, said.

"There are only a few things you have to do in this world to stay out of trouble: One is to pay your taxes, the second is to obey the law, and the third is to live by the agreements and contracts you signed. You guys signed an agreement, live by it."

More than 65 people attended the public hearing. Of the 21 who spoke at the meeting, 18 said they opposed the project.

Among those who spoke against the Avalon Quincy proposal were five representatives from unions and other labor groups. They cited AvalonBay's labor practices as the reason for their opposition.

"Quincy was a city that was built on fair wages and good benefits for the people who work here – it's as solid as the granite that was mined here," Barry Keade, a business agent for Plumbers Local 12, told the council.

"These developers sometimes come in with contractors that use temp workers – they use out of state workers who take their money they earn here and they spend it out of town. They don't spend it in Quincy – they go back home to New Hampshire, to Connecticut, to South Carolina and spend their money there."

Other residents cited traffic concerns while opposing the project. AvalonBay had completed a traffic study along Quarry Street from Furnace Brook Parkway to Granite Street. Timothy Dane, who lives in the 500 block of Quarry Street, said the study should have looked at a longer portion of the street.

"I am opposed to this project," Dane said. "I don't understand why the traffic study was not done beyond Furnace Brook Parkway. I have a hard time getting out of my driveway everyday. It's backed up from the on ramp at East Milton Square all the way to the top of Common Street.

"You cannot move on that street during rush hour in the morning or rush hour at night."

While most of those who spoke at the public hearing opposed Avalon's proposal, three residents said they were in favor of the development. Among them was the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, a member of Quincy's Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee. Bennett cited the project's potential to boost affordable housing in the city – either through the incorporation of 40 affordable units in the project itself or by a payment into the trust fund for future projects elsewhere. In addition, Bennett said it would boost the city's housing stock and add to the city's economic future.

"The Avalon Quincy development proposal is an important housing opportunity for Quincy," he explained. "The proposed 398 units will add significantly to Quincy's housing stock and to Quincy's economic future and vitality as a city where people of different ages, career stages, and incomes can prosper and thrive together as a community."

Also in favor of the project was Paul Rogan, a trustee of the condo board at Excelsior in the HighPoint, who said Avalon's proposal would help alleviate issues HighPoint residents have dealt with because of the unused space next door.

"I've been in the building for almost 10 years," Rogan said. "We've had a lot of problems over the years with vandalism to vehicles, we've had issues with kids getting in the building drinking in stairwells, there have been fires in abandoned lots, and we feel a responsible corporate partner and neighbor will add to the community and resolve some of those issues."

AvalonBay's proposal calls for building two five-story buildings and three six-story ones on a 25-acre parcel next to HighPoint. The development would include 46 studio units, 158 one-bedroom units, and 194 units with two bedrooms. Rents would be in the range of $1,800-2,000 for a studio; $2,000-2,200 for one bedroom; and a higher, unspecified price for the two bedroom units.

The proposal also includes a fenced-in outdoor pool area, which would be located next to a lounge area and pool building. The lounge area would include built-in kitchens, fireplaces, and lounge seating. A fitness center would be located on the ground floor of one of the five-story buildings.

Half of the 25-acre parcel would remain as open space, including one acre of already paved area that will be converted back to open space.

The Planning Board recommended the project unanimously Sept. 10. The council has final say on the proposal; it will meet again on Oct. 22 at 7 p.m. for further review of the plan.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, September 21, 2014, at approximately 11:40 A.M., Officer James Goldrick was dispatched to a tanning location near Southern Artery to investigate a suspicious incident involving a man beating his dog.

It was reported that this man fled south on Southern Artery in a yellow car with the plate given. The vehicle was registered to a Braintree resident.

Upon arrival, the Officer met with two witnesses. The first witness stated that she was a veterinary surgical technician and is attending veterinary school. She stated that she watched the man exit a local business, go to his car and open the trunk. He then removed a wire coat hanger and took it apart (so it was straight). The witness said that she was concerned that the male was attempting to break into the car so she kept an eye on him. The witness then realized that there was a small dog (Italian Greyhound) inside the car. She watched as the male suspect struck the dog at least 8 times with the wire hanger. She said she quickly walked to the male to intervene but he saw her and then jumped into his car and sped away. The witness said that she was able to get the license plate of the car prior to the male fleeing the scene.

In the witness's opinion as a veterinary professional, she believed that the dog should be checked out for injuries and removed from the owner's control. Officer Goldrick then spoke with an employee who said that she was working the front desk of the business when the suspect entered the premises.

The employee stated that the suspect gave his name and address prior to receiving service. Then after 10 minutes of using the booth, the suspect exited the booth and started to yell at her about the 10-minute time limit and price of the tan. This witness said that the suspect appeared upset and exited the store.

The employee also saw the suspect open his trunk, remove a coat hanger and beat the dog that was in the car. The employee said that she could hear the dog crying during this incident. She said that the suspect drove away fast and almost struck the first witness. The employee called the Police. The employee also said that there should be security footage of the incident.

Back at the station, the Officer was able to locate a telephone number for the suspect. The suspect's mother said that her son was not home at this time. Officer Goldrick informed the mother of what transpired and she said that she owns the dog and currently had possession of the dog. She added that the dog was fine and unharmed. The mother did state that her son took the dog earlier to Stop and Shop in Quincy, adding that the dog had an accident in the car and he had to discipline the dog.

At approximately 12:19 PM, the suspect called the Quincy Police Station to tell his side of the story. He said, "Leah" an Italian Greyhound "s@#$ all over the car". The suspect then said, "You have to show emotion so they don't do it again." The suspect confirmed that he had a hanger in his car and that he swung it at the dog multiple times saying, "I tried to connect but I hit everything except the dog." He added that due to the small size of his car, every time he swung at the dog he hit part of the car. He also said, "Even if I did hit the dog, the small hanger would not have hurt it.

The suspect said that the dog was at his mother's house and declined to tell where he was or turn himself in to the police. The Quincy Police Detective Unit obtained security footage that captured this incident. Braintree Police were asked to locate the dog and check its wellbeing, to no avail. Based on the two witness statements and the suspect's failure to disclose where he was, the Officer completed a warrant for the arrest of the 66 year old suspect from Braintree for Cruelty to Animals. Nice Work!

RELIGION

World Communion Sunday, Sunday, Oct. 5

On Sunday, Oct. 5, Quincy Community United Methodist Church will join all United Methodist churches worldwide and celebrate World Communion Sunday.

World Communion Sunday is always observed on the first Sunday of October. The day was first observed by Presbyterians in 1936; the Federal Council of Churches adopted it four years later. Shortly thereafter, Methodist churches began to celebrate it.

"World Communion Sunday is a reminder that Christians throughout the world all share one sacrament in common: Holy Eucharist," the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of Quincy Community United Methodist Church, explained.

"We may refer to this sacrament in different ways such as 'the Lord's Supper' or 'Holy Communion,' we may celebrate it in may different ways, and we certainly hold many different beliefs concerning it. Nevertheless, this sacrament makes all Christians one."

At the morning worship service, held at 10:30 a.m., a variety of breads from various cultures will be placed on the altar. These breads will be used for Holy Communion.

After the worship service, a sandwich lunch will be held. The same breads placed on the altar will be used to provide breads for the sandwiches. Everyone is asked to bring a sandwich filling – luncheon meats, cheese, tuna salad, egg salad, peanut butter and jelly – to share in making the sandwiches.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is located at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston. It is easily accessible by public transportation: please exit the Red Line at the Wollaston stop. Parking is available in the MBTA lot.

All are welcome to attend the service. For more information, please call 617-773-3319.

'Showcase Your Ability Sunday' At Good Shepherd

Good Shepherd Church, 308 West Squantum St, North Quincy, announces that Sunday, October 5 its 10:30 a.m. Liturgy of Holy Communion will be designated as "Showcase Your Ability Sunday." The purpose of the designation is to create awareness and understanding that all people, including people with physical and mental disabilities, are valued within the Body of Christ, the Church, and have important gifts and abilities to share.

"The unfortunate reality is that all too often people with disabilities are ignored, abandoned, and rejected," said Pastor Nathan Pipho. "However, in Christ we are called to celebrate the worth and dignity of all people and to joyfully receive their abilities, talents, and leadership."

The Sunday is the second in a year-long program in which one Sunday a month reflects a theme of importance facing the community. The next themed Sunday will be "LGBT Asylum Task Force Sunday" on Sunday, Nov. 9 when members of the Task Force will share stories of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals fleeing from persecution in their home countries to find asylum in the United States.

For more information, please call Pastor Nathan Pipho at the church office at 617-328-8348.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A changing situation calls for a change in plans. Although you might prefer the schedule you had already worked up, you could do better by agreeing to make the needed adjustments.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That once seemingly rock-solid proposition you favored might be hiding some serious flaws. Take time to check it more carefully and question anything that seems out of kilter.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Finish up those lingering tasks so that you can then arrange to spend some time in quiet reflection. This will go a long way in restoring both your physical and spiritual energies.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A family situation could heat up and boil over unless you deal with it as soon as possible. Try to persuade other family members to work with you to help cool things down.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Cheer up, Kitty Cat! That low feeling will begin to ebb by midweek, and you should be back in the social swirl in time for the weekend. A long-postponed deal could be starting up again.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Going too fast and too far on too little knowledge could be risky. Best to slow down and check for any gaps in your information. It's what you don't know that could hurt you.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Trying to make peace among quarreling family members, friends or colleagues can be tough. Expect some resistance, maybe even some expressions of resentment. But stay with it.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Changing your mind doesn't have to be a problem once you realize that you might have good and sufficient cause to do so. Make your explanations clear and complete. Good luck.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unkept promise can be irksome and easily raise the Archer's ire. But instead of getting into a confrontation, take time to check why someone you relied on came up short.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A new workplace distraction creates an unnecessary delay. The sooner you deal with it, the better for all concerned. A personal matter also should be attended to as soon as possible.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Once again, the Aquarian's gift for applying both practical and creative methods to resolve a situation makes all the difference. Personal relationships thrive during the weekend.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A relationship appears to be losing its once-strong appeal for reasons that might be different from what you think. An open and honest talk could lead to some surprising revelations.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your life is bound by your belief that character counts more than anything else.

Recreation Department Arts & Crafts Displayed At City Hall Plaza

This year's Quincy Recreation Arts and Crafts display at City Hall Plaza saw Montclair Playground's "Balloon Up House" take first place while Labreque Playground's "Lady Labreque" took second.

Third place went to Mass Field Playground's "Revis Island."

Roughly 400 ballots were cast with a high voter turnout this year. In total, 16 parks competed.

Recreation leaders for first-place winner Montclair Playground were Taylor Mckay, Vincent Tran, and Jason Pekkinen. Participants included Marykate McDonald, Lindsay Lee, Meghan Greene, Josephine Campo, Maeve Keane, Julianna Currie, Connor Plante, Thea Bandzak, and Emmit Bandzak who spent many hours creating "Balloon Up House."

Second-place winner Labreque Playground team members were overseen by recreation leaders Katie Flaherty, Mike Gendreau, and Jimmy Brennick. Maggie Tierney, Rachael Higgins, Mason McDonough, Zach McDonough, Kevin Gomez, Zack Lugelle, and Coleman Quigley helped to create "Lady Labreque."

Only a few votes separated the first-place winner and the runner-up.

Sean Silva, Ryan Cox, Matt Eagles, and Matt Kelly helped create Mass Field Playground's third-place winner "Revis Island" under the leadership of Curran Jorgensen and Dom Venuti.

Arts and Crafts Specialists Katelyn Layden, Shelly Donovan, and Kara Reardon organized the displays.

Recreation Director Barry Welch thanked local merchants who supported the event for their donation of prizes for the winners. "Their generosity helps to make this event possible," he said. He went on to thank Balducci's House of Pizza, Baby Cakes, Schoolhouse Pizza, Carmine's Cafe, and Ginger Betty's Bakery who helped make this year's event tremendously successful once again.

Koch: Ban Smoking Outside City Hall

'Another Tool For Police To Stop Loitering'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Mayor Thomas Koch plans to submit an ordinance to the City Council this fall that would ban smoking outside City Hall and the area of McIntyre Mall that will become part of the new Adams Green park in 2016.

Koch said the smoking ban would help deter loitering and give police "another tool" to create a safer environment in the areas adjacent to the James R. McIntyre City Hall and City Hall annex.

The mayor said he plans to submit the order – which requires approval by the City Council – to the city's legislative body in the coming weeks.

Koch said smoking bans are widely used on school grounds, athletic facilities and even at MBTA stations, including the nearby Quincy Center Red Line station where smokers presently migrate to the areas outside City Hall, the mayor noted. The ban would help crack down on groups that smoke and turn rowdy, he said.

"I think (the ban) is another tool for the police to use," Koch said. "If you have a group of folks loitering out here perhaps not openly violating the law but you are suspicious about what's going on and they are all smoking, the police can say 'either put (the cigarettes out) or move along' and normally they're going to move along.

"I am not indicting everybody who smokes," Koch said. "There are some careful smokers who can make a decision about their own health as far as that goes but the place is loaded with cigarette butts and we're constantly cleaning as well.

"It's just another tool for the police to use. If there's a rowdy group out there,"

Attorney: Tasney Family Wants To Stay In Home
Mayor: 'I Won't Use Eminent Domain On This Property'

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will not force the owner of a Hunt Street home to sell his property to make way for a new parking lot to serve North Quincy High School and improvements to Teel Field.

When he unveiled his plan for the $12 million project, Mayor Thomas Koch said the city would need to purchase and raise nine homes – eight on Hunt Street and one Newbury Avenue. Six of the nine homeowners have already sold their properties, for which Quincy has paid a combined

Meeting Tonight On Ward 5 Crime

By SCOTT JACKSON

A meeting will be held tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. inside the auditorium of the Bernazzani School, 701 Furnace Brook Parkway, to discuss crime prevention and awareness in Ward 5.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes is hosting tonight's meeting. Representatives from the Quincy Police Department will be on hand to answer questions or speak to any concerns residents may have.

Tonight's meeting is being held in light of a recent shooting on Willow Avenue. That incident took place around 10:30 p.m. on Oct. 1. A woman sitting inside a car in her driveway reported hearing several popping noises, according to Police Capt. John Dougan, and then the window of her vehicle shattered. The woman was able to duck and run into her house, escaping with cuts on her hands from the flying glass. Dougan said the crime was not random and was linked to gang activity in Boston.

Hughes lives just down the street from where the shooting occurred.

Mayor Thomas Koch emphasized the shooting was not random and gang activity will not be tolerated in Quincy.

"The Quincy Police Department keeps a lot of crime out of our city. Whether it's attempting to keep drugs out or to keep gangs out, we have been very successful keeping gangs from getting any kind of stronghold in our city.

"Last Wednesday's incident was not random – first and foremost. This was gang-related. We are going to do anything and everything in our power to solve this crime in particular but also to continue to be vigilant about keeping this out of Quincy. We're not going to put up with gang activity here.

"We've had some issues over the years where the police have been well on top of it working with other agencies in Boston and they track these gangs and they know where they are going. This police department has done an incredible job making it very difficult for these people to even walk around in our city.

"I understand there are constitutional rights for people but we are not going to stand for (gang activity) in this community," the mayor added.

Koch To Seek Smoking Ban Outside City Hall

he said from his third floor office window," and they're all smoking that's another reason they can pull them aside and say 'put them out or move along.'"

The idea of the smoking ban was suggested by a Quincy police officer and comes in the wake of last week's fire at the McIntyre City Hall – a granite structure that has served as the seat of city government for 170 years. While the fire is believed to have been started by sparks created by a thief trying to cut and remove copper piping in the dwelling's basement, the mayor said the incident underscores the importance that the building and area should be an area that is safe and secure at all times.

"We are very fortunate this (city hall fire) was not a total loss. Had it been a total loss, it would have been devastating historically, architecturally. The firemen did a great job. It was contained. There was damage but it could have been a lot worse. Nobody was hurt and nobody was killed thank God," Koch said.

The three-alarm fire early Sept. 30 may have caused as much as one million dollars in damage, the mayor said. The fire itself burned floor and ceiling joists as well as wallboard, plywood and other materials. Water and smoke also created other damage. Two dumpsters outside the building Monday were filled with building materials that were charred or soaked by water.

The building's contractor – Nauset Construction – is working with insurance adjustors to determine what can stay and what must go from inside the building. Quincy Building Inspector Jay Duca will have the final say on what materials must be replaced and what can remain.

Koch said fire stops and a plywood floor that had been built between the first and second floors likely saved the building from being a total loss. The fire started in the basement and damaged part of the first floor.

"One of the things that was pointed out to me by the building contractor was our building department was very strict on the code and on the fire stops so there aren't opportunities for the fire to make its way into other areas. That saved the building," Koch said.

"If the fire had gotten through the plywood floor easily and into the second floor, the building would have been gone. If you lost the roof structure, it would have started to cave in," he added.

The contractor carries full insurance so the damages will be covered by insurance – the city is not responsible for any financial loss.

"The site is under the control of the contractor until it is turned back over to the city," Koch said. "As part of that they carry insurance on the whole job."

Koch also said the fire may set the $9 million renovation project back as many as three months. He is hopeful the project will be completed and the building opened by next May. Before the fire, leaders had eyed an opening in February.

"The damage dollar-wise I've heard estimates of $500,000 to $1 million. That's not by the insurance adjustor. That's by observations by people who know a little bit about the building trades," the mayor said.

"It will set back the project as much as three months. There's no urgency to get back into the building. We'd like to be in before next July 1st because that's the beginning of the fiscal year and we can move the City Clerk's office back to the City Hall annex and we can stop paying rent.

TWO DUMPSTERS have been filled with materials damaged in last Tuesday's three-alarm fire at the James R. McIntyre City Hall Building. The fire may have caused as much as $1 million in damages and will probably set the $9 million renovation project back three months.

Since the fire, security has been stepped up at the building and site.

New exterior lighting has been installed around the building and a private security detail remains on site. Plywood now fills the window spaces where new glass has not been set in yet to deter potential intruders.

Once completed, security cameras will also be set up to keep close watch on the McIntyre Building, City Hall Annex and surrounding area around the clock. Monitors for the cameras will be installed at the police station.

There will also be a full security system and a fire suppression system in the McIntyre City Hall. The historic building – built in 1844 - was designed by the famous architect Solomon Willard who also drew up plans for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown.

"Long before this fire happened, the new (Adams Green) park construction we planned on having cameras 24 hours a day, 7 days week throughout the park that will be up on a screen in the police station so that the park can be constantly monitored. There will be more security, more surveillance, more police activity," Koch said.

Koch also said he supports creating a new law or city ordinance that would require scrap metal salvage yards to hold materials that are sold for cash for a certain period of time similar to pawn shops and jewelry stores that buy gold and other precious metals.

"When stuff is turned in, it has to sit there a certain amount of time and there's ways for police to check some things so that if somebody goes to a scrap yard with some beautiful new copper pipe for scrap, that should raise an eyebrow and maybe there should be a waiting period.

"Somebody has to fill out a form stating who they are and then the material is checked out by the police. Maybe that should be a new state law," the mayor said.

5th Graders In Middle Schools Under Review

By KRIS KALABOKAS

An ad hoc committee that will address the issue of fifth graders in the Sterling and Point Webster middle schools will gather for their first meeting on a date to be announced during the regular monthly meeting of the Quincy School Committee on Oct. 8 at 7 p.m. in Coddington Hall.

There are currently 700 grade-five students in Quincy's public schools. Of those students, 92 attend Sterling Middle School and 90 attend Point Webster Middle School.

Concerns raised by school committee member Anne Mahoney and local parents at previous school committee meetings include the possibility of those grade-five students receiving a middle school curriculum too advanced for their grade level rather than a more appropriate, elementary level curriculum.

Also of concern was the fact that middle schools in Quincy do not receive Title 1 benefits, leaving Sterling's grade five students, as well as Point Webster Middle School's grade five students at a disadvantage over all other grade five students who attend Quincy's elementary schools.

Title 1 funds are awarded to schools with a high percentage of low-income students and can be put toward English proficiency programs for English Second Language (ESL) students or toward programs catering to children with special needs.

Clifford Marshall is the elementary feeder school for Point Webster while the Lincoln-Hancock Community School is the elementary feeder school for Sterling.

The public meetings will hold no open forums, however "the chair may invite parents to address the committee," said Assistant to the Superintendent for Communications and Operations Laura Owens.

School committee member David McCarthy will head the ad hoc committee.

Receives Commendation, Praise From City Council

Tony's Clam Box Recognized For 50 Years Of Business

By SCOTT JACKSON

The owners of Tony's Clam Box received a commendation Monday night from the City Council in recognition of the restaurant's 50 years in the city.

Antoine "Tony" Kandalaft and his wife, Matilda "Tillie," opened the popular Wollaston Beach clam shop in 1964. The Kandalafts – as well as their children and grandchildren who have all grown up working at the restaurant – were on hand Monday night to receive the commendation. Councillor Doug Gutro, who presented the commendation, said Tony's has become an iconic destination.

"Few institutions stay in business anywhere for 50 years, especially these days. Fewer still are iconic destinations in that community. Places where first dates happen, where relationships blossom, where anniversaries are celebrated, where youth sports teams assemble, where politicians and celebrities frequent, where food writers visit and rave about. Places that teem with activity deep into the night that draw long lines and earn rave reviews year after year after year. Tony's Clam Box is that place," Gutro said.

"It's as much a part of our identity here in the city of Quincy, I would argue,

Sterling, Honeywell Finance Topic Oct. 20

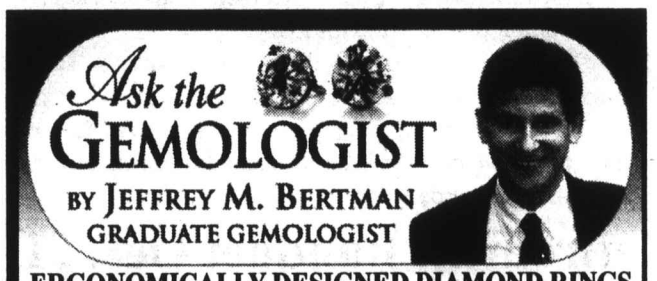
By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee will meet Oct. 20 to discuss bonds to pay for a feasibility study for the new Sterling Middle School and refinancing the city's Honeywell lease.

The two bond measures were referred to the finance committee at Monday night's council meeting. The committee is scheduled to meet Oct. 20 at 6:45 p.m., prior to the next full council meeting.

The Sterling bond order would allow the city to borrow up to $600,000 to study the feasibility of building a new school. That total could be offset by a grant the city could receive from the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) as part of a feasibility study agreement. The MSBA previously gave preliminary approval to build a new school with enough room for 430 students in grades 5-8.

The second bond order would authorize the city to borrow up to $24 million to pay the remaining costs of energy efficiency improvements subject to the current lease purchase agreement with Honeywell. The city currently pays $2.4 million annually toward the lease and hopes to save money on the interest rate by refinancing the agreement.



ERGONOMICALLY DESIGNED DIAMOND RINGS

Solitaire diamond engagement rings have traditionally featured upswept prong settings that hold the diamond high enough above the shank for light to enter the gemstone from all sides. Although this popular diamond ring setting beautifully displays a diamond to its best effect, it also has a tendency to snag on clothing and come in contact with hard surfaces. Because many active women find this positioning of the diamond to be limiting when it comes to everyday wear, some are choosing settings in which the center diamond sits down low. This creates a look that is not only elegant, but also ergonomic. That way, women are able to wear their engagement rings at work and at play after their "I Do's."

These settings are bigger and bolder than a classic solitaire and this vintage style is contemporary and completely of the moment. Essentially, all shapes and sizes of center diamonds may be accented with a halo. Last Hurrah For QHS Class Of '49

Classmates Celebrate 65th - And Final- Reunion

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy High School's graduating class of 1949 celebrated its final class reunion recently at the Common Market in Quincy.

Eighty-nine people – including 60 class members and 29 guests – attended the 65th reunion on Oct. 3, coming from as far away as Minnesota and North Carolina. Other classmates who now live further away in places such as Florida, Texas, and California, were unable to attend but sent their regards. Among those present was Charlie Pappas, the class president. He opened the reunion, saying he would miss meeting his fellow classmates.

"All good things come to an end unfortunately," Pappas said. "This is a great class. It was so good to see you all. I'm going to miss this every five years."

Some 491 students, who grew up during the Great Depression and World War II, graduated with the class of 1949. Jim Larkin, who travelled from Greenwich, Conn., to attend the reunion, said the 65th reunion was an incredible landmark for the class, which he described as incredibly cohesive.

"It's an incredible landmark for all of us. Very few classes have 65 years after graduation," Larkin explained. "We were an incredibly cohesive class. We were born at the height of the Depression. We had wonderful values that informed our whole lives. We're so grateful to be together and we're all great friends."

Lois Murphy of Houghs Neck said she had wonderful memories of her time at Quincy High. She noted many of her classmates went on to achieve great things.

"We had wonderful teachers that were so inspiring. Many of our classmates have gone on to achieve great things because of the wonderful education we had at Quincy High School," Murphy said. "I'm very proud of that."

"Some of us have incredible successes," Larkin, a retired vice chairman of American Express, added. "We have medical doctors here who are incredibly successful. We've got some wonderful people. The important thing is we all love and care about each other."

This year's reunion was the first since the old Quincy High School was torn down. Murphy said it was sad that the school is no longer standing.

"That's kind of sad. At our last reunion we were given the opportunity to tour the new high school and we appreciate the technology now but it was kind of sad to our old high school torn down," Murphy stated.

Larkin agreed, but added the new building is better equipped for today's students.

"It's kind of sad, but you've got to remember we were the class of '49. The high school was only 22 years old – it was built in 1927," he said. "Yes, it's always sad to see a landmark go but the new one is outstanding. Things have changed. The old one was not technically up to date. The new one meets all the social needs of our people today."

Murphy, a member of the committee that organized this year's reunion and ones before it, said the committee felt it was an appropriate time to have a final formal reunion.

"The committee has worked for a number of years. The committee has expanded and also lost members along the way. We just felt we're all about 83 years old and it might be kind of fitting to make this the last reunion," she said.

"However, we're leaving it open to people. If they would like to get together at another time and we're still here when we're out of school 70 years, we'll be willing to get together."

Her and her fellow committee members were thrilled with the turnout – more class members were on hand for the 65th reunion than the previous two.

"We're very happy with the turnout," Murphy said. "So many people made the effort. As you noticed, some people are in walkers. Some people are on canes. But they came. Two people – one from Minnesota and one from North Carolina – that's pretty impressive."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A January 1931 postcard of a press photo showing the burned out remains of the South Shore Rollerway that was on the corner of Vassall Street and Quincy Shore Drive on Wollaston Beach. Over the roof top can be seen a house on the left on Vassall Street and on the right the top of the Squantum Yacht Club. Built in 1925 among strong opposition by neighbors the building was to become home to a dancing casino named the Merrymount Ballroom. After one year of rowdy crowds, the city licensing commission denied its license in 1926. Used for a while as an exhibition hall by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, it was later converted into a roller skating rink. These burned out ruins remained a controversial eyesore here for a number of years. In the late 1800's and early 1900's this was the site of Stuart's Boatyard on the banks of Sachem Brook in the foreground. After this fire it became home in 1940 to Olindy's Boulevard Bowling Alleys later known as the Wollaston Bowladrome. Today, the Ocean Cove residential condominiums occupy this corner. READERS FORUM

Urges A Yes Vote On Question 2 Nov. 4th

Here is just a reminder for The Quincy Sun readers to vote YES on Question Number 2 on the Nov. 4th election. The Red Booklet mailed to the voters has an excellent summary on the bill on the YES side, explaining the benefits of this expanded bottle bill initiative. The YES vote will finally bring us to the 21st century and reduce the amount of plastics in our limited landfill spaces, and give economic opportunity to expand redemption sites.

Furthermore, the Expanded Beverage Container Deposit question number 2 YES makes total sense from the consumers' point of view and is self evident that we treat all returnables the same way, by placing a deposit on them same as all the carbonated beverage containers carry.

Our City of Quincy was one of the first one to endorse the expanded bottle bill law along with our legislators. More than 209 of the state's 351 cities and towns are on board to vote in favor of the expanded bottle bill initiative, according to MASSPIRG and Sierra Club.

Now the beverage industry is spending more than 5.5 million in ads to defeat the bottle bill. So, be aware of the so called "green commercial" the bottling industry is now funding. We call it "green washing" making us believe they are interested in the environment, when in actuality they are only interested in the bottom line.

This week when I brought my cans to the redemption center in Quincy, I was handed a reprint of the Boston Globe's, Sunday, Sept. 14th Metro edition columnist Yvonne Abraham's excellent article on this topic in favor of the bill. The new bill would also help out the recycling centers employment and better return for their work and keeping more plastics from the land fill. Thank you recycling redemption center personnel for your vigilance on this bill.

Abraham concluded her column by stating "The companies making the massive profits from the plastic containers want no responsibility for them once the drinks are drunk. They would rather that the burden be carried by municipalities and taxpayers."

Well said - please vote YES on Question 2 on Nov. 4th.

Thank You For Kindness And Care

At approximately 11:30 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 20, I tripped and fell on the corner of Chapman and Clay Streets in Wollaston.

As I was lying on the sidewalk, three women and a man stopped and helped me – a woman they did not know. One woman event stopped her car!

Who says that kindness and care are gone from today's world?

Whoever you are, I truly hope you see these words. I cannot thank you enough.

May God bless you!

Hong Kong Flu Threatens Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new flu epidemic – the Hong Kong variety – was expected to hit Quincy over the winter. It did not appear a special vaccine could be developed and distributed in time to head it off.

"It could become quite a problem here around Jan. 1," city health commissioner John T. Foley stated.

The strain of the flu broke out in Hong Kong in June. It soon spread, first to Honolulu and then to the West Coast by early September. Foley said a surveillance report pinpointed 23 cases at a San Diego Marine base, apparently brought back from the Hong Kong area.

Foley added a new vaccine was being developed to ward off the Hong Kong strain, but wouldn't be developed until after Jan. 1. Thus, he noted, the vaccine would not be available until the time the strain was expected to hit the East Coast, Quincy included, and the response to a vaccine doesn't set in until about two weeks after the vaccination was administered.

The Hong Kong flu primarily affected younger, active people. Older, less active people were more susceptible to a different strain known as the Asian flu.

The city, Foley explained, had placed an order for 4,000 doses of the Asian flu vaccine and hoped to receive at least some of that order within two or three weeks. The vaccine would be administered to those with chronic ailments and patients at nursing and rest homes.

Foley hoped to receive 2,000 doses of Hong Kong flu vaccine as soon as it was available.

USS WHALE COMMISSIONING PLANNED

The USS Whale (SSN-638), the first nuclear submarine built in the Bay State, was set for commissioning at a ceremony planned for Pier Two at the Quincy Division of General Dynamics.

U.S. Navy Rear Adm. Roy S. Benson, commandant of the first naval district, was to accept the submarine for the Department of the Navy and place it into commission. Commander William M. Wolff, Jr., a Michigan native, would become the sub's first commanding officer.

The Whale, measuring in at 292 feet long, was powered by a nuclear reactor. The Whale, a fast attack submarine designed to seek out and destroy enemy ships, was made to operate quietly and indefinitely at high speeds while completely submerged.

The Whale was named for a submarine of the same name that served with distinction during World War II. That submarine was credited with sinking nine ships totaling 57,716 tons during the war.

WHAT'S COOKING

with

Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Sandra's Mock Rum Cake

By MARIE

It was a family reunion with more than 100 relatives all enjoying a huge buffet of entrees, side dishes and desserts.

When I went back for dessert, I selected a creamy, luscious looking cake. So I asked around to see who brought it and found it was my cousin Sandra. She called it a mock rum cake. I tried it - and found it quite easy to prepare as well as light and delicious.

MOCK RUM CAKE

2 packages of anisette toast (biscottis) enough milk for dipping
1 package of vanilla pudding
1 package of chocolate pudding
2 tablespoons rum extract
chopped pecans or chocolate shavings for topping (optional)
Cool whip or whipped cream for topping.

Dip the anisette toasts in the milk. Place side by side in a single layer in a slightly buttered baking dish. Do not use instant pudding, but cook the vanilla pudding according to directions, adding a tablespoon of the rum.

Place on top of the anisette toasts, and refrigerate to cool. Cook the chocolate pudding and add one tablespoon of the rum. Place on top of the vanilla pudding and chill. For the topping, either cool whip or freshly whipped cream can be used. Sprinkle the top with nuts or chocolate shavings. Enjoy.

Cannellini Bean Dip

By SUZIE

Cannellini beans, particularly popular in Italian cuisine, are large white beans with a firm texture and nutty flavor. Cannellini beans may provide protection against colorectal adenomas (CRA). Colorectal adenomas are benign tumors that have the potential to become cancerous. In fact, adenomas are considered a major precursor of colorectal carcinomas, the third most common type of cancer in men and women.

Low GI foods such as cannellini beans metabolize slowly, and provide steady energy for hours following their consumption. This in turn helps stave off cravings for sugary foods and control mood swings. But the health benefits of eating low glycemic foods such as cannellini beans do not end there: low GI foods may also help forestall diabetes in pre-diabetic people and reduce your chances of developing cardiovascular disease.

Some of the health benefits of cannellini beans are linked to their high molybdenum content. Molybdenum is a trace element that plays an essential yet overlooked role in human health and aids in detoxification of the body. They are loaded with antioxidants, boost the immune system, and even contain properties that help to fight wrinkles!

Here is an easy and delicious recipe for Cannellini bean dip for you to enjoy ~

1 can drained and rinsed organic cannellini beans
1-2 cloves garlic
1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
¼ cup or so of fresh parsley

Simply place all ingredients in food processor and blend until creamy. Serve with veggies or whole grain crackers. Great for a mid day snack or as a side to a nice meal, or even topped on a salad.

City Would Build NQHS Project Around Hunt St. House

$2.945 million according to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds' database. A seventh homeowner has reached an agreement with the city but the sale has not yet been finalized.

The owners of 30 Hunt St., Lawrence and Vicki Tasney, are not interested in selling their house to the city, their attorney told The Sun Monday. Koch originally stated he would seek City Council approval to use eminent domain to force the sale of the home. In a recent interview, however, the mayor said he would not use eminent domain and would design the project around the Tasney property if they do not wish to sell it.

"I've had the engineers design a plan to go around them. If they are that attached to the home sentimentally I don't plan on using eminent domain on the Tasney home," Koch said.

"I don't plan on using eminent domain against somebody's will for the purpose of this project. If they want to stay, we will work with them."

Koch dismissed other reports that indicated he and City Solicitor Jim Timmins had not yet met with the Tasneys.

"The reality is the Tasney family is the first family I personally met in this office. Jim Timmins met with them in the office. They were the first to receive an appraisal and they've been kept in the loop," Koch said, noting they met as recently as last week.

"I resent the fact that there's an implication that we have not been communicating with the family. That is absolutely false."

The city, Koch added, has offered fair market value for the property as well as moving costs. Negotiations will continue for the time being.

"My solicitor has been instructed to continue negotiating with them but if it's true that they are really attached to the home, we will build the project around them. They can stay in their home. We'll build a fence around their home, we'll landscape around it, and I am not going to use eminent domain to take their home," Koch said.

"I am not taking people's homes without their consent."

Under the mayor's plans, the Tasney's property and the others on Hunt Street would have been demolished to make way for a 157-vehicle parking lot. If the family stays, Koch said the number of parking spaces would be reduced.

Renovations to Teel Field itself would not be affected.

William Phelan, an attorney and Koch's predecessor as mayor, has been representing the Tasneys during negotiations with the city. Phelan said the family has never intended to sell the home and are happy living there.

"The Tasneys were never interested in selling their house. They're concerned with the way it's been portrayed. They feel it was unfair for the city to file to do work at the Conservation Commission without asking their permission as required by the law," Phelan said Monday.

"They just want to stay in their home. They've been there many, many years and they're happy there."

Koch said eminent domain might be needed for the city to acquire the other Hunt Street property whose owners have not yet reached an agreement to sell. That property, he noted, is part of an estate and using eminent domain could help smooth out the legal process.

"There is another home – it's not a hold out – it's an estate. There are a number of siblings involved," Koch explained.

"They all want the home to be sold but the legal process is more complicated. It may be easier – and they will agree to it – that we do a taking for that to clear some of the legal process. I might use eminent domain in that case because legally it makes sense and both sides would agree."

In addition to approval from the City Council, the Quincy Conservation Commission has already signed off on the project. The state's environmental agency, however, is appealing the latter's approval of the project because the city did not submit the signatures of the nine homeowners. Koch downplayed the significance of the state agency's appeal.

"That's a very minor issue that we will work through. It's not so much an environmental issue; it's more an administrative issue on the land ownership," Koch said.

"This is an improvement for the area environmentally and I don't see that as a problem."

Timmins said Tuesday the city has been working with the engineers on the revised paperwork to submit

Arlene Goldstein Joins Health Alliance

By SCOTT JACKSON

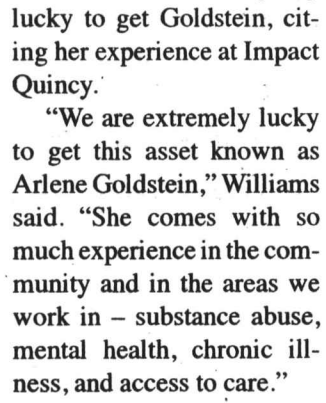
Arlene Goldstein, the longtime program coordinator for Impact Quincy, has joined an organization that aims to improve health in Quincy and 12 other communities.

Goldstein, who served as the program coordinator for Impact Quincy for six years, left the organization after the Drug Free Community Grant that funded her position expired on Sept. 30. The next day, she went to work at her new position as the program manager for Blue Hills Community Health Alliance (CHNA 20). CHNA 20 provides services to Quincy and a dozen nearby communities – Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Norwood, Randolph, Scituate, Sharon, and Weymouth. Goldstein has been a member of CHNA 20's steering committee for five years – including time as both secretary and then vice chair – before becoming its program manager.

"In the public health world you're dependent on your funding," Goldstein said soon after starting her new job.

"I was lucky to be involved in another organization and fortunate to apply for and get an new job."

The Blue Hills Community Health Alliance is one of 27 community network health areas across Massachusetts; each one focuses on identifying needs in participating cities and towns and figuring out how to address those needs and improve health in the community. Goldstein said there would be a large amount of overlap between her position at Impact Quincy and her new one at CHNA 20.



ARLENE GOLDSTEIN

"My position has a tremendous amount of overlap with Impact Quincy," Goldstein said, noting she would be primarily concerned with substance abuse, mental health, chronic disease and wellness, and access to care and services.

As CHNA 20's program manager, Goldstein will be working closely with Kym Williams, the organization's community health specialist. Williams called the group lucky to get Goldstein, citing her experience at Impact Quincy.

"We are extremely lucky to get this asset known as Arlene Goldstein," Williams said. "She comes with so much experience in the community and in the areas we work in – substance abuse, mental health, chronic illness, and access to care."

As part of its mission, the Blue Hills Community Health Alliance distributes grants to community groups operating within the 13 communities falling under its purview. So far this year the organization has awarded seven grants totaling $33,500 including $5,000 for Point Webster Middle School's positive and safe school climate program; $5,000 to Quincy College for its empowering veterans enabling success program; and $5,000 to Health Imperative's school-based sexual assault project in collaboration with Quincy Public Schools and Quincy College.

"We have a history of supporting many, many great programs in the community," Goldstein said. "We're planning on much bigger community grants with much more zeroes in it."

The Blue Hills Community Health Alliance receives funding from the state Department of Public Health (DPH), South Shore Hospital, Quincy Medical Center/Steward Health Care, and Dana Farber.

DPH funds that are distributed to the Blue Hills Community Health Alliance and its counterparts throughout the Bay State come from determination of needs (DoN) funds. When health services providers undertake large capital projects, they pay into the DoN fund, which is then allocated by DPH.

Memorial Flags Flying At Mount Wollaston Cemetery

Many U.S. Flags that have covered the casket of a loved one are sitting and collecting dust or packed away some place as many families cannot use them and do not know what to do with such a large flag.

Quincy Veterans Services receives many calls throughout the year as to just what can be done with the flags as it is much too large for their flag pole at their residence. Quincy Veterans Services is working on a program with the Cemetery Department. When flags are turned into QVS, we will store them until they are needed at the cemetery for replacement.

QVS will receive the flags from family members. However, QVS requests you put the Name and Branch of Service (i.e. John Jones, Army) of the Veteran on the white binding of the flag so we may print the name in The Quincy Sun for the family to be aware that their loved one's flag is flying.

The flag flying currently at Mount Wollaston Cemetery is in memory Robert Trahey, U.S. Army.

Any questions, please contact Quincy Veterans Services at 617-376-1192.

Spread Litter Awareness, Not Debris

I am writing to you on behalf of the trash and littering issue currently occurring all over Quincy Center. As a life time member of this city, it pains me to see our beautiful, historical home being disrespected in such a careless way. By writing this letter, I hope to gain awareness and allies for the large clean up our city is desperately in need of.

I propose that the people of Quincy reserve a day at the beginning of each fall and spring seasons to clean up the trash that accumulates throughout the winter and summer months. By cleaning the sidewalks and parks, our community will benefit by decreasing health and pollution risks, gain connectivity with neighbors by working side-by-side, and rediscover a strong sense of pride for our city.

By spreading awareness of the trash littered throughout Quincy Center and beyond, our community can work together to restore our home to its original, clean, glory.

Training Mission For What?

The recent invasion of two fighter jets into Quincy included the flight of one plane flying at a low altitude over my building.

The Marine Corps claims that this is a training mission flown at a normal altitude. Training for what? Normal altitude for what? A bomb run over American cities?

The report stated that the flights had nothing to do with Michelle Obama's visit to Dorchester. I note that the plane that flew over my building turned to fly over Dorchester. What was that about?

I think back to World War II. What a terrible time that must have been for everyone. The difference is the American homeland was never in threat of invasion. Now we have terrorists and the Ebola virus.

Boston is infamous as the transit point for the 9/11 bombers and the Boston Marathon bombing. Medical personnel in this country claim that Ebola could never become be an epidemic in this country. Is this whistling past the graveyard? The influenza epidemic of 1918 became a horror. The Marine Corps is required to provide a better explanation than training mission.

Our feckless politicians should protest against the militarization of our skies.

Meeting Was A Disgrace

The meeting at Central Middle School was a disgrace.

Found out it was a done deal by the Alcohol and Drug Phoenix people. Was said by the mayor and some zoning commissioner guy "nothing can be done about it."

Why make me a fool with some window dressing meeting?

Something can always be done about it.

Citizens have the right to petition, and of course, to vote.

I know who I am not voting for.

More Money For What?

I read in The Quincy Sun that our city council is giving Tom Koch more of our money for what? The council gave taxpayer money for the cross town connector, that was not voted on by the voters, as well as money for the buildings that we lost in downtown Quincy.

We also lost the old Quincy High School as well as three businesses for a new middle school, not to mention the proposed loss of nine homes for a parking lot and ball field for North Quincy High.

We are also losing parking in front of city hall for a park (Adams Green) that was not voted on by the taxpayers. This city is supposed to be an historic landmark, not a blight on the map of history. We don't have a democracy, we have a dictatorship.

Neponset RiverWalk: City's Newest Attraction

2-Mile Trail Open To The Public

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The official opening of the Neponset RiverWalk was celebrated with a ribbon cutting ceremony at the Adams Inn gazebo last Tuesday at noon.

Following 12 years of work, the 2-mile long stretch of walkway along the Neponset River shore was opened to pedestrians, bicyclists, and fishermen.

"It felt to me like a child being born," said Steve Pearlman, Advocacy Director of the Neponset River Watershed Association, a conservation group working to clean and protect the Neponset River, its surrounding tributaries, and watersheds.

The entire walkway connects the Adams Inn gazebo to Squantum Point Park while the half-mile portion just completed connects the Boston Scientific building at 500 Commander Shea Blvd. to Squantum Point Park.

Features of the RiverWalk include a gazebo over water next to the Adams Inn, access to Neponset Landing Park, a natural beach behind the Boston Scientific building with a canoe and kayak launching area with free parking available just a few hundred feet away on Commander Shea Blvd., benches, fishing spots, and views of Boston from Squantum Point Park.

Bicyclists are free to traverse the entire walkway except for a portion that narrows besides the Adams Inn.

"In a sense, it began in 1994 with the successful nomination by the Neponset River Watershed Association to have the state designate the entire Neponset River Estuary as an Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC)," said Pearlman.

An ACEC is a place considered to have significant natural and cultural resources.

Conceptual plans for the walkway were then published in 2002 by local environmentalists and the association.

At the ribbon cutting ceremony was the author of those plans, Wendy Ingram.

The project, which was approved by the state in 2011, was made possible through the acquisition of $98,000 in Community Preservation Act funds last year. An additional $32,000 was provided by the association. In total the recently completed portion cost $130,000.

Work isn't complete on the RiverWalk said Pearlman. The association is currently trying to extend the walkway around Billings Creek; a tributary of the Neponset River.

Plans in the longterm call for an extension all the way to the Granite Avenue Bridge in Milton and Boston.

"Physical and financial constraints must be overcome before that can happen," said Pearlman.

His association will be organizing volunteers to maintain the walkway at least annually he said, but over the long-term he may need to request help from the city for major maintenance projects. The Department of Conservation and Recreation will maintain a large portion of the walkway while the Adams Inn and owner of the Neponset Landing Apartments are obligated to maintain the portions of the walkway that are on their land.

He hopes the promise of beautiful views and scenic paths will bring people from outside the area to Quincy.

"The RiverWalk is open to everyone and will hopefully be an attraction that will draw visitors to the city," he said.

The Neponset River Watershed Association created an extension trail connecting Squantum Point Park to 500 Commander Shea Blvd. with a $98,000 granted in 2013 from the Community Preservation Act fund. The trail is now officially open to the public. Photo By Lisa Aimola to the Department of Environmental Protection. He does not expect any major issues arising from the agency's appeal of the permit.

"The reason for the state appeal was primarily over the issue of who owns the land," Timmins said, noting the Conservation Commission approval came as the city was in the middle of purchasing the homes.

"Because there was confusion on that issue, DEP wants us to get that straightened out. Once we do, I expect there will be no real problems."

The mayor anticipates work on site beginning this winter. Teel Field will be surcharged, meaning it will be covered in up to eight feet of fill to compress the earth.

"The surcharging has to happen first before the construction of the field," Koch said. "I haven't spoken to the engineers if the parking area has to be surcharged. Most of those [properties] are higher up so I'm not sure where the line is for that."

The surcharging at Teel Field, the mayor added, could begin regardless of whether or not the city has purchased all nine homes. Koch said he hopes the affected homeowners would be moved out before the spring.

As part of the city's plan, Teel Field will be given a new artificial playing surface, grandstands with room for 600 people, a scoreboard, concessions, and lighting and sound systems. In addition to the field renovations and parking lot, retaining ponds will be added to alleviate flooding concerns in the neighborhood. Koch aims to have the project completed by next fall.

"The goal was to be open in the fall of 2015 for the use of that facility," he said. "It's going to be a tough task to meet that but it is still the goal."

Quincy Climate Action Network Joins 400,000 In New York For People's Climate March

Local residents and members of Quincy Climate Action Network (QCAN) recently took part in the People's Climate March in New York City.

QCAN members Rob Baker, Sarah Belfort, Gaëtano Belfort, Mike Cotter, Christine Grundy, Cyndy Roche-Cotter, and Rebecca McWilliams joined Sustainable South Shore and 350 Massachusetts members for the long trip by bus. In New York, they met up with 400,000 concerned men, women and children from all corners of the U.S. and the world, to march in an urgent call for immediate action on climate change, ahead of the UN Climate Summit on Sept. 23.

While marching, QCAN founder Rebecca McWilliams was interviewed for a segment on Wall Street Journal Online.

"This March is even beyond anything I expected. It is the largest climate march in history," said McWilliams. "Equally amazing are the diverse groups that are here today speaking up to demand action from our policy makers. People are realizing that climate change is a game changer for us all.

"We saw survivors of Superstorm Sandy marching, and we thought, if we don't act now, that could be Quincy. But if we can bring this level of energy and enthusiasm about climate change home to our neighborhoods over the course of the next year, we can change the tide."

The Quincy contingent held a QCAN banner and a sign stating "Your legacy, your grandchildren's earth. What will you say YOU did?" McWilliams added, "To mitigate the effects of climate change, it starts with individuals. Each of us can choose where we buy our energy, our household products, and our means of transportation." Consider yourself challenged to leave a sustainable legacy, Quincy.

Quincy Climate Action Network works to preserve and protect the coastal and global environment for future generations by promoting energy conservation, energy efficiency, and the use of renewable energy by private citizens, business, and government. Recent QCAN projects have included: collaborating with the City of Quincy on the RFP process for the installation of solar panels on 22 public building rooftops; assisting with the city's application to the Solarize Massachusetts program; and working to educate residents about taking advantage of free home energy audits through MassSave to reduce their home energy costs and carbon output. To Benefit Germantown Neighborhood Center

Stop & Shop $25,000 Donation Sponsors YMCA Gala Nov. 1

Stop & Shop Supermarket Company LLC is celebrating its 100th year anniversary by giving back to their New England headquarters community of Quincy.

Interior Decorating Tips With Barbara Graceffa

My partner and I have very different tastes. How can we make an eclectic style work to make us both content with our surroundings?

MaryJane

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear MaryJane,

Eclectic can mean different things to different people. To some, it's the mixing of two different styles, like choosing favorite pieces of formal furniture while adding country accessories. To others, it's shabby chic, vintage, or flea market style. In reality, eclectic is self-defining because its very nature is in the blending itself.

It does take considerable thought and care to make an eclectic style look attractive. First, keep in mind the principles of good design: harmony, balance, scale, comfort, function, and room layout. Second, eclectic homeowners know how to layer patterns, textures, fabrics, and colors. Third, add contrasts, like stained and painted furniture or traditional and contemporary elements together in the same room. Finally, many of the best eclectic homes are built over time (or assembled with items collected over time.)

If you are just starting out to build an eclectic room, find big-ticket items like furniture and area rugs you both like. Go shopping together at import stores, antique shops, or review catalogues or online sources together for window treatments, lighting, and accessories. Be sure to incorporate family furniture or keepsakes you love, souvenirs or artwork you have purchased together on vacations, and consider adding a touch of humor.

Eclectic rooms are never boring, stuffy, staged, or look like they jumped right out of a catalog or showroom. More often, they are playful, full of personality, artistic, even quirky. If you follow the principles above and fill a room with things you love, they will go together. If you still feel you need help, call a decorator. You wouldn't believe how often an interior decorator plays mediator or even marriage counselor. Sometimes you just need an extra set of trained eyes to pull everything together.

Dear Readers:

I'd like to send a shout-out to the members of the Houghs Neck Garden Club who organized a terrific house tour recently.

I enjoyed touring six very distinct homes from Sea Avenue to Bayview and chatted with many Quincy Sun readers at the Nut Island Community Room about my decorating column. If you have never attended a house tour, you are really missing a great opportunity to view well-put together homes and to meet loving homeowners who want to tell you all about their successful remodels or decorating adventures.

Presidents Sack S-L, Roll In 28-14 Win

By JOE REARDON

Quincy has been averaging well over 20 points a game on offense and has been beating the teams it's supposed to, the sign of any solid football club at any level of play.

The Presidents went ahead and did it again in impressive fashion last Friday night, showcasing an array of weapons on both sides of the ball.

Quincy showed Patriot League opponent Silver Lake that its undefeated squad is much more than just its star quarterback James Lam. The undefeated Presidents have weapons across the board and that was brutally evident to the Lakers in Quincy's 28-14 win.

Playing in misty conditions at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, Lam needed to air it out only eight times, but was spot on as he connected on six passes for 88 yards. He ran for a touchdown, hooked up with Jake Bergonzi for a four-yard score and hit Andrew Cook with a 20-yard touchdown strike.

Jahvae Handsom-Fields picked up 67 tough yards on the ground and scored from four yards out with 1:21 left to put the Presidents up 21-7 and smother a Lakers team that played far better than their record shows.

Quincy Blanks Hingham, Headed To Tournament

By BILL GRIFFIN

Before Monday's match against Hingham, Quincy volleyball coach Jacqui Niosi talked abut her 12-1 team.

"What I like best is that every time out we play good volleyball. A team can win and not play well. That's not us. It's not just one or two players. A lot of different player have stepped up, and I have confidence in all of them," she said.

Niosi was true to her words in the Presidents' 3-0 win over the Harbormen. In the first game with her team trailing 19-18, Niosi took out her most powerful net player, junior Nicole Jorgensen. Seconds later with the score tied, she rested her best all-around player, senior Emma Kelly.

It was a close match against a quality opponent, but Niosi sat two of her finest for important points because all her kids can play. Alicia Walker spearheaded a terrific all-around effort which snatched away the first game and carried Quincy to a close, well-played 25-21, 25-18, 25-21 decision in a Patriot League match.

"We have a lot of options, a lot of depth, and the bench has been awesome all year," said Niosi whose team has won 11 matches by straight sets, qualified for the state tourney for the seventh straight year and, in the league, is a game behind Duxbury who handed Quincy its only loss of the season.

The Presidents won because they played the big points well. Walker's passing and Sarah Gibbons' serving saved the first game. Walker had two assists to Jorgensen and Gibbons and an excellent tap volley to finish the second set. Tien Le served well, and Jorgensen and Angela Hoti took away the net as Quincy rallied from down five points to win the third and sweep the match.

"I would have liked to see us play a little faster, but I liked the way we stayed calm in a close match. Hingham is very good, and we had to keep our poise to beat them," said Niosi.

Walker was the best player on the floor. The junior setter spread the ball around (24 assists) among Quincy's talented front line, kept countless balls alive, served hard and well three aces), and made the play of the match when she made a no-look, over-the-head finish for a clean winner in the second game. She served eight straight winning points to start the second game and rolled off six straight to rally Quincy from a 16-14 hole to a 20-14 lead in the third.

"Alicia's played well all year. This is her first season on varsity, and she has a good all-around game. She has an aggressive serve and she used that well today," said Niosi.

Jorgensen and Kelly have had solid seasons and played well against Hingham. Jorgensen (13 kills) has expanded her game in her third year on varsity as a junior. She has more than a slam which finishes points. She passes and serves well. Her decision-making is better. Kelly (six digs) controls the flow of the match, and anchors the backline by using speed and instinct to simply get to everything.

"Nicole is playing much smarter this year. Emma is so fast and she anticipates well," said Niosi.

There is more than just Jorgensen up front. Hoti (four kills), Gibbons (eight kills) and junior outside hitter Maggie Parker (six kills) give the Presidents a good mix of mobility, touch and power. That meant 31 kills spread among four players against Hingham. It is hard for opposing teams to focus on Jorgensen because Walker has more than one option for her soft, accurate sets.

"Angela and Sarah are our two middles and they really compete in practice. It's fun to watch them go at it, and it has enabled us to build good depth," said Niosi.

Niosi points to team defense as the hallmark of the season, and it was a big key in the win over Hingham. Quincy does not like to see the ball hit the floor. The Presidents hustle, skid and dive to keep alive points, and when a team like Quincy has the power to finish, the effort pays dividends.

"Our defense has been an important part of our season. We work to keep points alive. We had to against Hingham because they don't ever stop either," said Niosi.

Quincy hosts Plymouth South Friday for Senior Night, and has a rematch with Duxbury at home Tuesday.

North Quincy Rallies To Defeat Hanover, 3-2

By JOE REARDON

Bumps, bruises and a potpourri of injuries have been commonplace for the North Quincy volleyball team this season and have been a huge reason the team's chance at playing into the postseason is all but over.

Still the Red Raiders are a feisty bunch and have found ways to stay competitive in the Patriot League while trying to get healthy and building some semblance of momentum going forward.

Kerry Ginty's club showed plenty of moxie Monday at home, coming from behind to defeat a young Hanover team 3-2 with several young players at positions they're not entirely familiar with.

And although it's been a down year for the Red Raiders, the team has been making strides and showing improvement, despite its 4-8 record.

"I'm real proud of the kids," said Ginty. "A lot of our kids are young and a lot of them have been called up from JV. Some of them have been thrown into roles they're just not used to playing. They've been able to jump in and play well and get the job done.

"We had some ball control issues (tonight) which have kind of been hounding us all season. When we took care of the ball and kept it in control we did quite well. When we didn't it was kind of ugly."

Among the injuries that have befallen North Quincy are concussions, which are somewhat rare in volleyball. The Red Raiders have had three players sidelined with the condition - almost unheard of for the sport at the high school level. The team was struck another blow yesterday when senior Camille Mullaney was forced to the bench with an ankle injury.

There have been several bright spots for the Red Raiders so far this fall. Senior Molly Minton has stepped up her game and is having a strong season. Against the Indians she put up a pair of aces, five kills and 14 digs. Sophomore Remy Aucoin finished with a pair of blocks, three kills and four digs while senior Dana Grasselli had a monster evening with a career-high 29 digs. The freshmen contributed as well with Julia Klincewicz's four kills and five blocks and 15 assists from Jennifer Butka.

Aucoin and Klincewicz were instrumental in the Game 1 win, garnering points at the net to lead the Red Raiders to a 25-20 victory. Hanover caught North Quincy on its heels in the second game. The Red Raiders did take a brief 11-10 lead, but Hanover complied a cool 11-1 run and scored the final four points for the 25-15 decision.

The Indians put North Quincy in a 2-1 hole with a 25-21 victory in the third game, but the Red Raiders gathered themselves for strong performances in the final two games for the win. Trina Liang, one of the talents that Ginty pulled up from the JV team, dropped in a point to put the Red Raiders up for good at 23-22, on the way to taking a close 25-23 victory. Liang made her presence felt on the court with nine digs. North Quincy never had its back against the wall in the fifth game, taking an 8-7 lead and carrying it out to a 15-9 victory.

Next up for North Quincy is a very capable Plymouth North team tomorrow (Friday) at 5:30 p.m. at NQHS. New to the league this season, Ginty doesn't know much about the squad, but does know it has a lot of talent.

"We have to make due with what we have," said Ginty. "We've faced a lot of adversity, but we're getting better every day. We're doing our best and having fun. The kids that are coming in are getting great experience. That's one good aspect of it - if there is a bright side to it. I don't ever like to see kids go down."

Other upcoming games for the Red Raiders:

Monday, North Quincy hosts Brockton at 5:30 p.m. and Tuesday the Red Raiders host Middleboro also at 5:30 p.m.

Quincy Youth Football Week Five Highlights

Panthers Remain Unbeaten, Elks, Manets Post Victories

By SEAN HALPIN

Quincy Youth Football opened Week 5 action with the Houghs Neck Manets (3-1) hosting the Milton Mustangs. The Manets scored on their first possession when Nate Steinberg ran for and 8-yard Touchdown. Jake Galligan kicked the extra point as the Manets took an early 8-0 lead.

Manets DE Jake Zisk recovered a fumbled snap at the Milton 5-yard Line. Manets QB John Early hit James Keenan on a 5-yard TD pass and Galligan kicked the extra points, as the Manets extended their lead 16-0.

The Mustangs fired back, as the KR Smith Charles returned the kickoff 72 yards for a TD and closed the gap to 16-6. On the next series, Manets RB Steinberg capped off a long drive with a 10-yard TD run. Late in the second quarter, Jake Zisk tackled the Mustangs RB in the end zone for a safety to put the Manets ahead 24-6. The Manets scored again just before halftime as James Dutcher ran for 5-yard TD. Galligan's kick was good and the Manets took a 32-6 lead at Halftime.

The Manets scored on their first possession of the second half, as QB Shane Murphy hit WR Kendrick Peeples on a 9-yard TD pass to put them up, 38-6. The Mustangs answered with a 60-yard TD run by Smith Charles. Mustang QB Liam Reagan passed to Stephen Joyce for the conversion as time ran out.

The Houghs Neck Manets defeated the Milton Mustangs 38-13. The Manets will face the Squantum Storm Sunday at 2:30 p.m. for the Desmond Division Title.

The North Quincy Apaches battled the West Quincy Elks in Game 2 of the afternoon. The Elks scored early in the second quarter as QB Colin Keaveney hit TE Patrick Devoy on a 7-yard TD pass. Eoin Gormley kicked the extra points for an 8-0 lead at halftime. Early in the second half, the Apaches mounted a long drive, capped off by an 8-yard TD run by RB Win Tran. Nate Sleiman rushed for the conversion as the Apaches closed in on the Elks lead, 8-7.

Late in the fourth quarter, Elks RB J.J. Camara scored on a 1-yard run. Camara added the conversion as the West Quincy Elks defeated the North Quincy Apaches for their first win of the season. The Apaches will face the Quincy Point Panthers at 1 p.m. and the Elks battle the Milton Mustangs at 4 p.m.

The final game of the afternoon featured a battle of two undefeated teams as the Quincy Point Panthers (4-0) hosted the Squantum Storm (4-0). Squantum took an early lead when FB Josh Jackson caped off a long drive with a 2-yard TD run. The conversion failed but the Storm led 6-0. On the ensuing series, Storm DB, Andrew Airosus intercepted a pass halting the Panther drive to the end zone. The storm failed to capitalize on the turnover and punted.

The Panthers took the ball and drove it deep into Storm territory. Panther QB Michael Lomanno capped off the long drive with a 2-yard TD run. Lomanno passed to Mark McKenna for the conversion as the Panthers went ahead, 7-6 over the Storm. Later in the second quarter, Aiden O'Connell recovered a Storm fumble but, the Panthers failed to convert as the half ended.

The Storm came out in force in the second half. Storm FB, Jackson capped off the opening drive with a 1-yard TD run, to take 12-7 lead. Both defense played strong throughout the second half. Late in the fourth quarter, Panther QB Lomanno hit Andy Ryan in stride for a 50-yard TD pass. Lomanno passed to Ryan for the conversion and the Panthers on top, 14-12. The Storm took the ball, trailing by two points with 3:27 left on the clock. The Storm drove the ball into Panther territory when DB Andy Ryan intercepted the Storm to seal the victory, 14-12.

The Quincy Point Panthers (5-0) won the Myers Division title and secured the #1 seed in the playoffs. The Squantum Storm (4-1) continue to lead the Desmond Division and will battle the Hough Neck Manets for the Division crown next Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

the ball effectively," said Quincy head coach Bill Reardon. "They gave us a lot of different looks and threw a lot of blitzes so we didn't run the ball as well as would have liked to. Fortunately we have James Lam, Reda Laftih our receiver and Andrew Cook has really been a pleasant surprise so we can throw the ball."

The win upped Quincy's record to 4-0 on the season and moves Reardon's squad one game closer to a possible playoff berth. And although the playoffs are in the back of the team's mind, Reardon wants his team to focus on its mental mistakes and keep getting better with every game played.

"We'd all like to say we can make the playoffs, but I think once you start thinking that way you get into trouble," said Reardon. "We really just have to go one game at a time. We'll worry about that (playoffs) when it happens. I'm pleased that we won. I'm not pleased with the turnovers and we had way too many penalties. We can't win games going forward with that many penalties.

"They're (penalties) something we can fix. It's a mental thing. I'm concerned that we have them, but I think we can correct them. We have to correct them because we have Plymouth North next week and they're pretty good. We have to be a little crisper and execute a little better."

Silver Lake is another one of those teams that plays hard, but has nothing to show for its talent on the field. At 0-4 overall this season, the Lakers still managed to do some good things on field against the Presidents.

After Quincy went three and out on its first series, Silver Lake went to its no-huddle offense and was successful in moving the ball. The Lakers got all the way down to the Presidents' 26-yard line before talented two-way player Jake Bergonzi stepped in front of an Alec Snell pass for the interception and a return to the 49-yard line.

The Lakers' quick no-huddle attack didn't faze the Presidents, who were ready for the hurry-up offensive scheme. "That's their offense," said Reardon. "We knew they'd go no huddle. We were definitely expecting it and we threw in some new wrinkles tonight to kind of counteract that."

The Presidents sputtered on offense on the series, but faked the punt on fourth down and Lam, who also handles Quincy's punting chores, connected with Bergonzi for a 36-yard pass and a first down at the Silver Lake 12-yard line. Lam rolled to his left one play later and sprinted in for the score. Laftih drilled the point-after kick and the Presidents led 7-0 with 4:24 left in the opening quarter.

The gritty Lakers came back on their first series of the second half and capped an eight-play, 58-yard drive with Xavier Dillingham plowing his way up the middle from the 2-yard line to make it 7-7 with 8:43 remaining in the half.

Armani Cardoso proceeded to give the Presidents great field possession on the ensuing kickoff, racing 32 yards to the Lakers' 48-yard line. Handsom-Fields was instrumental in the drive, picking up 36 rushing yards, before Lam hit a wide-open Bergonzi in the end zone for a four-yard score. Lam wasn't able to get back in the end zone on the two-point conversion rush and the score stayed at 13-7 with 3:40 left until the break.

A tipped pass and interception by Laftih gave the Presidents the ball back at the Lakers' 35-yard line. Lam rolled to his right and hit Laftih with a big 23-yard completion and a first down at the Silver Lake 12-yard line, but Quincy coughed up the ball on the next play and the Lakers recovered it in the end zone for a touchback.

Defensive end Steve Scolaro and lineman William Young broke through the Laker line and dropped Snell for sacks on Silver Lake's next two possessions to stall both drives.

The Presidents' best drive of the game came in the third quarter when the offense burned 8:07 off the clock on a 12-play, 66-yard march that was capped off by a four-yard run by Handsom-Fields. Lam completed a pair of passes for 29 yards on the series and then connected with Andrew Cook on the conversion pass to put the Presidents up 21-7 with 1:21 to play in the third quarter.

A Lam to Cook 20-yard scoring play with 4:20 left in the fourth put the Presidents up 28-7. The Lakers got in the end zone for a second time with time running out as Snell hit Adam Gay with a 13-yard pass and Matthew Haite added the PAT to make it a 28-14 contest.

"They played very well tonight," said Reardon. "I give (head coach) Mike Aveni and their coaching staff credit. They always seem to play us tough. Silver Lake always plays us tough and tonight was no different. They came out playing hard and finished up playing hard."

Quincy travels to Plymouth North Friday night. Kick off is at 7 p.m.

Fall Automotive Care

Ask John Paul: AAA's Car Doctor

Question: I have a 2003 Toyota highlander and recently had new front brakes installed. This included pads, rotors and calipers. My question is concerning the calipers; is it normal to replace calipers when replacing pads and rotors and what causes and under what circumstances are calipers replaced?

Answer: Calipers, the part of the braking system that provides the clamping force when stopping can fail due to rust. This rust is generally caused from moisture contamination of the brake fluid. Considering your Highlander is 11 years old replacing the calipers was most likely money well spent. If a brake caliper replacement is needed they should be replaced in pairs to provide equal braking performance.

Q. I'm trying to help of a friend of mine with a 2000 Buick LeSabre. None of the power windows on the car will go up or down. Can you tell me what I need to check or what it might be?

A. This diagnostic and repair is not as simple as it once was. Even this 14 year old car uses a computer to run the windows. Start with the basics such as checking for a faulty fuse or broken wire. The driver's door has a large cluster of wires that run to it and over the years of opening and closing the wires can break. The windows motor/controls are powered by discreet power and ground circuits. Just to give you an idea on how the windows work the driver's door module receives a request from the window switch over a "data" line, if the status information is correct only then does the window open. This system can even generate a computer fault code to help with diagnosis.

Q. Recently when I use my defroster/air conditioning my car starts staggering/chugging pretty badly. Any thoughts as to what this might be? It's an old but well cared-for 2000 Neon with 140,000 miles, without any others problems.

A. The air conditioner puts additional load on the engine. If the engine is starting to miss-fire this additional load may be exacerbating the condition. To find the problem a technician will test both the ignition system and fuel system. A worn spark plug or faulty fuel injector could be the problem.

Q. I own a 14-year-old Nissan Maxima and my catalytic convertor is glowing red hot after about 10 minutes of driving. My SES light is on, after a lot of research on line it seems that the oxygen sensor may be an underlying cause. Do I need to replace all three catalytic converters? How do I find out which oxygen sensor is bad? I'm trying to keep costs down and don't want to buy any unnecessary parts. I was told by a mechanic I only needed to replace the front catalytic convertor. This car only has 98,000 miles and I don't drive much. What should I do?

A. I would start with finding a new repair shop. Replacing the catalytic converter without finding out why it is getting hot and turning red is just a waste of money. A good technician will check the car's computer, read the fault codes and use a diagnostic flow chart to verify the problem, find the cause, and finally repair the car. Go to www.aaa.com for a list of AAA Approved Auto Repair facilities. These AAA shops will warranty their work for 12 months or 12,000 miles and in the event of a problem a AAA representative will look into the matter and mediate any issues.

Q. Someone I know was listening to your radio program and you were talking about a "waterless" cooling system. When I asked for more details they didn't have any, what were you talking about?

A. The product is a liquid coolant that uses a solution that doesn't use water in the mixture. The product is from Evans Coolant, when there is no water there is a much less chance of corrosion, overheating and less pressure buildup than a mix of 50/50 water and conventional antifreeze. Tips From AAA

AAA offers tips on how to speak 'auto tech' to improve auto repair experience

A trip to the auto repair shop can feel like visiting a foreign country for some motorists—they do not understand the language and are worried about being taken advantage of by the locals. However, AAA says a trip to the repair shop can be much easier—and less stressful—by selecting a quality facility and learning to speak 'auto tech.'

When communicating with an automotive technician, AAA recommends motorists do the following:

• Before taking the vehicle to a repair facility, write down notes on the vehicle's symptoms and performance so important information is not overlooked or forgotten. Include any observations, even if they seem silly or irrelevant.

• Describe the symptoms to the technician rather than solutions. Explain what has been seen, smelled, heard and felt while driving the vehicle. For example, does it vibrate or pull to the left? Explain under what type of driving conditions the problems takes place and how long ago it started.

• Try to be precise. Such as explaining a rattle under the hood starts at 40 mph or an issue occurs only on cold days after the engine has been running for 10 minutes.

• When describing symptoms, refer to the driver side and passenger side instead of the right or left side of the vehicle.

• Resist the temptation to use technical jargon unless absolutely sure what it means. Explain what is being experienced in terms that do not direct the technician to a single solution. This will help eliminate unnecessary or ineffective work being performed due to misinterpretation or misdiagnosis.

• If the vehicle has been serviced recently, bring copies of the previous repair orders rather than trying to explain what work was done.

There also are some things motorists can do to help protect themselves from unexpected charges or unneeded repairs. AAA recommends motorists:

• Ask questions if the technician uses jargon that is not understood or if something is not clearly explained. A quality auto technician should be willing to take time to clearly explain the problem in advance of the repair and the proposed solution. If the technician does not explain the problem and the remedy in a clear and convincing manner, or suggests the repair is too complicated to explain, consider seeking a second opinion from another shop.

• Always read the repair order before signing it and authorizing any work. Look for specific instructions detailing the maintenance to be done, or the condition to be corrected and work to be performed. If the language is vague or unclear, such as 'fix engine noise,' ask that it be rewritten. In some cases it makes sense to ask that a diagnosis be performed and an estimate provided before a final repair is authorized.

• Read over the bill, and question any charges that are not clear. Insist on descriptions of parts, not just the serial numbers; be listed on the final invoice. In some cases, motorists might want to specify in advance that the shop will show them the parts that are to be removed and replaced on the vehicle.

• In Massachusetts the final bill cannot exceed the estimate by more than 10 percent without the customer's prior consent.

• Before authorizing a repair, be sure to obtain a written description of the warranty the shop provides, including the warranty on parts as well as labor. Most repairs should carry a warranty of at least 12 months and 12,000 miles.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, Sept. 26, at approximately 8:10 p.m., Quincy Police Drug Control Detectives Powers, O'Brien, Keenan, and Duran were working in plain clothes and operating unmarked police cruisers in the Nelson Street area due to complaints and past drug arrest activity.

At this time, Detective Duran observed a vehicle (1) pull up to 40 Nelson Street, which is well known for complaints about ongoing drug use and distribution. Several drug related search warrants have been executed at this apartment complex and several drug arrests have been made in connection with this apartment complex. In addition, numerous evictions have occurred there. Vehicle 1 pulled to the rear of the building and then turned around, facing out towards Nelson Street with its lights on and engine running. Vehicle 1 was occupied by a male driver and a female passenger. Within 5 minutes, another vehicle (2) pulled to the side of the road in front of 40 Nelson Street, where a male wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt jumped out of the driver's seat and ran up the driveway towards vehicle 1. The two drivers walked towards each other and briefly met, then walked back to their vehicles. Both vehicles then drove off. Detectives Keenan and O'Brien followed the vehicle 2 and encountered the occupants while it was stopped in traffic at the intersection of Copeland Street and Furnace Brook Parkway. They approached the vehicle and identified themselves as "Quincy Police" with their badges conspicuously displayed around their necks. In addition to the driver, the owner of the vehicle was seated in the passenger seat and her two children, ages 5 and 3 were in the back seat.

Detective O'Brien noticed that upon seeing the Police, the driver reached his right hand down and attempted to stuff items between the driver's seat and center console. Detective O'Brien could see a cell phone and money but was unsure if the driver was attempting to conceal a weapon, so he instructed the driver to exit the vehicle. Upon exiting, the driver grabbed the cell phone and the money and passed it to the passenger, (later identified as the driver's sister.) The driver stated that he did not have a valid driver's license and denied meeting anyone at 40 Nelson Street. He stated he ran into his apartment to get his cell phone charger. Meanwhile, Detectives Powers and Duran with the assistance of Sergeant Mike O'Shea, stopped vehicle 1 on Granite Street at Gordon Terrace. Detective Powers approached the driver and escorted him from the vehicle. After advising him of his Miranda Rights, the driver stated he understood. Detective Powers asked the driver, "Where is it?" The driver responded, "It's gone - I swallowed it." The driver of vehicle 1 admitted to Detective Powers that he had just purchased a $30 bag of Crack Cocaine from a male he knows in the driveway of 40 Nelson Street. He said he got out of his vehicle and was actually startled because the seller ran up the driveway and he didn't see him at first. He added that he swallowed the Crack Cocaine when he noticed a marked police cruiser behind him. He was able to spit up the glassine baggie of white substance up that he stated he purchased, which was taken as evidence. Detective O'Brien took a picture of the seller and sent it to Detective Powers, who in turn showed the picture to the buyer, who positively identified the photo as the person he purchased Crack Cocaine from. The buyer and passenger were advised that would be summonsed to court regarding this incident and sent on their way. The seller, a 33 year old Norwell resident, was placed under arrest and charged with "Distribution of Class B (Crack Cocaine - Subsequent Offense, he was previously found guilty of Distribution of Class B in Suffolk Superior Court in 2011), Conspiracy to Violate Controlled Substance Laws, Operating a MV After License Revocation. (Subsequent Offense) He also had an outstanding warrant for his arrest from Dorchester District Court. He had $194 and a cell phone which were seized pending civil forfeiture. The mother and the two children were sent on her way and a report was submitted to the Department of Children and Families. Nice Work!

DOWN UNDER SPORTS: is a mail solicitation congratulating high school students for their accomplishments in a specific sport. The letter then states that you have been selected to represent the Eastern United States in a tournament in Australia. This is a questionable practice as seen online when you put the word "scam" after the company name. In reality, if your son or daughter gets this letter and is not playing at a top 20 college level, it should be clear that this is a scam.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new relationship needs time to develop. Let things flow naturally. It could be a different story with a workplace situation, which might require faster and more focused attention.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Accept a compliment without trying to troll for any hidden reason beyond what was said. After all, don't you deserve to be praised every now and then? Of course you do.

QCAP Best Chef Challenge At Granite Links Tonight

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) invites guests to cook up some fun at its Third Annual Best Chef fundraising event tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

Some of the area's most celebrated chefs will compete against each other in a battle of culinary skills. The event, hosted by Dave Andelman of the Phantom Gourmet, features the talents of Chef Ming Cao of the Fuji Group; Chef Tony Derienzo of Abby Park; Chef Joel Hathaway of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy; and Chef Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove and Wahlburgers.

"We are so grateful to the chefs, their restaurants, judges, and our supporters for contributing their talent, time, and resources to this event," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's executive director. "Thanks to their efforts, we hope to have a fun and exciting night while also raising critical funds so that we can continue to deliver our core services."

The challenge: In a race against the clock, the chefs must use secret ingredients commonly provided by QCAP's Emergency Food Center – the organization's food pantry. Using only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, they must take these basic ingredients and create a gourmet dish for a panel of judges. The judges will score them based on taste, originality, use of secret ingredients, and plating. The chef with the most points will be crowned "Best Chef."

"These are ingredients that our clients use on a daily basis to create healthy and tasty meals for their families, all within a very limited budget," Strollo said. "Making a healthy meal is a challenge for any family and it's even harder when you have limited resources to buy food."

The judges won't be the only culinary connoisseurs that night. Guests can weigh in on their favorite chef in the "People's Choice" competition. The participating chefs will be providing dishes that reflect the flavors and styles of their own restaurants. Guests can sample their dishes and vote for their favorite chef.

"Each chef and restaurant brings a different perspective and flavor profile so our guests will certainly be in for a treat," Strollo said.

The night will also feature raffles and live and silent auctions, including a week vacation in Aruba; two sets of Putnam Club seats to the New England Patriots; a diamond necklace valued at $2,500; a family excursion package to the Great Wolf Lodge; autographed memorabilia; sporting and entertainment event tickets; fine art; and golf, restaurant, and spa gift certificates.

Tickets are $100 per person and $175 per couple. Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, which serve nearly 20,000 unduplicated people annually in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull, and surrounding Norfolk County, South Shore, and Metro Boston communities. Services also include adult education and workforce development, financial literacy education, Head Start early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, mortgage foreclosure counseling, and housing services.

Major sponsors include Bank of Canton, Stop & Shop, State Street, Woodard & Curran, Granite Links, the Law Office of George Burke, Eastern Bank, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane, Mutual of America, Loomis & Sayles, and Quincy Mutual, among others.

For more information on QCAP and to purchase tickets, visit www.qcap.org.

Mass. AFL-CIO Endorses Mariano

House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy) has been endorsed by the Massachusetts AFL-CIO in his re-election campaign for the 3rd Norfolk House District.

Rep. Mariano said, "I am honored to accept this endorsement from the AFL-CIO, and I would like to thank them for their advocacy and support on behalf of working citizens across Massachusetts. Throughout my whole career and for the past two years, it has been my priority to help hard working people provide for themselves and their families. Working families are the cornerstone of our community, and I hope to continue to support them in the session to come."

During the 2013-2014 legislative session, Representative Mariano and the House of Representatives passed laws to protect the rights of low-wage workers, strengthen safeguards against wage violations, and create more opportunities for economic growth and job creation across the state.

Earlier this year, the state legislature approved a bill that will increase the minimum wage for the first time since 2008 and provide much needed reforms to the state unemployment insurance system. Under this new law, the minimum wage will rise incrementally every year until it reaches $11.00/hour by 2017. The law also extends the statute of limitations for minimum wage and record keeping violations to ensure that all low-wage workers will be protected by the Massachusetts wage and hour law.

On the employer side, the same legislation updates the rate table and institutes a three-year rate freeze for unemployment insurance. These reforms are projected to provide Massachusetts employers with additional savings of up to 29% each year.

The state legislature also passed the Domestic Workers' Bill of Rights, legislation that establishes basic workplace protections for housekeepers, nannies, caretakers, and domestic workers whose workplace rights have historically been ignored. Under new laws, domestic workers will be legally entitled to meal breaks, rest periods, and overtime protections

Other highlights from the session include:

- Establishing workplace health and safety standards to bring Massachusetts state employees under federal OSHA protections.

Spillane Law Celebrates Cal Ripken Minors Championship

Coach Mike Sullivan's Spillane Law team recently collected their championship trophies at the Cal Ripken - Minors Banquet. Spillane, led by American League MVP and Skills Competition Winner Mike Lomano, and Coaches Choice Award winner Luke Lamonica, went 10-3 in the regular season and were undefeated in the playoffs. In an exciting Championship Game, the outcome was decided on a last at-bat steal of home by Lomano. Spillane received great pitching all year from Cooper Hansen, Luke Lamonica, and Jake Lamonica, as well as timely hitting from Anthony Sullivan and Ben Akarra. Providing stellar defense were Mike Costello, Sam McGahan, Joe Race, Dylan Rizzo Ben Snyder and Mike O'Connor. Spillane defeated a gritty 21 Lacrosse team to qualify for the Championship.

Kenny's Lock took home runner-up trophies. Coach Ron Donovan's Cinderella- story team was led by Thomas McGovern, Ben Fehan, and Jack Fehan – though it was a complete "Team" effort. Kenny's Lock (6-6-1 regular season) defeated a strong Kip Orlando Club (11-2) to reach the Championship.

Also receiving honors at the banquet were: National League MVP co-winners Joey Murphy (Kip Orlando Club) and Jason Whalen (21 Lacrosse); Gilmartin Award/ Exemplary Player Cameron Douglas (Quincy Credit Union); AL All-Star game MVP Tim Pick (Bank of Canton); and NL All-Star MVP Joey Murphy (Kip Orlando Club). Receiving "Coaches Choice" Awards from their respective teams were: Thomas MacPherson (Chetwyn Club), Joey Murphy (Kip Orlando Club), Liam Dugan (21 Lacrosse), Ryan McCarthy (Quincy Credit Union), Alex Ireland (Koch Club), Dillon Donahue (Paul Rogers Club), Tim Pick (Bank of Canton), Thomas McGovern (Kenny's Lock), and Matthew McFarlane (Flavin & Flavin).

Fire Department Promotions

$94,700 Grant To Purchase FF Protective Equipment

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Fire Department recently received a $94,700 grant, which will be used to purchase new protective equipment for the city's firefighters.

The department received the grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) as part of the agency's Assistance To Firefighters Grant program. FEMA will provide 90 percent of the grant, equal to $85,230, and the city will provide a 10 percent match worth $9,470. The City Council approved the 10 percent match Monday in an 8-0 vote, transferring the money from the Fire Department's equipment line item.

The funds will be used to buy approximately 35 sets of new protective gear worn by firefighters, allowing the Fire Department to complete a program of replacing outdated gear, according to Fire Chief Joseph Barron. The grant will also provide enough funds to purchase new boots for each firefighter.

The Fire Department also promoted three members Oct. 3.

Capt. John Cadegan was promoted to deputy chief; he will serve as the shift commander when he is on duty. Cadegan joined the department in November 1985, was promoted to lieutenant in September 2007 and then to captain in July 2011.

Lt. George Wirtz was promoted to captain and has been temporarily assigned to the department's training facility inside the Fore River Shipyard. Wirtz was appointed to the Fire Department in June 2003 and promoted to lieutenant in November 2008.

Firefighter Christopher Lewis was promoted to lieutenant and was temporarily assigned to Engine 8 in Germantown. Lewis was hired as a firefighter in March 2006.

"They've worked very hard," Barron said of the newly promoted officers.

"I've sat down with each. They understand the full weight of the job they're taking on and they're prepared to do that."

as the Granite Trust or Remick's or Clifford's Flowers – all places that have really put us on the map commercially. People flock here, to the city of Quincy, for our history, our coastline, and yes, our clams. And they've done so for 50 years."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes recounted going there as child and taking her own son there now.

"It truly is just an absolute institution here in Quincy. We were always excited to see those cardboard boxes with the grease stains on the bottom – we knew we were getting a treat," Hughes said. "It's just a wonderful place to celebrate – wonderful food, wonderful atmosphere, but a great group of people working behind the counter."

The Kandalafts son, Gary, said it has been a pleasure to have been open so many years.

"It's been a pleasure for us to be here all these years. The city of Quincy means so much to us. We love it here and we're happy to have been a big part of this whole city," he said.

"We really appreciate this recognition and we're so happy to be here. I don't know if we can make another 50 but we'll give it a shot."

KAILASH SATYARTHI (center) of India, a 2014 recipient of the Nobel Peace for his decades of courageous work, often risking his life to fight against child labor, has a connection to Quincy. Broad Meadows Middle School students participated as American representatives in Satyarthi's 1998 'Global March Against Child Labor.' He invited the Quincy students to join him in that historic march against child labor because of their success in raising awareness and funds to establish a school for Iqbal Masih in Pakistan. In this photo, taken in New Delhi, India, during the second Global March Against Child Labor organized by Satyarthi in 2002, then-Quincy High student Mai Pham (right) represented the U.S. and marched with representatives from 100 nations. Following the march, Satyarthi congratulated Pham. She was selected to participate in the march because of her leadership of Operation Day's Work-USA at Quincy High School. Ayers: Allow Public Access To Long Island If New Bridge Built

3,400-Foot Bridge Closed For Extended Period Of Time Due To Structural Concerns

By SCOTT JACKSON

One member of Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill believes Long Island should be re-opened to the public if a new bridge is built.

Rep. Bruce Ayers – who represents Squantum, the neighborhood vehicles coming to and from Long Island must travel through – has spoken to both Boston Mayor Martin J. Walsh and Rep. Nick Collins, a South Boston Democrat whose district encompasses Long Island since the bridge was closed by Boston officials Oct. 8.

Ayers said a feasibility study to weigh alternate means of accessing the island should be undertaken before a new bridge is built. If public funding is used to build a new bridge, he added, the public should be able to access the island. Long Island, which houses a homeless shelter and other social service facilities, has been closed to the public for years.

"A feasibility study should be completed on alternative means of transportation to the island before any decisions are made or money spent; $90 million could prove to be better spent on the relocation and improvement of the services that were run on Long Island," Ayers said in a statement Tuesday.

"The idea that last Wednesday afternoon's closing of the bridge was not inevitable makes no sense. This validates what Quincy officials and Squantum residents have known for years. There was no backup or evacuation plan for some of the most vulnerable people in the city. If any public money is used for repairs or transportation to the island, it should be opened up to the public.

QMC Prepared To Handle Ebola Virus

Takes Steps To Protect Patients, Staff, Visitors

By SCOTT JACKSON

Officials at Quincy Medical Center have taken steps to protect patients, staff, and visitors from the Ebola virus.

"Patient safety measures are in place at Quincy Medical Center and throughout the Steward system," Sandra McGunigle, the hospital's director of public relations, said in a statement Tuesday.

"We are educating and training our staff about the symptoms, prevention and treatment of the disease. We are actively screening patients who have recently traveled from Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone for any potential symptoms of the disease. We have safety measures in place to protect patients, caregivers and visitors."

No cases of Ebola have been reported in Massachusetts. On Sunday, a man who had recently traveled to Liberia arrived at a Braintree health care facility complaining of a headache and body aches. Based on those symptoms and the man's travel history, the facility was quarantined and the man transported by ambulance to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, where he was placed in isolation. Later that same day, the Boston Public Health Commission announced the unidentified man did not fit the criteria for being considered at high risk for Ebola.

More than 4,000 people in Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone have died from Ebola during the current outbreak, according to the World Health Organization (WHO). There have been more than 8,300 cases of Ebola in those three countries.

Among those who have died from Ebola was a man who contracted the disease while in West Africa and then traveled to Dallas. He was asymptomatic while travelling back to the U.S., but developed symptoms four days later. He died Oct. 8. A nurse in the hospital who treated the man later contracted the virus.

Symptoms of Ebola, according to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), include high fever (greater

Franklin Resident Deborah Finnigan Served As Infrastructure Engineer For Town Of Dedham

New Traffic Engineer Appointed

Mayor Thomas Koch today appointed a civil engineer with experience on major projects in both the public and private sectors as the City's new traffic engineer.

Deborah A. Finnigan who most recently served as an infrastructure engineer for the Town of Dedham and as a senior traffic project manager for the private firm VHB, takes the position left open by the retirement of long-time traffic engineer Jack Gillon earlier this year.

The position currently pays $101,000 annually.

"Deborah brings a great deal of experience, creativity and passion to this important position, and I am thrilled that she is joining our team," Koch said.

Prior to joining the Town of Dedham in 2012, Finnigan managed and engineered federally funded transportation projects for VHB in Vermont, including performing traffic impact studies for local municipalities.

From 2005 to 2010, Finnigan was a transportation engineer for the City of Portsmouth, N.H., where she served as a technical advisor to the City's traffic and safety committee and the Planning Board. She also served as a transportation engineer for the Town of Framingham and as a senior traffic engineer for Parsons-Brinkerhoff, Inc. in Boston.

She holds a bachelor's of science in civil engineering from the University of Vermont and is a registered professional engineer in Massachusetts.

A resident of Franklin, Finnigan's role will range from reviewing and making recommendations on neighborhood traffic issues and coordinating traffic signals citywide to providing technical recommendations on major proposals before city regulatory agencies.

32 Condos Approved For School St., Brook Rd. Site

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The application of the Heritage Companies, Inc. for the construction of 32 condominiums in a three-story building at 168 School St. and Brook Road was approved at last Wednesday night's meeting of the Planning Board after engineers said the new development would cause no significant traffic delays in the area.

"The traffic for this is actually pretty minimal," said Erica Guidoboni, a project transportation engineer with Greenman-Pedersen, Inc.

The empty, 4.9 acre parcel is located at the intersection of School Street, Fort Street, Brook Road, and Pleasant Street.

Garry Gardner of Shes-key Architects noted that the intersection was a "confluence of almost every street in Quincy it seems."

"While it looks strange, there's no sight line issues or level of service issues," said Guidoboni.

Each luxury unit will have 7-foot-high and 5-foot-wide windows to allow significant sunlight to enter the building said Gardner.

Ceilings will be 9-feet-high.

An open parking structure with access off of Brook Road underneath the building will accommodate 53 vehicles. Surface spaces will accommodate 13 vehicles.

Each unit will be allotted two spaces.

The entire building will be handicap accessible and bicycle storage will be made available to residents.

Each floor will house 16, apartment-style condominiums.

"We call them apartments because essentially they are single dwelling units on one level," said Gardner.

Of the 32 units, 12 will have one bedroom,18 will have two bedrooms, and two will have three bedrooms.

The one-bedroom units will measure between 800 and1,000-square-feet. Two-bedroom units will range between 1,100 and 1,250-square-feet and the three-bedroom units will be roughly 1,200-square-feet in size.

The building will measure 35-feet in height.

"I think it's wonderful that something is being done about the vacant lot," said board member Coleman Barry. "Fort Square is an area on the upswing. We've had projects that have recently kicked off there; projects in addition to yours that are about to kick off. It's very important that we get this right," he said.

In the event of major snowfall, a company will be hired to haul the snow off-site said principal of the Heritage Company Michael Kiley.

Project engineers stated that water runoff would not worsen with the construction.

Planning Department Urban Renewal Planner Robert Stevens, who reviewed the application, recommended approval of the project citing satisfaction with the traffic plan and storm water mitigation efforts by engineers.

"A big concern of a lot of the residents has been the flooding in this area and I believe that this project is not making it worse," he said.

Hours of construction and delivery will be Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and no construction or deliveries will take place Sunday.

Incident Linked To Two Boston Gangs

Increased Police Presence Following Shooting

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Police Department has increased its presence in a Wollaston neighborhood following a shooting earlier this month linked to two Boston gangs.

Police Chief Paul Keenan addressed a crowd of more than 50 residents during an Oct. 9 public meeting on the shooting, which took place Oct. 1 at 62 Willow Ave. The chief told residents the victim in that attack is the girlfriend of a Boston gang member; a rival gang is believed to be behind the attack.

The Police Department is working with the owner of 62 Willow Ave., a former police officer, to have the woman removed from the apartment she had been living in, Keenan explained. Marked and unmarked police cars – from both Quincy and Boston – have been surveilling the house since the shooting and will continue to do so after the woman moves out.

"We will keep a presence in the neighborhood until they're gone and after probably. We will keep an intense presence," Keenan said. "We will keep a presence. We have so far since it happened and we will continue to do that."

The Quincy Police Department's drug unit, community police officers, and anti-crime unit have been patrolling the neighborhood since the shooting, according to Lt. Dan Minton.

"We have a lot of resources out there," he said.

If the woman chooses to leave the apartment voluntarily, Keenan said she could be out as early as this week. If not, the landlord would have to go through the courts to get her evicted, a process that could take a month to play out. Keenan told concerned residents the neighborhood remains safe for children to play outside and for trick or treaters on Halloween.

"I still believe the neighborhood is safe. We will work to get those people out of the neighborhood and increase that layer of safety and the safe feeling that you did enjoy there before that," the chief said.

"We're working, like I said, to get rid of those folks. Once they're gone the issue is over. We will work to make sure that happens."

The shooting took place Oct. 1 at approximately 10:30 p.m. The victim was inside her vehicle when she heard several pops and then

A TASTE FOR HONEY

If you think that royalty only wear diamonds, rubies, emeralds, and sapphires, you should know that one of Duchess Kate Middleton's favorite pieces of jewelry is her set of citrine pear drop earrings. Set simply in gold, these vibrant gemstones add a pop of color to the face. One of the most valuable and popular gemstones in the quartz group, citrine derives its name from its lemon-yellow color, although the most desirable citrines have a clear, radiant yellowish to brownish red hue. This beautiful, eye-catching gemstone rates a 7 on the Mohs hardness scale and is highly resistant (if not impervious) to scratching. Because its cleavage properties (the tendency to fracture) are non-existent, citrine can also take hard knocks.

Citrine, one of the birthstones for November, is also known as the "healing quartz". It is said to support vitality and health while encouraging and guiding hope, energy and warmth within the wearer. Citrine is frequently found in Brazil, Bolivia, and Spain. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, to select the perfect birthstone jewelry that is right for you or as a special gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Nobel Peace Prize Recipient Has Connection To Quincy

By RON ADAMS

Congratulations to Kailash Satyarthi of India on his selection as a 2014 Nobel Peace Prize recipient.

There is a Quincy connection to Kailash and his decades of his courageous work, often risking his life to fight against child labor.

The Quincy Sun's July 2, 1998 edition featured a multi-page spread of the Broad Meadows Middle School students and their participation as U.S. representatives to Kailash Satyarthi's "Global March Against Child Labor." Quincy students were invited by Kailash to march with him in this historic march against child labor because of their success in raising awareness and funds to establish "A School for Iqbal Masih" in Pakistan.

Two years later, Broad Meadows students, members of the school's "ODW-USA After School Activism Club," worked again with Kailash when the Quincy students were honored presenters and workshop leaders in 2000 at the NEA's "Teaching Child Labor Symposium" held in Washington, DC.

Educators from across the country participated.

Kailash led a workshop and was the keynote speaker.

The attached photo shows Kailash and two of the Broad Meadows/ODW-USA students embracing after their presentations and workshops concluded.

The Broad Meadows Middle School's annual campaign against child labor is now celebrating its 20th anniversary of after-school-activism against child labor.

The Broad Meadows anti-child labor annual campaigns were inspired by the December 1994 school visit to Broad Meadows by human rights hero and former child slave Iqbal Masih of Pakistan.

ODW-USA has spread to Quincy High School, Archbishop Williams High School, Silver Lake Regional Middle School, the Davis Elementary School in Arkansas, the Newton Middle School in Vermont and to Thetford Academy in Vermont.

Collectively, these ODW-USA member schools choose a "Charity of the Year" to partner with and the purpose of the annual partnerships is to help change the lives of some of the world's most vulnerable children through education and/or health care.

The 2013-2014 ODW-USA Charity of the Year partner is Nina Smith's and Kailash Satyarthi 's GoodWeave organization.

Now known as ODW-USA, students involved have voted in 2013 to partner with GoodWeave-INDIA to rescue, rehabilitate and educate dozens of vulnerable children in 3 villages in the Uttar Pradesh region of India. Kailash Satyarthi and Nina Smith co-founded GoodWeave years ago.

Kailash has built global coalitions involving numerous organizations and governments. ODW-USA is proud to be one of the groups who actively worked then and now with Kailash to help in the ongoing global effort to end forced, abusive child labor.

An overview of the 20 year-long Broad Meadows Middle School's kids' campaign against child labor is available in the four short videos found at www.odw-usa.org

Kailash Satiyarhi was just named a recipient of the 2014 Nobel Peace Prize. Tom and Kristen were student leaders in ODW-USA. THIS IS A 1950's postcard view of one of the George H. Peterson's fuel oil delivery trucks. At this time home heating oil was about 13 cents a gallon delivered. George H. Peterson's Inc. was founded in 1928 as a full service fuel oil and oil burner sales and service company. Home oil burners were relatively new at the time the company started. Their office and showroom were at 99 Granite Street in Quincy Center across from and next to the Grossman's properties. The site is now home to a senior citizen apartment building. Brett, Hannon Speak Out

By SCOTT JACKSON

The preservation of open space and attracting new business to Quincy highlighted a forum between the two candidates in November's mayoral election – Joseph E. Brett and Walter J. Hannon.

The two candidates answered questions posed by students from Quincy High School and the Vocational Technical School. Brett said he favored new industries but stressed concern over preserving open space. Hannon emphasized the need for new industries and the revenue they would bring to the city.

Brett, who spoke first at the forum, cited his concern for preserving open space.

"I am conservationist," he said. "I am opposed to the reckless destruction of our open spaces. By this I mean our woodlands, our golf courses, and our playground facilities. I want to see these areas kept clear."

"I am not against the idea of industries coming to Quincy," Brett added. "We are going to have a demand for more building as Quincy becomes a larger metropolis. But it comes down to a question of losing our open spaces. I believe that all our open areas should be preserved."

Hannon opened by supporting incoming industries.

"Over the past few years, fiscal power on a citywide basis has been limited due to collective bargaining and other programs," he stated. "Because of this, cities have had to look for other sources of revenue.

"Such sources are incoming industries. The Jordan Marsh Warehouse, which I was most instrumental in bringing to Quincy, brings tax money into the city and also makes new jobs available. The new State Street Bank complex will also bring tax money and create 5,000 new jobs.

"We need new school and new facilities. We could ask you (the students') parents, as taxpayers, to pay for these things. I think a better plan would be to have someone else pay."

The forum was organized by Quincy High School's Social Studies Department, headed by John Harrington. The idea began in an attempt to interest, involve, and educate students in city affairs. Rep. Clifford Marshall moderated the event.

15% TURNOUT SEEN IN WARD 1 ELECTION

Six candidates – four Democrats and two Republicans – were vying to fill Arthur H. Tobin's seat in the House of Representatives. Tobin left the House after winning the Senate seat vacated by James R. McIntyre.

The Democrats running were Thomas H. Brownell, Thomas J. Buckley, William A. Dwyer, and Paul D. Harold. John W. McGowan and John J. McNally were on the Republican ballot.The two winning candidates would face each other in the final election Nov. 16.

Climate Action Network Supports Updated Bottle Bill

Quincy Climate Action Network enthusiastically supports Question 2, the updated bottle bill, on this November's ballot. If approved, the measure would require deposits for bottled drinks like water, juice, and iced tea.

Among other benefits, Question 2 would help us reduce our energy use and thus the greenhouse gases that are warming the climate and raising sea levels. Making a new bottle or a new fleece jacket using recycled plastic uses far less energy than making those products using virgin materials. Each time you recycle a plastic bottle, you save enough energy to run a computer for 25 minutes, while every ton of recycled plastic bottles saves 98 million Btu, enough to heat a small house for a month in midwinter.

Advertising funded by the beverage industry claims that curbside recycling is already diverting the vast bulk of bottles from the waste stream, but the facts on the ground show something quite different. Quincy has a robust and longstanding curbside recycling program, yet which Quincy resident hasn't been disturbed by the plastic water bottles littering so many of our streets, parks, and beaches?

During this year's Cleaner Greener cleanup, a team from QCAN recycled hundreds of bottles that we picked up from the grounds of the Wollaston T stop. Of the containers we recovered, perhaps five percent were deposit bottles, which suggests that the bottle bill works pretty well, but only for the soda and beer containers that it currently applies to.

An updated bill would require deposits on more of the containers we picked up off the ground that day, and most of the containers that befoul our city's streets and sidewalks. That's why QCAN is urging all our neighbors to vote Yes on Question 2--for a cleaner, greener Quincy, and a cleaner, greener Massachusetts.

Dogs, Cats And Shelter

The Quincy Animal Shelter is celebrating its 15th anniversary this year. It is a no-kill shelter. I am not just a supporter of this shelter but a customer, too.

Three years ago after nearly 20 years as a dog owner, I resorted to my past life when I was a cat owner. Cats and dogs are different but offer very much the same good feelings in return.

I orginally was seeking a cute kitten but my eyes caught the attention of an older cat named "Patches" and I have had her for about three years now making her about seven years old. I did change her name to "Nica" making her an Italian cat.

The folks at the Quincy Animal Shelter are great and their goal is to find good homes for all their dogs and cats. Every year some 500 animals are adopted and given second or third chances at a happy life.

Looking for a new friend to hang out with, think dogs and cats, they never let you down.

'I Shall Return'

In 1942, the President of the United States ordered General Douglas MacArthur to leave Corregidor in the Philippines and go to Australia. MacArthur told his men and Filipinos to hold on and said "I shall return."

He did just that on Oct. 20, 1944.

The American 6th Army stormed ashore on Leyte Island in the Central Philippines. That was over 70 years ago. It took him a few months more to get his men of the "Bataan Death March" and send them home.

It's a bit of history so let's not forget what they did for our country.

God bless them.

Quincy College Hosting Author Nick Bunker

Oct. 21 At Thomas Crane Public Library

Quincy College, in partnership with the Thomas Crane Public Library, will present "Meet the Author Night" featuring Nick Bunker, author of An Empire On The Edge: How Britain Came to Fight America, on Tuesday, Oct. 21st from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library Conference Room, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In An Empire On The Edge: How Britain Came to Fight America, Bunker gives a strikingly fresh perspective of the Boston Tea Party and the origins of the American Revolution -- a lethal blend of politics, personalities, and economics which led to a war that few people welcomed but nobody could prevent. In this powerful but fair-minded narrative, British author Bunker tells the story of the last three years of mutual embitterment that preceded the outbreak of America's war for independence in 1775. It was a tragedy of errors, in which both sides shared responsibility for a conflict that cost the lives of at least twenty thousand Britons and a still larger number of Americans. The British and the colonists failed to see how swiftly they were drifting toward violence until the process had gone beyond the point of no return.

Bunker is the author of Making Haste from Babylon, a history of the Mayflower Pilgrims, described by The Washington Post as "a remarkable success." Educated at King's College, Cambridge, and Columbia University, he was a journalist for the Liverpool Echo and the Financial Times, and then an investment banker, chiefly with the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. During his careers in journalism and finance, he traveled widely in China, India, the former Soviet bloc, and the United States. He now lives in Lincolnshire, England.

A question and answer session will follow the discussion.

The event is free and is open to the public. To RSVP, please visit http://authornight.eventbrite.com.

Author Greg O'Brien Shares Journey With Alzheimer's At Kennedy Center

It was not the usual festive crowd entering the gym at the Kennedy Center on a recent Thursday morning. There were many new faces including healthcare professionals, caregivers and others.

About 150 people came to the Kennedy Center to hear author and award winning journalist Greg O'Brien talk about his journey with Alzheimer's. Many had seen him two weeks before on Chronicle and wanted to meet him.

O'Brien was diagnosed with Early Onset Alzheimer's at the age of 59. Now 64, he has written a book On Pluto: Living with Alzheimer's based on the notes he has kept on his journey with Alzheimer's. He referred to his book as a "call to arms" as he predicted this horrific disease will take out the baby boomer generation unless something is done to stop it.

Mixing humor with stories of experiences on this journey, O'Brien spoke of not recognizing his wife Mary Catherine at a local coffee shop in town as well as getting lost while driving and not realizing where he was until he reached Providence, R.I. He tells his story in hopes of offering others a blueprint on how to fight the disease.

During his talk, O'Brien showed a compelling documentary A Place Called Pluto that has been nominated for several awards. It is a 10-minute film of him and his wife and adult children talking about how this illness has impacted their lives. During the film many in the audience fought back tears and when the film ended there was a silence in the room.

O'Brien came back to the microphone and before taking questions spoke about his ties to Quincy. He was driven up from Brewster this day by his good friend Richard "Dick" Koch Jr., a former Quincy city councillor and now the Police Chief in Brewster. O'Brien spoke about his fondness of the Koch family and referred to Dick as his "guardian angel."

O'Brien then answered several questions from the audience before getting back to signing books.

While leaving the gym that day many stopped and spoke with the staff at the Kennedy Center. They spoke of the powerful message Greg had. Lindsay Willis of South Boston said, "It was so moving for the public/professionals to hear the account of someone living with Alzheimer's. Too often the wording used is so harsh and negative that it is easy to get lost in that mindset."

She added "He did a wonderful job of bringing to life the reality of the emotions he faces on a daily basis." Diane Bailey, a member of the Kennedy Center said "My tears were joyful as I found Greg to be incredibly inspiring.

Several weeks later people at the Kennedy Center are still talking about Greg's visit. He is in the thoughts and prayers of many.

Sticky Apple Pin Wheels

By MARIE

There is something about caramel or butterscotch that is almost everyone's favorite.

I decided one day instead of making an apple pie, to make something a little different that turned out to be a wonderful dessert, especially since it had caramel as its main ingredient. It had the same flavor of a sticky bun.

This time I shredded the apple on a cheese grater.

1 large apple (I used Granny Smith)
1/4 cup light brown sugar
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon flour
1-2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon or so of fresh lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 pie crust

First shred the apple and set aside. I kept the skin on the apple, but if you want to peel it that's fine.

In a skillet, saute the butter and add the brown sugar and cook for a few minutes until the mixture is caramelized. Set aside.

Place the shredded apple in a bowl and squeeze the lemon juice.

In a small bowl, place the flour, sugar, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg, and mix until blended. Add this to the apples.

Lay out the pie crust and add the apple mixture all over the crust.

Now form it into a roll and then cut two inch pieces making a pin wheel.

In a pie plate, place the butter and sugar mixture on the bottom, then the pin wheels side by side on top, and bake in a 400 degree oven until done (about 25-30 minutes).

The flavor of sugar and butter are wonderful, and it's a recipe that I will always use for something different.

Ratatoille

By MARIE

Ratatoille is a French Provencal dish originating in Nice, but there is also an Italian dish called Ciambotta which I grew up with as well. It is easy to make, normally served with a salad and pasta, rice, or bread, I normally now serve it with quinoa for an added healthy bonus of fiber and protein.

Since there is an abundance of lovely vegetables at the Farmer's Markets now, this is a great time to make a big pot. You can eat it hot, warm, and even cold. As a child I was served this as a sandwich cold along with some cheese. ENJOY!

INGREDIENTS:

3 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup chopped sweet onion like Vidalia
3 cups plum tomatoes, chopped
2 cups eggplant with skin (for nutrients) chopped
2 cups zucchini chopped
1 cup red pepper, chopped
1 cup chopped carrots
4-6 cloves minced garlic
2 teaspoons raw honey
2 teaspoons apple cider vinegar

Redmonds Real salt OR a product called HERBAMARE that is a wonderful seasoned healthy sea salt from France. Worth the price because it adds a lovely richness to the dish. The quality of the salt you use is very important for the taste as is for your health.

Pepper (black or pepper flakes)

About ½ cup fresh herbs combination of oregano, basil, and parsley. Eyeball it. The more the better!

Heat oil in skillet over med/high heat and add onion. I like cooking the onion a while until it is nice and sweet and browned. Stir in everything else (EXCEPT the herbs and spices) and toss until bubbly.

REDUCE heat and cover. Simmer about 40 minutes until vegetables are cooked through. Toss in the salt and pepper and fresh herbs. Taste and adjust seasonings.

I usually use a teaspoon or more of sea salt and 2 teaspoons of the herbamare if using that. It is up to you. Simmer uncovered a few more minutes to let flavors and spices mingle. Serve hot, warm, or cold!

Ayers: Allow Public Access To Long Island If New Bridge Built

"Mayor Walsh's administration inherited this from his predecessor's administration. We look forward to discussions with Boston officials reviewing what is the best use of the island and the best means of transportation."

Instead of replacing the bridge, Ayers believes ferry service would be a safer and more economical way to provide access to and from the island. There is currently a pier on Long Island, which could be used as a berth for a ferry.

"I have always advocated that ferry service is the best means of transportation to and from the island," Ayers said in a phone interview.

The city of Boston closed the 3,400-foot bridge citing longstanding concerns regarding its structural integrity. The bridge connects Moon Island, which is owned by Boston but within Quincy's jurisdiction, to Long Island, where a homeless shelter and other facilities operated by the Boston Public Health Commission (BPHC) are located. Kate Norton, Walsh's press secretary, said the bridge would likely be closed for an extended period.

"There was not one incident, injury, or any bridge collapse that led to this decision," Norton said in a statement Oct. 8. "The decision to close the bridge was made in an abundance of caution, following long-running concerns about the structural integrity of the bridge. The bridge is likely to remain closed for an extended period of time."

The BPHC, in a statement released Oct. 9, said Boston had already begun planning for a new bridge, which would cost upwards of $80 million to construct and take five years to design, permit, and build. The state's transportation agency, MassDOT, is expected to pay half of the $9 million cost to design a new bridge.

Approximately 440 homeless individuals were sheltered on the island during a typical night, according to Norton, as well as 250-300 individuals who received services from the BPHC and other non-profits. Some 150 people worked on the island.

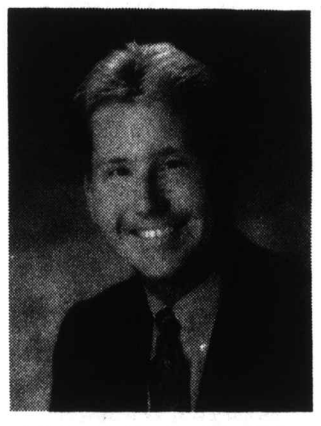
The MBTA helped transport between 220-250 individuals from the island Oct. 8 to a temporary shelter in Boston's South End. Another temportary shelter with 300 beds was established on Channel Street in Boston. Boston officials, Norton said, have been in contact with area homeless shelters to identify additional beds.

Democratic City Committee Annual Breakfast Sunday

Patrick McDermott To Receive Dennis F. Ryan Community Award

The 26th Annual Quincy Democratic City Committee Breakfast will be held Sunday, Oct. 19th from 10 a.m. to noon at The Tirrell Room, Quincy Elks Lodge, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

The Committee will present the 2014 Dennis F. Ryan Community Award to Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott. City Committee Chairwoman Alicia Gardner on behalf of the Committee said, "This award, given in the name of a gentleman who was passionate in his support and beliefs of the Democratic Party is awarded to an individual each year who exemplifies those principals through their words and deeds. Norfolk County Register of Probate is such an individual and we are honored to recognize his contributions to the Democratic Party."



PATRICK McDERMOTT

Gardner noted McDermott has been a staunch and active Democrat for many years.

"He is a long-time member of the Quincy Democratic City Committee, Ward 3 and Ward 5. Register McDermott is the Democratic State Committeeman for the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District and a former Ward 3 Quincy city councillor. The City Committee board members and Ward Chairs were unanimous in their decision when Register McDermott's name was placed in nomination.

"Register McDermott has worked very hard on behalf of the party and the Committee is pleased that it can recognize and honor the Register in this way," Gardner added.

Other invited guests are the Democratic Nominees for Governor, Lt. Governor, Attorney General, Treasurer, Secretary of State and State Auditor, Martha Coakley, Steve Kerrigan, Maura Healy, Debra Goldberg, Secretary Bill Galvin and State Auditor Suzanne Bump. They will each be given an opportunity to address the members and friends of the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

For tickets, contact Alicia Gardner at 617-347-5106, or by email at, Alicia.gardner6@gmail.com. Cost per ticket is $25 or a table of 10 for $200.

The Quincy Democratic City Committee is a Committee of 200 plus members and associate members. There are six committees for each of the six wards in Quincy.

Members of the Committee are committed Democrats who work hard to support democratic candidates and issues. Those interested in joining a Ward Committee should contact Alicia Gardner at alicia.gardner6@gmail.com.

Increased Police Presence Following Shooting

her car window shattered; she was able to escape the vehicle and run inside the house, receiving only cuts to her hands from the broken glass.

Police believe a .38 caliber revolver was used in the shooting, Keenan explained during the meeting. Approximately six shots were fired; the victim's car had additional bullet holes from previous incidents.

One arrest was made the night of shooting. Police stopped a car nearby, searched it for weapons, and arrested one of the occupants for an outstanding warrant.

"There was another car that was stopped in the area. There was a warrant on one of those parties," Keenan explained. "We took everybody out of the car, we searched the car for weapons, and one of them was arrested."

The vehicle's occupants, Keenan added, are all known to the Boston Police Department's gang unit.

The motive for the shooting is unknown; the victim has not been cooperating with investigators. Keenan was not optimistic about identifying the shooter.

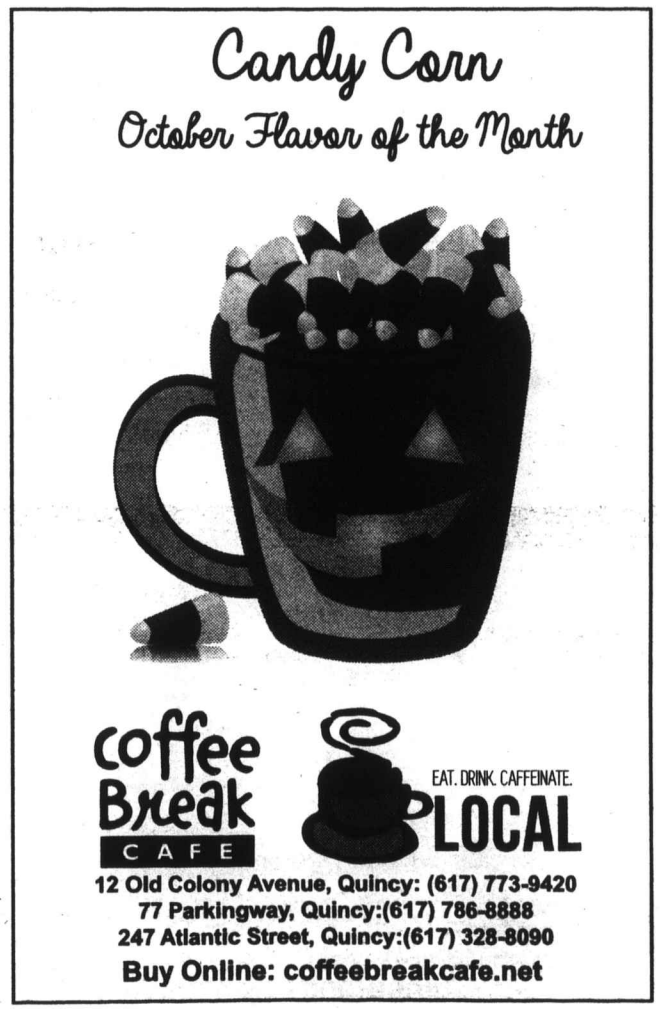
"We're still working it. It's an active case and it will be until we solve it and bring someone to justice, but I don't see that happening," Keenan said. "It's like don't ask, don't tell – the attitude in Boston. They don't cooperate with us. They deny things happened."

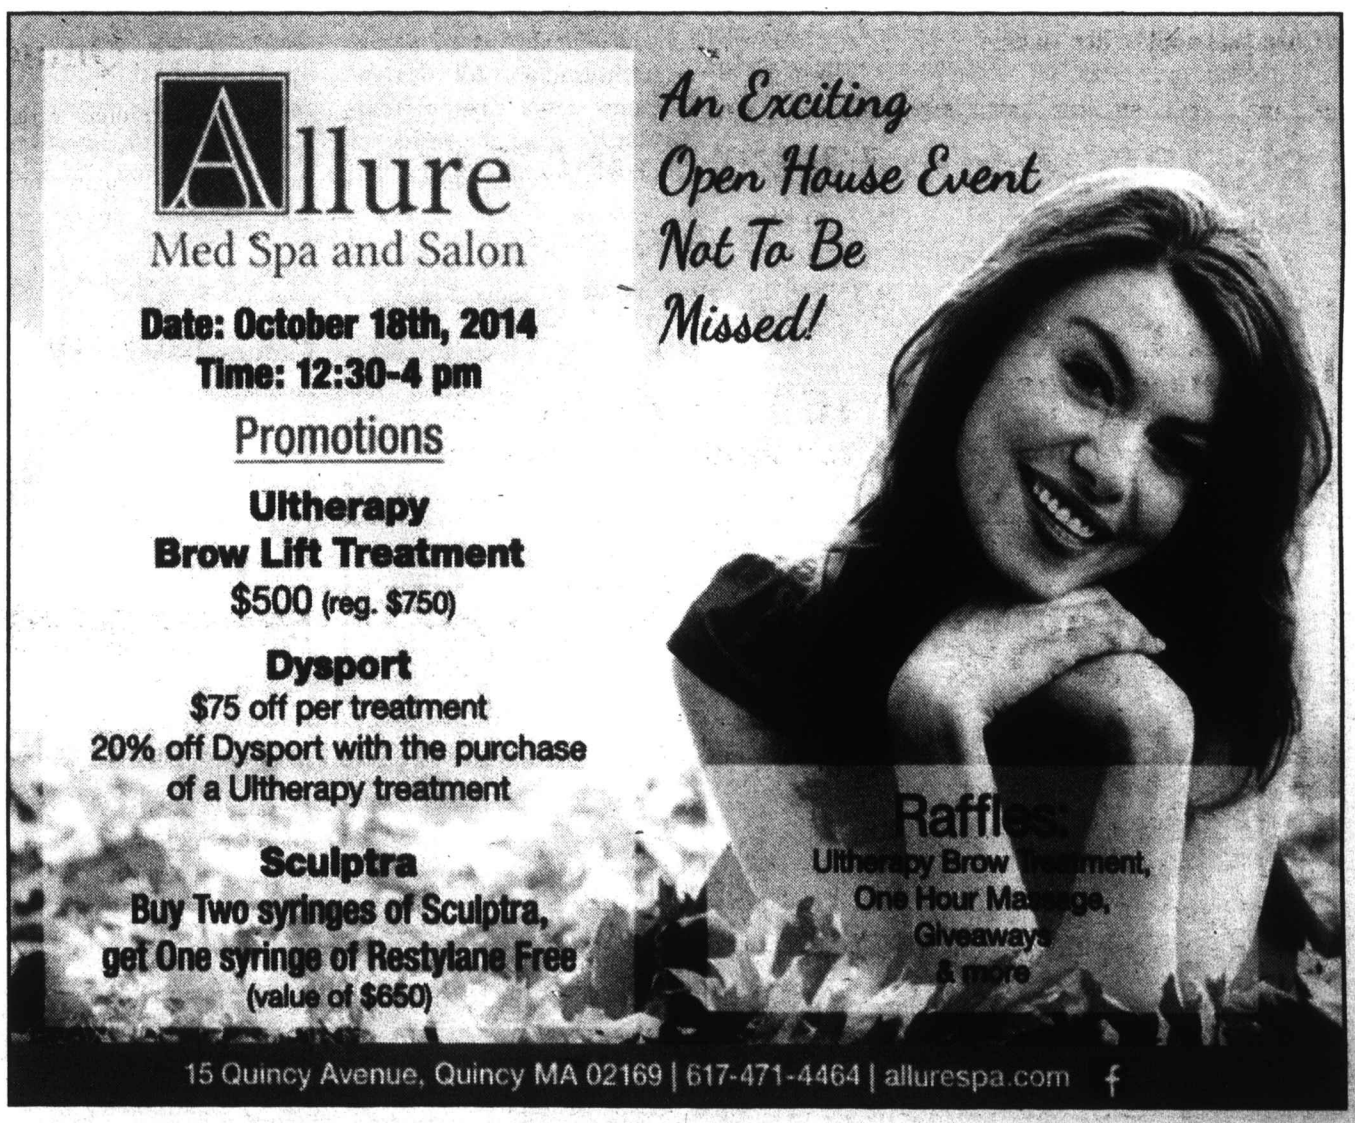
Minton said the best thing residents could do is to be vigilant and contact police if they observe any suspicious activity.

"We have a young, energetic police department. They really like to go out and find things. They really enjoy catching the bad guys," Minton explained.

"If you report something to us – say it's a person sitting in a car – and we arrive on scene and the person is gone we're not going to charge you with false report of a crime. That would defeat the entire purpose of you coming out and letting us know what happened."

Minton noted he looks up and down his street from inside his house before going to bed and suggested the residents in attendance to do the same. He cautioned residents, however, not to try and do police work on their own.





Lions David Smith, Ed O'Leary Receive Lifetime Membership Awards

Lions David Smith and Ed O'Leary have been awarded Lifetime Membership Awards by Lions Clubs International in recognition of their commitment to the Quincy Lions Club.

The awards were presented by Quincy Lions Club Co- Presidents Michelle Lydon and Chuck Phelan.

Smith, a lifelong resident of Quincy, joined the Quincy Lions Club in 1978, after his father Alexander Smith's passing. He has held the office of Club President, and is a past Melvin Jones Fellowship recipient.

Growing up Smith helped with the various fund raisers the Club held. As a youngster he helped usher people attending College Glee Clubs and Concert Choirs' to their seats at Quincy High School. He also helped out with light bulb sales, pancake breakfasts, and the Game of Quincy sales.

At the time of his father's death Lion Arthur Gillis asked him to join the Club in spite of the fact that he could not make the meetings since he was teaching at Quincy High School at that time. At that point he was named Secretary to Lions International, a position he held for the next 12 years.

Smith recounted one of his fondest memories of the Lions and their motto "WE SERVE."

"Years ago, Mass. Eye and Ear would ask Lions to put patients up in their homes between treatments or evaluation of treatments.

"We were asked if the Quincy Lions might take a lady named Maude from Florida who was having eye surgery and it would be a week before the results could be evaluated. My wife and I volunteered to have her stay at our house.

"I picked up Maude at the airport brought her to Mass Eye and Ear and after her surgery brought her to our house. Maude was 92 years young and now blind in both eyes. (She could see shadows in her good eye).

This was the best thing we could have done for our children. At dinner time Maude who was born in the late 1800's, fascinated our kids with personal stories about life without electricity, cars, indoor plumbing, and paved roads. First hand history of World War I, the Depression, meeting Thomas Edison, one of the Wright Brothers, being one of the first women to graduate Law School and pass the Bar. History from firsthand knowledge is invaluable.

"When I was teaching I tried to impress upon my students as well as my children that one of the most precious things we have is Time. Once time is gone it is gone. Therefore volunteering your time to a worthy cause such as the Lions is time well spent."

O'Leary and his wife Pauline have been residents of Quincy for the past 47 years. He has practiced as a Licensed Insurance agent for over 50 years. He was a member of Quincy's Zioning Board of Appeals for over 19 years, and is an original Board of Director member of Beechwood Community Life Center.

O'Leary has been a dedicated member of the Quincy Lions Club for 39 years He is a Past President of the Club, as well as a Melvin Jones Fellowship recipient. He has served on many Lion committee's over the years, but his position as Chairman for the Lions' Dinner for the Blind is one of the most critical positions in the Club. O'Leary ensures that members of the sight impaired community are welcomed to a special dinner that includes entertainment, recognition, and helps promote the Club's mission of raising the blind and visually impaired.

Amy Huber was also recognized for her dedication to the Quincy Lions Clubs Lion of the Year, by Immediate Past President Jeff Poirier. Amy served as Secretary and Treasurer of the club, during 2013-2014, and will assume the role of 2nd Vice President during the 2014-2015 year.

The Quincy Lions Club has over 70 members and meets on the 1st and 3rd Thursday of the month at 12:00 pm at The Neighborhood Club of Quincy. Lions clubs are a group of men and women who identify needs within the community and work together to fulfill those needs. For more information or to get involved with the Quincy Lions Club, please contact Secretary Jeff Poirier at www.quincylionsclub.com

Lions Clubs International is the world's largest service club organization with more than 1.3 million members in approximately 45,000 clubs in more than 200 countries and geographical areas around the world. Since 1917, Lions clubs have aided the blind and visually impaired and made a strong commitment to community service and serving youth throughout the world. Local Freemasons Welcome Public Oct. 18

Joining with Masonic Lodges across Massachusetts, the Freemasons from the Quincy Rural Lodge (who are temporarily meeting in the Weymouth Masonic Building, 610 Broad St., Weymouth) will open their doors to public on Saturday, Oct. 18, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

If you've ever wondered who the Freemasons are, whether they are descendants of the Knights Templar, or what the inside of their buildings look like, here's your chance to find out.

More than 230 lodges will be hosting open houses to help the public get a better understanding of Freemasonry and to demonstrate the positive impact it has on members, their families and their communities. Members will provide tours of their building, talk about Freemasonry's history, discuss its rituals, signs and symbols, and explain what they do.

The lodges who meet at the Weymouth Masonic Building from Quincy and Weymouth will be hosting a free child identification program for any families in the community. All information gathered will be provided to the parents free of charge. Members of the Weymouth Fire Department, Police Department, and local ambulance services will be in attendance to help with the event.

"The open house is a great opportunity for anyone interested in learning more about Freemasonry and to meet and talk with Masons in their community," said Harvey J. Waugh, grand master of Masons in Massachusetts and the presiding officer of more than 32,000 members.

"Although many have heard of us, very few are aware that for over 281 years we have been part of an unbroken tradition of great men who have changed our world in a number of ways. Men like Benjamin Franklin, George Washington, Thurgood Marshall, and John Glenn all joined the Masons prior to achieving the greatness we recognize them for.

"Today, there are countless others that have made their families, workplaces, and communities better because they are Masons. I warmly invite the public to join us on Oct. 18."

Freemasonry, the world's oldest and largest fraternity, seeks to bring together men of every country, religion, race, background, and opinion in order to develop the bonds of friendship between them. Through a large variety of North American Masonic philanthropies, approximately $2 million is given to charity every day, 70 percent of which benefits the general public.

QMC Prepared To Handle Ebola Virus

than 101.5° F or 38.6° C), severe headache, muscle pain, weakness, diarrhea, vomiting, abdominal pain, and unexplained bleeding or bruising. Symptoms may appear between two and 21 days after exposure to the virus, but more typically occur within eight to 10 days.

Ebola spreads through contact with the blood or other body fluids of someone who is sick with the virus, through contact with infected animals, or contact with contaminated objects such as needles and syringes. Ebola does not spread through the air, water, or food, though it may be spread through the handling of African bushmeat (wild animals hunted for food).

Infected people can only spread the virus while exhibiting symptoms of Ebola. Once a person is recovered they can longer no spread the virus, though Ebola has been detected in semen up to three months after recovery.

There is no approved treatment or vaccine for Ebola. The CDC says basic treatment – providing intravenous fluids and electrolytes, maintaining oxygen status and blood pressure, and treating any other infections if they occur – can significantly improve the chances of survival.

Fallon Ambulance is hosting a training session on Ebola and infectious disease preparation today (Thursday) at its training facility in North Quincy. The session will include Fallon Ambulance supervisors as well as municipal emergency medical service personnel from Dedham and Brookline; personnel from other communities, including Quincy, Milton, and Weymouth, have also been invited.

During the session, staff will be instructed on how to put on and remove personal protective equipment. There will also be a simulation where a patient is moved into an ambulance, and training on decontaminating an ambulance. Fallon Senior Vice President Peter Racicot said the procedures put in place are ones used to stop the spread of other infectious diseases in the past.

"It's standard operating procedure for us, but there is a heightened awareness," he explained. "Infectious diseases are sadly part of the routine for us."

"Safe and effective delivery of patient care is the hallmark of our training," said Kevin Mont, Fallon's head of training.

"Over the past decade we have come in contact with patients who have had serious illnesses, including SARS, H1N1 influenza, H5N1 avian flu, and seasonal influenza, and our protocols and training are always aimed at being ready for whatever medical conditions we encounter."

The company has conducted an inventory of its personal protective equipment and purchased new suits for every ambulance, including masks that have been fit-tested to employees. For the past month, there has been extensive supervisor training. Fallon has also planned protective equipment training for every member of its field staff this week, designed to provide competence in the donning and doffing of this protective equipment. And, this past week, all field staff has undergone refresher training to be certain that they recognize the signs and symptoms of Ebola.

Additionally, Fallon has put in place a mechanism that will encapsulate an ambulance should they need to transport a patient with Ebola or other infectious disease.

New Playground At Faxon Park

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new, $450,000 playground inside Faxon Park was opened to the public this past weekend, featuring slides, swings, and a climbing boulder.

The playground includes two new play sets – one for children ages 2-5 and the other for children in the 5-12 year old age range, according to Chris Cassani, the executive director of the Park Department.

The play set for the younger age group features slides and equipment the children can touch, such as bells and drums. The play set for the older children has a larger sliding complex and two climbing apparatuses, which can accommodate multiple children at a time.

In addition to the play sets, the new playground includes swings – both a smaller swing for infants and a larger one for older children – and a fiberglass climbing boulder for children to play on.

The new playground sits atop a poured rubber surface. It also includes several benches anchored to boulders found within Faxon Park, some of which have tables so families can have a quick bite without leaving the playground. The parking area and entrance to the new playground were repaved as part of the project as well.

The playground was paid for by two funding sources – $250,000 from the city's Community Preservation Committee and $200,000 from Massachusetts' Our Common Backyard grant program. Planning for the new playground began last December, Cassani explained, and it took three months to construct it over this summer.

"We are the first city in the Commonwealth to finish a project that received funding from the state grant program," Cassani said, noting all projects that received grants had to be finished by the end of the year.

"We're delighted we were well within that deadline."

With the playground completed, the Park Department will now turn its attention to a loop running trail project inside the 57-acre Faxon Park. The Quincy Park Conservancy, along with Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, helped raise funds for that trail. Work will begin on the trail this winter.

"There are a lot of things I'd like to do up there," Cassani said, "but that's the big one in the pipeline."

Company: Quincy Location Would Be A 'World Class' Medical Marijuana Dispensary

ZBA Approves Permit For Ermont, Inc.; Seen Serving 2,050 Patients In First Year

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Ermont Inc., the company looking to operate a medical marijuana dispensary at 216 Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy, was granted a permit to open their facility by the Zoning Board of Appeals last Tuesday night following a presentation of security measures and building plans and input from the public.

"I believe we have a team assembled to open up a world class medical marijuana dispensary here in Quincy," said John "Jack" Hudson, president and CEO of Ermont, Inc.

In late January, the state Department of Public Health (DPH) awarded a provisional license to the non-profit company out of Provincetown allowing them to cultivate and sell medical marijuana in Quincy.

"I've developed a solid belief that marijuana is a completely untapped source of treatment for patients suffering from debilitating conditions," said Hudson after he recalled his experience with post-traumatic stress disorder following the attacks of 9/11. "Medical marijuana is what helped me process my 9/11 experience."

"Quincy is a city willing to open its doors to this new industry while making sure that this industry is well regulated," he said.

The roughly 35,000-square-foot warehouse which is zoned Industrial B, was home to Clifford's Flowers and Smith and Nephew Orthopedics and is next to the Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy Auto Auction, and is across the street from the Archstone Quarry Hills Apartment complex and the Quarry Hills athletic fields.

Last year, a zoning ordinance banning marijuana dispensaries from opening within 1,500 feet of a residential district, school, liquor store, child care center, or other marijuana dispensary was approved by the City Council and Mayor Thomas Koch.

This restriction left few places for the dispensary to open.

Patients or their caregivers must provide doctor-written certification and may purchase 10 ounces of marijuana once every 60 days.

A "Compassion Program" will allow low-income patients to get one gram of marijuana per week at no cost and offer additional marijuana purchases at 10 to 50 percent off.

Also for sale will be infused beverages, edibles, and oral sprays.

Marijuana will be grown on-site.

Health insurance will not cover the cost of medical marijuana or any marijuana-infused products.

The dispensary is planning to open next spring with a staff who will need to register with the DPH, be over 21-years-old, and have no felony drug convictions.

"It's going to be good for the people that need this," said Chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals Martin Aikens.

In the November 2012 election, over 60 percent of Quincy residents voted in support of legalizing medical marijuana for debilitating medical conditions such as cancer, glaucoma, hepatitis C, Parkinson's disease, Multiple Sclerosis, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), Crohn's disease, and HIV and AIDS.

Hudson said symptoms of the conditions could be significantly improved through the use of medical marijuana.

The law took effect Jan. 1, 2013.

Up to 35 dispensaries can now open statewide, however no more than five can open per county.

Fraudulent use of a DPH registration can result in several penalties including up to six months in a house of correction or a fine of up to $500. Fraudulent use of a DPH registration for the sale or distribution of marijuana for non-medical use can result in up to five years in state prison or two and a half years in a house of correction.

Ermont officials have predicted the facility will serve roughly 2,050 patients in its first year of operation.

In year one, 36 employees will be hired to run the facility. That number will increase to 55 employees in year two and 65 in year three.

Preference will be given to hiring Quincy residents, said Hudson, who will be working full-time at the dispensary as executive director.

Provisional registration does not mean Ermont can open their doors for business just yet. They must first submit architectural plans to the state for approval.

Patients will be able to access the facility through the northeast corner of the building. The entire site will be surrounded by an 8-foot-high chain-link fence and vehicles will enter through

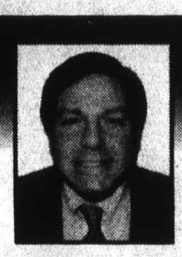
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century


by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
FUSING METAL TO BONE
The aspect of dental implants that makes them so durable and effective, "osseointegration," occurs when bone cells attach themselves directly to the titanium surface of the dental implant. This phenomenon was discovered quite by accident over 50 years ago by a Swedish surgeon who was conducting research into the healing patterns of bone tissue. He found that, when pure titanium comes in contact with living bone tissue, they form a permanent biological adhesion. Dentists were quick to make use of this phenomenon for dental implantation. Today, this innovation stands at the center of tooth-implant technology that utilizes titanium implants to serve as the rooted foundation for the attachment of prosthetic teeth that feel and look like natural teeth..
It's obvious that our smile, or more specific our teeth, are important to us in many ways. New advances in cosmetic dentistry, such as implants, have everyone smiling. Let us help you increase your sense of self-esteem. For complete dental care, come see us, we're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Let us help you make the most of your smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com
P.S. Dental implants are composed of the titanium implant (which is inserted directly into the bone), the abutment (which connects the implant device to the prosthetic tooth), and the overlying crown or denture.

Be Aware Of CO Dangers

National Grid reminds customers to be aware of carbon monoxide and to take precautions before firing up the furnace for the winter.

Carbon monoxide (CO) is an invisible, odorless gas that can be deadly if left undetected. It is the byproduct of the incomplete burning of fuels such as natural gas, butane, propane, wood, coal, heating oil, kerosene and gasoline. Common sources of carbon monoxide include malfunctioning forced-air furnaces, kerosene space heaters, natural gas ranges, wood stoves, fireplaces and motor vehicle engines. During the heating season when windows and doors are tightly shut, fresh air is sealed out, creating the potential for carbon monoxide to build up over time. National Grid reminds its customers of the following safety information to help identify and prevent carbon monoxide poisoning.

The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are similar to those of the flu. Depending on the amount of carbon monoxide in the air and length of exposure, symptoms may include headaches, weakness, confusion, chest tightness, skin redness, dizziness, nausea, sleepiness, fluttering of the heart or loss of muscle control.

If you suspect carbon monoxide is present in your home, go outside immediately and call 911 first. After calling 911, call the appropriate National Grid emergency contact number. In Massachusetts, the number is 1-800-233-5325.:

Do not return to your home until the carbon monoxide source is found.

Carbon Monoxide Prevention Tips:

- Arrange for an annual check of your heating system by a licensed professional heating contractor. If you haven't had your heating system inspected yet, call now.
- Check chimneys or flues for debris, bird nests or other blockages, and have them cleaned periodically.
- Be sure space heaters and wood stoves are in good condition, have adequate ventilation and are used in strict compliance with the manufacturer's instructions.
- NEVER use a gas range for heating or burn coal or charcoal in an enclosed space.
- Install a government-approved home carbon monoxide detector on every floor.
- If you use a back-up generator to supply power during outage, be sure to operate it outdoors.
- Early snowfalls could block vents for furnaces or hot water heaters causing CO to back up into a building and result in carbon monoxide poisoning for those inside
- Open windows do not provide sufficient ventilation to safely operate a generator indoors.

National Grid will respond immediately to all carbon-monoxide related calls for all natural gas customers within its service area – even if you purchase natural gas from an alternative gas supplier or marketer. However, always call 911 first.

Dollar Volume, Average Sale Prices Up

After Third Quarter, O'Donnell Sees Some Hopeful Signs

Citing both solid third quarter growth in the dollar volume of real estate sales and double digit increases in the average sale price of a transaction, Norfolk County Register of Deeds Bill O'Donnell said he is hopeful that the worst of economic downturn is behind and that the result will lead to improvements in both the real estate and mortgage markets.

"At the end of three quarters, the dollar volume of total sales increased from $1.9 billion from $2.1 billion, an 11 % increase from the same time last year. Another promising indicator during the same period of time was that the average sales transaction (including both residential and commercial real estate sales) was $636,736, an increase of 16 percent.

"This solid increase is further evidence that Norfolk County is a very desirable place to live, to work and to raise a family," O'Donnell said.

However, the Register noted that there are some concerning indicators which reveal a decrease in real estate activity both for sales and refinancing.

"Even with an increase in volume dollar sales, we are down 6 percent in the third quarter in the total number of deeds recorded in comparison to last year's third quarter. Mortgage recording activity continues to struggle with a 21 percent decrease (9,147 to 7,257) during the same period," he said.

Another benchmark being carefully watched by the Register is mortgage foreclosures, which fell by a modest 2 percent in the third quarter. O'Donnell noted that Homesteads filings were down by 9 percent compared to last year's third quarter.

"One reason for the reduced filings stems from legislation passed into law by the Legislature in 2011 which clarifies that there is no need to refile a Homestead after refinancing a mortgage," O'Donnell said.

The Norfolk Registry of Deeds is located at 649 High St. in Dedham. It is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others to secure accurate and accessible land record information.
